Next month as you know, we will have a new chief of the Philippine National Police. Actually he was your choice from the beginning of my administration. I told him, I told Jun Ebdane, that since he has the support of the Chinese community, his main challenge is to eliminate kidnapping in one year. He feels he can do it because he is counting on your support to be able to do it. I know that the tsinoy community has been working closely with the government on this, and I'm quite sure that it will work even more closely when General Ebdane becomes the chief PNP. Because I have given Jun Ebdane a challenge, and I know you will support him, I will give him the full authority, and also the full accountability for eliminating kidnapping. Thus when he becomes the chief PNP, I will abolish the National Anti-Crime Commission so you talk only to one person in fighting kidnapping. With your help, this administration will meet the problem of kidnapping with more focus and counterforce.

On a more institutional level, we will improve the on-the-ground capability of PNP, and we will have a more disciplined processing of intelligence. upon the suggestion of the Chinese community last year, the Scotland yard of Great Britain is helping the PNP build up its skills and capacity to fight kidnapping and other organized crimes. This was the result of an I had with Prime Minister Tony Blair in my visit to London last January. We are now working on a similar arrangement with the Hong Kong police.

Despite the kidnapping incidents and despite the price of electricity, our economy pulled through in the last one year-and-a-half; and we did this while the economies of many of our neighbors and trading partners suffered declines. In fact, during this past one year-and-a-half, the Philippines what the third best performing country in this region, next only to China and to Vietnam.

The Chinese constituency is one of the prime movers of the economy. And as we are witnessing tonight, and as we can witness everyday, Chinatown is a spawning ground of talent, genius, achievement, and excellence.

To enable that resource to thrive and flourish, my administration is committed to work doubly hard to ensure that order, discipline and civility shall exist in Binondo and other Binondos in the country.

I encourage young tsinoys to join the Philippine National Police and the Armed Forces of the Philippines and consider making police work a lifetime career.

I ask our young tsinoys to join us in our training sessions so that they would gain the expertise needed to detect and stop kidnappings.

In my State of the Nation Address last year, I said that I want the bulk of the kidnapping syndicates behind bars. Well with your choice at the helm of the PNP, let us work to eradicate the kidnap gangs, and arrest, prosecute and jail the kidnap bosses.

I ask you to be with me in this endeavor because if we are together there is much that we can do. Kailangan ko kayo.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo on the 103rd Independence Day Celebrations (Vin d'Honneur), June 12, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On the 103rd Independence Day Celebrations (Vin d'Honneur)

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, June 22, 2002]

MOVING FORWARD WITH UNITY AND DEMOCRACY

We celebrate today the 103rd Philippine Independence Day amidst great changes taking place in the state of affairs among and within nations. The economic fulcrum has shifted to North America. Europe is largely at peace with itself, a happy change after being the center of two world wars. The Middle East continues to face and present challenges. Latin America seeks progress through closer cooperation among its member-states. Democracy, is encouragingly taking hold in areas in sub-Saharan Africa and Asia, the region where the Philippines belongs, and strives for economic recovery even as new powers arise in the region.

There is a lesson to be learned. As we examine the success and failure of nations at nation-building, and this is, that nations with a free and united people and energized by effective governance, have the best chance of survival even under an adverse international situation. For a combination of freedom and unity among people who are pulling together in the same direction to the cadence of the leader's call creates a powerful, if not, inexorable force for creativity, productivity and achievement.

Therefore, as my five-month old administration takes on the task of reviving our economy, and addresses the inherited problems of insurgency and crime, we are also laying the foundations for the long-term change of the Philippines into a nation of inner strength and resolve.

Unity is the theme of this year's Independence Day celebrations. This is also the basic theme that underlies my program of governance. Unity among our people must go hand in hand with the democracy we enjoy, if our nation is to move forward.

Thus, we are embarked on a program of strengthening the moral fiber of Philippine society through leadership by example, and the inculcation in our people particularly the youth of a deep sense of nationhood, as well as the values of integrity, hard work and perseverance.

Thus, we are also embarked on programs that will address poverty and the lack of education among many of our people, so that no sectoral society will feel alienated or separate from the rest.

Thus, we are also extending our hand for peace and reconciliation to those who have taken up arms against the government, because of their political or ideological beliefs.

I am also happy to note the willingness of both the administration and opposition members of the Philippine Congress, as well as our local officials to work together for the nation's good, a sure sign that the political healing process has started. I am also gratified to witness the collective resolve to deal with the threats to law and order which equally lessen us all.

Right now, we cannot confront the report which was made over a radio station in Mindanao, about the supposed killing of a hostage. The military has alerted its intelligence network in Mindanao, to get a verification of the Abu Sayyaf's claim that they have beheaded Mr. Guillermo Sobero. If the Abu Sayyaf's claim is accurate, it only emphasizes the fact that it is a merciless, ruthless group that has no qualms at all in murdering an innocent person for the sake of ransom money.

We condemn in the strongest possible terms this reported beheading of Mr. Sobero. To murder and even behead a helpless person is as ruthless as it is cowardly. The reported murder of Mr. Sobero only strengthens our resolve to decimate once and for all this cold-blooded bandit group. Sabaya's statements that the beheading of Sobero is a gift to our government on the occasion of our Independence Day celebration. That our troops should look fast for the headless body before it is eaten by dogs. That they did a dastardly act, to prove that they are not kids making empty threats, underlies the ghoulishness and viciousness of the Abu Sayyaf.

They emphasized the death and cruelty which this group is capable of. It shows that this terrorist group has trampled, and will trample on all the values of humanity. Sabaya has even trampled on Islam, when he threatened to behead even the ulamas, or religious leaders for appealing to him to release his victims.

We acceded yesterday to their request, that the Malaysian citizen participate in the talks with them, after they threatened to kill an American hostage, if we did not do so. After we made the announcement, the terrorist leader, Sabaya, even announced over the radio that they would no longer push through with their threat to kill a hostage. With his claim, he has beheaded Mr. Sobero. Sabaya does not even honor his own word.

Nonetheless, I am confident that as a united people, we will surmount our difficulties and achieve the progress we so desire, through our own efforts and in active cooperation with all your governments and peoples.

On this note, Excellencies, allow me to offer a toast to the understanding and friendship among our peoples and to the health and success of the heads of state of your respective countries.

Mabuhay!

Speech of President Arroyo during the 2nd Mindanao Budget Summit, June 22, 2002

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 2nd Mindanao Budget Summit

[Delivered at EDSA Shangri-la Hotel, Mandaluyong City, June 22, 2002]

I am happy to be with you, to be with the people of my childhood home, the people of Mindanao. I am glad that we are holding this, not in our backyard in Mindanao, but in the population center of the Philippines. It is because I believe that unless we, including the rest of the Philippines, come to terms with Mindanao, we will never attain our full promise as a nation, much as America had to overcome its baggage of racial inequity and prejudice in order to become the great democracy that it is today. Thus, we must arrive at a national consensus on the principles to guide our search for peace. I would like to take this opportunity to outline to you and to the nation once again the consensus that I have been offering to our people.

One principle is that our ultimate objective should be both peace and development. A second principle is that our framework should be based on constitutionality, national sovereignty, and territorial integrity. A third principle is that our society is a multi-ethnic one which should be founded on social justice for all, and the institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions. Christian and Muslim, Chinese and Spanish, Tagalog and Cebuano, these are but a few of the names to which the Filipino responds in a wondrous testimony to our rich and varied heritage as a nation.

To these three broad strategic principles, I would add a fourth operational principle. In our search for peace, there is no role for terrorism or inhuman brutality. Such acts must be universally condemned and addressed decisively.

In dealing with Mindanao, our principle is that all reasonable efforts must be exerted to safeguard the lives of innocent victims such as hostages. But when it becomes necessary to use our police and military forces, we must extend them M1 moral and material support, for their lives are at stake. Thus, there must be clear objectives that the population can understand, and therefore rally around. That is why I'm glad we have dialogues like this.

This is a great day for us to meet. I think the Lord planned it this day. Dongkoy Eman kept postponing it because he wanted to wait for the day after the killing of Abu Sabaya. I think the Lord wants me to use this occasion to reaffirm today my determination to enforce law and order. The people must be safe in their homes and places of work. They must be safe not only in the cities, but in the farms, in the hinterlands.

I renew this commitment to you, the people of Mindanao, the people whom you represent in Mindanao. The Abu Sayyaf is virtually finished, and we will not stop until we account for all of them. The leader of the Pentagon gang has escaped, but we will hunt him down.

I shall strengthen the capability and discipline of our military and police forces. But as far as the escape of the Pentagon gang is concerned, I have already told Secretary Joey Lina and Generals Larry Mendoza and Jun Ebdane that they must immediately discharge the guards who were in charge of guarding the Pentagon gang, aside from charging them criminally. But more than that, General Ebdane has accepted my challenge that he must eliminate kidnapping within one year. He has put his job on the line in his promise to comply with that challenge.

You have seen the excellence of our troops in "Operation Daybreak" leading to the rescue of Gracia Burnham. You once again saw the excellence of our troops in the battle yesterday. You have witnessed the bravery of our soldiers under heavy fire on land or at sea. They stand on guard in faraway detachments.

I feel that the move they made transferring the policemen of Pasay and putting them all under training is good but rather weak. They should have dismissed immediately the ones who were directly involved. Hence, this shall serve as our new ethic in the drive for peace and order. Anybody who blunders will be discharged as well as charged immediately.

We shall upgrade the high quality of soldiery we already have. We shall put the police back in high regard of the public. We shall modernize equipment and facilities. I think we would not have been able to get Abu Sabaya yesterday or even rescue Gracia if we had not been able to avail all the modern facilities of the US forces in Balikatan. We shall continue to train with our foreign allies.

We shall strengthen law and order because we want to free our people from the tyranny of lawlessness and terrorism. I am not speaking only of the rich or privileged. I am speaking of ordinary people who get held up in jeepneys or who get victimized by snatchers in the streets. I am speaking of the likes of Ediborah Yap who had to endure poverty only to fall into the hands of terrorists. I am speaking of the people of Mindanao who earn their money through sweat, only to be taken by bandits.

Our problem in Mindanao is rooted in economic exclusion. And the axis of poverty is often crossed by the axis of terrorism. I am not saying that poverty is the cause of terrorism. Evil is the cause of terrorism. But poverty and the sense of powerlessness it brings are the spawning grounds where terrorism can more easily spread its evil ideology. Thus, the war against terrorism is also a war against poverty.

As a child growing up partly in the town of San Juan, then part of Rizal, and partly in my grandmother's farm in Lanao, in Mindanao, I saw the world of difference between the lives of the middle-class suburbanites in San Juan and the impoverished tenants and farmers in Lanao. I saw the grinding poverty in the Muslim areas, the same poverty which still pervades the Muslim areas in Mindanao. Today, these areas remain the poorest within our country. These continue to have the lowest human development index in our country. It is doubly tragic for them that they live next to thriving communities like Davao, General Santos, Cagayan de Oro, and Zamboanga City. Undoubtedly, poverty is at the root of our national security problems in Mindanao. In fact, poverty is our most basic national problem, just as it was when I was a child.

That is why I want to find jobs. Jobs for our people in order to be able to fight poverty. That is the reason why I travel. Many of you had been with me to look for investments, ODA, and jobs for our people. That is why I am doing power sector reform. When I came to the presidency, our power rates were the second highest in the region, second only to Japan. We need this power sector reforms because NAPOCOR has been so inefficient all these years. Government is not a good manager. Its debts have been a major contributor to our public sector deficit. That's why it must be privatized.

You will see your electric bills come down in July because I told NAPOCOR that they should bring down their power purchase cost adjustment (PPCA) which is part of PPA. I told NAPOCOR to bring it down to 40 centavos and this will be reflected in the July billings. When this is reflected in the July billings, we will now go down to number six as the most expensive electricity rates in the region. We will jump over four other countries in terms of competitiveness.

In my State of the Nation Address last year, I said I will bring our war against poverty to rural Mindanao and to areas affected especially by past conflicts. Let me just therefore mention a few projects where I personally had a hand in working out.

For instance, we are fast-tracking negotiations with the World Bank for the ARMM social fund for peace and development, and the Kapit-Bisig or Kalahi Program for non-ARMM areas. This is our major World Bank project for the year. While it usually takes the World Bank a couple of years to work it out, we have to work out our budget cover and the World Bank is willing to begin it this year. These projects will be our core poverty reduction programs in Mindanao.

My visit to President Bush was the occasion for that World Bank commitment. That visit also resulted in a doubling of the help of USAID, which had dwindled to a token after the removal of the US bases.

I just came from North Luzon where we have many dynamic LGUs that are very active getting money from the ODA sources. They knew that globally we had a doubling of our USAID budget as a result of my visit to President Bush. They tried to access from that fund only to be told, "Sorry, the bulk of the increase is for Mindanao." I had just come from a griping session from those who say that too many resources are going to Mindanao.

Nine months ago, I inaugurated the diversion dam of the Malmar irrigation project. I hope by this time the system can now service 5,600 hectares of new riceland. I understand that 1,700 hectares are now actually being planted. My personal choice for NIA is a son of Mindanao – Jess Paras of Cagayan de Oro.

The modernization of key transport facilities is evidenced by the Mindanao International Container Terminal at PHIVIDECA in Misamis Oriental. Funds don't move on verbal promises alone, funds move on documents and on actual budget releases for counterpart and budget cover. It was in my administration that this project was able to begin at the cost of $100 million from JBIC.

Construction is going on in the airports in Tawi-Tawi, Cotabato, Pagadian, Butuan, and Dipolog. This was delayed for five years because of problems of land acquisition. The Asian Development Bank, exasperated by the five-year delay, actually gave notice to cancel the project. But we have been able to save Dipolog and Butuan. We are trying to save Pagadian and Cotabato, too. You have to have some technical competence to be able to bring development and not only verbose pronouncements and strong words of support and braggadocio.

The Laguindingan Airport was a landmark project of the Cagayan de Oro-Iligan Corridor Area Development, whose master plan I supervised more than 10 years ago when I was still undersecretary of trade and industry. As President, I am dismayed that it is not yet on the ground, so I am instructing incoming Secretary of Transportation Leandro Mendoza to give it the highest priority.

The DOTC and the PPA, in coordination with the DA, have initiated steps to implement the logistics cost reduction program that should lower the cost of transporting Mindanao products to the rest of the country. Now I want Cito Lorenzo, Deputy CORD for Region 10, to see this negotiation through with a win-win solution because on the one hand you have the business users; on the one hand, you have the port workers. There must be a win-win solution for both.

The Zamboanga-Pagadian Road is the longest Philippine road not in terms of kilometers but in terms of construction time. I have travelled this road many times in various positions over these years. I have travelled it as a private citizen, as DTI undersecretary, as senator, and as vice president. I know how important the road is. I also know how bad the road is. When I was a new senator in 1992, there was a legislative-executive meeting about the public works act, and as part of my asserting my independence as a senator I said, "I will not support another flyover in Metro Manila unless the Zamboanga-Pagadian road is constructed." Thank God that during my presidency it will be completed by 2003.

The construction of the second Magsaysay bridge in Butuan City bypass road is also ongoing.

Speaking of roads, the ADB has already pledged funding for the construction of the Basilan Circumferential Road, the Cotabato Diversion Road, and the Lake Lanao Circumferential Road. This Lake Lanao Circumferential Road is very close to me because it was my father who started that road. My father always used to say that Lake Lanao is more beautiful than Lake Geneva. I may also add that Dansalan market can be more beautiful than Maraqush market. We, therefore, hope that we can fast-track that Lake Lanao Road.

And of course, the Basilan Road which has been the aspiration of the people of Basilan all these years. If they had the Basilan Road all these years, the Abu-Sayyaf would not be able to act as kings in those hinterlands the way they have been doing before the killing of Abu Sabaya. In the meantime, the American Seabees are helping build the Basilan road. The military exercises of Balikatan 2-1 will end on July 31st as scheduled while the military portion of the military exercise of the Balikatan will end July 31, the Seabees and their security escorts may continue to work on their construction projects. Before or on July 31, we will inaugurate the Basilan Airport that the Seabees had upgraded.

Tonight President Bush will call me up about many things and Balikatan will be part of our conversation. While the military training portion of Balikatan 2-1 will end on July 31, we can start the next Balikatan immediately. As a result of the clamor from people all over the country, the next Balikatan will be more geographically spread out, unlike this Balikatan which had been concentrated in Basilan.

Over the past year, we have also moved to put the BIMP-EAGA back on track. I hope that the travel tax exemption which I have extended until 2004 has spurred the increase in the mobility of people within the region, along with the opening up of the Davao-Manado, Indonesia air route by Air Philippines, and the Zamboanga-Bongao-Sandakan-Sabah sea route.

Enhancing security cooperation in the greater framework of ASEAN and within EAGA is crucial in restoring investment confidence. The Trilateral Agreement we signed with Indonesia and Malaysia should strengthen border controls and enable the countries' signatories to apprehend criminals and terrorists plying our common waters. This will prevent another hijacking of tugboats the way it happened a few days ago.

We must vigorously undertake measures to contain the negative image of Mindanao and reflect the truth that Mindanao as a whole is secure. Tourists and investors should feel reassured when they visit or invest in Mindanao. I have been telling the whole world about how Surigao's crime rate is two out of 100,000 when the world's standard is eight out of 100,000. There are many places in Mindanao where statistically you can prove that Mindanao is safer than many parts of the world.

I am also instructing the DA, the NIA, the DPWH, the DILG, the DENR, the DOTC, and other concerned agencies to realign all their regional budgets with area-based development programs such as the Davao Integrated Development Program, the Socsargen, and the Metro Cotabato Development Alliance. They should not make their own regional program separate from these area development plans. I have observed that the reason why some area development plans were not being funded was that departments were doing their own regional budget priorities outside the development areas because they thought the development areas will have their own special budget which was not the case. Let me, therefore, make it very clear. These area development plans must be the regional development plans of the national departments as well.

Because government has extremely limited funds, we have to exercise fiscal discipline as a strategy for development. The fiscal discipline that I exercised last year was the litmus test for the capital markets. It was the reason why we graduated from negative to stable in the international credit rating agencies. It was also the reason for our present low interest rates, our present low inflation rate, and our present stable peso. If we bloat our budget deficit in the name of more projects even it is a project for Mindanao, it will be counterproductive. It will result in runaway inflation, sky high interest rates, and peso devaluation. Then it would not be worth all those projects.

I hope, therefore, that the Mindanao leaders – and I consider myself a Mindanao leader because of my childhood in Mindanao – will all continue to help find solutions to the many challenges of peace, development, sovereignty, and social justice.

Maayong buntag sa inyong tanan ug daghang salamat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Launching of the 10-Point Plan of the Wholesale Electricity Spot Market (WESM)

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Launching of the 10-Point Plan of the Wholesale Electricity Spot Market (WESM)

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, June 28, 2002]

Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen of the power sector industry. Please sit down. And through you the rest of the people of the Philippines. Headlines are always about politics, but my work is focused on two important things — I've said, how to squeeze blood from stone, which means how to bring down the power rate some more. And the other one is how to address the problem of peace and order.

On the problem of peace and order, we are now having a major battle in Sulu, in Patikul, right in the camp where the Abu Sayyaf was born way back in 1995. This is where Japilon is and this is where Janjalani is probably hiding today. And I believe we have overrun four camps on the way to the main camp so that's one offensive that's going on and let's wish our soldiers well.

On the NPA front, a major training camp is also the subject of an offensive in Palauig, in Zambales. And you know about the revamp going on in the PNP. I would like to say that the principle of command responsibility was applied strictly on the issue of illegal gambling. This a dress rehearsal as far as I'm concerned for applying the rules of command responsibility more strictly on the more challenging issues of kidnapping and drugs.

Now, on the power sector reform and how to bring down electricity rate some more, which I said is like squeezing blood from stone, but we've got to try. First, let me give you a brief on what we have done so far. We have created the TRANSCO, the PSALM. The Transco is the transmission company which owns the transmission lines. It is a monopoly, to remain a monopoly but a regulated one and it will be privatized and continued to be regulated even when it is privatized. We have created the PSALM — P-S-A-L-M — standing for the Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Management Corporation. This is the new thing in the financial world after the 1997 Asian crisis — Asset Management Companies to take care of non-performing assets and disposing them in the most efficient way. And this is what psalm is doing for the non-performing assets of the power sector.

We have reconstituted the Energy Regulatory Commission. What used to be the ERB is now the ERC — more independent, not in-charge of controlling retail prices except for transmission, but with the power to review PPAs cost structures and introduce transparency in the pricing scheme in the power sector. We have also promulgated the implementing rules and regulations to the power act, the grid code and the distribution code which is needed by our investors, because we are selling Transco to our investors, we're selling the power generating companies to the investors. I have also issued an executive order on tax equalization. This was a requirement by senate if we wanted to get the power sector reform law through.

Two days ago, the ERC promulgated its decision on NAPOCOR's petition for unbundling. NAPOCOR was asking for a 17-centavo increase in its rates. The ERC instead said that it must reduce its rates by 6 centavos, and I am ordering NAPOCOR to follow that. Not within 30 days a new submission but if they can follow it within 6, within one week then they should do it. So we can get more relief. President kilala is nodding.

Today, we will promulgate the rules of the wholesale electricity spot market. And so, rather than I will spend... Do my speech explaining what is the wholesale electricity spot market, another new term — we already have the PPA, PSALM, Transco, ERC — now it's... I don't know what we'll call it, WESM? Since that's one of our ten points in our comprehensive program to squeeze blood from stone, we might as well discuss it in terms of what this 10-point program is all about.

Now, may I summarize the 10-point plan to reduce power rates and make them more competitive.

First, we want to reflect the true cost of service. In layman's language, I think we have seen that happening with ERC did with the unbundling of NAPOCOR and with the cease and desist order to MERALCO sometime ago which has resulted now in lower electricity rates this month. And next month, we will see further reduction of electricity rates because of my instruction to NAPOCOR of last May 8. Under this first point, we shall ensure that the consumers are only charged the true and fair cost of electric services, and only for power services they have enjoyed and used. Well, for one thing, one of the things that ERC disallowed in terms of NAPOCOR is that we don't use the appraised value of the assets for purposes of computing depreciation, cost... Resource based. We use the purchase value so that they don't make money twice. They already make money on depreciation. They shouldn't use that as part of the base for how to compute the rate of return. Or we shall eliminate charges from onerous contracts. That's why we need to review the IPP contracts and other contracts as well that the ERC is studying and regulatory loopholes. I'll give you an example of a loophole that the ERC was able to plug — the valuation of assets, the appraisal of assets. Acquisition rather than market changes is the base for valuation of assets, and that has helped bring down what NAPOCOR should charge for an increase of 17 centavos to a decrease of 6 centavos.

Second of our ten is to introduce a "declining block" rate structure. Vince Perez has already spoken about this. It had... It was headline news in the business frontpage of the bulletin. What's the meaning of this? We shall introduce special pricing incentives for large consumers of electricity especially business and industries to reduce the cost of overcapacity and in the process also encourage expansion in manufacturing and commerce. Meaning, for the first, I don't know, 100 kilowatt per hour you charge a rate for the next 100 kilowatt per hour. Ah, no, no, for the first hundred kilowatts you charge so much, for the next hundred kilowatts or so you charge a lower rate. So the more they use the less unit cost they pay, therefore, it will be cheaper to produce more products. Also, therefore, they will use more electricity and that will reduce the excess capacity which is the source of the PPA.

Third is that we will optimize the utilization mix of NPC power plants. What we mean here is that — again, layman's language. The experts will forgive me for inaccuracies but we have to explain this in layman's terms at the cost of some accuracy — there are different power plants, different fuel mixes with different cost, different efficiencies. And let's say, for instance, maybe in the daytime we use more; in the nighttime we use less. So in the nighttime, what will be the source of power? We should use, we should get it from the plants that cost less, not from the plants that cost more. So we have to find out the different efficiencies of the different plants. And this requires a lot of homework and I intend to stay put in Malacanang to help do that homework.

We will optimize the utilization mix and dispatching priorities of NAPOCOR power plants in ways that result to lower blended costs. That's the meaning of that in technical terms.

Further, we shall review and upgrade the country's power development plan to better distribute generation capacity in relation to load centers, upgrade our transmission system and minimize the vulnerability of the power grid from blackouts. Remember what happened to the last two blackouts, part of that is the result of not knowing which ones to turn on, which ones to turn off, etc. So we have to... And if we are gonna look at the whole power sector development plan and review it, I will lead that review. So please, those who want to invite me to speaking engagements, spare me because I need the time to read the development plan instead and redo it.

This will include the transfer of power barges and matured b-o-t plants to regions where they can be better utilized and the enhancement of NAPOCOR Genco's by providing them with better markets and quality supply contracts. The easiest of course to transfer will first be the power barges. They'll be transferred where there is oversupply to where there is undersupply. And we may even transfer land-based plants as well.

Next, slide number 7. What number is that? It's by slides not by the number. Okay, next one of the 10 points. Accelerate operation of the wholesale electricity spot market. And that's what we are doing today. Actually, we are late, the deadline for this is end of this month. So, we are just putting up the rules. So we're late, I want to accelerate this. I understand that within the ERC it's Oliver who is in-charge of working on this. So, I'll worked with him so we can speed it up.

We will promote the early establishment of a competitive wholesale electricity spot market. What will this do? It will provide a trading platform for power price competition and give power users a fair and transparent way to determine realistic power costs.

Oh, tell me Vince if I'm putting it the right way. You know China, china owns most of the companies in China, state-owned. But each company is managed as its own profit center and competes with other companies. Napocor owns all these power-generating companies right now, and decisions are made in Napocor. What we will do is make each one of these companies a unit in itself, managed in itself in competition with other units. And they will do their independent pricing schemes according to their own cost structures, and then they will compete in the spot market. Again, at the risk of being inaccurate but so somehow the public will understand what some of these gobbledygook can mean. I don't know if this is the right place to put it but you know again, I talked about daytime demand, nighttime demand. You have different levels of demand and therefore you can have different spot prices. And so, this is what we should be doing. And so this is part of the reforms to bring down electric rates.

Next of the 10 points is to accelerate implementation of 'open access.' 'open access' means that the big buyers, those who buy more than what? One megawatt of electricity, can chose which generating plant they want to buy it from, or which power company they want to buy it from. Of course everybody goes to the one transmission line. So you just pay a toll fee for the one transmission line. But different companies charge different rates so you can chose from them, that's the meaning of 'open access.'

The law says that we should do this within 4 years. But depending on how the industry players are willing to do it, we could accelerate this. Because consumer choice will certainly provide for greater competition and lower prices. So we will accelerate meaningful 'open access' to give end-users the freedom of choice in their power supplies. Correspondingly, we shall provide them with the genuine supplier alternative through competition and encouragement of new players in the electric industry power sector.

I understand — but I will still talk to the Meralco executives. Unfortunately, Chito Francisco and the Lopezes are out of the country — but I understand that they are willing to provide 'open access' even if that might mean a loss of market for them as long as we also remove cross subsidies.

Now I ask Napocor and doe, how will the power rates look if we remove cross subsidies? And when they showed me the numbers I saw that Luzon is subsidizing the Visayas. And if we remove cross subsidies at this time the Visayas will suffer an extra what? One peso per kilowatt hour increase. So, we still have to have Luzon continue to subsidize the Visayas but for the moment, but we must work to make the Visayas power sector more efficient. We have to find out what makes the Visayas power sector less efficient than Luzon. And if we can work on that then we can remove cross subsidies. Because it would not make the Visayas suffer so much, and then we can bring in 'open access.' so this is part of what I will study. So, rather than going to the Visayas, I will stay in Malacanang and study the Visayan power sector.

Next of the 10 points is to promote efficient performance of distribution utilities. Promote the efficient and competitive operations of franchise holders of electric distribution utilities by prescribing measurable standards of consumer service. We will shift to new rate setting methods that better protect consumers, assure integrity in procedures, and close all loopholes without necessarily denying the utilities right to earn the legal and fair return for their investment and services.

What's the meaning of this for a layman? Again, right now it's rate on return base — cost plus how much they're allowed to earn. If they're costly, you just add what they are allowed to earn. So, in that sense if that's the rate structure there's little incentive to reduce their cost. But if we begin to look at the loopholes in the cost structure then we begin to go to performance. And we have to do a lot of benchmarking here. What are the most efficient firms? What's their cost structure like? What's their capital expense per number of consumers? What's their overhead expense per number of consumers? How many executives with fat salaries do they have per number of consumers? You know, these are the things that we have to look at, and as I said, to help speed it up I'm willing to look at those cost structures myself as well.

Then another of the measures of the 10 points is strengthen and consolidate electric cooperatives.

We have to seek long-term solutions to problems of rural electric cooperatives and strengthen them as distribution utilities in preparation for deregulation as mandated by the Electric Power Industry Reform Act. It is hoped that strengthened electric cooperatives will be able to bring down retail electric's rates in the rural areas.

Again, just to give an example. Tell me if I'm right, Father Silva. In Leyte they are complaining, there are source of indigenous power how come they pay higher power rates. Well, number one, because the power coming from Leyte is more expensive than the power coming from Luzon, right Vince? But number two, because the electric cooperatives in Leyte are not efficient. So we have to do some drastic measures. We have to consolidate. We have to consolidate electric cooperatives going to the Visayas. We have taken over the AKELCO, have we not? Because it was inefficient. It even ended up with the power being cut-off. But we just had to do it even tourist were there to drive home the point that we have to make the Aklan electric cooperative efficient. We have taken over also the Basilan electric cooperative, why? That big fire in Basilan which incidentally... In that squatter area where incidentally a lot of Abu Sayyaf's live and some of them were victimized. Why did that fire happen? Because electricity in Basilan fluctuate. I know that because when I spent the night in Lamitan, in the convent, electricity was fluctuating that night — sometimes it was on, sometimes it was off. Minutes on – off. And, so what the people in the squatter areas did was that they just had candles. And of course when you have a candle in a shack it's very easy to start a fire. So, BASELCO has been taken over also by the electric administration, NEA.

I'll give another example, Negros. Not all the electric cooperatives there are efficient. They'll have to be consolidated and maybe we make the most efficient one run the rest. Forgive me father for pre-empting your job but from what I've seen, for instance, maybe the one that that's in Kabankalan is the most efficient. So, therefore... Aha! You see, I'm right. Thank you, father for affirming me. So, therefore, maybe that electric cooperative should be the one to run the rest of Negros. These are gonna be difficult to do but I will oversee them to make sure they're done.

Today I had a call from Northern Samar. 'Cause that's also electric cooperative, right? Because apparently there's a request for unbundling. I mean, of course ERC has to do all the unbundling but the Northern Samar unbundling comes with an increase, projected increase of two pesos per kilowatt hours. So the oppositors are telling me, please don't conduct anymore hearings. We don't want unbundling if its gonna give us an increase of two pesos per kilowatt hour. Well, I cannot tell the ERC what to do, I can only propose. And I would propose that instead of having further hearings, look at the cost structure, examine it. And I'm gonna ask DOE also to do it and NEA. Because if NAPOCOR from its 17-centavo requested increase actually can bring down its charge by 6 centavos, I think the two pesos increase that whatever northern Samar electric cooperative is asking for covers a multitude of sins that should be uncovered. So I'm going to ask Vince Perez and NEA to look at that, okay. So much for the electric cooperatives.

The other on the 10-point program is to review the IPP contracts and seek to reduce contract costs.

We are supposed to complete the review of Napocor's IPP contracts at the end of this month. Not all of them will be completed. We're late, but I said whatever is completed must already be submitted so that we can begin the renegotiations.

So, we will review the contracts as operating agreements by benchmarking for competitiveness, fairness and onerousness in the context of when the contracts were signed. I mentioned benchmarks earlier, such benchmarks shall be based on legal, financial and technical standards. We will reduce the stranded cost through the renegotiation, restructuring, or non-renewal of Napocor's IPP contract as may be necessary. And again, I told Vince if the other side is hardballing call me and I'll sit in the negotiations.

Another one of the 10 points is to explore financial engineering methods, which we have already been doing. That's why we are able to reduce Napocor's PPCA to 40 centavos which will be seen in your bills by next month.

This means exploring all financial engineering methods to reduce the burden of the remaining stranded cost on the consumers without unduly affecting the development and pro-poor priorities of our national budget. Which means that this thing about what? Passing on the cost to the people. That's not a good argument against it. Because what we will do must still be within budget deficit ceilings. And in any case, if you don't do this, you will pass on the cost to the people anyway by higher stranded costs.

Then, finally and this is number 10. We will help enhance the institutional capability of the energy regulatory commission.

We encourage the ERC to assert its mandate that's why, as I said, we can never tell them what to do. We can only propose. It is like our relationship with the Central Bank — we respect them, we encourage them. We encourage the ERC to exercise its mandate and broad regulatory powers to correct the errors of the past, assure a more orderly unbundling of rates and transitioning to a deregulated system, promote a competitive energy sector, and establish safeguards and clear rules so that the electric consumers are protected.

These then are our ten points to try to squeeze blood from stone. We've already squeezed much because if you remember when the law on a PPA was passed, right there was a 30-centavo reduction. And when in... Sometime in May, May 2001 there was a reduction, in April 2001 there was a PPA reduction of 20 centavos. And then this month because of the cease and desist order there was a further reduction. And next month there will be a further reduction because of Napocor's bringing down its PPCA to 40 centavos.

Today, our power rates as I said are number 2 in cost to Japan, which makes us uncompetitive there. But the July billings we will be number 6 overtaking Singapore, Hong Kong, Cambodia and Brunei. Number 7 is Korea. So my next goal is to overtake Korea, which is really considered the most competitive, attractive country for investment in Asia today, next only to China.

So, let's all continue to work with that. So from here we will be signing... I will be witnessing the signing of the promulgation of the investment of the rules and regulation of the wholesale electricity spot market which is number 4 of our 10 points. After this, I will preside over a meeting of the industry players. Actually, I asked Vince, I want to meet the industry players. Well it so happened we're signing an... You know, we're doing a launching today. So, it's okay, do it in Malacanang so we can have the meeting. So I asked the media to cover my remarks first so that they can have their story before their deadlines about the 10 points. It's optional to look at the... To take, to cover the ceremonial launching of the rules. But then after that our discussion on how to carry out the 10 points at ground level is already going to be within the industry itself. And we will excuse the media.

So, I thank you very much for being here. And yes, let's try to squeeze blood from stone because with God all things are possible.

Thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 179th Commencement Exercises of the Philippine Merchant Marine Academy (PMMA)

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines

[Delivered at the PMMA Grandstand, San Narciso, Zambales, June 28, 2002]

Maraming salamat, Governor Vic Magsaysay sa iyung napakagandang pagpakilala sa aking kagandahan. at salamat din sa iyong suporta at tulong sa akin hindi lamang sa lalawigan ng Zambales kung hindi sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng aking trabaho. Thank you very much, Governor Magsaysay.

Binabati ko rin ang mga officials ng PMMA, Rear Admiral Aris; binabati ko rin si Commandant ng Coast Guard, Vice Admiral Ruben Lista, outstanding alumnus ng Philippine Merchant Marine Academy; si Rear Admiral Partor Ramos; at 'yung aking kasama sa helicopter na dumating ngayon. Hiningi ko na sumama sa akin, si Secretary Pat Sto. Tomas na maging bisita rin dito; si Chairman ng CHED, Ester Garcia; at saka si P.A. ng North Luzon Rene Diaz.

Binabati ko yung mga tiga-rito, si Mayor Lim, Mayor ng... Saan si mayor? Nandiyan ba siya? Ah 'yon, nagsalubong sa akin kanina, thank you mayor; at saka si Tong Payumo, yung isang pinanggagalingan ng maraming trabaho dito sa Zambales, SBMA chair.

Salamat rin Father Brucelas sa inyong dasal kanina; other municipal and town mayors present here today; members of the graduating class of 2002; PMMA Board of Trustees; PMMA Alumni Association Members; the deans, faculty and staff of the academy; the officials and representatives of the shipping and mining agencies; the presidents and representatives of state universities and colleges of Region III; the parents; the family members and friends, and members of the graduating class; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

I am happy to be here in your prestigious academy. Sabi nga nila, first time na ang pangulo ay nagpunta dito sa PMMA in your almost 200 years of existence because I want to convey to you the expectation of our country and the international community that from your academy comes the best merchant marines of the world.

Naka-tikas pahinga ba kayo? Okay, wala kasi tayong troop... Yes, troop commander, please give the order 'tikas pahinga.'

To our graduates, I share the joy of your parents, teachers and friends. We anticipate happy and productive endeavors in international waters.

Sa mga graduating students dito, lahat kayo may trabaho na. Third year pa lang kayo may trabaho na kayo kaya congratulations sa inyong lahat.

For those who will listen to me on national T.V., the PMMA is not a new institution. It was the Escuela Nautica de Manila set up in 1820. It is the oldest merchant marine school in the Philippines. Later it was the Philippine nautical school as renamed by the Americans, and finally the Philippine Merchant Marine Academy during the time of my father, the late president Diosdado Macapagal. Since then your school has consistently been our country's premier maritime academy — kayo ang PMA ng merchant marines. You are the main source of qualified officers for international commercial marine fleets, pero sa inyong mga graduating students dito, doon din nanggagaling ang ilang naval officers at labingdalawa nga sa inyo ang magiging coast guard officers ni Ruben Lista.

I congratulate Rear Admiral Aris and the rest of your academic family. They have sustained the academy's mandate to produce efficient and well-trained merchant marine officers. The officers have carried on the noble mission of "expanding international trade in peace and serving as naval and military auxiliaries in times of war and national emergency."

Alam n'yo — well, alam n'yong lahat pero hindi alam ng lahat — na 'pag kayo ay nag-graduate sa PMMA, automatically, kung hindi man kayo pumasok sa coast guard, kayo ay automatically reserved forces ng ating Philippine Navy.

And in keeping with our requirements to promote honest, orderly and peaceful elections in July of this year where the Philippine National Police and the Armed Forces of the Philippines, represented here by Northern Luzon Commander Rodolfo Garcia, General I would like to ask you for those who are not yet going abroad or on their ships from this batch and from previous batches, to please enlist and mobilize the services of the reserved officers of PMMA for your mission for July 15 and the events preceeding that.

The PMMA has adhered to highly exacting global standards in training, certification and watchkeeping. And the International Standards Organization or ISO 9001, your graduates are among the most sought-after in their fields.

You have a 95 percent average passing in the national board exams, and all of the passers are immediately given jobs by international shipping companies. Lahat ng mga bandera doon ay 'yung mga shipping lines ay nakahelera na para maka-hire na sa mga graduating students ng PMMA. The PMMA is the source of 10 percent of the 50,000 Filipino deck and engine officers working in various shipping companies. It is difficult to equal this record.

We have been able to guarantee the continued employment of Filipino sea-based workers when aside from our excellent products such as the graduating students today, our country took last November again another slot, the sixth slot, in the 32-member council of the International Maritime Organization. This is our third consecutive election to a two-year term. Our membership in the IMO council affirms our resolve to uphold all conventions, protocols and resolutions of this international body and also it enables us to protect the interest of the Filipino sea-based workers in the international policy-making body.

The power of sea-based Filipino workers lies not only in your industry and competence, but also in your vital contribution to our economy. Sea-based workers give us two billion dollars a year in annual remittances, this is a crucial buoy for millions of dependents among our people. Every year, six billion dollars are sent to us by overseas Filipinos. And of the six billion dollars, two billion or one-third comes from our sea-based workers. And if we talk about the PMMA alumni, they give us annually 100 million dollars in remittances. So, i thank you especially for that.

You know, our GDP growth rate this year is 3.8 percent, GNP 4.9 percent. By both counts, the highest in Asean and the third highest in Asia. The difference between 3.8 and 4.9, the difference between GDP and GNP is the contribution of our overseas Filipinos and again one-third of that comes from our seafarers. And thank you for that. And that's why I'm here because I look upon the PMMA as one of the institutions that will perpetuate the greatness of the great Filipino seafarer. The welfare of our overseas human capital continues to stand as a priority of my administration.

You deal with many agencies. But let me clarify which one is the main counterpart of the seafares in my government. It is the Department of Labor and Employment and its attached agencies. That's why Pat Sto. Tomas is here upon my personal invitation. What has pat done for our seafarers? She has reduced processing time for vital documents needed by our overseas workers through a computerized system that has cut OFW documentation time by half. Sea-based workers can now process your papers within six hours when in the past you had to do it in 12 or more hours.

The DOLE has also set up the flexifund to encourage OFW savings for personal and future investment needs. Not that you need so many savings, because our young men and one woman graduating today have jobs waiting for them with a starting salary of 2,500 dollars a month. Congratulations to all of you. And if you want to use part of that savings to buy houses for your families back home, the HUDCC (Housing and Urban Development Council) has special housing programs to facilitate the ownership of OFWs of their homes. And I ask Pat Sto. Tomas to work out a special means by which part of the 80 percent that they must remit to the Philippines can be allocated to housing for their relatives.

To secure the jobs further of our seamen, I brought up the issues of job security and promotions before Japanese ship owners when I visited Japan last may. The ship owners assured me they will continue to hire highly-skilled Filipino seafarers and will allow qualified Filipinos to take the exams for management positions in Japanese vessels. So I congratulate our PMMA, you are not just training our young men and women for being merchant marines. You are training them for being merchant marine officers all over the world especially Japan.

The welfare of our overseas workers is best protected through a sound domestic economy. We must ensure that what you labor for abroad is not frittered away by runaway inflation in the Philippines. That's why we are pursuing economic and fiscal policies that have been effective in holding down inflation and keeping the budget deficit from ballooning while increasing domestic capital formation.

At the level best understood by the public, we have managed to keep the price of rice steady since 2001 while the price of commonly used medicines has been cut in half. Well, nasa Zambales tayo, siguro i'll give a scoop. Sa Lunes yata mag-aanunsyo ang Australia tungkol sa kanilang trade policies, at sa pagkaintindi ko bahagi ng anunsyo nila ay 'yung pagbukas ng kanilang palengke sa mangga ng Pilipinas. Sana kasama ang mangga ng Zambales doon.

Though electricity makes up not more than 5 percent of the budget of the Filipino — while food makes up 50 percent, and we have kept the price of food down — I inherited the problem of high electric power costs, but I have already instructed NAPOCOR to bring down the PPCA which is a component of the PPA. I have told napocor to bring down its PPA to 40 centavos and our people will see positive results in your July bill. After this commencement exercises, I will fly back to Malacanang to preside over the launching of the wholesale electricity spot market which is one of our 10-point program for seeking to bring down the price of electricity.

I will use this afternoon's events to begin to unveil the 10-point program that energy Secretary Vince Perez and I have been working on to squeeze blood from stone, which is... Meaning exhausting all ways to rollback the cost of electricity some more. I did not invent the purchased power adjustment problem, I inherited it. But rather than spend my energy fingerpointing, I would rather spend my energy looking for solutions. And I ask you, young graduates, your families, the people of Zambales and the people of the Philippines to support me in this effort.

Two days ago, the oil companies announced that they have cut back the price again of oil. This cut is beyond doubt the result of the free enterprise policies that our government has been promoting. And i want to take this opportunity once again to thank our transport companies because they did not raise their fares even when the price of oil was going up. Now that the price of oil is going down again, let's give them a change to recoup their sacrifices, so that when the price of oil goes up again, because in free enterprise it goes up and down, they will again not raise their transport fares.

The goodwill our OFWs abroad and our overseas seamen is somewhat diminished by security concerns in our country. Resolving our peace and order problem is as important to me as getting our country back on the growth track because peace and development always come together.

What does the world say about our efforts at peace and development. Last June 24th, U.S. president bush told the American people in a speech he made regarding homeland security, and i quote: "this weekend I called Gloria Arroyo," said bush. "I called Gloria Arroyo, the President of the Philippines, to congratulate her on her country's steadfast desire to rout out the Abu Sabaya killer organization. This is the organization which captured the Burnhams. They're nothing but cold-blooded killers. They may espouse some kind of doctrine; they have no regard for innocent life. I told Gloria early on in the fight that we'd help her. If she wanted us to take on the enemy with her, we'll be glad to do that, too. And she said, 'no, we'd like your help to train so we can go get them.' and she did." End of quote.

An hour later Bush told the American Congressmen, and again I quote: "this weekend," he said, "I had the honor of calling Gloria Arroyo, the President of the Philippines. They have this Al Qaeda-type terrorist organization that captured two Americans as well as other people. The wife lives free today in America; the husband unfortunately died. They're called Abu Sayyaf. Early on in the war I said, (Bush said) they're there in your country. We'd like to help you. However, you want the United States to help, we want to help. Anytime these terrorists light, we're after them. And I called her, (Bush saying) and congratulated her on what looks like the demise of the head of the organization, totally disrupting it. Either you're with us or you're against us, and she proved she was with us. And I want to thank her for her leadership." This quote of President Bush was met by the Congressmen with thunderous applause.

This is how the most powerful leaders of the world look at us. This is how the world looks at us. And I pray that the Filipinos could have the same faith in my administration.

Two days ago, bush again made the following statement regarding the war on terror, and I quote: "we've had some great successes. One of the most recent successes, of course, is Gloria Arroyo in the Philippines." Going on to what Bush said, he said, "she's a part of our vast coalition. She said, early on we need to get after the Abu Sabaya group and she did it. And to her credit, it looks like the leader has met his demise. The Philippines is better off for that and so is the world." End of quote.

Now, even if we have significantly diminished the ranks of the Abu Sayyaf, I have ordered the AFP to scour the jungles of Sulu for the four remaining Abu Sayyaf leaders. I told them, "phase out the search for Abu Sabaya." Sabi ko, imbes na hinahanap n'yo ang patay, hanapin ninyo ang buhay. Hanapin ninyo 'yung apat na buhay na Abu Sayyaf leaders. And they started doing that. Itong gustong-gusto ko sa military, they really follow orders. Sinabi ko ito two days ago, and yesterday, the day after I gave my instruction, at dawn they started a dawn offensive on the main lair of the Abu Sayyaf in Sulu. This is the lair of Japilon and I understand Khadafi Janjalani is there with him. The fighting is still ongoing, and it will probably go on for two days more. We lost one fine lieutenant in yesterday's encounter, along with several other marines. Your colleagues have been heroic not only in Sibuco bay where it was our sailors, navy and marines who were able to get Abu Sabaya, they are also there giving up their lives again in Sulu, together with the other elements of the Philippine Armed Forces. Our forces will relentlessly hunt down these criminals until they are all accounted for.

Here in Luzon there have been terrorist cells as well, not to mention criminal elements like kidnapping syndicates, and I congratulate the police for the strong measures they have done to neutralize the terrorist cells here in North Luzon. I would like you to do more with regard to kidnapping.

As you know, what has been hogging the headlines especially in Central Luzon is a major revamp going on in the Philippine National Police as a result of a very strict interpretation of the rule of command responsibility on the issue of illegal gambling. I would like to let the people of Central Luzon and the Philippines know that these are rehearsal for a bigger challenge of applying the rule of command responsibility on kidnapping and illegal drugs.

These are the challenges and realities of the world as you our young men and one woman are entering the world of the great Filipino workforce. You and past PMMA graduates have been doubly fortunate. You have chosen a sector where the great Filipino workers has a great reputation, and your being graduates of PMMA assured you even last year of immediate jobs.

When you sail out of our shores, keep in mind that you represent a nation renowned for workers of skill, industry, competent and integrity on the job. Strive to add to the good name of our flag.

When you leave your homes temporarily for a sojourn at sea, I hope you will remember that the people back home work just as hard as you do to enable the ship of state to move forward to peace and progress.

Congratulations and good luck to all of you!

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Asian Forum on Corporate Social Responsibility

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Asian Forum on Corporate Social Responsibility

Thank you very much Secretary Ging Deles. Of course Ging knows what I went through yesterday because she was with me when we went to Camp Abubakar. I thank her for coming back and for being here and for introducing me because Ging is the partner of civil society in the corporate sector in corporate social responsibility.

Last night I watched TV and I saw Ramon del Rosario there in the coverage of this conference. And I congratulate you Ramon for sharing what seems to be such a successful conference on corporate social responsibility. Congratulations.

I'd like to greet also Bobby de Ocampo; Rory Tolentino; Joey Cuisia. And I would like to greet the presidents of the various business clubs, and the distinguished guests especially the U.N. Assistant General Michael Boyle.

This morning I was putting thoughts down from what I would tell you today. In other words, I started to write my speech this morning and I went to my computer and I put a title "Corporate Social Responsibility" and my computer flashed that title already exists. So I looked at the title and it was my speech of last year because remember many of you were here last year — no, not here in Malacañang.

In other words many of you and I were together last year during the 2nd observance of corporate social responsibility week — it was July 2nd. And now again we are here in a bigger community this time to renew our commitment to social responsibility because corporate social responsibility even if we did it last year, we must do it again this year because it will continue to be relevant as long as the poor are with us.

Over 24 million of the 75 million Filipinos, or one out of every three among us, are poor. And they will likely remain poor and have children and grandchildren who will most likely remain poor unless we, and they themselves, do something about it.

I thank you, the business sector because even as we have just survived yet another global slow down. We are just celebrating today the 5th anniversary of the collapse of the VAT, and then that was 1997 and we had another one last year. And we have just survived that emerging as the best performing economy in Southeast Asia and the third best performing economy in Asia, business is again sending the message loud and clear that Philippine business is unequivocally committed to corporate social responsibility. And I thank you for that.

The philosophy behind corporate citizenship is the belief that the people — our people — are more than consumers, more than laborers, more than hired help. Corporate citizenship acknowledges that we all belong to one society, and that we are all responsible for the well-being of one another, beyond business and beyond politics. It recognizes the special role of institutions such as business corporations in being responsible for the welfare of our people beyond your role, the role of the people as consumers and employees.

For example, there is the Employers' Confederation of the Philippines under Donald Dee's leadership, and I am looking forward to visiting their factories where they will be selling at 50 percent discount products of other participating corporations in one another's commissaries so that it will be a salary augmentation for the workers.

And though the federation of Filipino Chinese Chamber of Commerce is not here today I thank them because ... Oh there you are John, sabi nila wala ka dito, okay — John Ng is here after all — I thank them because in one of the slides that you saw in the presentation of Rory they were giving something to Frank Drilon, and that was, together with Frank Drilon, the federation will be building its school building programs which it has been having all these years but it will converge with my list of the barangays where no school buildings exist. This is a great partnership, great convergence between corporate social responsibility and government response.

And when I spoke before them in the various celebrations of Independence Day and Philippine-Chinese Friendship I also told them that in the area where Gracia Burnham was rescued that is the triple SB area which is bigger than Basilan — Siraway, Sibuco, Siocon and Baligyan — and it is an area of great poverty that is why the Abu Sayyaf have a lair there not to mention all of the other lost commands. And I asked them also to build school buildings there. So they gave an additional seven million pesos for school buildings in SSSB area, plus two million pesos for hybrid rice so that the people of SSSB can become self-reliant and empowered to provide jobs for themselves and lift themselves out of poverty. Another example of corporate social responsibility that is in sync and converging with government priorities.

And in this conference you have presented concrete action and I'm glad for it. I am gratified to see the leaders of the league of corporate foundations, the coordinating entity for corporate social responsibility week last week and now one of the participants, as well as the presidents and officers of the different business associations all working in concert to fight poverty.

I commend and encourage some very positive approaches you are undertaking.

Your consolidated private sector program is an appropriate strategy as we in government are also seeking to converge our own social programs. This assures us of maximum reach and cost-effectiveness. We must pool resources. We have to work in close consultation not only within the Philippines but also across the Pacific.

I am impressed with the link of the Philippine corporate social responsibility sector with counterpart organizations beyond our national boundaries. We have so much in common with our Asian brethren in this fight. And I am glad that this is now an Asian conference not just a Philippine conference, and I'm glad to hear that next year it will be in Indonesia. In other words, it will be an annual tradition — we could all learn from one another.

Today the biggest concrete economic problem in our country is unemployment. Thirteen percent of our work force, almost five million people in absolute number, are out of work. And I believe that the most important imperative for corporate social responsibility today, and for government programs for that matter, is to attend to this army of the unemployed, either providing them with emergency employment, or empowering them to become self-employed, or re-engineering them to qualify for the jobs available, or providing their minimum basic needs if they absolutely cannot find work.

When we were looking at the report of Rory and she talked about past — the past pie and there was this big portion on human services and the second biggest on livelihood and employment — and I was whispering to Ramon and to Bobby, "but now I think there should be more on livelihood and employment because that's our biggest problem," only to be so happy that in a later slide when she presented the pie for you plans going forward — in fact the bulk of what you're going to do — will indeed be for livelihood and employment. And so here is another convergence of thought, I think we think alike — government and the corporate social responsibility sector — regarding our priorities.

And through market ties and economic complementarity, our alliance against poverty is deeply embedded in the Asean. This alliance must be further reinforced by deeper economic ties with countries and groups of countries beyond Asean — China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, India, the United States, the European union — and it is good that we have the Assistant Secretary of the U. N. With us here today.

And this is why this conference is important. And so I'd like to congratulate and thank the organizers of this Asian Forum on Corporate Social Responsibility — Bobby and the Asian Institute of Management, Ramon del Rosario and the AIM's Ramon del Sosario Center for Corporate Social Responsibility, and its organizing partners among them the lead of the Corporate Foundations and the Philippine business for social progress — for getting you all together in this worthy endeavor.

To particulars, I am happy that you have an excellent working relationship with Ging Deles, Dinky Soliman, and other officials principally in charge of our Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan, or Kalahi, which has been mentioned many times earlier. This program brings to the community level the convergence of our strategic thrusts in combating poverty.

The specific pledges from your community can help push forward the Kalahi program, and they can also inspire similar acts of generosity from private enterprise. We are bent on working closely with the private sector and with people's organizations and NGOs to make a dent in finding jobs and livelihood for our people so as to fight poverty.

I would especially like to seek your support indeed therefore for the thrust of increasing employment opportunities for the poor. Last year, when I met the Corporate Foundations of the Philippines, I asked for a particular support for emergency employment for our out-of-school, out-of-work urban poor youth in Metro Manila. I'm still asking for that and Kalahi covers that. But in addition, looking at the concrete conditions of the Philippines today, I need your help even more for the out-of-work thirty-something generation in the urban areas in Luzon outside of Metro Manila, because these are areas of great unemployment.

In preparation for my State of the Nation Address last July 22nd, I have been holding a regional development council meeting in all regions. Like yesterday I was in region 12 aside from Abubakar for an RDC meeting of Region 12. The day before, I was in Region 11 for an RDC meeting of Region 11. I have only two to go, Metro Manila and Region 7, and in this regional development council meetings and inspections I discovered an irony: that the most progressive regions in our country are the ones with the highest unemployment. It's natural when you think of it because job-seekers will go and when they can't find a job they don't go back home anymore they try to make ends meet one way or the other, also those regions that are richest are also the regions the greatest discontent.

In analyzing surveys, non-satisfaction of the people I found another irony: not only is the discontent greatest in the regions with the highest income, by income classes, the discontent is also greatest among those in the highest income brackets — the ABC. You are the ABC, and I ask that you include as part of your corporate social responsibility to keep the faith.

As your President, I may make mistakes, although if you look at it most of my mistakes are political, not economic policy. And therefore, the fact that I make political mistakes left and right — but I keep my economic policy correct — I wish you would recognize therefore that my focus on my duty as President is not distracted by political considerations.

I wish you would recognize that I am a President who keeps my word. Last year in my State of the Nation Address I spelled out in concrete, quantitative targets, my program of government. I have asked your NGOs, Dinky has asked the various NGOs especially the AIM. to validate the report card of those targets. I hope that you will see the NGOs doing the validating that I am complying with those targets. And therefore, that when I say I will do something, I do it. And that is the simplest meaning of credibility.

Indeed we must work together. Kalahi is our focused program for direct intervention in poverty reduction at the community level.

And I welcome your idea of a privately managed fund, a privately managed Kalahi fund, so to speak, that will pool new moneys and initiatives which you and the public at large might want to contribute to our job creation and livelihood program. This will be a mechanism to enlarge participation in the Kalahi to include smaller companies and Filipinos from all walks of life, as Rory Tolentino said.

Because the greatest discontent is ironically in the rich regions, deprived barangays of rich regions are priority areas for me and for Kalahi.

Another of the ironies I have seen is that insurgency in the Philippines is strongest in the richest regions of our country — Regions III and IV are the richest regions of our country and yet it is where insurgency is greatest. I believe it is not that richness causes insurgency or that poverty as a whole causes insurgency because then the insurgency should have been greatest in the poorest regions. It is also because we had a secessionist insurgency in ARMM, we have an insurgency, a strong insurgency in Region 5 which is the second poorest region. But why do we have strong insurgency in Regions III and IV?

You know the middle, the middle provinces are quite stable. There's only one NPA-influenced barangay in Region I. There's only, no, I believe no NPA-influenced barangay in Region II. So those that are in between the richest and the poorest are quite politically stable.

It's easy to understand why there's insurgency in the poorest regions but why is there insurgency in the richest regions?

I believe that it is the contrast that the poor barangays feel between their economic exclusion and the affluence of the urban centers which are so near and yet so far as far as they're concerned. I believe this was also a great cause of the secessionist movement in Mindanao — not the poverty of Mindanao as a whole because Mindanao's growth rate is higher than average, the natural average. I believe it is the contrast that the muslim communities have been feeling all these years between their economic exclusion and the affluence of the Davaos, the Gensans, the Cagayan de Oros.

Yesterday, as mentioned by Ging, I was in the conflict-affected areas in Mindanao together with her. There which is poor hope is rising in the communities. We went to what used to be Camp Abubakar in the driving rain as Ging said because we caught the typhoon, couldn't fly there so we had to go by land through roads that are of course very rough, rivers without bridges. And when I got there in Camp Abubakar, where, again, when I was going to go there yesterday, it was interpreted that I was going to go there to turn over the camp to the MILF. On the contrary, when I got there I instructed the 603rd infantry brigade of the Philippines to permanently transfer its headquarters from Sultan Kudarat, Maguindanao to Camp Abubakar.

The Philippine Army will carve out 50 hectares of the 2,000 hectares that make up what is called Camp Abubakar. These 50 hectares will be the new permanent home of that brigade, and this will no longer be called Camp Abubakar. It will be called Camp Duma Sinsuat, named after the first muslim cabinet member in history — my father's cabinet by the way — but he was a man known for his great integrity. As for the rest of Camp Abubakar, we will stop calling it that I said, we will call it what the Philippine Government maps say it is: the towns of Barira, Buldon, and Matanog — that's what they are. We will do this to strengthen the right hand of the government — the hand that enforces sovereignty and peace and order.

On the left hand, however, we will reach out anew to our MILF brothers by inviting them to participate in development.

Yesterday the American Ambassador was with Ging and me and shared our adventure. In fact he had a bigger adventure, his car got stuck in the middle of that raging river where boulders usually fall down when there's a typhoon. Well, before his car got stuck his USAID colleagues had the opportunity to tell the people in the community about the successful USAID program providing livelihood enhancement to former MNLF combatants. Ambassador Ricciardone announced that the USAID today is ready to extend this program to an initial 300 returning MILF combatants.

So I have sent word to the MILF, through the back channels, for its NGO created under the recent peace agreement to immediately nominate 300 returning combatants so that they can demonstrate the blessings of being back in the fold of Philippine society and sovereignty.

What UASID is doing in the MNLF and the MILF barangays in Mindanao, I hope the corporate foundations will do for rebel returnee barangays in Regions III and IV and maybe even IV. I hope, well you have enrode, I am looking forward that you will fund or even run Kalahi programs for the some one thousand or so NPA-influenced or infiltrated barangays in these regions.

As I said, Regions III and IV are rich, but there are barangays of great economic exclusion, and therefore great threats to national security.

Our soldiers are now clearing these barangays, in Regions III, IV and mostly through civil military operations, because if they're already influenced it hard for civilian government to go in ahead. The soldiers must go in but they usually go in and say, "we are government, we are good guys, we care for you let us help you." Sometimes they succeed, no, many times they succeed. Sometimes they are resisted, militarily and therefore it turns into armed offensives. But once these barangays are cleared, whether peacefully or through an armed offensive — and many have been cleared over these past month, no, these past month, just these last four weeks — our Kalahi programs must enter those barangays immediately, because Kalahi is the face of the government for those deprived areas.

If Kalahi fails to come in immediately for lack of funds or lack of manpower or lack of machinery, a vacuum will be created once again and the insurgents will just return. So this is where i hope corporate social responsibility will be directed at this time.

In closing, let me commend once more the corporate social responsibility community of our country for consistently leading the business sector in addressing your social responsibilities. While we have been through some very trying economic times — and we are still through some emotionally trying times — your commitment to maintain, and even enhance your level of your exposure in various social development programs, provides our government with the flexibility it needs to focus its resources on other urgent national priorities especially, for me now, bringing down power rates and enforcing peace and order in Metro Manila.

Having achieved most of the targets I set out in last year's State of the Nation, that's where I find I still have to do a lot of work. And so I have set for myself these two specific objectives as the challenges that I must concentrate on: squeezing blood from stone every centavo that the power rate goes down matters for our competitiveness; and also enforcing peace and order, getting rid of the kidnappers, getting rid of the drug pushers especially with a new organization of the PNP that is supposed to come about tomorrow.

In working together, I hope that not only will we be able to find jobs for the poor together, but I also hope that we will be able to revive the bonds that brought us together in EDSA — the bonds that might have been loosened lately by some failed expectations. Instead of faulting me with some vague failure to inspire or to lead, I wish many of you would remember that I grew up together with many of you.

Joey and Ramon and Bobby, we were teenagers together, remember? We would see each other at parties. We even danced with one another during our jam sessions in our high school and college years. Therefore, all these years you have known me, you have known my personality. And you have known that even when I was President's daughter I was not flamboyant, not charismatic, just a plodder and a hard worker.

And yet knowing that I am not charismatic, flamboyant, theatrical, electrifying, magnetic, you still gave me a landslide for senator in 1995 and for Vice President in 1998. But I would like to tell you those who've known me for all these 30 years, I am still that same person you enthusiastically supported for Senator and Vice President. I am still the same person as that Senator who gave straight-forward explanations of economic bills in the senate rather than brilliant exposes, privilege speeches and investigations, but who steered those bills into some of the most useful economic legislation that you are still using in your business lives today. I am that same person.

And I hope that we can level expectations. Don't expect me to say electrifying things if the last 30 years i never did. Don't expect me to do them now in the next three years. But expect me to continue plodding and to continue producing the good macroeconomic numbers that provide you today with a stable business environment in a world outside that is still slowly recovering from trauma.

Work with me on the ground, on those Kalahi areas where there is no glamor, no star quality, but where the drudgery of consistent hard work and dedication to specific objectives will, with your faith, provide jobs and a better life for our people.

We cannot give up. We must not give up. It is in constant trying, in relentless struggle, that we manifest our compassion.

Let us continue to work together. Let us do what is right. Let us do our best, and let's pray for God to take care of the rest.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 33rd National Marketing Conference of the Philippine Marketing Association, Inc. Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 33rd National Marketing Conference of the Philippine Marketing Association, Inc.

Thank you very much Secretary Gordon, our country's Chief Cheer Leader; President Anoonuevo; other officers and members of the PMA (Philippine Marketing Association), ladies and gentlemen.

I am happy to celebrate this Marketing Conference with you. In our free enterprise system, marketing is crucial for increasing production and creating jobs. Thus, I am happy also to announce to you today that I have proclaimed July as National Marketing Month.

Marketing is about competitiveness, and our quest for jobs in a free enterprise society is about making our country competitive. Thus, we have lowered the cost of capital by disciplining our budget deficit, and we will continue to discipline our budget deficit. While we started this year with a big deficit, it is smaller than the one that we had at this time last year. And yet at year end — even though last year at this time, we had a bigger deficit than now — we were able to attain at year end our target deficit ceiling. And the international credit agencies, therefore, adjudged us as stable.

Now for the deficit this year. Let me quote what Bloomberg reported yesterday. The title of its report was "Budget Concern Cools on Report." and the text of the article said, and I quote: "the nation's deficit narrowed in May, suggesting government efforts to increase tax revenue and rein in spending are now working. The deficits fell 19 percent in May from a year earlier to 24.6 billion pesos. While the deficit grew faster than the government projected in the first five months of 2002, finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said the nation is still committed to meeting its full-year deficit target."

So, that is one way by which we continue to work to make our country competitive. Because by keeping our deficit in check, we keep our interest rates low. And the interest rates in my administration had been the lowest that they have been in so many decades.

Also, to make our country more competitive, we have taken measures to reduce the cost of power, and I believe those among you who might have received your July bill are now seeing much lower electricity rates. What you are seeing is the fruit of our administration's work in the energy sector.

Last May, I told Napocor to bring down the Purchased Power Cost Adjustment or PPCA — which is a part of your PPA — to 40 centavos per kilowatt-hour. and this is now reflected in the July billings of the consumers. With these July billings, the Philippines is now no longer the number two most expensive country in Asia in terms of electricity rates. Now it is just number 6, because with the July billings, we have overtaken Singapore, Hongkong, Brunei and Cambodia.

To continue the effort to make our power rates competitive beyond this immediate term and into the short, medium and long term, we have put a comprehensive ten-point program in place to reduce power cost further. And I ask your association to support me in this effort.

One of the ten points for reducing power rates some more is the review and renegotiation of the Independent Power Production contracts.

Yesterday, the IPP Interagency Review committee headed by Secretary Camacho and including the Secretary of Justice, presented to me the results of their review of all the 35 IPP contracts. Now, this is the reason why the Malacañang Press Corps is here with me today. So, let me give you the highlights of their committee report. of the 35 IPP contracts, the committee found that:

First, six contracts passed the review with no legal or financial issues. so, they go on and operate, and the rates are more or less fair;

Eleven contracts, while passing the legal review, have some financial issues that need to be addressed to assure that the government and the public are not being financially prejudiced. And maybe, in this review in order to make the public less prejudiced we might be able to find room for some more centavos decrease;

Two of the contracts, while having some remedial policy issues, however, were found to be financially sound. So, probably, you can't squeeze any blood anymore from those stones;

Eleven contracts have some financial issues that may require renegotiation of the financial terms. More serious than the first eleven contracts I told you about. And maybe this renegotiation might bring about some bigger decreases in power than the previous eleven;

And lastly, five contracts were found to have both legal and financial issues that need to be referred for appropriate study, whether renegotiation or possible legal action or both.

Of these five contracts that are both legally and financially problematic, two are not operating. So, even if we renegotiate them or file legal action they won't result in lower rates,. But the other three are the ones where I said, we should prioritize because legal action takes longer than negotiation. However, the threat of legal action also makes negotiation faster, hopefully. of the latter five contracts, therefore, the ones with clear legal and financial issues, I have instructed the Department of Justice and the Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Manager or PSALM to work together to formulate a plan of action for renegotiation and/or legal action.

For the twenty-two contracts requiring the study or renegotiation of certain financial terms, it's just a matter of degree — some are more disadvantageous than others — I have instructed the Department of Energy and PSALM to initiate the necessary steps to arrive at an acceptable renegotiation of the issues. Because they're legally okay but financially there is room for negotiation.

For the two contracts with some remedial policy issues but which are financially sound and the rates are probably as best as they can be. I have instructed NEDA to coordinate with the DOJ to review these contracts.

I have given these agencies — these are DOJ, DOE, NEDA and PSALM — three months to take action on these contracts and come up with the results of renegotiation, policy remedy or legal action. So I hope that now that you have a big decrease in your electricity bills, this action will result in some more decreases along the way. But you as marketing managers know that negotiations don't happen overnight. But at least there's something to look forward to over the short or medium-term depending on how easy or how difficult the renegotiations will be.

In this, we will see that we shall endeavor to further reduce the cost of electricity for the consumer while respecting the rule of law and the validity of legal contracts. In other words, we cannot unilaterally just change the rates. Where there is a legal issue, we must go to court. and when there is no legal issue, well, you as business persons know that negotiation is a two-way street. and this is consistent with the mandate of the Electric Power Industry Reform Act and our goal of rationalizing the power industry.

To enhance our country's competitiveness, it's not just the interest rate which is very important. It's not just the power cost which is very important. The other horizon we must attend to is law and order.

This morning I presided over the turnover ceremony of the Philippine National Police. I challenged the new PNP Chief General Ebdane, Jun Ebdane, to eliminate kidnapping in one year. and the better news is that he accepted the challenge. But he will not be without expert help. In Jun Ebdane's battle against kidnapping syndicates, he will be assisted by a special task force headed by the Mayor of Davao City, Mayor Rudy Duterte.

I directed Jun Ebdane to call a Summit on Drugs and Kidnapping this coming Monday. Where he said, "Patawad naman, it's Thursday already today." "o, so Jun eh 'di kung tawad kailan mo gusto?" "o sige po, Tuesday," sabi n'ya. so, we will have a kidnapping summit on Tuesday. and I expect this summit to clearly define once and for all, all the parameters of command responsibility in the police including the application of due process, which the whole PNP organization must understand and accept. After this, there will be no more excuses.

To make our country competitive and attractive to investors, we must also be on the ball in world affairs. Why did Malaysia become competitive? Because Mahathir was there in world affairs as well as in the internal reforms and so on.

And so on July 15th, I shall assume in concurrent capacity the post of Secretary of Foreign Affairs. I shall make sure we strengthen the international linkages that would enable us to be at par on conversational basis not only fight terrorism and uphold the law everywhere but to be able to sell our goods and services everywhere.

There are eight realities of the regional and international environment which will guide my foreign policy:

First, the paramount influence of China, Japan and the United States in the security and economic evolution of East Asia;

Second, the growing context of Asean in world affairs.

Third, the role of the international Islamic community;

Fourth, the looming importance of inter-regional organizations;

Fifth, the protection of our environment, natural resources and our marine territory;

Sixth, the drive for foreign markets and foreign investment, in which Europe is also a major source along with the U.S., Japan, China and Asean;

Seventh, the importance of international tourism;

And eighth, the crucial role of overseas Filipinos in our socioeconomic stability.

In the great endeavor to find jobs for our people in order to win the war against poverty, every little thing helps. and I am confident that the Philippine Marketing Association and the business, consumer and retail communities will respond to this call.

We need marketing to further strengthen our bilateral relationships with other countries. We need marketing to expand production, support consumption, create a bullish investment sector. and not just investment sector but to create a bullish environment. We need marketing to have cheer leaders who will tell our countrymen, "hey! there are good things happening in our country." We need marketing to promote the natural wonders of the Philippines to the international and even to the domestic market.

Seeing you all here gives me confidence that we shall stand out in the end. I appreciate your faith in the Philippines because it is you the marketers of the Philippines who can spread out this good faith to the rest of our countrymen.

Again, I want to take this opportunity to tell everyone that we should set aside divisive politics and focus our energies on freeing our people from the bondage of unemployment and poverty.

I also call on our business people to add a social dimension to the usual bottomline concerns. I urge you to create more jobs as you expand. More jobs translate to more purchasing power in the economy. More purchasing power will increase effective demand for goods and services, which would increase sales and profits. We must sustain this cycle of progress and stability.

You can, of course, directly or indirectly involve your companies and yourselves personally in social welfare activities as well. An act of kindness inspires reciprocity. Let us flood the country with acts of humanitarianism. After all, we are in this together. As your conference theme puts it, “stand out or lose out.” That’s what Dick Gordon said, “yeah! we’re like that.” but we’re not going to lose out. Did we lose out last year? Our neighboring countries, our trading partners have not done as well as we have, even if we think we have not done as well as we would want to have done. and so, we did not lose out last year. We didn’t lose out the first part of this year. As the best performing economy in Southeast Asia and the third best economy in Asia, we are not losing out. So, let us stand out because we must not lose out.

We must close ranks and ride on our collective buoyancy to face the steep challenges in the horizon. I shall be counting on you, the marketers of the Philippines. Kailangan ko kayo.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Philippine National Police (PNP) Change of Command Ceremony
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Philippine National Police (PNP) Change of Command Ceremony

[Delivered at the Camp Crame Grandstand, Quezon City, July 4, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Joey Lina. Napakaganda ang pagpapakilala mo sa akin.

My very esteemed predecessor, predecessor din ni Larry Mendoza at ni Jun Ebdane bilang PC Chief at as Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, also the supervising general for four major service commands including the PNP or the PC-INP, Former President Fidel V. Ramos; our two generals in the turnover today — General Mendoza, now Secretary of Transportation and Communication. And I greet the other Cabinet members as well. And Director General Hermogenes Ebdane and the other officers of the Philippine National Police; our very supportive congressmen who are here today — Congressman Teodoro, Congressman Torres, Congressman Aquino; General Roy Cimatu, happy birthday to you today, July 4th; the other officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines; our very supportive governors who are here today, deputies all of the National Police Commission — Governor Tommy Joson of Nueva Ecija, Governor Martin Petilla of Leyte, Governor Vic Magsaysay of Zambales; members of the diplomatic corps; other local officials; parading elements; co-workers in government; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen.

Troop commander General Lansigan give ‘Tikas-Pahinga.’

This is a good day for a turnover of the Philippine National Police Command. So far, the weather is cooperating with us. But as I was leaving Malacañang, I was told that the policemen and the policewomen have said that ‘rain or shine’ our ceremonies will be in these parade grounds because it’s been a long time since we had a formal ceremonial turnover. Last January 21st 2001, Larry Mendoza did not have the benefit of ceremonies such as what we are having today.

And today, Larry Mendoza hangs his uniform after 38 fulfilling years of service. Awaiting him as he leaves the police force is a bigger job in the Cabinet. Larry, my guidance for you as you make your career move is work with Bayani Fernando to solve the traffic problem in Metro Manila. Bayani Fernando is here to wish you well in working with him. Work with Tony Bernardo to cleanse the waterfronts all over the Philippines of smugglers and goons. You know, Tony Bernardo told me that unlike his sparring partner, Rene Bañez, whose crooks are white-collared crooks, Tony Bernardo’s crooks are blue-collared crooks, they are not only smugglers, they are goons. And the more I decided that I need a tough cop to help him there. I need a tough cop in the streets of Metro Manila and the ports of the other cities. That is why Larry Mendoza is going to be... Is now, in fact, the Secretary of Transportation.

Larry came well-prepared for the top PNP post, and he is well-prepared to be the top enforcer of our streets and waterfronts, carrying a PMA diploma, a run of assignments along the entire breadth of police duties and two masters degrees. But what makes him a cut above the rest are his outstanding trustworthiness, steadfastness and a tenacious drive. Such qualities came into public view in the tense days of EDSA dos, also in the May 1st riot last year, and in several other occasions that tested the inner strength of many police officers. Larry Mendoza as tough cop led his men well. And how he cared for and loved his men.

Half of Larry’s speech and half of Joey’s introduction of me was all about the benefits that our police force have gotten during this past year-and-a-half. And why? Because Larry would constantly nagged me about salary adjustments, retirement pay and other benefits especially the salary adjustments that the law had provided for ten years ago. And now, it is fitting that as he leaves his post in the PNP this month of July, now the policemen and policewomen, and police officers he is leaving behind will feel your pay increases this July.

This July, not only will the average policeman, together with many other households... No, not only with the average policeman feel an increase in his pay, the average policeman together with the average households starting this July will also feel a reduction in electricity rates. But let's go back to the policeman who will also feel the big salary raise. Starting July, police master sergeants will be receiving — because Larry said that police directors have a higher pay than cabinet members — well, for that matter, police master sergeants starting July will be receiving a higher pay than the salary of military brigadier generals. That is why when I found out about this, that is why I certified and I thanked the congressmen that they have passed the law increasing the soldiers' pay as well. And incidentally, we will begin to phase in the implementation of the military salary increase at the end of the year.

Going back to Larry and his nagging me about police benefits — we nag each other all the time. As he nagged me about police benefits, I also nag him about the further professionalization of the PNP. And so, in order to increase police visibility and deter crime especially kidnapping, during Larry's term he hired new policemen, a new policemen all college graduates. As he mentioned in his accomplishment report, he had his policemen and policewomen, old and new, trained and retrained as needed.

I believed that the salary increase and the professionalization of the PNP is on its way to making PNP an attractive force for our good elements in the community to join. Last year, Larry hired 1,700 policemen. And again, I'm grateful to the congressmen and the senators because for this year they provided a budget for another 4,000 policemen, so that we can have 5,000 new policemen and women. And for these 5,000 openings, we had 30,000 applicants all of them college graduates, all of them civil service eligibles. And I hope this augurs well for a real professional image of the Philippine National Police.

Whatever might be the casual observation, Larry's achievements are cast on the record. Statisticians might lie but statistics don't. Our crime solution efficiency index now stand at 90 percent in kidnap-for-ransom cases. The resolution rate was better in the year 2001, Larry's year, than the year before with 63 percent of the cases solved compared to 48 percent the year before. And this 63 percent solution rate is so far the highest solution efficiency for kidnap-for-ransom cases in the last five years.

The market for illegal drugs was significantly downgraded in the year 2001. We had our biggest hauls in the drug raids last year. We confiscated 500 kilograms of Shabu in Quezon province. Ay! Congresswoman Dumarpa. Ito namang ating mga male chauvinist protocol officers, hindi sinulat 'yung pangalan ni Congresswoman Dumarpa noong babatiin ko yung mga Congressmen natin.

Anyway, going back to Quezon province. I want to take this opportunity — Larry said that he doesn't want to praise all the officers that did well during his term. And I can't do that also. But let me just mention today three of them along the way just to set as an example and illustration. In the case of the shabu raid in Quezon province, let me praise the provincial director of the province of Quezon, Colonel Roberto Rosales, and his men for resisting the bribery temptation and catching the biggest fish caught so far in our whole history of our drug wars. Then, let me point out the raids on the laboratories in Batangas and Zambales which netted a total haul of 1,300 kilograms of shabu. These three— Quezon, Zambales and... Ano 'yung isang probinsya? Batangas — are the largest drug busts ever in the history of our crime fighting.

Now, that's enough for Larry Mendoza because he's already getting embarrassed. I used to tell Mendoza, you should project yourself like Elliot Ness because that's what you are. But he's always been so shy even when I wanted to project him like Elliot Ness. So, therefore, having pointed out some of Larry's dramatic achievements, let's move on to the next Elliot Ness, the most senior and the most logical successor for the post of chief PNP. And this is general Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr.

Jun Ebdane is no less well-trained than his predecessor. No less experienced, no less highly educated. His field assignments are no less varied than his predecessor's. His support and protection of me during the difficult days of the impeachment crisis were no less devoted than that of Larry Mendoza. And Jun Ebdane comes very well endorsed by the Filipino-Chinese community and two former presidents, in addition to his seniority and in addition to my own personal assessment of his loyalty and capability.

I have asked several Filipino-Chinese why do you love Jun Ebdane so much? And he said... And they say because Jun used to be the head of the Western Police District. And in that stint, he impressed the Filipino-Chinese community with his outstanding integrity. And after that... Or was it before? He was head of the presidential guards in President Aquino's time. And then he was deputy head of the Presidential Security Group in President Ramos' time. President Ramos and President Aquino both have been telling me enthusiastic stories about the loyalty and reliability of Jun Ebdane.

It was especially, the special trust of the Filipino-Chinese community that I considered when I named Jun Ebdane the head of the controversial PAOCTF, and then the head of the anti-kidnapping task force of the National Anti-Crime Commission, which I created especially to fight kidnapping after the abolition of the PAOCTF.

The anti-kidnapping task force under Jun Ebdane has improved the resolution rate of kidnap cases with its two-pronged approach to kidnapping. One approach is neutralizing the syndicates and the other approach educating the community. Jun Ebdane and his chief Larry Mendoza brought down the incidence of KFR cases with Chinese-Filipino victims by 63 percent.

With Jun's ascendance to the top post of the Philippine National Police, I am now abolishing the anti-kidnapping task force under the NACC. And for that matter, I am abolishing the NACC. I am giving Jun the total accountability and responsibility for kidnapping. And I have challenged him to eliminate kidnapping in one year. And the better news is, Jun Ebdane has accepted the challenge. But while he has the responsibility and the accountability, he will not be without expert help. I am happy to announce that in Jun Ebdane's battle against kidnapping syndicates, and also the continuing — and it will be an Improved battle against drug lords Jun Ebdane will be assisted by a special task force to be headed by Davao City Mayor Rudy Duterte.

But of course, as battalion commanders are the backbone of the military, the backbone of the PNP are the provincial directors. And so, I make a special call on all our provincial directors to help your new chief PNP enforce the law — all laws, including our anti-gambling laws and especially our laws against kidnapping and illegal drugs.

In connection with this, I have Directed Jun Ebdane to call a summit on drugs and kidnapping, similar to the summit called by Joey and Larry on illegal gambling that they held last April. I ask Jun to call the summit for this coming Monday and he said, "ma'am, can you give me some time because I have to put it together." "okay, Jun. How much time do you need?" "instead of Monday, can I call it on Tuesday?" That's what he said. So, Tuesday you will have this summit.

What are my expectations of this summit? In this summit, aside from your operational agreements with one another on how to fight kidnapping and how to fight drugs more effectively, I also expect this summit to clearly define the parameters of command responsibility with respect to kidnapping and drugs, including the application of due process to the principle of command responsibility in the fight against kidnapping and Drugs. I also expect that these parameters will be understood and accepted by the whole PNP organization. And after that, there will be no more excuses.

I want command responsibility to be interpreted both ways. For errant cops, the commander will share the blame. As I said earlier in the military, the more frequent the bungling happens, the higher the command responsibility goes. But the same for good things. For good cops, the commander will share the credit. For instance, it was one of the men of the provincial director of Quezon who resisted the bribery attempt but the provincial director shares in the glory.

May I also cite — again, I said I can't name all but I have to cite from top of the mind recall — I would also like to cite the provincial director of Pangasinan, colonel Boggie Mendoza for his spectacular success against kidnapping syndicates and terrorist cells in Pangasinan. And so I have asked Joey Lina to appoint Boggie Mendoza as the provincial director of Pampanga to clean up the syndicates in the province of Pampanga, my home province.

I must also make special mention of the police office in Baguio City, whose members held their ground against a group of crooked cops who wanted to bribe their way in obtaining a custody of a drug suspect. I am ordering commendations given to the faithful cops in Baguio including their station chief under the principle of command responsibility. At the same time, yesterday, I instructed Larry Mendoza to make as his last act as PNP chief, the dismissal of the wayward cops and the relief of their commander. Command responsibility towards the good and command responsibility related to the bad.

I have to say in all candor that despite all that Larry Mendoza and Jun Ebdane and the police force have accomplished — worthy as all these may be and I mentioned some of the more outstanding of them, but not all so many outstanding feats — we still have an image problem, you and I, regarding peace and order. And in all candor, I think we do have some operational problems that we have to address, you and I. We are in this together and we must be united to face the challenge.

The first thing we must do to unite and face the challenge is to get rid of internal politics. I am glad that in his speech, Jun Ebdane used the acronym, 'ONE' (O-N-P) — one police. It is not just an acronym, it is a crying need for the Philippine National Police of today. Let us get rid of the division and the intrigue that is threatening to rock the organization. I call on all of you, senior officers of PNP, think of the institution, think of the country. Let us get our act together. Let us get our job done.

The country was able to do it in the case of Abu Sayyaf. Yes, there were intrigues and rivalries, too in the battle against the Abu Sayyaf — military versus PNP, marine versus army, this commander versus that commander. In the end, everybody got his act together and we have won against the Abu Sayyaf. Now, we must do it in the case of kidnapers and drug lords.

Our police should not rest until our people can feel not as 'be' but feel safe and secure in their homes, in the streets, in their places of work. The Filipino people demand 100 percent service from their policemen and they deserve no less.

Not only the ordinary citizens but the business community needs peace and order for the macroeconomic horizon to provide more jobs for our people. We also need law and order for tourism, for investment, for enterprise. And without these investments, these enterprise, we cannot generate jobs. And without jobs we cannot fight poverty.

In all these, there will be a continuing policy seamless stretching across the domestic and international horizon. I talked about the Abu Sayyaf and the fight against terrorism, and how we have won because we have put our acts together. And our act together is not only in the realm of uniformed forces, it is also in the realm of policy. On July 15, I shall assume in concurrent capacity the post of secretary of foreign affairs. I shall make sure we strengthen the international linkages that would enable us to fight terrorism and uphold the law everywhere.

I am placing foreign policy at the service of our fight against homegrown terrorism and criminality and lawlessness. And all these in the context of the eight realities of our foreign policy environment which as incoming foreign affairs secretary, I would like to share with you all today.

First policy environment is the paramount influence of China, Japan and the United States in the security and economic evolution of East Asia;

Second, is the growing context of Asean in global affairs;

Third, is the role of the international Islamic community;

Fourth, is the looming importance of inter-regional organizations;

Fifth, the protection of our environment, natural resources and maritime territory;

Sixth, the drive for direct foreign investment, in which Europe looms as a major source along the with the U.S., Japan, China and Asean;

Seventh, the importance of international tourism;

And, eighth, the crucial role of overseas Filipinos in our socioeconomic stability.

These eight realities will shape the foreign policy of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

From the strategic horizon, we shall join hands in the domestic realm to ensure the rule of law and the ascendancy of our democratic way of life. And in these, the police play a paramount role.

Thus, to Larry Mendoza, who embarks on a new career in public service, you will have something new but you will have something old because enforcement is a very big part of the work of DOTC. And to Jun Ebdane, who faces the challenge of improving on the work of his predecessor, I say: “carry on and good luck. The Filipino people look to you for the highest standard of service in our country. I know you will not fail us.

Kaya, mabuhay si Jun! Mabuhay si Larry! Mabuhay ang lahat ng ating pulis!

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 59th ASEAN-CCI Council Meeting and the 15th CCI Conference

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 59th ASEAN-CCI Council Meeting and the 15th CCI Conference

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, July 5, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Dante Canlas. And let me take this opportunity to congratulate you and the other members of the economic team because I'm very proud to let my countrymen know that our inflation rate today is down to three percent. And further, that this inflation rate came down from 3.6 percent to three percent because of the 19 percent decrease in the price of electricity. This 19 percent is a reduction year-on-year, whereas the month-on-month reduction was nine percent.

And so with this I would like to greet everyone else, Secretary Concepcion, the President of the Asean Chamber of Commerce and Industry and my former boss in the Department of Trade and Industry; the other heads and representatives of the Chambers of Commerce and Industry of the Asean countries, their respective ambassadors and heads of mission; honorable chairman of our conference today and the incoming president of Asean-CCI, Mr. Utin Yun; and our President of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Mr. Mike Varela; ladies and gentlemen:

Welcome to the Philippines.

On this day of the announcement of our lower inflation rate and lower electricity rate, I am especially happy to be with you today, but also I am happy to be with you at a time when I have just announced that commencing the 15th of this month, I shall concurrently assume the post of secretary of foreign affairs.

Yesterday, before two audiences, I reiterated the eight realities in the regional and international environment of the Philippines that drives my foreign policy. Today I'd just like to talk about four of them that are directly relevant to the conference of the Asean-CCI.

The first of the eight realities that is most relevant of course to this conference is that more and more Philippine foreign policy decisions have to be made in the context of Asean.

The commitment to Asean is a cornerstone of Philippine foreign policy. In this regard, I am glad that Asean-CCI is pushing for the causes and concerns of the developing world. I placed great importance to regional trading arrangements. I have faith in the viability of the Asean Free Trade Area. We cannot generate adequate investments unless we become part of a larger, integrated regional market. This is the only way we can compete for markets and investments with the giants elsewhere in the world.

At the beginning of this year, the AFTA process reached a significant milestone when the first signatories of the AFTA agreement — Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, and Thailand — achieved tariff levels of zero to five percent on almost all goods traded among us.

The Philippines will remain firm in implementing its commitments to Asean as a strategy to achieve global competitiveness towards attaining sustainable growth and development.

But AFTA has a long way to go before becoming an effective means for strengthening the region's competitive position in the global market.

This is why I support Asean's resolve to go beyond tariff-cutting. The leaders of Asean are now meeting and working on the elimination of non-tariff trade barriers. We are harmonizing our product standards and developing mutual recognition arrangements. We are negotiating the liberalization of trade in such important areas as financial services, telecommunications, construction, air and maritime transport, and tourism. We are binding the region together by expanding our transportation and energy networks and easing the flow of goods, people and power throughout the region. We are drafting an agreement to make it easier and less expensive for tourists to come to, and travel within, Asean.

Closer integration is necessary for the long-term survival and prosperity of each of the Asean countries.

Thus it is good that you have successfully brought together the leaders of the various chambers of commerce and industry of Asean. And I congratulate you on this momentous occasion when all ten Asean countries are now part of the Asean Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

But we are also looking beyond our immediate borders to extend the benefits of regional integration to our major trading partners in the region, the so-called Asean+3 with China, Japan, and South Korea.

This brings me to a second and primary reality of the regional and international environment that drives my foreign policy, that China, Japan and the United States and their relationships will be the determining influence in the security situation and, therefore, the economic evolution of East Asia.

With China's entry into the WTO, the nations of Asean, and Asean as a region, must reflect on our own economies to determine how we can best position ourselves to ensure the continued competitiveness of our exports and capitalize on the opportunities presented by a more open china.

The China-Asean free trade agreement will create a market of 1.8 billion people and a combined GDP of two trillion dollars. It is projected that this would boost Asean exports to china by 48 percent and increase Asean's GDP by nine-tenth of one percent. The Philippines will benefit from expanding exports to the rapidly growing Chinese market and developing manufacturing and service facilities in Asean, that can feed the expanding mainland operations of Chinese and multinational companies. This is an excellent opportunity for our logistics service, manufacturing and commodity firms to develop strong business links with post-WTO China.

Japan's trade with Asean totaled more than a 120 billion dollars last year. The outline of an Asean-Japan economic partnership is being worked out. Meantime, a so-called new-age partnership arrangement with the Philippines is under study. This has become more significant now that Japan is out of recession.

The rapid pace, depth and breadth of global integration is the foremost reality we face. This involves not just the flow of goods but also of services, people, ideas, best practices of governance, doing business, investing.

Again, this is linked with a third reality in the regional and international environment that guides my foreign policy: that the country's economic growth will continue to heavily involve direct foreign investment.

Each of our nations is taking an enlightened and balanced approach to this reality. For the Philippines, this starts with our vision of winning the battle against poverty within the decade which is mainly by creating jobs. And that is mainly by having investments.

As joblessness lies at the core of our poverty problem, job creation is the top priority of our national agenda. Last year, we generated more than two million jobs, but that's little comfort. The latest statistics show that we have almost five million jobless that's why this is our primary focus.

In our quest for more jobs, we have improved the competitiveness of industry and services in a number of ways. We have addressed the costs of production and of doing business. The peso has been stable. Inflation was a two-year low with a 3.6 percent. Now at three percent we have to look even further back for the last time it was three percent. Interest rates are at their lowest during my administration in the last 15 years.

We have lowered the cost of capital then by developing and strengthening our financial markets and also by maintaining a budget deficit ceiling which we were able to achieve last year and we believe we will be able to achieve this year because our five month deficit so far is smaller than the five month deficit that we had last year at this time. And if we made our deficit ceiling then, we'll make our deficit ceiling again. Proof is that our bonds are oversubscribed.

Just the other day, I saw an add selling bonds at 12 percent. And I called up Secretary Camacho, "Lito we can't sell bonds at 12 percent, that's too high. Withdraw those bonds from the market." And he said, "it's too late. They've been sold and over sold." And so that's why we are quite liquid; and even if we had a deficit right now, the liquidity is there to finance it. And that's why we have interest rates going down again.

We have taken measures to reduce the cost of power, transportation, and communications, which are the lifeblood of commerce. Starting this month, I mean the last month, June, power costs went down, as I said, 19 percent over last year, nine percent over the month before, and they will go down further this month of July — and this will improve the ranking of the Philippines from being the number two most expensive country in Asia, in terms of electricity rate to number six, and this is just for the short-term. For the longer and medium term, we have a comprehensive ten-point program in place to reduce power costs. And over the medium term, part of them have already borne fruit in June and will bear fruit in July. And that's item number one, which is to bring about more transparency in the billing through unbundling.

Another one of the ten points is the review and renegotiation of legal action if warranted of the 35 independent power production contracts. Last Wednesday I received the report of the review of the 35 IPP contracts from the interagency committee chaired by the finance secretary. And as a result of their presentation, I instructed several steps to be undertaken consistent with the mandate of the power reform law and our goals of rationalizing the power industry and lowering the cost of electricity. We will reduce the burden of our consumers while at the same time respect valid commercial contracts and the rule of law.

To increase productivity, we are strengthening labor-management relations, working to eliminate corruption and red tape, and expanding retraining programs to prepare our work force for the demands of the new global economy. The great Filipino worker is continually being prepped for broader horizons.

Central to our global engagement — and hence our development agenda — is trade. Trade should not be an end in itself, it must be a means to social and human development. Properly employed, trade policies enhance our access to a wider range of goods, services, technologies and knowledge. More trade stimulates entrepreneurship, creates jobs, attracts capital, increases foreign earnings, and fosters vital learning processes — these are the tools that will sustain development and reduce poverty.

This brings to mind the fourth reality that I'd like to talk about in the regional and international environment which drives my foreign policy: that the coming years will see the growing importance of multilateral and inter-regional organizations to promote common interests.

Thus, we support a rules-based multilateral trading system which the WTO is supposed to be. Our support is pragmatic, not ideological. We want what works for our people.

It is imperative that the rules underpinning the system ensure economic growth, employment, and development for all. Because if we don't benefit from trade, we may not be able to sustain the imports of capital equipment and raw materials. The benefits of trade liberalization could be put in doubt, the system itself could lose credibility. This could undermine our ability to mobilize support for trade policy reforms.

And it does not help any when developed countries persist in maintaining protectionist barriers against products of interest to developing countries like the Philippines and many of the Asean countries. These include textiles and garments, and tropical agricultural and fisheries products. While the developed countries take every opportunity to lecture us on the virtues of a market-driven economy, hundreds of billions of dollars subsidize their farm production. These actions prejudice the climate for — and weaken the global commitment to — the flow of trade. These embolden protectionists and complicate the job of trade officials of developing countries.

To promote the Doha-WTO round as truly a development round, we shall continue to focus on several goals. And I hope that in your workshops, the private sector of Asean can also work towards these goals.

One of these goals is to eliminate tariff escalation and tariff peaks for products of interest to developing countries and make this part of the early harvest of results.

Another goal is, for WTO, to make corollary efforts to lessen the burdensome requirements for developing countries to meet the stringent standards in developed country markets. Compliance in many cases has proven to be onerous and expensive. For example, Philippine mangoes and bananas, and pineapples have to undergo exhaustive data collection and certification requirements for a year or more in some markets. Sad to say, sanitary requirements and technical standards seem to be the weapon of choice of protectionists.

Another goal I would ask you to work for is to seek greater liberalization of the temporary entry of service providers in the general agreement on trade-in services which has a lot of potential for developing countries and where support for such liberalization is strong, such as in the ICT sector.

Another goal should be: for anti-dumping actions to be made less of a tool for harassment by making the requirements for the initiation of such actions stiffer, and rationalizing the standards for determining injury because these actions are costly. They weigh down small businesses in developing countries.

Another goal would be to make special and differential treatment truly operational by providing more funds and resources for capacity building to enhance supply-side capabilities, improve private sector competitiveness, implement trade agreements, and meet continuing obligations under those agreements. I have asked our negotiators to provide for further differentiation of treatment among developing countries given the wide range of levels of development from the current two categories of least developed and developing. Because even in the developing category there are wide variations in circumstances, for example, there is a wide variation between the Philippines on the one hand and then Singapore on the other which is very, very developed.

We will continue to support the Cairns group consensus that export subsidies in the agricultural sector should be eliminated but we will make a strong case for special and differential treatment on other agricultural issues. This will enable us to have sufficient flexibility to pursue vital development goals, such as poverty alleviation.

So ladies and gentlemen of Asean, I would like to let you know that the Philippines will maintain its economic ties with the rest of the world to the extent that these ties are consistent with our commitments and the welfare of our people. I look forward to our deep and abiding partnership in this quest because I know this is also your goal for your own peoples.

On this note, I now declare the 59th Asean-CCI Council Meeting and the 15th CCI conference open.

Thank you.

Speech

President of the Philippines
During the 50th anniversary of the AB Economics and MA Economics Programs of the Ateneo de Manila University

[Delivered at the Henry Lee Irwin Theatre, Ateneo de Manila University, July 6, 2002]

Thank you very much Fr. Nebres.

Members of the board of trustees: Eddie Go, whom I appointed as President of the UCPB; Chill Soriano, and I was a member of the Committee on Standards when we made her the first female valedictorian in the Ateneo; Cito Lorenzo, who is my cabinet member specifically looking for a million jobs and who is going to tap the services of Ateneo Macroeconomics Research Unit; Academic Vice President Dr. Angeles; Vice President for planning Fr. Caluag; Vice President for Loyola schools, Dr. Yntag, thank you for reading the citation; trustee and dean of the school of social sciences, Fr. Cruz; administrators of the Department of Economics, Dr. Lanzona, Dr. Dumlao and Ciel Habito; honored guests; fellow alumni; administrations; faculty; students many of whom are all over my administration today like for instance Tony Abad in National Food authority, RT Yap in PITC, Mon Paterno in the Development Bank of the Philippines, and I hope there will be many more in the years to come.

Happy 50th Anniversary to all of us products of the Ateneo Economics Department.

As an economist president, my priority today is to create jobs in order to fight poverty. And to do this we all know, in a free enterprise economy, to create jobs the primary means is to encourage investments; and to encourage investments we must be competitive including in our electric rates. Thus, we have a 10-point program to reduce electricity rates.

And today I would like to discuss this plan with you — present economists and future economists — within the framework of the electric power industry which is divided into: generation, transmission, distribution, and supply.

Generation is done by the independent power producers, or IPPS, and the NPC-owned generating companies, or Gencos; then NPC transmits the power to the distribution utilities, or DUS, consisting of private utilities and electric cooperatives and to customers with direct connection.

NPC charges its customers with basic costs, fuel cost adjustment, or FCA, and Purchased Power Cost adjustment, or PPCA, collectively referred to as the fuel and Purchased Power Cost Adjustment, or FPCA, and Foreign Exchange Adjustment.

The IPPS charge NPC and directly connected DUS with Purchased Power Cost Adjustment made up of generation costs, stranded costs, and foreign exchange adjustment. The NPC charges the DUS with basic costs and the fuel and power cost adjustment, made up of the FCA and the PPCA. In addition, it charges Foreign Exchange Adjustment to the directly connected customers. Confusing. We hope to diminish the confusion when we have the unbundling exercise.

The DUS charge their end-use customers with all the automatic cost adjustments, plus systems loss, company-used power, and the franchise tax, all of which form part of the dreaded and hated PPA.

Let me now discuss the ten points and show you the incidence in the power sector. Like incidence of taxation, now incidence of draft reforms.

In distribution, first reform is to reflect the true cost of service in the rates.

The rationale of the unbundling of electricity rates is to make the billing statements of consumers transparent. Under the electric power industry reform act, electricity rates are to be unbundled. This means that the cost of generation is segregated from the cost of transmission.

The distribution wheeling charge shall be unbundled from the retail rate so that the rates shall reflect the respective costs of providing each service.

By unbundling, the energy regulatory commission, ERC, denied NPC's application to increase its rate by 17 centavos per kilowatt hour and instead said it should reduce its rate by seven centavos. It did this by disallowing certain expenses and items from the rate base. One of the items disallowed was the depreciation expense which NPC based on revalued assets. From now on depreciation expense will be based on original cost.

Second reform is in the direct connection. We will introduce the "declining block structure."

This means, for large end-users, price per kilowatt will decline as consumption increases. This pricing scheme will hopefully stimulate economic activity by stimulating electricity demand, or quantity demanded, and increase utilization of excess generation capacity and hence reduce stranded contract cost and also help distressed industries.

NPC will implement this in partnership with the distribution utilities, but also by pursuing more direct power connection to facilitate the diminishing block.

Third reform is in the NPC-owned Genco sector. Optimize the utilization of generation capacity to minimize cost.

Our utilization mix of NPC power plants will seek least blended costs. For instance, during off-peak periods, what will be on stream will be the power plants that will supply power at least cost. Right now, we don't know which power plants those are because their financials are not yet very transparent.

So to know which are the power plants that cost less, the operations research society of the Philippines will do an independent review of the Luzon grid.

We will also redeploy power barges and relocate land-based generation plants from Luzon where there is an oversupply to other island groups where there is an undersupply.

We will maintain a sensible reserve capacity so that we cannot pay so much for unutilized reserves.

We shall upgrade our transmission systems to make them more efficient and therefore cheaper, but especially to ease transmission constraints and minimize the vulnerability of the power grid from blackouts.

Four, we will establish a competitive wholesale generation market.

The promulgation of the wholesale electricity spot market for wholesale electricity spot market, which is WESM, last June 28 paved the way for the transparent economical dispatch of generating facilities.

How will this work? In the WESM, electricity will be a commodity that can be traded in the spot market similar to stocks in the stock exchange.

To do this, it will be not NAPOCOR selling to itself but we will have a horizontal unbundling of NPC generation assets into individual GenCos to decentralize dispatch and pricing discretion. Much like in china where most of the companies are owned by the Chinese government but they are all managed individually and as competitors of one another.

This means of course that we will immediately have to appoint independent administrators for each Genco plant. And that means a new round of head hunting. And I hope as now that I have so many Ateneans in my various sensitive agencies there will be more room for Ateneo economist here in this Gencos.

We will expedite the procurement of the required software. You know, to run a stock exchange we have a computerized market. So to run the WESM we need a computerized market. So we need to buy the software and the hardware, and we plan to do this in such a timing but hopefully we can launch the WESM before the end of the year.

Fifth, accelerate implementation of open access. The meaning of open access is that there are many suppliers of electricity and they will be competing to provide electricity service to end users. The suppliers will just pay the distributors distribution willing charges for the use of their wires.

Electricity consumers with a monthly average peak demand of at least one megawatt will have a choice which among the suppliers of electricity they want to buy from. For instance, under this even if you're in metro manila — which is known as the MERALCO franchise area — if you feel that you would rather buy from some other utility because they charge less or you like their service more you can do that, you just pay MERALCO for the use of its wires.

We can target the introduction of open access by December 2003 earlier than the law requires if as preconditions we can unbundle distribution rates — which we are now doing — operate the WESM — where we need the hardware and the software — and remove cross-subsidies which might be quite difficult at this very moment in time because right now Luzon is still subsidizing the Visayas. So we see, let them take the Visayas more competitive to remove the cross-subsidy.

Sixth, require efficient performance of the distribution utilities.

One way of promoting the efficient and competitive operation of distribution utilities is by encouraging a shift from the present “cost plus” mentality to the technology used in other regulatory bodies in other parts of the world of a “cost efficient” regime.

We are encouraging transparent and competitive procurement on the part of the power sector firms.

We also hope to accelerate the transition from the traditional rate regulation using the present rate-of-return-on-rate base methodology to a performance-based rate-making approach, and the ERC's target is hopefully way before the end of 2003. Under this, better performing utilities will be given incentives while the poor performers will be meted sanctions.

Thus we will undertake a comparative efficiency rating of distribution utilities.

We will also promote competitive bidding for long-term power supply contracts.

And we are also prescribing certain performance and technical standards that have to be strictly observed by the distribution utilities as provided in the Philippine Distribution Code.

Seventh measure, strengthen the electric cooperatives. One strategy for strengthening electric cooperatives is to promote the consolidation of smaller sub-performing electric cooperatives, for instance, within the region. For instance, within Panay or within Leyte where you have so many electric cooperatives, consolidate them to reduce overhead, and to choose the better manager among all of them.

Another is to adopt a big brother-small brother arrangement among electricity cooperatives, for example, as being done now in Lanao del Sur — I believe it's going to be Cebu as the big brother who will help make the Lanao del Sur cooperatives more efficient.

We will also encourage investment management contracts for suitable electric cooperatives by private operators and well-run electric cooperatives. For instance, in Aklan I asked the national electrification administration to take over the very inefficient AKELCO and it will be run by a better electric cooperative.

Eighth, review the IPP contracts and seek to reduce IPP contract costs. This is very well discussed in the newspapers of this several days, I can say that I can just summarize that the review process which ended last June 30th entailed the use of appropriate benchmarks based on legal, financial and operating issues — three criteria.

We expect that the renegotiation of the contracts should reduce stranded contract costs through — and this is my instruction to the negotiators — realignment of fixed and variable costs, reduction of minimum energy off-take and non-renewal of expired contracts, among other bargaining measures.

Ninth, explore financial engineering methods. We were able to reduce the NPC's PPCA to 40 centavos, which you will see in your electric bills this July, by refinancing stranded costs over longer periods. Another financial engineering method is to have prepaid stored fuel or energy bankable for a certain period pending future use. Still another is the regulatory asset treatment of excess fuel or energy to be included in the rate base.

Tenth, enhance the institutional capability of the ERC. A strong ERC, and it is strong now except that they probably need more technical people to work faster on their many cases and many studies — room for more Ateneo economics graduates — a strong ERC can promote market competition through transparency of rules and strict enforcement of the law on anti-competition policies.

It can also penalize abuse of market power.

It can set rules to protect end-users from undue electricity charges.

It can protect consumers from excessive PPA charges from privately-negotiated bilateral contracts.

So you see these are what we are seeking to do in the immediate short, medium and long term, to reform the power sector and make our electricity sector more competitive. Not only hopefully will we be able to give relief to our harried consumers, but we will be able to find more jobs for our people by having a more competitive investment environment.

Our quest for jobs for our people is tough and difficult but we have a vision and a method for its achievement.

As Atenean economists, we have to fly high. So I ask you economists of today and economists of the near future there are many ways shown here by which we can work together. There are many ways in other parts of carrying out economic policy and formulating it by which we can work together.

Indeed, let us work together audaciously to create jobs and bring about a better and more progressive nation for our people.

Thank you.

President of the Philippines
During the launching ceremony of United Laboratories, Inc.'s RiteMed Philippines

[Delivered at Watsons, SM Mega Mall Bldg. A, Mandaluyong City, July 11, 2002]

Maraming salamat.

Thank you very much Secretary Manolet Dayrit, whom, I must say, is one of the best products coming from my search committee. Congratulations, Manolet.

Secretary Mar Roxas, whom, I must say, is one of the best examples of the time when I changed the recommendation of my search committee and made my own choice. Butch Campos, chairman of UNILAB, magaling na ehemplo ng bagong anyong negosyante, modern and socially oriented; I would like to say the same thing of our host today in this mall, Tessie Sy-Coson; Mr. Ejercito, President of UNILAB; Mr. KC, Managing Director of Watsons, and I would like to thank Watsons because in this past year of my administration they have put up 63 of this Watsons and will be putting up 250 more in the years to come; Jerry Esquivel, Manager of Rite Med, General Manager; William Torres, head of the Bureau of Food and Drugs; Officers and Personnel of the United Laboratories and Watsons Drugstore; distinguished guests; mga mamimili sa mall; mga kababayan:

Una sa lahat, nais kong batiin ang united laboratories sa matagumpay na paglulunsad nitong RiteMed Philippines. Anong ibig sabihin ng RiteMed? Right medicine, right price. Kaya congratulations sa Unilab; at congratulations sa mga namimili, mga mamamayang makikinabang sa murang gamot.

Alam n'yo kanina nung umaakyat ako, nagshi-shake hands ko sa ilan diyan, sabi ko “ano ba ...” o ayun inuubo o, nakita ko yung matangkad inuubo ... “o ano inuubo ba kayo dahil sa ating bagyo.” Meron diyan, kasi ako inuubo ako, may sore throat ako dahil sa ilang araw na nandoon sa mga baha. Pero tamang-tama diyan sa inuubo, pumasok ka sa tindahan pagkatapos dito kasi half price ang cough medicine na mabibili mo. Nung isang taon sa aking State of Nation Address sinabi ko bababa din ang presyo ng gamot, sa loob ng isang taon hahatiin natin ang presyo ng gamot na madalas bilhin ng madla. Ito ay natutupad na sa mga botika ng government hospital dahil sa pagsisikap ni Mar Roxas na unang nag-pioneer niyan dahil sa dti ginawa niya ito para sa probinsya niya sa Capiiz. Eh, sabi ko, “kaganda-ganda ng program na yan Mar, gawin na nating para sa buong Pilipinas.” At siyempre dahil nga doon yung doh ang kinailangan na maging siya ang sangay sa distribution nitong mga gamot na ito.

Itong araw na ito mas lalong maaabot ng marami ang hinating presyo ng gamot dahil usually sinong pumupunta sa government botika? Yung mga Napakamahihirap, yung sanay pumunta sa government hospitals. Pero yung ordinary Filipino citizens na hindi naman government hospitals ang pinupuntahan niyo, eh hindi kayo pumupunta sa botika ng government hospital. Pero ngayon dahil sa pasok ng private sector, dahil sa pagpasok ng Ritemed, dahil sa pagpasok ng Unilab na siya ang nag-organize ng Ritemed, dahil sa pagpasok ng Watsons sa programang ito, kahit na kayo yung mga nagsha-shopping diyan at magpupunta sa sarili n'yong doktor kayo rin makakaabot na sa half-priced medicine. Yan ang importante sa araw na ito.

Kaya Unilab salamat dahil tinutulungan n'yo akong magtupad ng aking sinasabi. Sa madaling salita, kung ano yung sinabi ko sa sona nung isang taon yun ang ating ginagawa.

Kaya nalulungkot ako 'pag nababasa ko na siguro sa inyo nandito sa audience kung magbibilang ako ng lima may isang gustong mag-abroad na dahil ayaw na raw dito sa bansang Pilipinas at ayaw ng demokrasya. Kaya ginagawa natin ito seremonya para mapaalala sa inyong lahat 'wag naman kayong mawalan ng pag-asa kasi kung ano ang sinasabi ng gobyerno ginagawa, ginagawa po yon gaya nito.

At yung isang sinasabi ko na gagawin ng gobyerno — I'm sure si Butch Campos, si Ressie Coson hinahangad din nila ito sa ngalan ng filipino-chinese business community — yung kapayapaan, yung susugpuin natin yung mga nagki-kidnap sa ating mga negosyante at mga pamilya nila. Dahil 'pag ganon eh, hindi na sila magi-invest, pagka ganoon marami sa inyo mawawalan ng trabaho, o yung walang trabaho hindi makakahanap ng bagong trabaho. Kaya kailangan ngayon sa nakita kong nagtatagumpay na tayo dito sa mga ginagawa nating economic measures kagaya ng half-priced medicine, ang gagawin natin ngayon at ginagawa ngayon ay inaasikaso yung problema ng kapayapaan, yung problema ng kidnapping.

Tamang-tama mabait talaga ang diyos, tiniming ng diyos na itong ating seremonya is today at dito sa Watsons, dito sa mall nila Tessie kasi yon pala balak ng Diyos na kailangan pupunta ako diyan lang sa malapit sa Camp Crame dahil meron sila sa ngayon at nung tinanggap ko ito ilang linggo ng nakaraan dito wala pa yung schedule na yon, pero two days ago nagkaroon ng Anti-Kidnapping Summit, at nabasa ko two days after magkakaroon ng Order of Battle Workshop. Kaya tamang-tama nandiyan lang. Pumunta ako dito babalik uli ako doon so, hindi ako nahihirapan. Kung ang diyos magaling sa timing palagay ko alam din niya ang timing kung kailan nating masusugpo ang problema ng kidnapping at kapayapaan.

Kanina pinag-usapan namin yung kidnapping syndicates. Order of Battle: 21 syndicates, tatlo ang pinaka-aktibo. Kaya sabi ko ang ating gagawin diyan ay hindi yung crime by crime so-solve natin. To begin with meron na silang mga previous crimes, may mga warrants of arrest na yan. Parang ano yan military operation para sabihin mo okay kukunin natin yung grupo ni Abu Sabaya sa Siraway yan, o kukunin natin yung grupo ni kung sino ba yon nung panahon nung araw, o sabi nila kukunin natin yung nung araw yung MILF dito sa lugar na ito. In other words, ang ating operation ay parang military: ang susugpuin yung kidnapper at hindi yung solusyon ng krimen — inu-neutralize yung kidnapping syndicate mismo sila ang targetin para wala ng krimen na dadating sa panahon.

Okay may grupong gagawa pa rin ng crime solution at lahat noon pero ang importante it will be a battle military-style. Tatal marami naman dito sa ating pulis nag-aral din naman sa Philippine Military Academy hindi naman police academy pinag-aralan nila kaya alam nila ang military operation. Yan ang ating gagawin.

So, gumawa ng order of battle kanina — inidentify kung sino yung mga sindikato, inidentify kung saan sila nag-o-operate, inidentify yung probable na mga headquarters o safehouses nila at yan ang gagawin natin. So na-identify sila may manhunt na.

Sabi ko nga kay General Ebdane, "o now that we have identified the order of battle ano ang susunod?" Sabi niya, "now I have to form the Anti-kidnapping task unit." "when can you do that?" "I have it already upon your approval." Sabi ko, "it is approved." So meron na tayong anti-kidnapping task force reconstituted para new blood — kinuha yung mga magagaling sa dati, tinanggal yung mga hindi magagaling sa dati. New blood ang tawag niya ay PACER — Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response — pero ang tutukoy ay kidnapping, number one, drugs, number two at saka number three yung hold-up at robbery.

Sabi ... At ngayon dahil may listahan na, ginawa na yung order of battle kahapon at kanina, ang susunod ay yung manhunt. Sabi ko, "jun anong gagawin n'yo para mapabilis yung manhunt?" Kasi si Ronald Lumbao isang taon hinanap bago na-aresto pero yung talagang mabisang manhunt was for two weeks. So sabi ko, "Jun how do we do away with 11 months of groping and go to the two weeks of being focused and successful." Well, sabi niya, "mag-executive session tayo diyan." So sabi ko, "sige mag-executive session na kayo muna, pupunta muna ako doon sa Watsons sa SM para mag-launch ng murang gamot tapos babalik ako." At pagbalik ko meron pang isang buena mano yung isang kidnapping syndicate ng Mindoro ay nahuli at ipi-presenta sa akin mamaya. So buena mano yon sa kidnapping syndicate.

So itong ginagawa natin ngayon ay dalawang kumbinasyon: para sa pangkabuhayan at para sa kapayapaan. Murang gamot pero ang buhay ay hindi mura, buhay ay mahal, katawan ng tao kaligtasan ay mahal nating lahat.

Kaya sa inyong lahat, watsons congratulations and thank you; Unilab and Ritemed thank you very much; tessie looking forward to more investments from SM. To Mar and Manolet, thank you for carrying out my instructions in the Cabinet to make sure that we as a government comply with our commitments.

At kayong lahat mga kaibigan, huwag kayong mawalaan ng pag-asa dahil itong gobyerno n'yo ay nagtutupad ng sinasabi.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the launching ceremony of the 4th Philippine Human Development Report

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the launching ceremony of the 4th Philippine Human Development Report

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañan, July 12, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Dante Canlas.

Professor Winnie Monsod, President of the Human Development Network; Dr. Abueva; Miss Ricarda Rieger of UNDP; distinguished awardees, and I would like to mention them again: Governor Henares and former Governor Henares of Rizal — because they both share. Because former governor also did a lot of ... This is 2000, right? So, he was the governor, Governor Marcos of Ilocos Norte, Acting Governor Roque and Acting Vice Governor Calimbas of Bataan, Mr. Soliman representing Cavite and Governor Ningning Lazaro of Laguna. And I would like again to mention the leaders of the most improved provinces — Davao Oriental, represented by the provincial administrator, but I would like to greet Governor Marlene Palma-Gil, Mt. Province Governor Mali, as — and I was telling Winnie, I can imagine why he is the most improved. He nags me all the time when I'm in the Baguio golf course for all the different human resource development projects of his province of Mt. Province, South Cotabato represented here, but I would like to greet Governor Daisy Fuentes for her good work. Province of Iloilo Governor Neil Tupas and Mayor Tupas are here. And they had been working hard especially on irrigation. And the province of Leyte represented by Vice Governor Villasin. And please give my congratulations to Governor Matin Petilla. And what Winnie considers is the most important of these awards is in terms of contributing to literacy, and this is the award going to Misamis Oriental. And I would like to greet the First Lady of Misamis Oriental Mrs. Kalingin because she was here to receive the award. Other government officials especially Congresswoman Eta Rosales, and members of the business community headed by Donald Dee, ladies and gentlemen:

I am glad that the Fourth Philippine Human Development Report has adopted “Work and Well-being” as its theme. I'm certain this report will serve as a useful guide in our pursuit — Dante's pursuit and my pursuit — of more jobs for our people as the primary means of fighting poverty. And for this, I commend the report's authors and the publishers — the Human Development Network or HDN and the United Nations Development Programme.

The report is a fruit of the continuing dialogue between civil society and government. We may not always agree with each other but dialogue makes us understand each other. And one clear example of our understanding is the use of the human development index as an official statistic in the Philippines, the very first country to ever do so. The human development index is the product of institutionalized consultation for the common good.

I have on several occasions defined new politics, in contrast with the old politics of personality and patronage, as the politics of party platforms and institutionalized consultation with the people. This latter trait of new politics, the politics of institutionalized consultation with the people requires a vibrant civil society.

This vibrant civil society is a cornerstone of a strong republic. The family, the community, the NGOs, the media, the churches have vital roles in building the republic, in doing some of the state's tasks to improve the conditions of every citizen. But civil society — a warrior in toppling a dictatorship and a corrupt government — must now learn to forge its swords into hammers for building the republic. We must strive to finally dismantle a subculture of divisiveness and self-centeredness, and transform our families, our communities and other civil society organizations into engines for national prosperity. It is also civil society, as anywhere in democratic countries of the world, which has the prime responsibility of developing and advancing Philippine culture.

To go now to the document itself, the document highlights a number of interesting points.

One — not so much mention here but in the document itself — is that unemployment and poverty do not amount to the same thing. Neither that I have said earlier that Dante and I now see our jobs as basically solving unemployment. That's why Donald Dee is very important to us as our main means of fighting poverty in a free enterprise economy. So, low unemployment and prosperity also do not always go together.

Sulu, the poorest province in terms of per capita income, in the document also happens to have the second lowest unemployment rate. Its unemployment rate is 3.1 percent. Tawi-Tawi, the second poorest in per capita income, has the seventh lowest unemployment rate of 4.2 percent. On the other hand, Metro Manila, the most prosperous region in the country, has the highest unemployment rate of 17.5 percent. Cavite and Tarlac, two relatively rich provinces, are also among the ten provinces with the highest unemployment rates.

On the macroeconomic level, this helps me to understand why our economy is the best-performing in Southeast Asia and the third best performing in Asia, and yet it has more than 4 million people out of work.

Another highlight of the document is that some provinces have very high levels of underemployment. It is sad to see that in at least 10 provinces underemployment is above 40 percent, and that in two provinces — Bukidnon and Camarines Sur — it is more than 50 percent. This means that for these provinces more than half of the workers are looking for additional work, and it is most likely because of inadequate pay.

These statistics tell us what we must do. We must not be contented with jobless growth. More investments are needed for more jobs. But to get more investments, we need to have a more competitive investment climate. Part of this investment climate is grounded on objective quantitative reality, such as making our power rates more competitive. But a large part of our competitiveness is perception, such as the feeling — feeling safe against kidnappers, feeling that our government is attending to governance rather than to politics.

To bring about competitiveness in power rates, we are — as many of you know — pursuing a ten-point program that I have already unveiled twice: once, before the industry and — but on national TV — and the second time before the academic community in Ateneo but also before the national TV. This is beginning to bear fruit in this month's electric bills. And on the other hand, to make our investors and citizens feel safer, I am concentrating my efforts, together with the new PNP Chief Hermogenes Ebdane, and with Mayor Rudy Duterte, to breathe new life and efficacy into our anti-kidnapping efforts. In the meantime, I have renewed my instructions to my team, my economic team, to address bottlenecks that have stalled major infrastructure and investment projects. We must provide visible reinforcement to the understandably timid business community these days thru large projects in the pipeline, such as the north rail, the LRT-MRT link, the new Nayong Pilipino tourism estate, the housing sector, the national steel reopening, the Batangas port which thank God has started construction, and the Philippine National Bank rehabilitation which thank God is also going on smoothly.

I have been close to these objectives in the past weeks — the peace and order, the electric power rates, and removing the bottlenecks to major infrastructure and investment projects. To lower power costs, we will not stop until we are satisfied that we have squeezed every drop of blood from stone but at the same time we must be responsible and respect the sanctity of contracts, despite the histrionics of some, because this is needed if we are to preserve the gains we have made in our credit risk ratings.

On the peace and order campaign, I am dealing with the threat of kidnapping the way I dealt with the threat of the Abu Sayyaf. I nag the police everyday today the way I use nagged the military every day since last May 1st after I was convinced that we had seen the last of the destabilization threats because May 1st was very peaceful. I began to work on breathing down the necks of the military, and thank God the Abu Sayyaf has been defeated.

The news today reports the order of battle workshop on the 21 kidnapping syndicates held at the police headquarters yesterday. And today, General Ebdane will give me his report on what he needs to accelerate the manhunt for those syndicates at the top of the order of battle. Of course, I will not micro-manage them as I did not micro-manage the war against the Abu Sayyaf. But I will personally track progress. And we will win this battle with hands on persistence, combined with good intelligence and — as in EDSA I and EDSA II and many other struggles — divine providence. That's why I'm glad that Professor Abueva said that we the Filipino after all, the most important variable, the most important parameter — whatever you call it, parameter or variable in his life — is spirituality. And therefore, it is important especially when it is a matter of being discouraged or encouraged, no matter what the numbers look, it is the spirit that will help lift us up from the feeling of hopelessness to the feeling of faith.

These are what we are doing to shore up our business confidence, bring investments, and create better and higher-paying jobs for our people.

Eight of the top 10 provinces in our human development index are in Luzon. Well, of course, Luzon also makes up 60 percent of our population. But most of these are neighboring provinces of Metro Manila. Of course, the population is also around Metro Manila. On the other hand, nine of the bottom ten provinces are either in the Visayas or in Mindanao.

And as Winnie mentioned, worst situated are our Muslim brothers in the south. The provinces of the autonomous region of Muslim Mindanao comprise the bottom five provinces. The human development index of Sulu, the bottom province, is less than one-half the human development index of Rizal, the top province. That's what Winnie meant about the bad news, the very terrible disparity. But by the way, let me congratulate Governor Nini Ynares and Governor Ito Ynares, her predecessor, for leading the province of Rizal up to the highest human development index in our country today. Congratulations.

But I believe that Sulu — that's why it is important to track, knowing where it's coming from — will double its efforts. We have a new governor of Sulu, Governor Jikiri, former MNLF but one of the most supportive governors in our country as far as what we want to do. Whether it's for development projects, whether it is for peace and order projects. And Mindanao as a whole has bright potentials. It is encouraging that two of its provinces — Davao oriental and South Cotabato, incidentally led by two women governors — are among the top ten gainers in human development. And that another province, Misamis Oriental, has the eighth highest HDI in the country and is a top performing province in the area of education.

We need to address the low human development index of the bottom five as quickly and decisively as possible. And that, of course is working on the autonomous region of Muslim Mindanao. I have said we should find jobs for our people in order to win the war against poverty within the decade. If the provinces with the lowest development indices also have low unemployment rates, I believe it is because the unemployed of those provinces quickly migrate to the provinces with the highest development and look for jobs there, but not finding jobs fast enough, they just stay there. They don't go back home again. And this explains why the richest regions also have the highest unemployment rates. So I still believe it is still jobs, jobs, jobs we must create to raise the human development index of our people as a whole. In a free enterprise economy this is a tall order because in the end jobs will be created not by government economic activity but by private sector investment decisions. But the situation brooks no delay. Step-by-step, we must move forward.

On our part, what can government do. Well, Winnie mention inputs and outcome. The government can do its inputs and we mention our output. But in the end, human development will be in the outcome. Our job is to be guided by real, visible and measurable targets in terms of inputs and hopefully in terms of some outputs, most of these were contained in my first state of the nation address before congress last year.

Allow me to mention a few accomplishments.

Input: I targeted 20 billion pesos a year for the implementation of the agriculture and fisheries modernization, but in actuality, we overreached that input. We spent more than 24 billion pesos on agricultural modernization.

Outcome: agriculture is one of our fastest growing sectors, grew more than targetted, right Dante? In year 2001 and first quarter of 2002. And this year, we have allocated even more for our agricultural modernization, almost 26 billion pesos.

Output: I targetted that 150,000 urban poor families would be empowered to buy the land that they occupy, and that 200,000 hectares of public land and private agricultural land will be distributed under land reform.

Output targets: more have already been granted.

Output: more than 150,000 households have been provided mass housing because we targetted that 100,000 workers housing and 50,000 poorest of the poor housing will be provided. The structure is not quiet how I targetted it. We underperformed on workers housing, overperformed in housing for the poorest of the poor. But aggregated the output target has also been exceeded.

Outcome: I hope outcomes can be found in the human development index. And I hope our human development index will become higher with our gains towards universal health insurance and cutting by half the price of medicines.

Output again: our target for health insurance coverage for the urban poor was 500,000. We have already enrolled more than 2,204,000 urban poor. And for the rural poor where I had no target because I wasn't sure how the local governments would cooperate, more than 1,864,000 have already been enrolled. That's output and I hope it can translate to outcomes in higher longer longevity.

Related to health insurance is medicine. Seventy-four government hospitals now carry medicines commonly bought by the poor at prices half of what they were paying last year. And yesterday the private sector joined the drive to provide these half-priced medicine with the inauguration of RITEMED, a brand offering commonly used medicines at an average of 50 percent less than the current prices of rival brands. May I cite, it is also being distributed in Watson's branches all over the country. Winnie has always been pushing for retail liberalization. Watson's being there and pioneering in carrying these brands is proof that Winnie's policy of retail trade liberalization is correct. Incidentally, the 63 branches were all put up during my administration. And while the others may be timid, Watson's will put up 15 more branches before the end of the year. So, we need competition and investment. And sometimes those that we used to seek to keep out of our economy sometimes they are the once who are more daring. And I hope they can be the leaders for the rest of our business community to put their money back in their faith in government.

But this is not all. We need a strong republic to create jobs to win the war against poverty. We need a strong and effective government, not that cowers in fear at every threat, that delivers basic services instead for everyone. For the most important of which today, in our material conditions today, is an environment of peace and order and the rule of law and the necessary infrastructure.

We need an effective state to uplift its poorest and weakest citizens, empower them and dismantle the structures that make them poor and weak. We need an effective government that rest on the rule of law for all and not just for the powerful.

And so I ask you — help! Let us work together to continually increase our human development index. Let us set aside divisive sentiments. And like the rest of the ordinary Filipinos, let us make faith an important part of our indices. Let us move as one with a stout heart and a strong republic, god will make us victorious.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the NCR awarding project to beneficiaries [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa pamamahagi ng proyekto sa mga benepisyaryo ng NCR

[Ipinahayag sa Quirino Grandstand, Luneta Park, Manila, ika 23 ng Hulyo, 2002]

Maraming salamat Chairperson Bayani Fernando sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin.

At binabati ko yung ating mga Congressmen at mayor na nag-sponsor sa inyong mga premiums, sa inyong health insurance, narito si Congressman Ricky Sandoval ng Navotas-Malabon; narito si Congressman Chuck Mathay ng Quezon City. At yung mga mayors na nag-sponsor sa inyo para pumasok kayo dito sa PhilHealth, si Mayor Vicencio ng Malabon; si Mayor Carlos ng Valenzuela; si Mayor Freddie Tiña ng Taguig; si Mayor Marides Fernando ng Marikina; nakita ko itong Caloocan wala si Rey ngayon pero kasama natin ngayon hapon kaya pinadala kayo rito dahil marami rin siyang inin-enrol sa health insurance. At gusto ko ring batiin yung mga private sector na tumulong din para magbayad ng inyong mga premium kasama na rito yung mga officials ng Petron corporation, nandito sila batiin natin at magpasalamat tayó.

At syempre yung ating mga Cabinet member na sila ang humawak ng ating mga programa para sa mahihirap, narito si Joey Lina ng DILG, si Dinky Soliman ng DSWD, si Manolet Dayrit ng DOH; pati na rin si Ed Pamintuan, hindi siya sa health sa pabahay siya ng NHA at saka si President Salud ng Home Mortgage — siguro ia-advertise nila yung pabahay nila para sa inyo. Pero yung humahawak ng ating health insurance para sa inyo ay si Dr. Pinkoy Duque:

At kayong lahat ating mga beneficiary, salamat na narito kayo. Kayo ay bumibilang ng 50,000 itong umagang ito. Maraming salamat sa inyong pagdalo dito sa ating distribution ng PhilHealth.

Kahapon binanggit ko doon sa State of the Nation Address na yung mga target na sinabi ko nung isang taon ay nakamit natin at maraming nalampasan pa. Sa lahat ng target nalampasan natin ang pinakamabisa, pinaka-successful na programa para sa mahihirap ay walang iba kung hindi yung ating health insurance para sa mahihirap.

Kasi nung isang taon ang sabi ko target natin magkaroon ... Ay dumating, kakadating ang isa ring sponsor ninyo sa Quezon City, si Congresswoman Nanette Daza.

Nung isang taon sa aking State of the Nation Address sinabi ko na isa sa pinakamahirap para sa mahihirap ay ‘pag kayo ay nagkakasakit, ‘di ba ang mahal-mahal ng gamot, ang mahal-mahal ng doktor, lalo na ang mahal-mahal ng maospital. Kaya yun ay isang mabigat sa buhay ng mahihirap.

Kaya sabi ko bibigyan natin ginhawa ito. Yung mga mayayaman, yung mga manggagawa, sila ay may health insurance: nagbabayad ng insurance yung mga mayayaman sa private insurance, ‘pag magkasakit yung insurance ang nagbabayad ng kanilang bill. Yung manggagawa may medicare kaya nagbabayad din ng insurance yung kanilang boss at nababawas din sa kanilang sweldo ng kanilang premium. Pero papaano yung walang salary? Papaano yung self-employed na mahihirap? Papaano yung walang trabaho? Papaano yung urban poor?

Kaya sinabi ko nung isang taon na sisikapin natin bilang target na 500,000 na tiga-urban poor ay magkakaroon ng health insurance. Pagkabilang natin hindi 500,000, kundi four million 500,000 ay may health insurance pagkatapos ng isang taon.

Tignan n'yo halimbawa si Mayor Lito Atienza na nagbigay ng ating welcoming remarks. Sa pagkaintindi ko nung isang taon hindi pa kasama ang Manila sa National Health Insurance, from zero to 18,000 ngayon. Kaya 18,000 ang nandito sa mga 50,000 ay nanggaling sa Maynila kaya kayo ay may health insurance na.

Itong 50,000 na narito ngayon kayo ay pami-pamilya, kayo ay head of the family. Pero kung ia-average natin na sa isang pamilya may limang kasapi kinakatawan ninyo mga 50,000 ay 250,000 na taga-metro manila na kayo ay covered na ng health insurance.

Papaano kayo makikinabang? Kapag mayroon kayong health insurance card 'pag kayo ay nagkasakit o kaya anak ninyo, asawa ninyo ay nagkasakit, kung pupunta kayo sa isang national government hospital libre lahat — libre ang doktor, libre ang operasyon at pati gamot ay libre basta dala ng parmasya ng hospital. Kaya wala na kayong babayaran basta national government hospital ang pupuntahan ninyo.

Ngayon meron kayong mga gustong pumunta sa private hospital pwede pa rin kasi kung minsan yung inyong sakit ay malubha baka hindi kaya ng mga equipment ng national government hospital aba kailangan pupunta kayo sa private hospital. Makakatulong pa rin ito. Kung pupunta kayo doon sa mga class na hospital na maraming modern equipment at very specialized yung inyong sakit ang tawag doon ay tertiary hospital — hanggang 16,000 pesos babayaran din ng gobyerno. Kaya malaki ang inyong ginhawa doon.

Kung pupunta naman kayo sa secondary hospital yung medyo karaniwang hospital kaya lang hindi kaya ng national government hospital, babayaran ng gobyerno hanggang 11,000 pesos pa rin. Kaya malaki rin ang ginhawa ng inyong pagpagamot.

Papaano pumapasok sa health insurance? Ah, meron pa tayong isa pang sponsor ninyo, ito ay si Congressman Joey Hizon ng Maynila. Di ba itong lugar kung nasaan tayo si Joey ay Congressman dito? Congressman, ikaw, 'di ba? Okay.

Papaano makakapasok sa health insurance? Ang bayad sa health insurance ay supposed to be 200 a month? One hundred a month. One hundred a month ang health insurance, 1,200 a year. Ngayon kapag kayo ay manggagawa sa isang pabrika o kagawaran, dini-deduct na yon sa inyong sweldo kaya automatic medicare kayo. Pero doon sa mga hindi nagsusweldo, yang mga self-employed, mga magsasaka, mga urban poor, mga iba't-iba na hindi salary ang kita, papaano kayo makakapasok? Pwede mag-enroll sa Philhealth: pwede n'yong bayaran kayo mismo ng 100 pesos a month. Pero yung mga dukha hindi naman kayang magbayad kahit 100 pesos a month kaya dito pumapasok ang ating mga local government, dito pumapasok ang ating mga negosyante.

Alam n'yo itong mga tiga-Petron na narito isang halimbawa lang sila ng maraming negosyante at maraming ngo na sila ay tumutulong sa programang ito. Yung 100 pesos na premium na dapat kayo ang bababayad para pumasok sa health insurance, kung masyadong dukha kayo sila na ang bumabayad hindi na kayo pati yung 100 pesos a month.

Kaya halos lahat ng 50,000 na narito ang binigay na lamang sa inyo ay yung card ninyo. Regalo na yan sa inyo — regalo na ng local government, regalo na ng congressman at ng korporasyon na may foundation na gustong tumulong sa mahihirap. Yan ay dahil ginawa natin itong isang pangunahing programa ng administrasyon ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Dahil gaya ng sabi ko kahapon gusto nating magkaroon ng matatag na republika. Pero ang malakas na republika ay para sa mga mahihina, para sa mga hindi kayang magpagamot sa kanilang sarili dahil sa kadukhaan. Kaya kayong mga kaibigan gusto kong congratulate kayong lahat. Sana magamit ninyo nang mabuti itong inyong mga health card. At 'pag kayo ay pumupunta sa hospital para magpagamot huwag n'yong kalilimutan dahil kayo ay minamahal ng matatag na republika.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the UNDP Global launching of the Human Development Report 2002

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the UNDP Global launching of the Human Development Report 2002

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, July 24, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Canlas, my Minister of Economic Planning.

Mr. Mark Malloch Brown, UNDP Administrator; Ms. Sakiko Fukudo Parr, congratulations on your authorship of the Human Development Report 2002; Mr. Diallo; Minister Ramos Horta; Excellencies of the diplomatic corps and representatives of other international organizations; officials of the Philippine government including Congressman Abdullah Dimaporo and Mayor Franklin Quijano; ladies and gentlemen:

It is an honor for the Philippines to host the launching of the Human Development Report 2002. Mr. Diallo said that this is being held in 70 countries all over the world but only in one country do we have the head of the UNDP presiding over the launching. This is the main launching of the human development report in the Philippines. I would like to believe that this is a recognition of the Philippines' emphasis on human development, and the Philippines' pioneering adoption of the human development index as an official measure of the people's welfare.

It is also an honor to have with us today two guests who have contributed much to the struggle for human freedom and democracy — Mark Malloch Brown, who was very much a part of what became Edsa 1, and Minister Ramos Horta, the father of East Timor independence.

Two days ago, providentially, I delivered my State of the Nation Address before Congress. In that address, I called for the building of a strong republic. I did not say "strong state," I said "strong republic" because a republic is a democracy.

One of the essential features of the strong republic is that it stands for the interests of the people rather than of a powerful minority.

As both Mr. Brown and Minister Horta can attest by their own contributions to freedom, a republic does not exist by the mere fact of declaring itself to be so. Mr. Brown's statement in fact said that there are many governments who have been democratically elected but are not yet truly functioning democracies.

A republic must be so in fact, in reality, and as a human development report stresses especially in the difference it makes for the better in the lives of citizens.

My experience in governance in the last year and a half tells me that my country needs a strong republic to guarantee human development.

A strong republic involves a painstaking process of strengthening institutions and communities.

It is a process that advances only on a broad platform of shared ethical values, a firm consensus to serve common interests and a common vision of a national future.

You, who are members of the international community, the U.N. family, the human development advocates, you are our partners in this vision.

The idea that people should be at the center of development took root mainly through the advocacy of the United Nations and its member states. I congratulate the UNDP, under the leadership of Mr. Mark Malloch Brown, for giving flesh to this advocacy in the human development report.

The last time I was with Mr. Brown we were both in Washington, he was then with the World Bank but about to leave the World Bank to head the UNDP. And I was telling him that I was not surprised because during that time when I was in Washington as vice president I already saw that the World Bank was veering away from the old paradigm of the IMF World Bank so and so; that it was moving more towards human development than the usual paradigms of structural reform, etc., Etc. And we were saying before that, years before that, we were saying that the World Bank IMF are not as sensitive to the needs of developing countries as the UNDP. And then we saw changes in the World Bank, and then we saw Mr. Brown in the UNDP. I said now I understand the metamorphosis of the World Bank and we should thank Mr. Brown for that.

In 1986 we restored democratic political institutions under the presidency of our heroine, Corazon Aquino. Filipinos are forever grateful for her courage and leadership.

Philippine people power reverberated in other shores. In Asia, we had South Korea, Indonesia, and, very recently, East Timor.

We pay tribute today to East Timor and its people, represented by Nobel Laureate and Foreign Minister Jose Ramos Horta who knows the Philippines very well.

Minister Ramos Horta once said that “democracy and human rights are not an invention of the west.” We wholeheartedly agree. The Philippines established its first republic more than a hundred years ago, the first in Asia in 1898 before the Americans occupied our country.

But our work to build a strong republic is not a monopoly of the east or the west. It is not even a monopoly of governments. Civil society is equally ascendant. The human development report emphasizes the expanding role of civil society in deepening democracy. This is very true for the Philippines, for our nation and our republic.

Yet amid globalization and the information revolution, people are asking: if wealth is being created, why do poverty and inequality still pervade?

The advocates of free markets must put in place innovative democratic political institutions, and seek to broaden and deepen these to allay apprehensions that globalization sets back social progress and deepens human misery.

Institutions for governance must fight illiteracy, disease, hunger, injustice.

The human development report quotes U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan: “good governance is perhaps the single most important factor in eradicating poverty and promoting development.” I agree with Secretary General Kofi Annan.

In my view, good governance rests on three pillars. First, a sound moral foundation to guide our leadership at all levels. Second, a philosophy of transparency in all government actions. Third, an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

The third pillar, the ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy is one of the essential features of a strong republic.

A strong republic must have effective institutions to protect the weak.

To help countries develop these effective institutions, I commend the human development report for coming up with an updated scorecard on the progress of countries in meeting the millennium development goals of poverty reduction. It is a good way of keeping track of our shared obligations not only as governments but as nations.

I am happy to learn that the Philippines is on track in our millennium development goals. Based on the established trend, we would be able to meet by 2015 the goals of, among others, cutting into half the proportion of people without access to safe drinking water; achieve universal primary education; achieve gender equality in primary schools; and, reduce under-five mortality by two-thirds. I shall monitor these variables periodically. I have said to Secretary Canlas, my planning minister that these are good indicators that we must monitor in order to ensure that we stay on track in fighting poverty.

I shall also work with my cabinet to develop policies and programs that will enable the Philippines to catch up with the goals of reducing the number of people who are in extreme poverty and the number of people who are suffering from hunger. Again, these are two important variables that we must consciously and conscientiously work for.

Our national ambition is to win the battle against poverty within the decade. That means even earlier than the projection of the human development report of 2015. I have been discussing with my economic managers how we can measure our progress. I thank the human development report for providing us with the meaningful measures that can give us, suggest to us, the specific objectives that together spell out a victory against poverty.

Two weeks ago, we launched the Philippine Development Report 2002, and I'd like to recognize here Dante Canlas' predecessor, Former Planning Secretary Winnie Monsod who's been working on that. The theme was "work and well-being." The theme today is "Deepening Democracy in a Fragmented World."

The themes combined highlight the implications of politics and governance on jobs, poverty and human development. They partner well with a strong republic.

We hope to maintain our increasing human development index in the coming years.

This we hope to achieve with the help of UNDP and the International Development Assistance Community. UNDP is a trusted partner, and we look forward to continued cooperation in peace and development.

We also call on the development assistance community not only to invest in the growth of markets but also in the growth of democracy.

At the same time, our common commitment to deepen democracy at national levels should be mirrored in the practices of governance at the global level.

The Doha round under the world trade organization must respond to the clamor of developing member countries for expanded market access.

This will empower developing countries to build their strong republics.

A strong republic is an edifice that shelters the weak and weathers the storm. It is an edifice that enables people to be their best.

This is the heart of human development: expanding the opportunities for people to lead lives of value to themselves and to others.

As your report so aptly states, "fundamental to enlarging human choices is building human capacities: the range of things that people can do or be."

We urge the leaders of the developed world, and the various agencies responsible for promoting international peace, freedom, and prosperity — to be our exemplars and leaders.

We must all move forward and seek to help one another build our strong republics in our own nations so that we can strengthen the weak among us and make them all equally strong hopefully before 2015.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Centennial Celebration of the founding of the Iglesia Filipina Independiente (Aglipay Church)

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Centennial Celebration of the founding of the Iglesia Filipina Independiente (Aglipay Church)

[Delivered at the Quirino Grandstand, Luneta, August 3, 2002]

Maraming salamat, Supreme Bishop Villamena at sabi ko nga sa kanya salamat at kayo ay naghintay sa akin. Kakaiwan ko lang sa Malacañang, nandoon pa nga, si Secretary of State Collin Powell, pero kailangan, nag-apura na nga ako, dahil ayoko na kayo naman ay iwanan ako baka umuwi na kayo.

Bishop Godofredo David; Senate President Franklin Drilon; ating mga officials ng Iglesia Filipina Independiente; Fr. Domingo, Secretary General ng National Priest Organization; Ms. Eclipse, National President ng Women Members ng kongregasyon; Mr. Pico, ang National President ng Laymen; Ms. Agustin, ang National President ng Youth Members ng Congregation; ang isang napakamatinong kaanak ni Supreme Bishop Aglipay, si Police Deputy Director General Edgardo Aglipay; Chairman ng MMDA Bayani Fernando; Governor Yap ng Tarlac. Nandito ba si Sally Perez? Ayan. Si Sally Perez ho ang unang nagpakilala sa akin kay Bishop Villamena noong ako ay senador pa. Former Prime Minister Cesar Virata; Commissioner ng Insurance Eduardo malinis; Chairperson ng National Lay Council Dr. Elvasco; at ang aking Presidential Adviser for Religious Affairs Dodi Limcauco; at kayong lahat, mga apatnapung libong mga kasapi ng Iglesia Filipina Independiente na naririto sa ating Centennial Anniversary:

Kahapon po noong ako ay papunta sa Pampanga dahil meron akong namatay na tiyang malapit, papunta ho ako doon nakita kong ang dami-daming bus papunta rito sa Maynila. Ang nakalagay nga doon, nakatatak sa streamer, “Iglesia Filipina Independiente.” Sabi ko, hayan na ang 40,000.

Kaya kayong lahat, binabati ko, magandang umaga. At binabati ko kayong lahat sa sentenaryong anibersaryo ng pagkakatatag ng Iglesia Filipina Independiente.

Napakalaki ang kontribusyon ng Iglesia Filipina Independiente sa ating kasaysayan. One hundred years ago, 1902, kayo ay nagpahayag ng kasarinlan sa ating pagsasamba sa Panginoon. Binigay ninyo ang ating pagsasamba ng kasarinlan na bagay sa ating kasarinlan mula sa dayuhang pamamahala. At kayo rin ang nagsimula ng kilusang manggagawa sa ating lipunan. Itong pagtatag ninyo ng kilusang manggagawa ay nagpahayag rin na ang ating kasarinlan di lamang bilang kalayaan mula sa pamamahalang dayuhan, kundi na rin na dapat malaya ang Pilipino sa pag-aapi ng sariling mga makapangyarihang pilipino rin.

Kaya maraming salamat sa iyong mahalagang papel sa ating kasaysayan, at congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Isang tanging pagpabati rin ang ipinapaabot ko sa mga pinagkalooban ng plaque of recognition at certificate of appreciation dahil sa kanilang napakagandang serbisyo at nagawa para sa inyong simbahan at sa ating lipunan.

Binabati ko rin si Dr. Manalo vao na sumulat ng librong “Christianity, Folk Religion and Revolution (An Oppressed Nation’s Struggle for Liberation)” na inilunsad ngayon. Ang librong ito ay paraan upang lalong maintindihan ng ating mga kababayan ang mga prinsipyo at mithiin na nagpaalab sa damdamin ng inyong founder na si Bishop Gregorio Aglipay at ang dakilang Isabelo De los Reyes.

Gaya ng sabi ko kanina, si Bishop Gregorio Aglipay ay nag-iwan hindi lamang ng malawak na kontribusyon sa ating kasaysayan, hindi lang mga kasapi kagaya ninyo na malawak pa rin ang kontribusyon sa ating lipunan ngayon, nag-iwan pa ng mga kaanak na malaki rin ang kontribusyon sa ating katiwasayan. Ito na rin ang sinasabi ko isa mga pinakamahalagang pulis sa ating bansa, aking mahalagang gabay sa trabaho, si Police Deputy Director Edgardo Aglipay. Maraming salamat, Egay, salamat sa iyong malaking ginagawa para sa katiwasayan ng ating bansa at ng aking pamamahala. Congratulations sa iyong magandang trabaho.

Ang tema ng ating selebrasyon, “Bagong Siglo, Panibagong Sigla sa Paglilingkod sa Diyos at sa Bayan” ay napapanahon nababagay rin ito sa aking hangarin sa mga araw na ito na bigyan ng bagong sigla ang katatagan ng republika ng Pilipinas — yun na ring republika na tinulungan na mabuo ni bishop aglipay noong tinayo niya yung Iglesia Filipina Independiente.

Sinabi ko sa aking State of the Nation Address noong Hulyo Abeinte Dos na ang matatag na Republikang Pilipinas ay may dalawang importanteng katangian:

Una, kinakatawan nito ang sambayanan mismo at hindi lamang ilang may kapangyarihan;

Pangalawa, may mga matatag na institusyon na nagpapairal sa mabubuting patakaran.

Bahagi sa mga matatag na institusyon na tumutulong sa matatag na republikang Pilipinas ay ang institusyon ng Iglesia Filipina Independiente.

Kaya kung noon ang inyong simbahan ay malaking kontribusyon sa unang pagtayo ng republika, malaki rin ang inyong kontribusyon sa pagpapatatag ng republikang ito sa mga araw ng ito. Sa dalawang importanteng katangian ng matatag na republika meron kayong kontribusyon.

To build strong institutions for a strong Philippine republic that will represent the people rather than a few vested interests, we must wage a moral revolution from the top through leadership by example. Only moral strength can be the invincible foundation of good governance; and only good governance can serve as the pathway to peace, justice and the conquest of poverty.

When I assumed the presidency last year, I committed to the achievement of good governance based on three pillars:

First, a moral foundation to guide leadership at all levels, at itong moral foundation na ito malaking tulong ang Iglesia Filipina Independiente.

Second, the assurance of transparency in all government actions. At nakita naman ninyo ang daming mga high officials na nandito nagbibigay ng galang sa inyong simbahan, sa inyong selebrasyon, siguro sa ngalan nila — nila Franklin Drilon, nila Governor Yap at Governor Zaldivar, ni Chairman Fernando at ibang kasapi ng aking gabinete, si General Aglipay at ilang mga kasapi ng pulis. Siguro sa kanilang pangalan puwede akong magsabi sa inyo na kami ay nagbibigay-galang sa inyong simbahan hindi lamang sa pamamagitan ng pagpunta dito kundi na rin na magbigay ng inaasahan ninyong transparency sa pagkikilos ng ating pamahalaan.

And the third principle of good governance is an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy. Halimbawa, naririnig ko dalawang buwan pa lang raw si Bayani Fernando, Chairman ng MMDA, ang dami nang nalinis na mga sidewalk at traffic na naiwasan — ethic of effective implementation.

At inyong pamangkin at anak na si Egay Aglipay, alam niyo kilala ko yan noon pa senador, siya ang Regional Director ng Region III. Naalala mo egay doon sa Pampanga? Noon pa meron na siyang ethic of effective implementation.

At si Senate President Franklin Drilon, totoo yun na may mga alitan sa senado ngayon ngunit salamat sa liderato ni Franklin Drilon ay nasasagip pa rin ang reputasyon ng senado at ng ating institusyon.

Simula nang ako ay naupo bilang pangulo ng ating bansa, palagi kong sinasabi na kailangan na maging matibay ang ating moralidad upang ito'y magsilbing pundasyon ng matapat na pamamahala. Naniniwala rin ako na ang matapat na pamamahala ang tamang daan patungo sa kapayapaan, katarungan, pagsugpo sa kahirapan.

Ang kabaligtaran naman nito — yung graft and corruption — ang isa sa mga pangunahing hadlang sa ating pag-unlad. Inaagaw nito ang mga resources na dapat mapunta sa ating priority programs at projects. Sinisira nito ang tiwala ng mga mamamayan sa integridad ng ating mga institusyon, at nilalayo ang damdamin ng sambayanan sa pamahalaan.

Ang isa sa mga paraan para labanan ang katiwalian ay ang pagbawas ng red tape sa mga transaksyon ng mga mamamayan sa mga ahensiya ng pamahalaan.

Nitong nagdaang taon, labindalawang departamento at labinsiyam na ahensiya ng gobyerno ay nagpabawas ng kanilang red tape, nagbawas ng oras sa pag-proseso ng dokumento sa kanilang mga opisina.

Halimbawa doon sa housing, ang processing time ng pagkuha ng permit na dati ay inaabot 188 days, ngayon 45 days na lamang. Ay, hindi days, signature — 188 signatures dalawang taon, ngayon 45 signatures anim na buwan na lamang at binabawasan pa.

Ang DOLE naman — siguro marami sa inyo ay nagtatrabaho sa ibang bansa. Red tape din ang aabutan noong ako'y naging pangulo. Kaya ang dole naman ay naibaba sa kalahati ang pag-proseso ng dokumentasyon sa ating overseas Filipino workers. Noong araw, anim na oras ang hinihintay, ngayon para doon sa mga land-based overseas filipino workers tatlong oras na lamang; at para naman doon sa mga ating mga seamen, noong araw labindalawang oras kayo naghihintay sa papeles, ngayon ay anim na oras lamang. Sa madaling salita, hinati yung processing time ng mga papeles para mabawasan ang red tape.

Meron din mga opisina na gumagamit ng computerization at automation, lalo na sa pagbili ng equipment. Itong mga bagay na ito ay pinapadali ang inyong oras na kailangang makipag-ugnay sa gobyerno, binabawasan din ang graft and corruption.

Hoong ako ay nagsalita sa State of the Nation Address, sabi ko lalabanan natin yung problema ng kriminalidad, yung problema ng corruption, yung problema ng cost of power. Eh, siguro naman marami sa inyo naramdaman na ninyo na dalawang beses nang bumaba yung inyong electric bill dahil sa pagsisikap ng ating pamahalaan.

At itong mga araw na ito nilalabanan natin ang katiwalian. Yung mga nagdadaya ng buwis, pagbayad ng VAT, tatlong daan ay kinakasuhan natin ngayon. Yung namang binabayaran ang buwis yun pala yung supposed to be tatanggap ng kanilang bayad sangay ng BIR ay nagsasabwatan at nilalagay sa private account, yun din ay hinuhuli na natin — mga malalaking sindikato ito — para sa ganon kayo, yung binibili ninyo na gamit sa kanila na bahagi ay buwis at dapat pumupunta sa pamahalaan para magserbisyo para sa inyo ay pupunta sa pamahalaan at talagang magbibigay ng paglilingkod sa inyong lahat.

Ito po ang ginagawa natin para maging malinis ang ating pamamahala. At kailangang malinis ang ating pamamahala para masabi naman natin na ang ating pamahalaan ay sumasang-ayon at karapat-dapat na maging pamahalaan kung saan naka-celebrate tayo ng 100 years anniversary ng mga prinsipyo ni Gregorio Aglipay at ang Iglesia Filipina Independiente.

Muli, mga kaibigan, salamat sa pagkakataon na narito. Tumataas na masyado ang araw, ayokong masyadong umitim kayo. Alam ko na kayo ay nagbiyahe kahapon pa at pagkatapos nagsasama-sama, nags-celebrate, tapos uuwi na naman muli para sa inyong araw-araw na paggamit ng mga magagandang prinsipyo ng simbahang Iglesia Filipina Independiente, ang masasabi ko lamang sa inyo salamat at kayo ay napakamatinong mga mamamayan ng ating bansa. Salamat at nagbibigay kayo ng inspirasyon sa aming mga officials na maging matino ring officials para karapat-dapat na kami ay masasabi ninyong inyong kinatawan.

Maraming salamat at happy 100 years anniversary sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the awarding ceremony of the Gawad sa Pinakatanging Kooperatiba (Gawad Pitak)

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the awarding ceremony of the Gawad sa Pinakatanging Kooperatiba (Gawad Pitak)

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, August 8, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Camacho, ang Secretary ng Finance at s'ya rin ang Chairman ng Landbank of the Philippines.

Binabati ko rin ang inyong pangulo ng Landbank of the Philippines — si Garry Teves; maging lahat ng mga members of the Board ng Landbank na naririto, nakaupo sa lahat. At iyung ating mga magagaling na pumili, na mga board of judges nitong limang ating binibigyan ng gantimpla itong araw na ito sa pangunguna ni Senator Rodolfo Biazon — ang Chairman, Sabi po ni Senator Biazon, isang kahanga-hangang katangian ng mga nagwagi — ay bagamat sila ay kliyente ng Landbank. Ay, nandito rin si Secretary Obet Pagdanganan, ang ating Secretary for Cooperatives. Sabi ni Senator Biazon, isang katangi-tanging magandang masasabi tungkol dun sa mga nagwagi bagamat sila lahat ay kliyente ng Landbank, ibig sabihin umuutang sa Landbank. Ang kanilang relasyon ay walang dole-out, lahat self-supporting, self-sustaining.

Binabati ko rin ang aking kabaleyan sa Pangasinan, co-chairman ng lupon ng hurado si Congressman ng 3rd district so Generoso Tulagan. Maging yung iba't-ibang mga kasapi ng board of judges at kasama nga dito, naka-upo dito sa ating harapan ang anak ng man of the masses — si Jun Magsaysay. At ang ama naman ng kooperatiba — si Butch Aquino. Dapat batiin din nating muli ang ilang mga nagwagi nitong araw ng ito. Dagiti kakailayak diay lamut, congratulations dakayo amin. And to our friends from the Cooperative Bank of Bohol, congratulations! 'Yung non-agri based, parati na lang kinukuha ng Marikina lahat ng mga awards, Barangka Credit Cooperative, at 'yung Outstanding Multi-Purpose Cooperative, agricultural na yun ang kino-consider nating pinaka-top prize winner sa lahat, 'yung Tayabas Community Multi-Purpose Cooperative.

Nagpapasalamat din ako ka Garry Teves sa ngalan ni Sergio Odesa — ang Treasurer of the Philippines sa inyong binigay na dibidendong P250 million pati na rin yung stock dividend. Sabi ko nga kay Lito Camacho, dapat i-privatized natin yung stock dividend para makadagdag sa ating pangtakip ng budget deficit. Iyung batas pala, hindi pala pinapayagan na i-privatized ang kahit na isang share ng Landbank. Siguro iyung ating mga senador at saka mga congressmen na naririto baka iyun ang isang pwedeng magawan natin ng paraan para madala natin ang Landbank sa 21st century. Palagay ko marami dito sa ating mga multi-millionaire cooperatives ang mag-i-invest sa Landbank pag ganun ang nangyari.

Ating mga masisigasig at masisipag na kasama sa agrikultura, maging saan mang agricultural cooperatives sector, mga piling panauhin, ladies and gentlemen, mga minamahal kong kababayan:

Una sa lahat, Happy anniversary sa Land Bank of the Philippines! At siyempre congratulations sa mga binibigyan natin ng parangal itong araw na ito, iyung mga kooperatiba na natatanging kliyente ng Land Bank of the Philippines.

Alam n'yo tuwing ika-otso ng Agosto, nasisiyahan akong makasama kayo. Hindi lamang dahil gustong-gusto kong makita itong ating kliyente ng Landbank na ang gagaling magbayad. Sabi nga ni Gary dinadamihan na ng Landbank yung portfolio for cooperative and farm based financing kesa yung mga malalaking commercial financing na ginagawa noong araw, dahil yung mga utang na hindi bayad na minana ni Gary ay hindi galing sa mga magsasaka, galing sa mga malalaking mga kompanya. Kaya talagang tanging dapat magsasaka talaga ang binibigyan ng pahiram ng Landbank.

Kasi isang dahilan kung bakit din gustong-gusto kong kasama kayo sa ika-8 ng agosto ay nasisiyahan akong tuwing ika-8 ng agosto — sabay-sabay nating naaalala ang aking ama—si pangulong Diosdado Macapagal. Dahil yung araw na ito, August 8 sabi ng aking tatay, ang pinakamasayang araw sa kanyang buhay — Agosto a-otso, 1963, that was the happiest day of his life. Dahil iyon ang araw na pinirmahan niya ang lang reform code na s'ya na rin ang naglikas ng Landbank. Pinakamasayang araw ito sa kaniyang buhay dahil para sa kanya ang pinaka-pakay niya sa pagiging presidente niya ay magkaroon ng reporma sa lupa sa ating bansa.

My father was a revolutionary, although a peaceful one. He was born in a nipa hut in a rural barrio in Central Luzon, he was descended from a humble tenant who tilled three-fourths of a hectare of riceland na hindi sila ang may-ari. He suffered genuine hunger and privation as a child, but he fought his way out of poverty through the path of education, living beside an estero in Tondo as he worked his way through school. Mula sa maralitang taga-bukid noong nag-aral s'ya naging maralitang taga-lunsod. His eventual triumph as a bar topper, a Doctor of Laws and Doctor of Economics, a congressman, a vice-president, and eventually a president did not diminish his revolutionary passion, because he was the man with truly peasant origins, anak ng tenant to rise to the position of president.

When he assumed the presidency, he took his inspiration from the revolution of a plebeian, Andres Bonifacio. Sabi ng tatay ko, “I regarded the task of the presidency as an unfinished and peaceful revolution. It was to be a continuation of the Filipino revolution of 1896. Since the revolution was launched by Bonifacio, a man of the masses, it can be assumed that he would have freed the people not only from foreign rule but also from exploitation by their own countrymen.”

Since today marks the happiest day in my father's life, I will take some time to briefly outline his program of government because in many respects it is still as relevant in this new millennium as it was 40 year ago. And it is reflected in my own program of government.

Sabi ng tatay ko, “The task of the nation is to fight poverty, we must be concerned with the plight of the common man as an imperative of justice. We must help bridge the wide gap between the poor man and the man of wealth, not by pulling down the rich to his level, but by raising the poor towards the more abundant life.”

To achieve the goal of addressing poverty, his program like mine had four components.

The first component was the adoption of an economic philosophy of free enterprise by the private sector.

The second component was a concrete program of economic and social development for the guidance of the nation. The stress was on the word “social”.

And the third component separate from the first two —was land reform, whose ultimate purpose was to make possible, feasible agro-industrial growth and to make prosperity available for the greatest number.

My father believed from his own sad childhood experience, that to achieve prosperity shared by all, it was imperative to release the impoverished tenant from bondage.

He considered it an irony that the Philippines had the best agricultural school in Los Baños, kasi natayo yung IRRI noong panahon ng tatay ko. Yet other countries at that time were producing 100 cavans per hectare of rice, while the Philippines was only producing 27 cavans at that time.

And there were many possible explanations for this. But in his mind, the main reason was the lack of interest on the part of the tenants in advanced rice technology, simply because they did not benefit from any increase in productivity.

As the grandson and son of a tenant farmer, he recognized this indifference to be the main obstacle to the elusive goal of rice self-sufficiency, a futile quest of all our nation's leaders since Manuel Quezon. He therefore felt that abolishing tenancy was imperative to land reform.

That is why he considered it, the happiest moments of his life when he signed, on August 8, 1963, 39 years ago, the Agricultural Land Reform Code. In signing the law, he said, "Let this signing be recorded in our annals as an act of emancipation of the toiling farmers from his slavery to debt, poverty, and misery, and of his dignification as a human being and as a citizen."

Sadly, even as we celebrate the 39th Anniversary of the Land Reform Code, and therefore the anniversary of Landbank which was created by that code, land reform remains to be accomplished.

But I feel privileged and blessed that I can pick up from where he left and carry on his battles.

We have made big strides in land reform in this administration. Sayang wala si Nani Braganza ngayon, ngunit masasabi natin, the more than 100,000 hectares distributed by the DAR and the more than 150,000 hectares distributed by the Denr were higher than the targets we set in last year's State of the Nation Address. And this is achieved under a budget inherited from the previous administration which could only cover 70,000 hectares of compensable lands.

How did Nani Braganza do it? With a very big help from the Landbank of the Philippines.

I congratulate the Landbank of the Philippines for making it possible to surpass our targets for land distribution even if the national budget for land reform was a pittance. And I congratulate the Land Bank for beginning to return to its original mandate as provided in the land reform code of 1963, that mandate of the Landbank in the Land Reform Code is –to finance land reform.

Binabati ko rin ang Land Bank dahil meron kayong bagong gusali. Magkakaroon kayo ng program mamayang gabi. At nagpapasalamat ako na doon sa inyong bagong gusali, yung auditorium ay pinangalan ninyo sa alaala ng aking ama na siya rin ang ama ng Land Bank dahil ang Land Bank ay nilikha ng kaniyang Land Reform Code, ako rin nilikha n'ya di kapatid ko ang Landbank of the Philippines.

In the past 15 years, hirap ng hirap ang land reform. The level of workable lands for distribution under land reform has declined due to growing constraints. For instance, formidable issues involved in land acquisition and distribution characterized by strong resistance from landowners, and even issues among farmer beneficiaries not to mention limited government resources. Halimbawa nga yung Landbank, nagulat ako yung ilang mga creditors ng Landbank naglalagay ng mga constraint na dapat hindi gamitin yung pinapahiram sa land reform. Eh, hindi yung kaugnay doon sa talagang dahilan kung bakit natayo yung Landbank. Yun ay naging isang problema ngayon sa pagtutupad ng land reform. Kaya sabi ko sa mga sumusunod na mga financing ay ayusin natin at ibalik natin sa talagang pakay ng Landbank. Parati kong sinasabi, since the Economic Summit of December last year — na dapat ang pinaka-pakay ng Land Bank ay kumupkop ng mga resources para mapondohan ang reporma sa lupa.

And with the invaluable support of the land bank, it is worthy to note that this year so far, no, no first last year, of the 250,000 hectares of land that we distributed 18,000 hectares was distributed under the compulsory acquisition since the start of land reform. At pag kumukuha compulsory, imbues na hinihintay mo ibenta ng land owner yung lupa, this is an affirmation of political will to distribute contentious lands under the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program of president Aquino. Landholdings covering this mode are generally contentious lands where landowner resistance is at its strongest. Kaya kailangan compulsory. Pro sinasabi ko kay Gary — dapat damon natin ang compulsory acquisition. Gamitin natin ang expropriation law at hindi lang natin hinihintay yung voluntary offers of sale.

With Land bank devoting itself primarily to sourcing funds for land reform, I hope that within the decade, land reform can be accomplished (abolished) and therefore the battle against poverty can be won.

I understand that in the first half of this year, the Land Bank approved payment for total land transfer claims of more than 17,000 hectares. This translates to land transfer output amounting to p1.3 billion for the period. Maraming salamat sa Landbank at congratulations! And in congratulating you , I urge you and the Land Bank to go for again 100,00 hectares of land distribution in tandem with the 100,000 that the DENR has to do.

I also congratulate the Land Bank because as mentioned by Gary in his speech — your total credit and technical assistance for agricultural modernization reached more than P1 billion for the first six months of this year. And your total loan releases for small farmers and fisher folks was more than p6.4 billion during this period, channeled through more than a thousand cooperatives and almost 400 financial institutions, and benefiting more than 200,000 small farmers and fisherfolk, whom my father loved so much because he was one of them.

Ngayon mabalik ako doon sa program ng tatay ko, the fourth and final component of his program —was to improve moral standards in government and in society.

In the end his revolution remained unfinished, poverty continues to be the national problem of the new millennium, and much still needs to be done to improve moral standards in government and in society.

The mission of my administration is to continue his work, to bring new life to the greatest number of our people under a strong Philippine republic.

Two essential features mark out a strong republic:

The first is independence from class and pectoral interests so that it stands for the interests of the people rather than of a powerful minority.

The second is the capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to execute good policy and deliver essential services the things that only governments can do.

The Land Bank contributes to both essentials of a strong Philippine republic. By financing land reform, the Land Bank stands for the interests of the people, especially the masses of the small farmers, rather than of a powerful minority in the landlord class. At gay ng sinasabi ko kay Gary, ma along pinanindigan natin yung mga mahihirap at maliliit kaysa yung mga malalakas at malalaki kung palakasin natin ang compulsory acquisition kesa lamang umaasa sa voluntary offer of sale.

Secondly, the Landbank can represent the masses effectively only by staying as a strong institution with a strong bureaucracy.

This is why I feel sad, that at a time when the bank is riding high on its sterling achievements, it has been somewhat tainted by what i hope is a rare incident of grave misconduct and unlawful acts by a suspected few within the institution.

It is unfortunate mainly because such hopefully rare and isolated cases of misconduct and criminality tend to smear the name and of the majority of upright, professional and dedicated workers of the bank, as well as the good name and prestige of the institution as a whole.

We are determined to get at the root of this tax diversion case, which involves three related felonies: plunder — because so far what we have found is diverted tax payments of P200 million and still counting, conspiracy for tax evasion, and money laundering. By getting to the root of the cases as soon as possible, related but separate cases, I trust that the good name of the institution can be cleared so that the majority of the professionals in this institution — the Landbank can be unburdened of the weight upon collective reparation.

I assure you, there shall be justice and fair play.

So far a bank manager, a cashier, and a bank messenger have been charged.

Yesterday, I ordered the Director of the National Bureau of Investigation to determine once and for all whether Acsa Ramirez, one of the two cashiers in the Land Bank in Binangonan during whose terms 17 questionable transactions have been uncovered as not having been reported by certain officers required by law to report them, to determine once and for all whether she is culpable for violation of the anti-money laundering law.

If she is culpable, I ordered the NBI to file charges immediately. And if she's innocent, I ordered the NBI to immediately clear her as well. Let us not have an extended run on this issue. We must move on with speedy and impartial justice. Because most of all, we must not lose sight of the lofty aim of the Landbank which is social amelioration, especially through financing land reform.

Malinaw ang ating hangarin sugpuin ang kahirapan sa kanayunan upang makamit ang isang matatag at malakas na republika. Alam naman nating lahat na hindi ito magagawa ninuman nang nag-iisa. Kaya, ako ay lubos na nagpapasalamat sa pagkakaroon ng ganitong pagkikilala sa mga natatanging tao at grupo na malaki ang nai-ambag sa pagsulong ng ating lipunan.

Kaya sa ating mga nagwagi, congratulations sa inyong lahat. Sa Landbank bilang institusyon, congratulations din sa inyo. At maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during her visit to Cogeo Police Station
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During her visit to Cogeo Police Station

[Delivered in Antipolo City, Rizal, August 9, 2002]

Ako'y nagpunta dito ngayon sa Cogeo Police sub-station para magpasalamat at mag-congratulate sa ating mga pulis — nandito si Sub-Station Commander, si Noel Gragutero at saka nandito yung mga cops niya at saka pati iyong sa mga tanod — magpasalamat sa kanila dahil bagamat kulang na kulang ang facilities nila ay magaling sila sa paggawa ng kanilang trabaho. Kasi nung isang araw, ilang araw nakaraan, no, nung isang buwan, iyong aking manikurista, si Nitz Valderama, kinuwento niya sa akin na na-hold-up siya kaya ayaw na niyang umuwi ng late pagnagpapa-hot oil ako kailangan na mago-overnight na lang siya sa Malakanyang kasi nga umuwi nang isang gabi, na-holdap siya. Ang nangyari, tumatawag siya sa pulis dito eh wala na pala silang telepono, naputulan na pala. Ngayon pumunta siya dito kaya lang dahil pumunta pa siya dito, hindi na naabutan iyong nag-hold-up sa kanya.

Pero dahil sinumbong niya at dahil hindi lang nila nahuli noong gabing iyon ay nag-follow up sila nang hindi nila pinabayaan. At sa process ng paghahanap sa nang-hold-up kay Nitz, marami silang nahuling ibang wanted. Kaya nagpaabot tuloy ng pagpasalamat sa akin iyong mga tiga-rito na nagpapasalamat dahil iyong iba't-ibang mga nagpahirap sa kanila, maraming nahuli at tapos sa wakas, pati iyong nag-hold-up kay Nitz ay nahuli na rin.

Kaya ako'y narito para magpasalamat sa kanila at magbigay ng aking congratulations dahil kahit na mahirap iyong kanilang facilities dito ay nagagawa pa rin nila ang kanilang trabaho nsng mabuti. Kaya kanina sabi ko kay General Ebdane, bigyan mo naman sila ng telepono.

Pero ang mangyayari dito iyon pala ito ay temporary lamang dahil binenta na pala ito ng nha. So may lupa si Mayor Gatlabayan diyan, malapi din dito, Cogeo rin, at magko-contribute si Governor Ynares, iyong asawa ni Ex-Governor Ynares, si Nini Ynares, si mayor at saka ako, we will give give 250,000 each para 750,000 ang magiging halaga ng bagong station. Iyong ang ating parang gantimpala sa kanila — magkaroon sila ng magandang station — at bibigyan sila ng bagong radyo 'no, ni General Ebdane at saka may cellular na sila, so ipo-post nila iyong numbers, tapos si mayor ay magpapakabit ng bagong telepono rin.

So, gusto ko lang ipakita dito na meron tayong mga magagaling na pulis na kahit kulang na kulang ang kanilang facilities ay makakalingkod sa ating taong-bayan.

So, I would like to commend them for their good work and their sacrifices because despite the difficulties they are facing, they have continued to arrest hold-uppers and other criminals and prevent serious crimes for happening. The police here are operating under heavy constraints in mobility and communications.

The plight of my manicurist has reflected the plight of all ordinary people victimized by criminals. I sympathize with her just as I am deeply concerned about people losing their hard-earned money to muggers. We must protect the poor from crime not just the rich and the influential. So we are improving, in fact, giving new facilities to this police station because it serves ordinary people in communities in need of public order and peace of mind.

We should not tolerate pockets of lawliness in our poorer communities. We must make sure that ordinary people have the mantle of law enforcement and law protection just like the more affluent areas — and this is another mandate i have placed upon the shoulders of the PNP leadership.

Kaya sa mga pulis sa Cogeo, maraming salamat at congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Town Fiesta in Baras, Catanduanes

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Town Fiesta in Baras, Catanduanes

[Delivered in Baras, Catanduanes, August 9, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Vince Perez, ang Secretary of Energy.

Pwede na kayong maupo.

Maraming salamat Vince sa iyong pagpapakilala sa akin at sa aking ibabalita mamaya sa mga mamamayan ng Catanduanes.

Maraming salamat din Mayor Bong Teves sa iyong imbitasyon na ako ay makaabot dito sa Baras. At congratulations dahil ito pala ang iyong first term bilang punong bayan.

Binabati ko si Governor Lee Verceles, Lee ang tawag namin sa kanya pero dito yata anong tawag niyo? Jun. Jun, ang ating Governor first term bilang Governor pero siya lang at ang tatay niya ang governor na di pa binabagyo sa kanyang first term. Swerte iyon.

Binabati ko rin si Congressman Joseph Santiago, maraming salamat na kayo ay pumunta rito para lang sa fiestang ito dahil si Congressman ay nanggaling pa sa Batasan dahil may namatay na kasama, congressman ng Cavite at nanggaling sila doon sa necrological services.

Batiin ko rin lahat ng mga officials ng bayan ng Baras sa pangunguna ni Vice Mayor Chito Chi at salamat Father Ffaustino, ang Parish Priest sa inyong pagdasal.

Kasama ko rin dahil meron tayong maraming constituents dito kasama ni Governor Verceles — ang pangulo ng Philippine Health Insurance, si Dr. Francisco Duque. At iyong inaatasan kong dalhin yong sulat ng mga guro sa DPWH para pag-aralan kung ano ang pwedeng gawin, ang ating presidential assistant na si Chito Monson nasaan siya? Ayun. Iyan ang assignment mo ha. Meron kayong bagong Commanding Officer ng 22nd brigade, si Col. Pedrito Magsino. Siya ay galing sa napakagandang pag-trabaho doon sa Southern Mindanao. Kaya magaling siya doon pinadala ko dito para magaling din ang inyong brigade commander. Binabati ko rin ang inyong police provincial director, si Col. Gil Jamila Jetosis lahat ng officials ng Baras, lahat ng officials ng Catanduanes, mga kababanwa digdi sa Baras Fios marhay nga aldaw sa indo gabos at maligayang kapistahan sa inyong lahat.

Alam nyo sa aking pagpunta rito natutuwa ako na kahit maliit at malayo ang inyong bayan — kaya ang tatay ko pa lang ang nakakabisita rito – marami kayong mga kusang ginagawa sa nakita ko para sa inyong kaunlaran. Kabilang dito, pinapaangat ninyo ang crop production. Katunayan sabi nga ni cCongressman Joseph Santiago, dito pala nanggagaling iyong abaca fiber na ginagawang high fashion na mga shirts.

Kabilang sa mga ginagawa ninyo ang pagpapaunlad ng mga yamang-dagat. Kaya lang kung minsan iyong yamang-dagat ay sobrang umaapaw at binabaha kayo. Ayun ang titignan ni Chito kasama ng DPWH. Pagpapalawak ng cottage industries, iyon na nga ang inyong sinamay at pagpapayabong ng turismo dito.

Ang paglago ng crop production, ang pagpaunlad ng yamang dagat, iyong paggawa ng tela mula sa inyong abaca, ito ay naaayon sa ating programa ng pamahalaang national iyong modernisasyon ng agrikultura at pangingisda. Kaya naman asahan ninyo na ang inyong mga proyektong nasa ilalim nito ay bibigyan ko ng lubos na suporta.

Nandito yong ating Outstanding Agriculturist of the Year, si Regional Director Fe Laysa, kaya mabuti ay nandito siya. Si Fe ay taga Pili, Camarines Sur. Iyan. Inaatasan ko si Fe na maglaan ng tatlong milyong piso para sa farm-to-market-roads para sa Catanduanes.

Tulad nang sinabi ko nung aking huling State-of-the-Nation Address Nanawagan ako sa mga lokal na official na manguna sa pagtatag ng Republika ng Pilipinas. Alam ko na ang Catanduanes, maliit na probinsiya, maliit na IRA, 20 million lamang ang puwedeng magamit sa imprastraktura, kaya itong 3 million sa farm-to-market-road sa palagay ko malaki ang maitutulong dito sa lalawigan ng Catanduanes.

Inaasahang ko na si Governor Lee Verceles at lahat ng mga LGE, local government executives ng cCatanduanes ay makakatulong para maging kabalikat sa hamon ng matatag na Republika ng Pilipinas.

Kailangan ng pangulo ang mga local government executives kasi executive kami. Si Congressman Santiago nasa Legislative, gumagawa ng batas. Iyong nagpapatupad ng patakaran, mga executives iyon ang local government executive extension ng national executive na ako na nga. Kaya kailangan ko sila, hindi lamang sa imprastraktura na kailangan tulung-tulong tayo dahil kulang, ngunit para ring matiyak ang seguridad at kaligtasan ng mga mamamayan laban sa kriminalidad at terorismo.

Kanina nga sabi ni Congressman Santiago, baka gusto kong dumaan sa baga manok kung saan nagkaroon ng isang encounter noong nakaraang hulyo. Ngunit sabi ng aking PSG head. Na sayang kung noon ko pa sinabi sana nakapaghanda. Pero sa ngayon mahirap kung biglang pupunta na lamang doon ang pangulo na hindi naka-pre-position ang sundalo dahil si Colonel Magsino ay nandito kasama natin at hindi nandoon. Iyon ang nagpapatunay na dito sa Catanduanes kailangan pinaghahandaan. Kaya ibig sabihin noon, mayroon tayong maliit na problema tungkol sa kapayapaan. Kaya kinakailangan ko ang tulong ninyong lahat at inyong suporta sa mga kilos na gagawin natintungkol dito. Dahil sa problema ng kapayapaan, terorismo, rebelyon, kailangan ang isang kamay na bakal para sa katatagan ng liderato, para mapatupad ang mga kaukulang batas at disiplina sa kaayusan.

Iyan ang pangunahing pinagtutuunan ko ng pansin ngayon bilang inyong pangulo — ang kapayapaan ng ating bansa. At iyan ang inaasahan kong bigyan ng pansin nyo dito sa baras at sa buong Catanduanes.

Sabi ko nga sa aking recent State of the Nation Address, the strong Philippine Republic we want to build, takes care of the people and takes care of their future. Dahil kung mapayapa ang Catanduanes, mas makakaya natin asikasuhin ang kinabukasan ng ating napakaraming mga bata dito sa bayan ng Baras.

Para maalagaan ang kinabukasan ng Catanduanes, isa pang pangunahing adhikain natin ay ang pagpapabilis ng serbisyo sa mamamayan. Pinapatignan ko, kung ano ang iba pa ninyong pangangailangan maliban sa modernisasyon ng agrikultura. Tinitignan ko kung ano ang inyong pangangailangan lalo na sa larangan ng kalusugan at sa larangan ng kuryente.

Una sa lahat, dahil fiesta ngayon, mayroon tayong ... Isandaang ganoon, regalo para sa 100 poorest families ng Baras, bilang regalo ko sa inyong kapistahan. Pero pangkapistahan iyan. In other words, kakainin ng mga familia ngayon at sa darating na Linggo, pero sa pangmatagalan, ang dala-dala ko ngayon, kasama ni Philhealth head Dr. Duque para sa ating mga taga Catanduanes ang 1,068 Philhealth cards para sa 1,068 na mga awardees dito ng health insurance.

Nagpapasalamat ako at nagko-congratulate ako kay Governor Lee Verceles dahil kahit maliit ang IRA, limang milyong piso ang ginastos niya para bayaran ang premium ng Philhealth ng mga mahihirap sa Catanduanes. Kaya lahat ng indigents 100 percent lahat ng mga maralita ay naka-enroll at may health insurance. Kaya ang Catanduanes ay number one per capita sa coverage ng health insurance sa buong Bicol at siguro number two or number three sa buong Pilipinas.

Pero ano ang ibig sabihin ng card ninyo? Ano ang ibig sabihin ng health insurance? Ang ibig sabihin nito kung meron kayo itong health card—ibig sabihin mayron kayong health insurance. Kaya kapag magkasakit ang inyong pamilya at magpapagamot kayo sa isa sa mga siyam na accredited hospitals sa probinsiya, kasama na rito iyong provincial hospital, libre ang paggamot, ang insurance ang nagbabayad ng inyong gastos. Ngayon iyong manganganak, hindi iyon sakit, pero kung magiging caesarean, kailangan operahan, ang philhealth rin ay mananagot hanggang labing walong pisong (18,000) gastos. Binabanggit ko iyon mukhang ang daming nanganganak dito sa Baras kaya baka maraming nangangailangan itong ating philhealth. Sabi ng ating mga officials, maraming anak kasi maraming brownout. Kaya dahil katoliko serado tayo, father, kung gusto nating bawasan ang birth rate, bawasan ang brown out dito.

Kaya pag-usapan natin ang power supply. Tinanong ko sa NPC kasi sinumbong nga sa akin ni Governor na ang brownout ninyo parati. Tinanong ko sa NAPOCOR, kay Secretary Vince Perez, bakit madalas ang brownout dito? Kasi alam ko malaking istorbo sa pamumuhay ang mga power interruption. Napag-alaman ko na may kakulangan pala ng 2,600 kilowatts ang inyong kuryente dito kaya madalas ang brownout.

Kaya itong araw na ito bilang fiesta ng baras, bilang regalo ko sa Catanduanes, mayroon akong ibabalita sa inyo itong araw na ito. Ibabalita ko ang mga ginawa namin nitong mga nakaraang araw para ipaghanda itong ginhawa ninyo sa problema ng kuryente.

Una sa lahat, I have instructed NAPOCOR to lease two generator sets as a solution to your current power problem. These generator sets will arrive in Virac on Sunday, August 11. It will arrive by overland transport. Gusto ko sanang dalhin ngayon, eh, I would have taken them with me now, pero doon sa mga nagsalubong sa akin sa eroplano nakita nyo gaano kaliit ang aking eroplano, kaya hindi kasya ang generator set. In fact, kahit na C-130 hindi kasya ang generator set, ganoon kalaki ang generator sets. Kaya kasalukuyan sabay kaming umalis ng Maynila, ako nag-eroplano, siya ay nag-land transportation. At darating sa Sunday, siyempre isi-set-up, iko-commission. And NAPOCOR informed me that these generator sets can begin operating on Tuesday, August 13.

Kaya, cross our fingers, na sa susunod na Martes may ginhawa na kayo sa kuryente. Pero iyan iyong basic requirements ninyo. Kasi kung minsan konti, kung minsan marami. So para complete requirement, I have also instructed NAPOCOR to lease additional generator sets to cover your peak demand. Hindi lamang yon darating sa linggo na magsisimula ng Tuesday, mayroon pang darating na dagdag and their arrival date in Virac is the end of next week.

In the meantime NAPOCOR is repairing the generator set in Marinawa dito sa probinsiya ng Catanduanes. Kasalukuyang nagtatrabaho sila at sinabi ko, gawin iyong paraan para makatakbo itong Marinawa — sabi nga ni Vince Perez, mag-ingat kayo sa pronunciation baka sabihin ninyong marijuana, nasabi ko na nga marijuana, Marinawa. Sabi ko sa NAPOCOR, gawin niyo iyon kaagad para sa ganon sa araw ng fiesta ng Baras ay makakatakbo na ang Marinawa generator set itong araw na ito.

Mga kababayan, mabuti ako ay pumunta rito kasi kailangan malaman ang problema, iyong mga pinakamatinding problema. Syempre lahat ng bayan malaki ang problema, pero yung pinakamatindi. Salamat nagkaroon ako ng pagkakataon makapunta rito, salamat na lamang nalaman ko ang pinakamatinding problema ninyo. Iyan ang ating ginagawa: tinitingnan ang kailangan, tinitingnan kung ano ang gagawin because bilang inyong pangulo alam ko kung ano ang kailangan — tungkulin ko iyon — at alam ko rin kung papaano natin mabibigyan ng solusyon — tungkulin ko rin iyon. Para mabigyan kayo ng isang maaasahang pamahalaan, yun ang kailangan. At bilang pangulo, gagawin ko ang lahat sa abot ng aking kakayahan na matupad yung mga pinaka matinding pangangailangan ng taong-bayan.

Alam ko dito kailangan maayos at matahimik na pamumuhay, maunlad na kinabukasan. Iyan ang ating ipagtrabaho lahat-lahat tayo, magsama-sama tayo rito.

Kaya sa araw ng fiesta ng Baras, iyan ang aking panalangin kay San Lorenzo, ang martir, na sana tulungan nya tayo na mabigyan ng kapayapaan, magandang kaunlaran, magandang kinabukasan, magandang kalusugan, magandang kuryente ang mamamayan ng Catanduanes.

Maraming salamat at masayang fiesta sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the mass oathtaking of barangay officials (Manila Chapter) [Filipino]

ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa malawakang panunumpa ng mga opisyal ng barangay (Manila Chapter)

[Ipinahayag sa Fiesta Pavilion, Manila Hotel, ika 13 ng Agosto, 2002]

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat. At maraming salamat sa punong lungsod ng Maynila, si Mayor Lito Atienza na kapwa namin ni Joey Lina na mga pro-life kaya ganon ang kanyang diskurso.

Kagalang-galang na Joey Lina, siya ay ama ng mga local governments dahil siya ang Secretary ng DILG pero siya rin ay pamangkin ni Mayor Lito Atienza.

Si Vice Mayor Danny Lacuna; si Congressman Rudy Bacani; mga masisipag na konsehal; mga bagong halal at mga halal muli na punong barangay ng Maynila; mga piling panauhin; mga minamahal kong mga taga-Maynila:

Congratulations sa inyong lahat.

At belated happy birthday kay Mayor Atienza.

Ako ay nasisiyahan na bumati sa inyong halos 900 na Barangay chairmen at chairwomen ng Maynila — napakarami kayo kaya talaga naman nararapat na ballroom ng Manila Hotel ang paggaganapan ng inyong oathtaking. At hindi lamang yon, bagay na bagay ang historic Manila Hotel sa inyo dahil sa papel na ginaganap niyo sa ating bansa at sa kabisera ng bansa, ang lungsod ng Maynila.

Kayo ay kailangan-kailangan ko sa sinabi ko sa aking State of the Nation Address — yung pagtatag ng ating republikang Pilipinas. Sinabi ko noon na dalawa ang napaka-importanteng katangian ng matatag na republika ng Pilipinas.

Una, dapat kinakatawan natin hindi yung mga makapangyarihan kung hindi yung mga mahihina at mahihirap. At sino ang pinaka-kumakatawan sa mga mahihirap? Walang iba kung hindi yung mga namumuno ng batayang organisasyon sa ating pamahalaan, walang iba kung hindi yung mga chairmen.

Yung pangalawang katangian ng matatag na republikang Pilipinas ay para nga makatawan natin yung mga mahihirap at mahihina kaysa yung mga makapangyarihan. Kailangan matatag ang ating mga institusyon. At siguro sa lahat ng ating mga institusyon ng Pilipinas, isang nasa pinakamatatag at malakas na institusyon ay yung institusyon ng barangay organization at barangay chairman at chairwoman. Kasi, ako pangulo ng Pilipinas ngunit tanging kapangyarihan ko ay ehekutibo; si Mayor Atienza, mayor ng pinaka-importanteng lungsod, kabisera ng Pilipinas, ngunit ang tanging hinahawakan niyang kapangyarihan ay ehekutibo; yung mga legislature sa pamahalaang pambansa, mga congressmen, si Congressman Bacani at yung mga senador; yung mga humuhusga yung ating mga mahistrado. Doon naman sa Maynila, ang ehekutibo si Lito, ngunit yung legislature ay si Danny at yung mga konsehal; ngunit kayo, mga Barangay chairmen at chairwomen, nabuo yung tatlong kapangyarihan sa inyo — ehekutibo, lehislato, ganon na rin ang hukuman sa barangay.

Kaya napakatatag ng inyong institusyon at importanteng kilalanin ang inyong katatagan bilang institusyon at palawakin pa sa gawa at hindi lamang sa batas. Kailangang galangin ang inyong kapangyarihan, galangin ang inyong kasarinlan.

Noong ako ay bagong pangulo — naging pangulo ako sabado di dapat day-off yun, walang opisina; dapat pahinga, Sunday; Monday ang first day of work, first day ng papeles — pero nung gabing yun, Sunday, naku, yung aking Executive Secretary noon, si Rene de Villa, ay inaapura ako may mga papeles na kailangan makita ko yung gabing yun. Ano kayang napakaimportante na hindi makahintay sa aking first working day nung lunes? Yun pala mga travel authority ng ilang mga barangay captain. Kasi ultimo barangay captain, kayong 900 kayo, 42,000 sa buong Pilipinas, kailangan pala hindi pala makakabiyahe kung walang permiso ng presidente. Eh papaano kung napuno kami ng paper work o tinamad? Eh di wala na. Anong nangyari sa inyong kapangyarihan?

Kaya yun ang unang ginawa ko, sabi ko hindi na hihingi sa akin ng permiso ang mga barangay officials, at the very least ibibigay ko na, ide-delegate ko na kay Joey Lina.

Ganon na rin yung pagbili ng mga kotse, hindi na kayo kailangang humingi ng permiso sa akin, binababa ko na yun kay Joey Lina.

At mas importante yung inyong IRA. Hindi niyo ba nahahalata na hindi na binabawasan yung inyong IRA, buo nang binibigay sa inyo? At hindi lamang yun, yung mga utang ng nakaraang administrasyon ay binabayaran kayo ng aking administrasyon kahit na hindi nanggaling sa akin yung utang na yun.

Lahat yun ay bilang pagkikilala sa kapangyarihan at mahalagang papel ng ating barangay organization.

Tapos sa aking paglilibot sa mga barangay officials, ewan ko kung dito sa Maynila kasi mayaman kayo ganon ang inyong problema, pero doon sa mga probinsya maraming nagko-complain sa akin, yung mga GSIS benefits daw — yung death benefits, yung disability benefits, in other words yung life insurance or disability insurance, hindi raw nila nakukubra. Eh anong klaseng kapangyarihan yun kung kayo, huwag namang malas, kawawa naman yung mga kamag-anak, yung mga pamilya pag nasawi o kung disable kayo kawawa naman kayo sa inyong buhay na kailangang maraming mga gagamitin, gamit na kailangan para tuloy pa rin ang inyong pagkikilos. Kaya yun ay isang trinabaho namin ni Joey Lina, at ngayon gumawa ako ng Executive Order, dito sa mga ganitong bagay — yung life insurance at disability insurance — yung babayad sa inyo hindi na kayo kailangan kumubra sa GSIS, dilg na ang mananagot sa bayad ng inyong mga benepisyo.

Ano naman ang kailangan namin mula sa inyo sa pagbigay ng lahat ng kapangyarihan at kinikilala ang inyong kapangyarihan? Siyempre dahil kayo ang batayang organisasyon, kayo ang executive, legislative at hukom sa inyong mga pamayanan, kailangan ang inyong tulong doon sa mga barangay: kailangan kayo maging tulay sa pagpadala ng mga proyektong laban sa kahirapan. Kailangan kayo ang mata at tenga at bakal na kamay para isigurado ang kapayapaan sa inyong mga barangay. Kailangan kayo rin ang boses ng pamahalaan para maikuwento kung anu-ano ang mga patakaran at mapaliwanag ang panig ng pamahalaan sa iba't-ibang mga issue na importante sa mga inyong sinasakupan.

Kaya napakaimportante ang barangay chairman at chairwoman. Binabati ko kayong lahat dahil napakaimportante maging Barangay Official sa Maynila. At maraming kilala kong barangay chairmen at chairwomen na tumakbong unopposed, di ba Lito, noong nakaraang halalan na ito? Ibig sabihin noon nagustuhan ng taongbayan yung pagpapatakbo ninyo nung nakaraang term ninyo.

Doon naman sa mga bago, malaki ang pag-asa ng inyong sinasakupan sa inyong magandang pamamahala.

Kaya itong gabing ito ipagdiriwang natin ang inyong tagumpay dahil meron kayong bagong mandato galing sa ating taongbayan. Itong mandato ninyong bagung-bago ay kailangang-kailangan din namin sa pamahalaang nasyonal na magamit para sa ganon kayo ang magiging tulay ng national government sa mga pinakapamayanan.

Kaya muli, malaking karangalan sa akin na tayo ay nagsasama sa trabaho. Gaya ng sabi ni Lito, hindi politika kasi non-partisan naman ang barangay officials. Kaya importante na magtulungan tayo. Mas actually tumutulong kayo sa amin, ang tulong namin sa inyo ay ibigay sa inyo yung karapatan ninyo — yung mga ira, kailangan niyong kapangyarihan na dinadaan sa inyo habang kaya, yung ating mga activity.

Kaya kami ni Joey Lina ay gumawa ng isang parang masasabi nating serbisyo na puwedeng magawa, sama-sama tayo sa ating mga mamamayan na pinaglilingkuran natin. Ang tawag nito ay gabay sa mamamayang action center. at ito ay parang halos one-stop information center na malalaman ng lahat kung papaano nila makukuha ang mga serbisyo ng pamahalaan ni hindi na kailangang pupunta dito, pupunta doon, pupunta doon, nandoon na lahat sa barangay. Sa mga darating na araw kasi magkakaroon tayo ng mga seminar Local Government Academy, maikukuwento ni Joey Lina itong, ano? gabay sa Mamamayan Action Center. Isang paraan kung papaano mas mase-centralize natin, mawa-one-stop shop natin ang ating tulong sa ating mga mamamayan.

Ito lamang ang ilang mga halimbawa ng ating pinag-iibayong paglingkod sa ating mamamayan.

Ako ay nasisiyahan na kayo ay narito. Salamat sa inyong suportang pinakita sa akin nitong nakaraang one year-and-a-half ng aking pagka-pangulo. At sa mga susunod na panahon, magtulungan pa tayo para lalong dakila pa ang Maynila, ang kabisera ng Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat at congratulations sa inyong lahat.

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the launching of the Arsenio H. Lacson Foundation for Public Service, Inc.

[Delivered at the Centennial Hall, Manila Hotel, August 14, 2002]

Maraming salamat Mayor Lito Atienza, na kagabi lang ay kasama ko dito rin sa Manila dahil nanumpa sa tungkulin yung mga bagong halal na barangay officials.

Fr. James Reuter, Board Dhairman, Arsenio Lacson Foundation for Public Service; Ms. Millie Lacson Lapira and other members of the Lacson family, including Bong Lapira, including Sal Lacson, my father-in-law's first cousin — which reminds me I belong to the Lacson family too because my father-in-law's mother was Doña Jesusa Lacson, the Faisal and my father-in-law are first cousins; other members and officers of the Arsenio Lacson Foundation for Public Service; other officials of the City of Manila; friends and benefactors of the foundation; distinguished guests; Fr. Nebres, President of Ateneo, and Fr. Caluag, Vice President of Ateneo and Director of the Foundation; ladies and gentlemen:

The younger generation of today would not recall the heady days of the presidential campaign of 1961, many of you in this table, in that table were not even born then. That was the year that my father became president of the Philippines. And as Millie said, that campaign was premised on integrity, austerity, responsibility and genuine public service.

And I am very grateful to the man whom we honor today – as already intimated by Millie — served as my father's campaign manager, Arsenio Lacson. Though he belonged to a different party he was my father's campaign manager precisely because of the platform of integrity and reform.

My father and Mayor Lacson go back a long way. You saw that they were in UST at the same time. They were also newspapermen before they entered politics which was a basis for their bonding when they were both C. Arsenio Lacson was a champion boxer and my father too, in a much, much lesser way, also liked boxing as a sport. So they had many things going together for them personality wise but also principle wise and that's why they were together in 1961.

It is a rare privilege therefore for me to be part of this tribute. Not only am I happy to see Millie and bong who used to be one of my favorite when I was a young girl listening to the radio one of my favorite DJs and Sal our cousin — he is our uncle but we call him our cousin because were the same age — and also the late Gigi Lacson who was my friend and playmate at the Assumption. And then because of all of these I do remember along with my family's memory, the memories of Asenio Lacson — not only his colorful personality but also his devotion to reform and integrity.

It is an honor therefore to be here with you to pay tribute to one who so fervently believed in, and helped further, the principles of my father shared with him — the principle of integrity, reform and love for the masses.

Mayor Arsenio Lacson was a champion of popular democracy. He shared the vision of a republic for the common man. He will always stand in history as a figure larger than life because he was brave, he was colorful. But beyond his being colorful, he was honest, and he was eloquent.

As we launch a foundation in his name and memory, I invite you, the people who are here in this hall today, and our nation to pause and reflect on the spirit and lessons of his life which could help us chart our way through the many challenges that face our country today.

Today, we reaffirm our commitment to his relentless crusade for good governance. And I thank the family, the Lacson family, and the foundation for helping me in this quest for good governance by producing more of those who will carry out good governance.

Today, we remember. We remember the man who showed us what good governance was about. We remember the man who was adored by his friends and followers, but respected by his foes for his integrity and supreme will to achieve what he set out to do.

Three terms as mayor, he demonstrated that governance must be laid out in the concrete: making things work, getting things done, attaining the quality of life tangibly good for the people. He proved that politics is about providing governance characterized by leadership and constant performance and guided by a noble vision.

Like him, today we must demand performance from our public servants.

We need performance that is not measured just by grand plans, but by the success of getting the little things done as well, the basic services delivered, and thus improving, in small but measurable victories, the improvement in the lives of the people and the progress of the nation.

If all of us in government emulate him, and tirelessly work on the responsibilities entrusted to us, we will build a better society. We will protect the future of our youth and all generations of Filipinos. Beneath his outward ruggedness and bluntness, Lacson cared — as his daughter said, a tough guy with a heart of a marshmallow. He cared for the youth, he cared for the people, he cared for his country.

Lacson's integrity lived in the fusion of one's inner and external self, the continuity between word and action. This is how I have always defined integrity in public service: performance based on principle, action that matches words.

It is easy to do what is popular and acceptable to the majority. The temptation to do this, even if one knows that another less popular course of action is so much better and wiser, is always strong for one in an elective position. But Lacson teaches us to overcome the temptation to play to the gallery. He did what was right and what was best, no matter what he believed or feared might be the political cost. Again, principled performance.

For who but a Lacson who belong to the ruling Nationalista party would cross party lines to be the campaign manager of a penniless opposition candidate.

Many of us in public service are required not just to be good administrators or managers, but also to be good leaders. The myriad of our concerns in our offices can pull us in all directions, but it is the one with a clear and firm vision who rises to become a good leader.

Lacson exemplified this, and more. His master plan for Manila was once the envy of what are now the leading cities in Asia. We saw in the story of his life how among all Asian city mayors he was the one there among his peers, among the world mayors. The Lacson underpass was constructed at a time when this was unheard of in this part of the world. And I thank Mayor Atienza for giving us a revival, giving new life to this Lacson underpass. The Pamantasan ng Maynila is another monument to his vision.

Lacson — being a model of good governance — we must therefore reflect and abstract from his colorful story what are the elements of good governance. And as I have put them together there are three important elements of good governance. One, is a moral foundation to guide our leadership at all levels.

And therefore in the like of strengthening the moral foundation of leadership, I am announcing that I am instructing the PAGCOR to abort the slot machine arcade project. PAGCOR says that they passed the slot machine project as part of their corporate powers, but it is all well within the law. PAGCOR also won in the Supreme Court the right to put up a Jai-Alai project. But after PAGCOR won in the Supreme Court the Jai-Alai project, that was when I aborted the project. Therefore it is not question of what is legal, it is a question of what is morally upright and morally sound.

And I think this is already two strikes of PAGCOR that I have overruled their decision. I'm not saying that their decision was illegal, I am just saying that in those two times — on the jai-alai and the slot machines — it does not quite measure up to the moral standards that we have set for governance in our administration.

Another element of good governance is transparency in all government actions. And a third element of good governance is an ethic of effective implementation in the bureaucracy.

The good public servant is the servant-leader. A person who exhibits principled performance from day-to-day, and maintains a visionary leadership for the future.

Lacson's memory will inspire us to build a strong republic, and restore our country to a position of prestige in our region and in the global stage.

Some of us remember the time when we were second only to Japan as an economic force in Asia. This was when Lacson was mayor and my father was president. Today in recovering from last year's global slowdown, we are performing best among our Southeast Asian neighbors and third among Asian countries. That is why we must not lose hope but rather maintain this momentum.

And let us not forget that we remain the oldest democracy in Asia. But we must demonstrate that democracy works in the Philippines of the 21st century — that a democratic state can be a strong republic and not be the stereotype of a soft state.

These are not just sentimental longings, but inspiring challenges for us to come together and act together for the common cause.

Like the great medieval cathedrals, we must patiently place one stone firmly over the other. But we must also be aware that the challenge is more complex than ever. All we need to patiently rebuild together, we must also do so swiftly, consistently, purposively.

Leadership must not deceive our people by false promises of an idealized life. Better lives we can promise and work for, but it must be done with integrity and truth. We must accept the difficulties of the task, and make clear the role each one of us has to play. Everyone must sacrifice to build a strong republic.

Surely, part of a leader's burdens are the disagreements and criticisms one will inevitably face.

I do not expect all to agree with me as president but I continue to hope that we can unite behind what we have in common. So once again I invite friends and followers and even foes — as my father invited a political foe but a personal friend, Arsenio Lacson — to unite by focusing on our most vital ends: to fight poverty and terrorism, to uphold good governance, to build a strong Philippine Republic.

Through the years, our republic has unfortunately become a house divided. Through the years, our republic unfortunately has not delivered enough basic services to help its poorest. Through the years, our republic unfortunately has not given the promise of a bright future to its youth. Through the years, our republic has lacked the will to enforce the rule of law without fear or favor. Through the years, our republic has allowed the moral and civic values of its citizenry to wither.

Thus, our republic has fallen prey to those whose selfish ambition, vested interest, or inimical ideology, would tear the republic asunder, or failing in that, would destabilize and weaken it.

This is a collective guilt that we must share, for with few exceptions, we are all a part of this system. There are those among us who would argue that they are already working to change the system. Often, however, their ways have been patronizing and self-righteous, strident and self-centered as Lacson said in one of his speeches, “bellicose.” on the contrary, the true journey to strengthen the republic must be a national one where the individual gives way to the whole.

Our goal is a strong Philippine republic, with two essential attributes: first, the republic must be autonomous of dominant classes and sectors, so that it represents the people’s interests and not only a powerful minority group or some of them. Second, the republic must have the capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong democracy, to implement its policies and deliver its services.

Strong institutions and a strong democracy build a strong Philippine republic; they provide an effective government, both at national and local levels as shown by Arsenio Lacson of his manila characterized by a professional and dedicated civil service. An effective government is one that delivers basic services to everyone, whether rich or poor, in an environment of peace, and under the rule of law.

Strong institutions also include a vigorous free-enterprise economy, where the Filipino’s full talents are unleashed. While governments must remove the forces and factors that obstruct free markets, it must be recognized though that at the starting gate of a competitive field, not all the players have equal opportunities. Among these would be farmers with no land of their own, or the youth with no access to education. Thus, it is government’s task to provide these tools that truly help level the playing field — and that is how we can make free enterprise a strong institution.

Indeed, in the strong Philippine republic, the government cannot rely solely on the invisible hand of the market. At the macro level, government must at times intervene to stabilize the economy or to steer it towards long-term growth. It must also protect its environment and natural resources from blind market forces.

The strong republic can be autonomous of dominant classes and sectors through true democratic representation built on new politics. This requires as another strong institution, rational electoral processes where citizens are given the tools for informed choices, and their votes are countered properly.

Still another strong institution needed in a strong Philippine republic is a vibrant civil society. We must find a way to finally dismantle a subculture of divisiveness and individualism, and transform our families, communities, and other civil society organizations into constructive engines for national prosperity. This is where the Arsenio Lacson foundation comes in.

It is my hope that the Arsenio Lacson foundation put up in memory of a strong leader will contribute to the vibrancy of civil society and good governance.

I congratulate the Arsenio Lacson foundation for honoring a man who lived his life as a public servant and role model of good governance. His story, his life and spirit will surely serve as an inspiration to all of us. May it serve as an inspiration to the foundation named after him to add vibrancy to civil society and strength to the Philippine republic.

Congratulations and thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the orientation of the newly elected Barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan (SK) Officials of the National Capital Region [Filipino]

ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa oryentasyon ng mga bagong halal na mga opisyal ng Punong Barangay at Sangguniang Kabataan ng
Pambansang Kabisera

[Ipinahayag sa Plenary Hall, PICC, Lungsod ng Pasay, ika 17 ng Agosto, 2002]

Maraming salamat Kalihim Joey Lina. Ang ganda-ganda naman pakilala mo sa akin. Sabi pa ni Joey, natatakot daw yung mga Cabinet members baka mas alam ko raw ang trabaho nila kaysa sa kanila. Sinabi ni Joey yun kasi hindi ko mas alam ang trabaho niya kaysa sa kanya kasi dilg siya at dating gobernador, so exempted siya doon, kaya niya sinasabi yuon.

Batiin ko rin ang Mmetro Manila Chairman. At kagabi meron akong kasamang mga peryodista. Sabi nung isa, si Neal Cruz, sabi niya, “Si Bayani nababatikos dahil sa kanyang drive na malinis yung sidewalks natin dapat siguro bigyan mo siya ng words of support.” “naku,” sabi ko, “si Bayani, nagawa na niya yan sa Marikina. Lahat ng mga ginagawa niya ngayon, nagawa na niya sa Marikina. Kaya kayang-kaya niya yung political will na yun kasi kung anong batikos natatanggap niya ngayon, ganon din natanggap niya first year na siya ay mayor ng Marikina.” kaya yun din isa pang Cabinet member ko na mas alam niya ang trabaho kaysa sa akin, si Bayani Fernando.

Batiin ko naman ang ating host Mayor, si Pewee Trinidad, maraming salamat sa iyong welcome. At sabi nga ni Pewee marami raw sa inyong nakikita niya dito pero sa gabi. Kaya nung sinasabi ni Joey na ha hinihilera ko yung mga kriminal, sabi sa akin, sino ba diyan ang nagsabi? Si Bobbit Carlos ng Valenzuela, sabi ni Bobbit, “huwag niyong ihihilera yung mga nagbibisita mayor dito sa gabi, sa Pasay City.” pero nagbibisita man sila o hindi sa gabi sa Pasay City, babatiin natin silang lahat na nandito ngayon: nandito si Mayor Vicencio ng Malabon; nahuli kami dahil pareho kaming galing sa Baseco ngayon, si Mayor Atienza ng Maynila; yung napakagaling na sucesor ni Bayani Fernando sa Marikina, si Marides Fernando; ito ang ating mga new generation, si Mayor Tobi Tiangco ng Navotas; ito abugado ko dati, si Mayor Rosendo Capco ng Pateros; at saka isa pang new generation si Freddie Tiña ng Taguig. Naku ba’t na-cross-out yung pangalan ni Mayor Rey Malonzo ng Caloocan City; at saka, sino pa? Kinatawan ng Muntinlupa, municipal administrator, kumakatawan kay Mayor Fresnedi, si Mr. Reyes; at saka yung pangulo ng mga Barangay Captain ng buong Pilipinas si James Marty Lim.

Mga officials ng DILG; at siyempre mga bagong halal at hinalal muli na mga punong Barangay at Chairman ng Sangguniang Kabataan ng National Capital Region ng 1,600 Barangays ng National Capital Region.

Alam niyo ang ating bansa ay may mga 1,600 towns, ang Metro Manila ay may 1,600 Barangays; at ilan sa mga barangay ninyo ay kasinlaki ng bayan, kasinlaki pa nga ng probinsiya yung iba. Kaya kung ano yung bayan sa bansa, ang barangay sa Metro Manila, ganun kayo ka-importante kaya binabati ko kayong lahat, mga punong-barangay, mga SK Chairmen.

Napakalaki ng kapangyarihan ng mga barangay chairmen, ganon na rin yung mga SK officials. Noong isang gabi, kasama ko yung mga tiga-Maynila at binanggit ko nga na ang barangay chairman o chairwoman, kung pag-uusapan mo ang kapangyarihan sa iyong lugar na sinasakupan, doon mas makapangyarihan pa kayo kaysa sa presidente sa Republika ng Pilipinas dahil ako, executive lamang ako, yung legislative iba yun, yung judiciary iba yun. Pero ang barangay chairman o chairwoman, siya na ang executive, legislative at saka judiciary. Kaya kayo ang pinakamakapangyarihan sa inyong sinasakupan.

Kaya dahil sa inyong kapangyarihan, napaka-importante kayo sa mga ginagawa ng national government. Kaya ito na nga ang ginagawa nating orientation seminar pati na rin ng mga hihingi ng pledge of commitment sa ating mga programa. Kasi kung gusto natin magkaroon ng malakas at matatag na Republika ng Pilipinas Hindi ito magaganap kung hindi kasama at kabalikat sa trabaho, ang ating barangay chairmen at ang ating mga SK chairs.

Marami sa inyo nanood sa aking State of the Nation Address, whether doon sa kongreso o dito sa telebisyon, at narinig ninyo sinabi kong strong republic. Sabi ko noon, ang strong Philippine republic dalawa ang katangian: isa, kinakatawan niya hindi mga vested interest, kung hindi yung mga nakararami; ... The words, ang malakas na republika ay para sa mga mahihina at mahihirap. At nasaan yung mga mahihina? Nahahanap natin doon, sinasakupan ninyo, sa iba't-ibang mga barangay. Kaya kung gusto ng national government na tunay na maging kinatawan ng mga mahihina, kailangan dadaan tayo sa mga barangay officials dahil yung mahihinang hinahanap natin na makatawan natin ay nandoon, sinasakupan ninyo sa inyong mga barangay.

Yung pangalawang katawan, para mapairal ang magagandang patakaran kailangang malalakas ang mga institusyon, at kailangang malakas ang bureaokrasya. At gaya ng sabi ko, isa sa pinakamalakas na institusyon sa buong pilipinas dahil nga tatlo ang inyong kapangyarihan — executive, legislative at judiciary — isa sa pinakamalakas na institusyon sa ating bansa ay ang institusyon ng barangay organization.

Kung gusto natin na manghina ang ating republika, anong gagawin doon? Panghihinain yung kapangyarihan ng barangay. Pero kung gusto natin na malakas ang republikang pilipinas, kailangang gagawin natin ay kikilalanin natin ang kalakasan ng institusyon ng barangay at bibigyan ng galang yung kapangyarihan na yun. Yun ang dahilan na noong ako ay naging pangulo ay inisip ko na dapat hindi masyadong nagko-kontrol sa inyo ang pangulo ng Pilipinas, kung hindi na rin kinikilala kayo bilang partner.

Kinukuwento ko ito doon sa mga barangay chairmen ng Manila noong isang gabi. Nung ako ay umupo bilang pangulo, Saturday night yun, ah no Saturday, hindi pa ... Siyempre, like today hindi yun working day. Sunday, supposed to be day-off, so Monday dapat ang first day of work. Anong nangyari? Sunday, yung aking executive secretary noon, si Rene de Villa, frantic kailangan makita ko yung mga papeles, kailangang pirmahan ko. Ano yang napakaimportanteng papeles ito? Yun pala, may mga barangay officials na magbibiyahe sa lunes, kung hindi ko pirmahan yung kanilang travel authority ay hindi sila makakalis. “naku,” sabi ko, “pagbiyahe lang? Ang barangay official hihingi ng pirmiso sa pangulo?” so, tinanggal ko yun kapangyarihan kong yun at sabi ko de-delegate sa Secretary of Local Government. Ganon din sa pagbili ng sasakyan, bakit pangulo pa ang magde-decide kung kailanangan ninyo ng sasakyan o hindi? Delegated na rin yun sa DILG. Itong unang mga ginawa kong mga hakbang na tanggalin sa akin ang kapangyarihan ng kontrol sa inyo, yun ay bilang pagkikilala na kayo ang talagang dapat may kapangyarihan sa ating bansa.

Ngunit ang kapangyarihan ay hindi lamang sinasanay sa paghihingi ng permiso. Sinasanay din ito sa kontrol sa pondo. Siguro naranasan na ninyo na kahit na merong local government code at meron kayong ira, sa mga nakaraan may bawas yung mga irang binibigay sa inyo o kaya may mga buwan na hindi pa binibigay sa inyo; o kaya ibibigay sa inyo pero magsa-submit muna kayo ng inyong program for approval. Yun naman dahil dalubhasa si Joey sa local government, ay pinayo niya sa akin huwag na — ibigay na ng buo at hindi na hihingi-hingi pa ng permiso kung papano gagastusin tatal nandoon na ang batas.

Kaya siguro dahil nararanasan ninyo over the last year and a half na ako'y pangulo, nakukuha niyo ng buo yung ira. Hindi lamang yun, pati na nga yung utang nung nakaraang administrasyon ay binabayad kahit na hindi ako ang may kasalanan noon. Kaya ang hinihingi ko naman sa inyo ngayon ay tulungan naman niyo rin sana ng lubusan na masagot ng national government yung ating mga napakalubhang mga problema.

Una sa lahat nadiyan ang problema ng kahirapan. At kung tayo ay magkakaroon ng mga proyekto para sa kaunlaran o magkaroon ng trabaho ang taong-bayan. Yung inyong mga barangay constituents naman ang walang trabaho eh kaya tulungan rin ninyo na maghanap tayo ng pagkakataon na magkaroon ng trabaho yung ating mga sinasakupan.

At yung pangalawang problema, problema ng kapayapaan. Meron tayong problema ng kriminalidad, meron tayong problema ng terorismo. At kagabi nanonood ako ng television show, yung usually nagbabatikos sa akin, yung sa “on-line,” pero kagabi may survey: “gusto ba ng taong bayan labanan ng gobyerno NPA?” at anong sagot sa survey? Ninety-six percent gusto ng taong labanan nang NPA.

Ngayon sa Metro Manila, yang laban na yun ay hindi sa battle field, wala namang battlefield, wala namang field sa metro manila na eh. Ang laban na yun ay nandoon sa mga puso at diwa, doon sa mga barangay; at kayo ang makakagawa ng frontline sa itong mga pakikibaka na hinihingi ng ating taong-bayan.

Kaya ako’y nasisiyahan nitong araw na ito na kayo ay narito para pakinggan yung ibat-ibang mga hinihiling sa inyo ng national government through the orientation at para sa ganon ay sumagot din na bilang tungkulin ninyo sa ating republika ay puwede kayong maasahan ng national government sa ating mga kailangang gawin para sa ating mga mamamayan.

Kaya ang hinihingi ko sa inyo, papayag ba kayo na mag-pledge sa inyong commitment sa ating mga programa?

Kung ganon, muli, congratulations sa inyong lahat at salamat sa pakikipagkabalikat. Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Eucharistic Celebration and Mass Wedding at the 18th Anniversary of El Shaddai [Filipino] Talumpati

Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas

Sa selebrasyon ng Yukaristiya at kasalang-bayan sa ika-18 anibersaryo ng El Shaddai

[Ipinahayag sa Amvel Business Park, Paranaque City, ika 18 ng Agosto, 2002]

Maraming salamat kay Brother Mike, ang ating servant leader at Happy Birthday sa darating na Martes. At sa inyo naman minamaha kong kapatid na prayer partner sa ating lahat, Happy 18th Anniversary. Sabi ko sa ating lahat dahil sa 18 years ng buhay ng El Shaddai bilang isang prayer partner ako ay nakasama ninyo ng sampung taon na. At taon-taon ako nakadalo at ako'y naging presidente mas lalo pa. Kasi pag hindi ninyo ako nakikita dito, ay ako nakikita ko kayo kasi ako ay nanonood sa telebisyon kay Brother Mike sa kanyang mga pinapangaralan sa atin.

Kanina doon sa sermon ni Bishop Bacani sabi niya, iyong sermon ay tungkol sa pagsubok na ginawa ni Jesus Christ doon sa babaeng Hentil. At ganoon ang pananampalataya may mga subok na maliliit, may mga subok na malalaki. May mga subok na pansandali, may mga subok na pangmatagal. Pero dapat sa ating pananampalataya, lahat noon ay tinatanggap natin, lahat noon ay pinapasa natin, lahat noon ay dapat nagpapalakas at nagpapatatag pa lalo sa ating pananampalataya.

Halimbawa, kanina, umuulan parang pagsubok. Gaya nga nang sabi ni Bishop, doon sa Caloocan iyong simabahan niya, pag umuulan may bubong pa nga iyong simbahan. Pag umuulan kumukonti ang nagsisimba. Kanina, umulan. Pero iyong kung ilan ang nandito bago umulan, iyon pa rin ang numero pagkatapos ng ulan. Sabi nga ni bishop, ilang daang libo kaya ang narito.

Ako po ay dumating, siguro mas maaga dumating si Bishop kaysa akin. Pero ho ako ay dumating halos pag umpisa na ng misa kaya iyong siksikan na dinaanan ko siguro masasabi ko hindi lamang ilang daang libo, palagay ko isang milyon namang muli ang narito sa anibersaryo. At kung iisipin natin na isang milyon ang narito sa anibersaryo, palagay ko si Brother Mike at si Sister Belen tuwing anibersaryo, naalala nila kung paano nag-umpisa at ganoon kakonti ang prayer partners 18 years ago.

Kasama ko dito ngayon iyong chairman ng SSS, si Secretary Bernardino Abes, na siya ang Secretary of Labor ng aking tatay. Siya po ay matagal ng kilala ni Brother Mike, noon pang bata pa si Brother Mike. At tapos umalis si Secretary Abes, pumunta sa Canada noong panahon ng Martial Law. Bumalik na lamang siya pagkatapos ng Edsa 1, at tapos nagdalo siya. So two years old noon iyong kasamahan nang mga anak ni el shaddai. At kinikuwento ni Brother Mike noong nakikinig si Secretary Abes, pagkatapos nung sinabi niya dahil matalik na kaibigan naman sila ... Sabi niya, " Why are you giving them false hopes?" that was 16 years ago. Pero ngayon narito pa rin kayo at narito na rin ako since ten years ago. Kaya iyong binigay napag-asa ni Brother Mike, 16 years ago, 18 years ago, hindi iyon false hope. Sa umpisa, may duda, kasama iyon sa pagsubok. Ngunit sa pagpapanatili ng pananampalataya, eto isang milyon pagdiriwang ng selebrasyon ng 18th Anniversary.

Sabi ko nga kay Brother Mike, "alam nyo nung una, eto hindi ko pa naikuwento sa kanya, noong unang, hindi naman nung una, nung ilang beses na akong pumupunta rito bilang senador, pagkatapos pagdala ng aking mga kaklase iyong mga mahilig manalanagin na mga kaklase ko. At doon kami sa harap, kung minsan nasa likod pero madalas gusto ko na nandoon kami sa harap para makinig kay brother mike mula sa harap kagaya ninyong mga nakaupo diyan. At sabi nung aking isang kaibigan na madalas din sa aming sariling prayer meeting ng aming mga classmates. Nung nakikinig siya kay Brother Mike , sabi niya truly this man is annointed, sabi niya.

Kaya noong kinikuwento ni Brother Mike kanina iyong sinabi ni Secretary Abes 16 years ago, at ngayon 16 years later, hindi na lamang two years old ang inabot ng mga anak ni El Shaddai kundi 18 years na ngayon. At kaya iyon ang sinabi ko: kasi brother, iyan ang talagang annointment.

Kasi kung tao lamang, hindi aabot ng 18 years. Ngunit ito ay basbas ni El Shaddai. Kaya marami pang taon ang magbibigay ng gantimpala sa ating pananampalataya.

Kaya muli mga kapatid sa panalangin, sa ating lahat Happy Anniversary! Sa ating mga bagong kasal, iyong labing-tatlong pares na aming inaanak ni Brother Mike congratulations and best wishes!

Nasisiyahan ako ng pag-celebrate din ng family, World Family Day sa Enero kayo ay pamilyang-pamilya ng Panginoon.

Panalangin ng Santo Papa ang kanyang kalusugan para sa ganoon sa kagustuhan ng Panginoon, matutuloy ang kanyang biyahe muli sa bansang Pilipinas.

Si Jesus binigyan niya ng pagsubok iyong kababaihang Hentil, iyong Canaan, dahil siya hindi kasama sa mga “blessed chosen people”. Ngunit sa kanyang pananampalataya, binigyan siya ng basbas at ang hiling niya ay binigay ni Jesus Christ sa kanya. Ano pa kaya tayo? Ano pa kaya mga anak ni Yahweh el Shaddai? Ano pa kaya ang bansang Pilipinas na dati siyang tanging katolikong bansa dito sa asia, ngayon dalawa na tayo iyong East Timor. Kaya mga kaibigan, mga kapatid mas lalo tayong dapat makaasa sa mga basbas Ni Yahweh El Shaddai lalo’t-lalo na dapat kahit na nagkakaroon tayo, nararamdaman na natin ang kahirapan, kahit may nagtutukso sa atin na mawalan ng pag-asa, huwag tayo mawala ng pananampalata dahil tayo ay anak ni Yahweh El Shaddai.

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 2002 Presentation Ceremonies of the Ramon Magsaysay Awards

Thank you very much.

Mr. Jaime Augusto Zobel de Ayala, Chairman of the Ramon Magsaysay Foundation Board of Trustees; President Corazon Aquino; Senator Ramon Magsaysay, Jr. and the other members of the Magsaysay family; distinguished members of the Board of Trustees of the Ramon Magsaysay Foundation; honorable recipients of the 2002 Ramon Magsaysay Awards; Excellencies; members of the diplomatic corps; Associate Justices of the Supreme Court; ladies and gentlemen:

Tonight, we mark the 95th Birth Anniversary of the great Filipino and the great Asian, President Ramon Magsaysay, and celebrate the achievement of Asia's finest citizens and leaders.

In a tribute to President Magsaysay, my late father, Diosdado Macapagal once said, and I quote: "history will record that his achievement in this field was two-fold: first, he broke the back of the communist rebellion; and second, he aroused the masses of the people to the fact that their nation is capable of having leaders who would consecrate their energy to the redemption of the people from their misery."

Tonight's awards are a testimony to the living legacy and spirit of President Ramon Magsaysay. Our awardees reflect the excellence, boldness of thought and action, and devotion to the peoples and races across Asia, just as the late president himself did in his time.

These awards are not only a ray of hope in a complex world of conflicting interest, issues and concerns. For my part, they also help me in a most practical and concrete way in my governance.

Last February, I launched the hybrid rice commercialization program in 44 provinces of our country as the flagship project of my agricultural modernization. I am proud to say that the hybrid rice technology which I am using now in this agricultural modernization program was developed as a collaboration between Philrice and Yuan Longpin, whom I met last year because he was last year's, Magsaysay Awardee. This program is directed towards doubling yields. And it is my aim that in two years, 30 percent of irrigated lands will have adopted this hybrid rice technology of Yuan Longpin. Two years from our envision that these farmers will double their incomes as a result of adopting his technology.

On a national scale, the hybrid rice output will increase the production of rice by almost half a million metric tons and reduce our foreign exchange expenditures on the imports of our staple food. My being guest speaker in last year's Magsaysay awards was the catalyst for this great innovation in our agricultural modernization because I met Yuan Longpin in those awards. Since then he has helped our country and our farmers. And I thank you, the Ramon Magsaysay Foundation Trustees, for introducing me to someone who has since done so much for our agricultural modernization and our fight against poverty.

This year, our very own Chief Justice is the Awardee for Government Service. He is a pillar of patriotism, working beyond the limelight — quietly, efficiently and effectively — to safeguard Philippine democracy and promote the rule of law. His humble demeanor and unassailable integrity, his courage at the most critical periods of our nation are the standards by which every man of the bench, in Asia or elsewhere, must be measured.

Our other Awardee, Dr. Ruth Pfau, a lady shines in the field of public service. A German nun who adopted Pakistan as her own, she established a national program for the eradication of leprosy, simultaneously training medical workers while emphasizing social rehabilitation among both victims and non-victims. Even now, she is preoccupied with charitable deeds involving afghan refugees in her adopted country.

Mr. Bharat Koirala exemplifies the best of Asia in the field of journalism, literature and creative communication arts. Constantly sharing his talent and time, his public affairs projects in far-flung rural communities of Nepal developed enlightened constituencies. Indeed, he is among those who opened rural Nepal to the empowerment of the information age.

Our Awardee for peace and international understanding, the venerable Pomnyun Snim, is a roving Ambassador of Goodwill, known for his deep commitment to combat hunger and underdevelopment in North Korea. Dr. Sandeep Pandey, this year's recipient of the award for emergent leadership transformed education into a relevant and dynamic element in the lives of the poor and the powerless. Dr. Sandeep has provided an invaluable contribution to the people of India. He has enabled people to take control of their lives and their future.

Finally, our Awardee who is not here but whose message is something that is very strong is our Awardee for Community Leadership. She is important not only for the message she has given us but for the unwavering compassion that she has shown in ministering to the thousands of Burmese refugees and displaced persons in the border of Burma and Thailand. The work of Dr. Maung is a model for us Filipinos as we now address the great tragedy happening in Southern Philippines.

I talked to Prime Minister Mahathir on the phone yesterday. We came to an understanding on how best to ease the situation affecting our countrymen in Sabah and those coming back. I am sending a mission to Kuala Lumpur on Monday to thresh out the details. In the meantime, now is the time for our nation to come together for a humanitarian cause as Dr. Maung has been doing. This time for us it is in behalf of the thousands of deportees from Sabah. Many of them are sick and hungry like those that Dr. Maung has been caring for in the border. Our brothers and sisters need our help. I call upon each and everyone to extend whatever assistance you can give. Our distressed brothers and sisters need food, medicine, clothing and shelter. Our countrymen and countrywomen who have less in life. Our countrymen and countrywomen whom Ramon Magsaysay love so much.

Once again, I hope that the example set by the recipients of the Ramon Magsaysay awards for this year will help our people have a better society in our own country.

I congratulate the family and friends of President Magsaysay for this year's awards which perpetuates the great legacy of Ramon Magsaysay.

To everyone, thank you. To our awardees, congratulations! To our members of the board of trustees, thank you for your excellent choice once again this year. To the family of Ramon Magsaysay, thank you for giving the Philippines, thank you, for giving Asia a man that we can all emulate. Congratulations and thank you.

TV/Radio Message of President Arroyo calling for prudence, sobriety and reason over the Sabah repatriation issue

TV/Radio Message
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
Calling for prudence, sobriety and reason over the Sabah repatriation issue

[Delivered at the Study Room, Malacañang, August 31, 2002]

A great tragedy is happening in Southern Philippines. I came from Tawi-Tawi the other day and saw first hand the sufferings of thousands of deportees from Sabah. Many of them are sick and hungry. They need our help.

Now is the time for our nation to come together for a humanitarian cause. I call upon each and everyone to extend whatever assistance you can. We did this in the Mount Pinatubo disaster and we can do it again. Our distressed brethren need food, medicine, clothing and shelter. We shall set up centers to receive donations in cash and kind. I am asking all civic-minded organizations and the media organizations to pitch in. This is work for the entire nation.

I talked to Prime Minister Mohammad Mahathir on the phone yesterday. We came to an understanding on how best to ease the situation affecting our countrymen in Sabah.

I am sending an official mission to Kuala Lumpur on Monday to thresh out the details.

The events have brought in their wake serious controversies. I understand the emotions generated among our people because of children having died in detention centers, the canings that are happening, and other controversial events that are being covered profusely in the media.

There are also those who are trying to exploit the situation to serve their selfish ends, to erode our relations with Malaysia, or to pursue political or terroristic ends inimical to the common interest of both nations.

I must ask for prudence, sobriety and reason among our people. Malaysia is our ally in security, peace and development. Together with Indonesia, it is a co-signatory to our trilateral agreement on the interdiction of crime and terrorism among our common seas.

Malaysia has assisted us in the peace process in Mindanao. We enjoy strong investment and trade ties, particularly within the context of the Brunei-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East ASEAN Growth Area.

The problem of deportees from Sabah must be viewed from the overall spirit of goodwill, amity and mutual respect that have characterized our relations with Malaysia.

Moreover, the Philippine claim to Sabah must be firmly delinked from the issue of deportees. We should not taint our actions with grandstanding or diplomatic adventurism. This is not the way to resolve bilateral problems between long-standing friends.

What we need is a pragmatic, focused, effective response to this problem operationally, administratively, diplomatically.

First, the safety and welfare of deportees must be secured. The NDCC shall be on top of this effort. It shall establish coordination centers as necessary to attain this objective.

Second, the AFP and PNP must be on heightened alert in areas where potential problems of law and order may arise. The DILG secretary shall be responsible for the strategy and deployment options.

Third, the LGUs must adopt a policy of accommodation to ease geographical congestion. A plan must be drawn up by the DILG in this regard. We will provide the necessary support for the LGUs involved.

Fourth, the DFA must work with the DOH to deploy doctors and medical workers to care for our people in the detention centers. Diplomatic initiatives must be sustained to support this end.

Fifth, speedy documentation processes are the key. The DFA and dole must have a clear picture of who and where the undocumented Filipinos are and how they can be legitimized under a rolling comprehensive plan.

We shall overcome this problem. But everybody must help. There is no time for partisanship or petty politics. Let us join hands to lend a helping hand to our brethren from Sabah.

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 106th Foundation Anniversary of Nueva Ecija “Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija”

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 106th Foundation Anniversary of Nueva Ecija “Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija”

[Delivered at the JF Sports Complex, San Isidro, Nueva Ecija, September 2, 2002]

Maraming salamat congressman joson sa iyong napakagandang pagpakilala. Governor Joson pala. Maraming salamat Governor. Mamaya si Josie babatiin ko.

Maraming salamat governor joson sa iyong magandang pagpakilala at sa iyong pag-imbata sa akin na makipagdiriwang muli ng ‘Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija.’

‘Yung iyong kapwang gobernador binabati ko rin, Chairman ng Regional Development Council ng Region III si Governor Josie Dela Cruz; batiin ko si ating host Mayor, si Mayor Sonia Lorenzo; at lahat ng mga mayors ng lalawigan ng Nueva Ecija; ngayon batiin ko si Congressman Joson, nga si Josie Joson; nandito rin si Congressman Violago at saka si Congressman Villareal; batiin ko na rin si former Congressman Rico Fajardo; at saka si former Congresswoman Julita Villareal; at si former Congressman Rene Diaz; si Rene, si Rico ay nasa administrasyon ko na ngayon kasama na rin si Cabinet member, Secretary of Agriculture Leony Montemayor.

Nandito rin ‘yung ating mga nag-aalaga ng ating kapayapaan, ‘yung pinuno ng ating Philippine National Police, si General Ebdane. Wala siyang kidnap syndicate na dinilever sa akin itong araw na ito, kaya Namiesta na lang; si General Rodolfo Garcia ang ating Northern Luzon Commander; dito naman sa 7th Division dahil ‘yung Northern Luzon ay may dalawang division, ‘yung ating isang awardee ngayon si General Boysie Braganza, congratulations!; Awardee rin natin bilang isa sa mga outstanding taga-Nueva Ecija ngayon pinili kong PNP Chief ng Region III si General Oscar Calderon. Congratulations din; kinatawan ng local government, si Undersecretary Al Fernandez; ‘yung napaka-importanteng ahensya dito sa lalawigan ay ‘yung NIA at narito rin ‘yung ating Administrator si Jess Paras. Gusto kong batiin si Jess Paras dahil sa kabila ng ating budget deficit ‘yung NIA pala ayon kay Secretary Montemayor,’yung kanyang collection so far — user fee — so far half year to date ay mas malaki kaysa sa buong taon nung isang taon kaya congratulations sa contribution mo sa ating budget. Ibig sabihin din mabisa ang pagpapatakbo ng nia at nagpapasalamat ako sa mga magsasaka na nagbabayad ng mga user fee.

Mga punong barangay ng Nueva Ecija nandito kayo 100 percent present kagaya ng mga 100 percent present na mga punongbayan; at ‘yung mga Sangguniang Kabataan na nagkaroon ng oath taking kanina, congratulations sa inyong lahat; at ating mga awardees binabati ko rin kayo; distinguished guests, mga anak ng Nueva Ecija, magandang tanghali sa inyong lahat.

Nakakain na kayo ‘no? Ha? Oy, hindi pa. Bibilisan ko ang aking diskurso. Sabi ni Sonia kumain na kayo. Kami hindi pa kaya bibilisan ko pa rin ang aking diskurso.

Anyway, itong araw na ito pangalawang pagkakataon sa loob ng dalawang taon na ako ay dumalo sa kasayahang ito, ang paggunita ng ‘Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija.’ Ito ay patunay lamang, gaya ng sabi ni Tommy, apat na beses na nga ako pumunta dito sa aking 18 months bilang pangulo. Tommy siguro hindi pa bilang ‘yon nung nagpunta kami ni Jun Ebdane doon sa Cabiao. Pang lima na 'yon. Kaya ganun ko kamahal ang Nueva Ecija at ganun ka importante ang pagbigay natin sa okasyong ito.

'Yung 'Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija' pinapa-alaala sa atin na napakaraming magigiting dito sa Nueva Ecija noon pa, noong panahon ng kastila. Nung panahon ng kastila... Kanina nga I was trying to remember ano 'yung 8 first provinces na nag-alma kontra sa mga kastila. Halos hindi na naalaala natin. Siyempre nandiyan 'yung pampanga — Bulacan, nandoon din Josie, 'di ba? — 'yung Maynila, probinsya 'yon dati; tapos 'yung Cavite, siyempre nandoon nga si Aguinaldo; 'yung Batangas; 'yung Laguna; 'yung Rizal, ang pangalan ng probinsya noon ay Morong, oo. Pero mahirap maalaala kung hindi pinagdiriwang. Kaya mabuti pinagdiriwang dito sa Nueva Ecija, hindi natin nakalilimutan ito isa sa walong unang naghimagsikan sa Kastila.

At isang diperensya rin, sabi ni Rene Diaz, 'yung mga nag-alma dito ay 'yung mga Cabeza de Barangay. Sila mismo. At dahil mga Cabeza de Barangay ang umalma ay nahawakan nila ang Nueva Ecija. Kasi doon sa ibang probinsya may mga bahagi ng revolutionary army na sila ang gumawa ng himagsikan pero hindi rin nila nahawakang matagal. Pero dito mass-based ang naghimagsikan kaya nahawakan matagal ng filipino ang Nueva Ecija. Kaya talagang dapat pinagdiriwang natin ang araw ng Nueva Ecija.

At 'yung magigiting na mga heneral, hindi ba ang daming bayan natin pinangalan sa kanila — Gabaldon, Tinio, Llanera, Natividad. Lahat noon 'yon ang mga bahagi dito sa himagsikang ito. Pero hindi lamang nung panahon ng rebolusyon magigiting ang Nueva Ecija pati ngayong panahon ng ating kasalukuyang bahagi ng kasaysayan.

'Yung mga binigyan kanina ng parangal — sila Arnel Santiago, si De Leon, si Talavera – ay, wala kanina pero bibigyan din 'yon — sila De Guzman, Mesina, De Castro, Arthur Cruz – 'yan ay mga bibigyan ng parangal at iyon ay ilan sa mga magigiting na mga taga-Nueva Ecija.

At kanina 'yung mga binigyan ng award marami doon ay tiga-Nueva Ecija. Kabilang din sa maituturing mga makabagong bayani na mga binigyan natin ng parangal ay 'yon na nga sila Tirso Santiago, si Juan Buen, mga kawani ng D.A. at ng Department of Agrarian Reform na nagpakita ng kahusayan sa pagpapatupad ng mga programang nagpabuti sa kalagayan ng mga magsasaka dito sa San Isidro. Kaya hindi lamang 'yung binigay dito sa entablado, maramingbinibigayan natin ng parangal dito sa Nueva Ecija. Kaya lang ewan ko kung bakit 'yung aking advance party ay hindi pinayagan. Kaya magkakaroon ako ng revamp sa aking advance party. Kasi gusto kong pinaparangalan natin sila dito. Sa kanilang lahat, 'yung mga nasa entablado at saka mga hindi nasa entablado, ang aking taos-pusong pasasalamat at pagbati sa magandang paglilingkod sa bansa.

Malapit sa aking puso ang Nueva Ecija. Una sa lahat maraming Macapagal dito. Si Rico Fajardo, Macapagal 'yan. Si Calderon, General Calderon, Macapagal din 'yan. Marami akong pinsan, tiya, tiyo, lola at lolo. At bukod pa doon 'yung tatay ni Tommy, si yumaong Gobernador Danding Joson, ay naging gobernador siya nung 1959 dahil siya ang kandidato ni Vice President Diosdado Macapagal bilang opposition candidate. At siya ay isa sa pinakamalapit na kasama ng aking tatay sa pulitika.

May mga miyembro ng aking official family ay taga-rito. Nandito nga si Rene Diaz. Nandoon si Rico Fajardo, ang aking kinatawan sa San Miguel. Wala rito 'yung napakagaling nating NBI director, si Rey Wycoco, siya ay taga-Cabiao. At, ayon tinuturo 'yung aking Undersecretary ng Press, si Ching Suva na — hindi ba, ching panahon pa ng aking tatay doon ka pumasok? Ngayon, hanggang ngayon namana ko pa rin siya doon sa OPS. At baka nga magdamdam 'yung mga ito pag hindi ako dumadalo at hindi na ako pumupunta rito. Pero ako'y nagpapasalamat na sila ay narito. Importante na tayo ay parating magkasama.

Meron pang ibang mga taga-Nueva Ecija, hindi lamang si Wycoco ang absent, 'yung aking isang matalik na kasama sa pulitika, si City Mayor ng Quezon City Sonny Belmonte, siya ay taga-Zaragoza.

At ang pinuno ng gabay ng pamahalaan ng pribadong sector, ating ka-partner sa kaunlaran, ang pinuno ng Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry, si Sergio Ortiz-Luis, ay taga-Cabiao din. At ang flagship project ng ating agricultural modernization sa buong Pilipinas ay ang hybrid rice na gawa dito sa PhilRice sa Nueva Ecija. Kaya masasabi nating napakalaki ang papel ng Nueva Ecija hindi lamang nung himagsikan nung 1898 kundi na rin ngayon sa pamahalaan ni President Arroyo.

Itong araw ipinagmamalaki natin ang naging papel ng Nueva Ecija sa pagbawi ng ating kalayaan noong rebolusyon ng 1896. Gaya ng sabi ko, isa sa walong lalawigan sa buong bansa na nagpasimula ng rebolusyon noon. Hindi nga natin maalaala 'yung walo pero nakikita natin doon sa ating bandila na may walong rayas doon at isa nga doon na nire-represent walong sikat ng araw sa ating bandila ay ang Nueva Ecija.

At ngayon masasabi natin kagaya nung 1896 pagkatapos ng rebolusyon ay may katahimikan. Ngayon din tapos na ang magulong bahagi ng ating kasaysayan at panahon na para muli tayo magkaisa at harapin ng sama-sama ang tunay na kaaway ng kahirapan na dinaranas ng tatlong milyong Pilipino sa 80 milyon na Pilipino sa ating bansa.

Gumaganda ang takbo ng kapayapaan at katiwasayan. Binabati ko dito sa Region III ang Regional Peace and Order Council sa kapayapaan sa Region III at ang namumuno noon ay walang iba kungdi si Governor Tommy Joson.

At dahil siya ang Chairman ng Regional Peace and Order Council, gusto kong ipaabot na ang ating gustong tukuyin ngayon, ang target natin ngayon ay ang mga sindikato ng droga. 'Yung mga sindikato ng droga, sila rin halos ang sindikato ng ibang mga karumal-dumal na krimen. Ang susi dito ay tanggalin ang mga aktibo at retired na sundalo at pulis na sangkot sa droga. At inaasahan ko na ang Peace and Order Council sa pamumuno ni Tommy ay tutulong sa bagay na ito.

Ngayon na kumikilos ang kapayapaan at katiwasayan, ako naman ay babalik sa ekonomiya. Siyempre kung iimbitahin ako ni Jun Ebdane na magpa-ritrato sa mga nahuling pulis pupunta pa rin ako. Pero ang aking tukoy ngayon ay balik sa ekonomiya dahil ang dami natin nagawa na sa katiwasayan.

Magbabalik tayo sa road map kasi nakikita natin 'yung economic recovery ng mundo na inaasahan natin ay mukhang hindi pa rin darating. Kaya tinitignan ko sino ang matatagumpay nating mga kapitbahay, kapitbansa na matagumpay ang kanilang recovery. Ang nakikita kong magandang huwaran ay iyong ginawa ni Prime Minister Thaksin ng thailand itong nakaraang taong ito, ang tinatawag sa kanyang formula ng mga ekonomista ay consumption-based managed-asset reflation.

Sa simpleng salita, ang ibig sabihin nito aasa tayo, lumilipat tayo mula sa pag-aasa sa export dahil 'yung amerika na number 1 importer ng buong mundo hindi pa rin buo ang kanya recovery. Kaya hindi pa rin tayo makaka-asa sa kanya. Kaya imbes na export orientation patungo tayo sa bagong pagka-galing ng domestic demand, at lalo na 'yung pinaka-efficient sa paggamit ng puhunan 'yung small and medium enterprises. 'Yan ang bibigyan nating pansin dito sa mga susunod na panahon. Dahil sila ang magiging susi ng ating economic recovery.

Actually, ginawa ko na rin ito nung isang taon kasama nung pagbigay nung 1 million pesos per municipality for agriculture, kasama ng pagbigay ng isang buo. Pati na rin ang utang nung nakaraang administrasyon. Lahat noon ay ginawa natin para umangat ang domestic demand, at nagtagumpay tayo. Pero ngayon kailangan pa rin kasi baka bumaba pa rin ang exports natin — Tumataas na so far. Pero kilalanin natin bababa ang exports ng mundo dahil sa kahirapan sa amerika. Pero ginawa natin ito nung isang taon dahil nakita natin bumababa ang exports, nagtagumpay tayo. Ngayon tumataas ang exports huwag tayo maging kampante. At 'yung ginawa natin nung isang taon mas ginawa ng Thailand at pinakitang mabisa ang Thailand hanggang ngayon ay mabisa pa rin. Kasama dito — kasi kung gusto natin tulungan ang small and medium enterprises kailangan mababa ang interest rate. Kaya kailangan ang monetary policy ay prudent. Dapat hindi masyadong... Dapat maingat sa paggamit ng salapi. At dapat ibaba ang budget deficit. Kasi kung malaki ang budget deficit hihiram ang gobyerno sa bangko at tataas ang interest rate. Kailangan hangarin natin mabalanse ang budget sa loob ng tatlo o apat na taon.

Ang mga bangko ay aaluking iwasan magpautang sa mga hindi produktibong sektor. Halimbawa 'yung mga luxurious properties, dapat huwag na doon pumupunta ang pautang. At saka 'yung mga pabrika na malaki pa ang excess capacity, huwag rin dapat doon pumupunta ang pautang. Dapat pumupunta sa small and medium enterprises dahil sila ay napakagaling gumamit ng kapital.

Ito ay tinukoy ni Thaksin higit pa sa Pilipinas, although ginawa rin natin ito at nagtagumpay. Tinukoy ito ni Thaksin, higit pa sa Pilipinas. Sabi nila hindi niya magagawa pero napakita niya sa loob ng isang taon ang laking binaligtad ng Thailand economy. Kaya kung kikilos tayo ngayon at nakatukoy doon ang ating atensyon kaya rin natin yon. Ginagawa rin ito hindi lamang sa Thailand, hindi lamang sa Pilipinas, ginagawa ito sa ibang ekonomiya lalo na pero hindi lamang sa South Korea. Ito ay tinuturing na masusing sagot sa malubhang pagbagsak ng modernong pangkabuhayan ng Amerika. Ang domestic demand ng Asia ay bukabibig ngayon sa lahat. Ang mga Asian ay tumitingin ngayon sa sariling sikap, at yon ang kailangan nating gawin.

Ngunit habang nakatukoy tayo sa ekonomiya kailangan pa rin binabantayan natin ang mga kasalukuyang abala, halimbawa, 'yung sabah refugees. Nahuli ako ngayon dahil nag-meeting muna ako doon sa team na paalis ngayon patungong Sabah. Nung isang araw nagtungo ako sa Tawi-Tawi noong nakaraang huwebes, nakita ko roon ang mapait na karanasan ng libu-libo nating mga kababayang pinabalik ng Malaysia mula sa Sabah. Isa itong malaking trahedya na nangangailangan ng ating pagdamay. Salamat na lamang na merong moratorium pagkatapos nung aking pagtawag sa telepono kay Prime Minister Mahathir. Ganoon pa man ang mga deportees na umabot dito at paabot pa sa huling biyahe ay mahihina ang katawan, walang bahay na mauuwian, walang trabahong naghihintay. Kaya ako'y nananawagan sa lahat na mag-abuloy tayo ng pagkain, gamot, damit, pera para maibsan ang kanilang paghihirap. Ipadala ninyo ito sa national disaster council sa inyong lugar o anumang pribadong organisasyon na handang tumulong sa ating kapwa. Higit pa sa nabagyuhan ang kanilang sinapit kaya kailangan nila ang ating kawanggawa. Ginagawa ng pamahalaan ang lahat upang lutasin ang problemang ito pero hindi namin ito kayang mag-isa. Bago ito lumala at magdulot nang malagim pang sitwasyon, pagtulungan natin itong harapin at wakasan.

Ako'y nasisiyahan na mula nung sinabi ko ito ng sabado marami na ang sumasagot. 'Yung WG&A handang magpadala ng barko. 'Yung Cebu Pacific handang magpadala ng eroplano. 'Yung Mead Johnson handang magpadala ng gatas, at 'yung Metrobank mamayang gabi magbibigay ng 2 million pesos. Nagpapasalamat ako sa lahat sa kanila.

At 'yung isang bata na nag-birthday party by a photo opportunity sa akin sa malaca-ang nagbigay din siya ng lahat nang nagbigay sa kanya ng regalo ng cash binigay niya sa akin para doon sa refugees mula sa Sabah. Nagpapasalamat ako sa kanilang lahat.

Isa pang binabantayan dapat natin ay 'yung pagpalit ng piso at dolyar. Sa ngayon under control ito. Ngunit ngayon pa lang kung minsan kasi pag may budget deficit ang problema na ninerbiyos ang mga negosyante, nagsisimula na ang speculation. Kaya gusto ko lamang ipaalaala 'yung sinabi ko nung isang taon nung malubha 'yung speculation, ang speculation na nag-iistorbo ng malubha sa halaga ng piso ay economic sabotage. Pero salamat sa Panginoon, itong taong ito, so far, wala pang guilty dito.

Isa pang napaka-importante at malaki ang papel ng Nueva Ecija dito ay ang isyu ng bigas. Zero tolerance tayo dapat sa rice crisis. Kaya kanina, bagama't lately hindi na ako nagbabalistic ay lumabas na naman 'yung Gloria temper. Dahil zero tolerance tayo sa rice crisis. Hindi ako naniniwala sa calibrated solutions. Mas mabuti nang mag-overreact bago magkaroon ng crisis.

At malaki ang papel ng Nueva Ecija sa bigas, malaki ang papel ng Nueva Ecija sa ating pambansang kaunlaran. Ang lalawigang ito ay matagal nang tinaguriang rice granary of the Philippines, kaya malinaw na malaki ang naitutulong nito sa ating ekonomiya. At dahil major thrust natin ngayon ang agricultural modernization.

Kakagaling ko lang sa warehouse sa Cabanatuan ng NFA. Bakit ako pumunta doon? Dahil ang NFA warehouse ang pinakamalaking warehouse ng NFA ay nandito sa Cabanatuan. Gusto kong pabilisin ang milling. Gusto kong pabilisin ang pagdala sa mga palengke dahil gusto ko na dapat may regular-milled rice na 16 pesos lamang para sa mga mahihirap.

Hindi bale 'yung mga 25 pesos sa mayayaman. Pero dapat para sa mahihirap regular-milled rice dapat parating may 16 pesos na nakikita natin sa palengke. 'Yan ang specific objective ng aking pagbisita sa National Food Authority.

At ito na nga, nakita ko kanina, sa wakas nakakita ako ng 16 pesos na bigas doon sa palengke ng Cabanatuan. Sa wakas kasi medyo isang buwan na nagpupunta ako sa palengke hindi ko nakikita ‘yung 16 pesos. Merong 16 pesos pero wala sa palengke, ngayon nandoon sa palengke. Si Tony Abad ay araw-aran nina-nag ko kaya ngayon ako ay nagpapasalamat kasi sabi ko, “Tony, saan ba ang pinakamaraming bigas?” “Cabanatuan po.” Eh, kung doon pa ay walang 16 pesos talagang meron tayong problema. Pero meron. Hindi lamang 16 pesos meron pang 15 pesos. Kaya congratulations sa NFA dito sa Cabanatuan.

Tinanong ko kay Tony Abad, “okay, kung ito na ang pinaka maayos ang rice milling at distribution meron 16 at 15 pesos, tignan naman natin ‘yung kalagayan doon sa pinaka konti ang supply. Saan yon?” Sabi ni Tony Abad, “sa Cordillera at saka sa La Union.” Kaya yon ang aking inaasahan sa NFA na kahit na doon 16 pesos din ang regular-milled rice para sa ating mahihirap. Ang bigas sa mayayaman problema na yon ng mayayaman. Ang bigas sa mahihirap, lahat ng problema ng mahihirap dapat problema ng pamahalaan.

At ito ang inaasahan ko rin dito sa Nueva Ecija. Sabi ni Tommy, huwag na raw ako mag-alaala dito sa Nueva Ecija. Nakita ko na may 16 pesos, imo-monitor ngayon ng lahat ng lgu na parating may 16 pesos na regular-milled rice dito sa Nueva Ecija.

Inaasahan ko na lahat ng lgu, lahat ng mayors, lahat ng barangay officials sisiguraduhin ninyo na sa mga palengke ninyo may 16 pesos na bigas sa mahihirap. Kung hindi nandiyan naman ang nfa. At marami pa silang stock sa warehouse. Tinignan ko ‘yung stock sa warehouse, marami pang palay na hindi pa mini-mill kaya dapat walang dahilan na tataas ang presyo ng bigas sa Nueva Ecija.

Kaya muli mga kaibigan, noong ang Nueva Ecija isa sa walong probinsya ba nag-una sa himagsikan, sana ang Nueva Ecija ngayon ay isa sa mga probinsya na mangunguna din na makasigurado na ang mahihirap ay parating may bigas na kinakain, na ang mahihirap ay parating may pagkain sa bawat la mesa.

Maraming salamat at Happy Anniversary sa inyong lahat.

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 4th Tuna Congress and 34th General Santos City Charter Day

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 4th Tuna Congress and 34th General Santos City Charter Day

[Delivered at the Family Country Homes and Convention Center, September 5, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Montemayor.

Mayor Acharon, Former Mayor Antonino, Tuna Congress Chairman Domingo Teng, the balikbayan to General Santos City U.S. Ambassador Frank Ricciardone, members of the presidential party assigned to me including Secretary Roxas, Datumanong, Lorenzo and Dureza, Cotabato Governor Manny Piñol, officers of the AFP and the PNP led by South Commander Ernesto Carolina, members of the Sangguniang Panglunsod led by Vice Mayor Congson, participants and foreign delegates of this 4th Tuna Congress, congratulations to all of you on the occasion of this seemingly very successful Congress once again.

I was here last year for the Tuna Congress and I don't really spend every year going to the same place. And originally, I declined the invitation to this Congress. But it's very difficult to say no when Adelbert Antonino calls me up almost everyday to nag me about it. So, here I am. Stop laughing Adel.

And besides I always think about GenSan, I always think about SOCKSARGEN because when i was in DTI I had a great deal to do with the beginnings of what has become now a very successful growth area. I know this area including Cotabato City. And I know that you lead Mindanao's growth. I understand that the growth rate of Southern Mindanao is 6.1 percent. That is the highest growth rate in Mindanao. And it is higher than the national GNP growth rate of 5.2 percent.

Your impressive growth rate comes from the judicious use of your rich natural resources by the various industries especially the tuna industry whose center is here in General Santos. And I congratulate all of you, everyone from the tuna industry.

I also congratulate Mayor Acharon and the people of General Santos for your enterprising spirit. If you are hosting this Charter Day Celebration and this Tuna Congress, you still have the energy and enthusiasm to host this year's convention of the Councilors League of the Philippines — two major conventions taking place in General Santos at the same time.

I had declined the invitation to address the Councilors League because I was supposed to go back to Manila immediately after this meeting. But I decided to spend the night here, so though I hope... So though the Councilors League meeting is finished, I hope to be able to see some of the remaining councilors tonight after all through the invitation of Mayor Acharon.

Indeed, the energy and vibrance of General Santos is especially seen in the tuna industry. This is why I named your President, Domingo Teng, to represent Mindanao in the export development council. With his membership — he says Mar Roxas makes him work very hard — because he is supposed to help not only the tuna industry but the country's entire export sector.

I would like to congratulate General Santos also for your string of awards as the most competitive city. Two times already. One by A.I.M. and the other one... Of both by A.I.M., two years.

Indeed, competitiveness is a key to the strong Philippine republic that I want to build. It is also the key to success in the globalized world of the 21st century.

Thus, I commend the SOCKSARGEN Federation of Shipping Associations and Allied Industries for choosing as your theme for the Congress: "fish without barriers." Last year, it was "fish without borders." Now, it is "fish without barriers."

And to be able to achieve 'fish without barriers' I thank our American friends, represented here today again by Ambassador Ricciardone, who was here just last week. Incidentally, I want to brag that he came to GenSan Last week because he was invited to dole. But I told him, you cannot go to dole without going to GenSan. And you can't go to GenSan without speaking about tuna. So, he spoke to you about tuna last week.

But through him, I want to thank once again American officialdom for working with Congress to ease the barriers to ensure that our canned tuna is not threatened by canned tuna from other countries in the United States market.

You asked me and your government to work against the Andean countries having preferential access to the U.S. market for their canned tuna. In turn, I delivered the message not only to president bush but also to his Cabinet members and our friends in the U.S. Congress. There is now a so-called Philippine caucus in the U.S. Congress that seek to help the Philippines. Senator Inouye is one of the more famous names among them. Senator Hillary Clinton is also another of those names. They complied. These senators and congressmen complied with our request to protect the Philippines during the debates on the Andean trade preferences. But even then, the canned tuna industry must be prepared to compete with the pouched tuna from the Andean countries, while your government, while I and my Cabinet members and diplomats are working further for a level playing field. Mar Roxas proposes that the work for GSP privileges for processed tuna, and that is what he is going to do, because processed tuna includes canned tuna and pouched tuna. In the meantime, your industry must also be innovative and expand the range of your packaging sizes and explore value-added from positions.

Also, why stop at the United States. Look for other markets. I heard you earlier, Domingo talking about the European Union market. And I was speaking with some of our friends from the European Union. And they said, we don't produce tuna. I wonder why we are not helping your canned tuna. And so, they have begun also to look at how they can help the Philippines access the E.U. more.

But, why work always only on market access. Why not look at that great big market next door, the 1.3 billion people of china, 400 million of whom have the purchasing power, and growing. They should come to know what a wonderful product Philippine tuna is from General Santos City.

I thank your resolution that commends my administration for our role in supporting your lobby for a level playing field for canned tuna exports. I assure you that we will always stand by your collective interest and the general welfare of our people.

If I may make a suggestion, perhaps you could also have a resolution thanking the senators and the congressmen in the U.S. Congress who comprise the new Philippine caucus. So that they can continue to be encouraged to work for the welfare of their friends in the Philippines.

While we are proud of our tuna industry, we have to be concerned that our tuna exports have been declining over the last five years while exports of two other countries in ASEAN have increased. We must look more closely into consumer preferences and realign our marketing strategies, advertising included, to suit market changes.

Thailand is succeeding in selling branded tuna while we have concentrated on supplying in-house brands. Thailand has done an industry study which we should also do. Our embassy in Washington is seeking the assistance of the U.S. Trade and Development Agency for the conduct of a study that will improve Philippine tuna's competitiveness in the world market. I'm inviting you, our industry's big fish, our major players to conduct a parallel effort.

Speaking of Thailand, one of the secrets of its present success is its program that it calls one million Baht per village or one village-one product program. This program of Prime Minister Thaksin doubled the growth rate of Thailand in one year. My Cabinet and I — and we discussed it in a Cabinet meeting yesterday — would like to focus on this in the Philippines for this year. We will have a one million-peso per town, one town-one product program.

Actually, we did this last year with agricultural modernization, where we financed each municipality with one million pesos of agricultural modernization projects from the Department of Agriculture. This year, the one million will be in loans for small and medium enterprises per town, and one product per town. General Santos is a tuna town — i told Mayor Acharon in the car earlier — therefore I am turning over a check to Mayor Acharon for one million pesos to be lent out to the small and medium tuna fishermen.

Last week, I was in Mindanao for the Mindanao Business Conference. There, I also announced that the rate of cargo handlers are now standardized at 10 pesos for domestic ports. And I have frozen the fee increases in port usage and wharfage. And I asked Mayor Acharon sometime back to fast-track the transshipment classification of the General Santos Makar wharf. All these should help decrease total export costs.

We should also ensure the viability of supply. The BFAR has launched the tuna production enhancement project to install fish aggregating devices or Payao in strategic parts of our portion of the Celebes Sea. BFAR has also conducted surveys that have pinpointed rich tuna fishing grounds, particularly our portion of the Pacific Ocean fronting Surigao and Samar. Several fishing companies are benefitting from this study.

Last January, as you have said, we finalized a fisheries agreement between the Philippines and Indonesia. When you said 'fish without borders' that was what you were asking me to do — have no more borders with Indonesia through a fisheries agreement — and i have complied. This will hopefully generate more jobs and safeguard the livelihood of many fishermen and processing plant workers. We are exploring other possible bilateral agreements, as you have asked, with our neighboring countries. I suggest that your industry conduct a mission to look at whether it will be worth going into a similar agreement with the new nation of East Timor.

I am aware of the other concerns that you have raised, mentioned in the resolutions that Domingo Teng discussed in his speech on the issue of patenting the smoke filtered process. I'm asking the intellectual property office, is that still under you, Mar? LPR? To look into the claims of the contending parties.

I am also directing the BFAR to coordinate with the DOTC, particularly the MARINA, for the review and rationalization of the licensing requirements for tuna handliners in the light of existing laws and regulations. I expect a report on this, Leony, within 30 days.

On the transfer to GenSan City of the BFAR regional office and the fisheries quality control laboratory, I agree. I am directing the D.A. to transfer the regulatory, licensing and quarantine functions, and the laboratory of BFAR to General Santos City.

On MARINA. MARINA is resisting your request to move to Gensan from Koronadal for what they say are financial and budgetary reasons. But I was telling mayor Acharon, and I am telling you now, I agree though that it is more logical for MARINA to be located in a major port like GenSan than to be in a landlocked city like Koronadal. Therefore, I propose that the GenSan government, the local shipping industry and the industrial users in GenSan provide for some counterpart of the cost of transferring if you really feel that it will really increase the convenience and competitiveness on the part of your shipping industry and the users of that shipping industry.

I commend everyone for the effort to sustain and enhance the competitiveness of Philippine Tuna. You have been a big boost to the nation's economy and well-being of the people in Mindanao. You are invaluable to the strong republic we are all striving to build. You are important for our security in Mindanao.

Speaking of security, let me bring your attention to the sad plight of the Filipino repatriates from Sabah now in Sulu, Tawi-Tawi, Basilan and Zamboanga Peninsula. We need to find jobs for them. We need to comfort them in their despair. We need to help provide them with food, medicines and temporary shelter.

I am taking this opportunity to seek the help of all the participants in your Congress. I appeal for food, clothing, medicine and shelter for the thousands deported from Sabah and cramped in temporary quarters in Bongao and Zamboanga City. Please help them.

I also need you help in bringing about a successful end-game in the military campaign against the Abu Sayyaf. If you remember, I flew to General Santos immediately after the bombing of Fitmart. After seeing the situation and sensing the feelings of the people here, I send the marines to General Santos City to help stabilize the situation and order the immediate reassignment of certain key people to the area. Even when there were already orders to transfer the marines — was that last month, Nesty? — last month, upon the request of the local government and the communities, though the plane was already here to fetch the marines, I cancelled the transfer immediately. See how the people of GenSan can dictate to the Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. I did this due to my personal concern for the people of SOCSKSARGEN especially General Santos.

But now because of the need to end the Abu Sayyaf scourge in Sulu, we need the marines there. But rest assured that the new hierarchy of the PNP and army leadership in this area can live up to the expectations of the people. Even without the marines, I assure you there will be no vacuum in the peacekeeping efforts.

I am tasking South Commander Nesty Carolina to ensure that the discipline and the courtesy that is expected by the people which was shown by the marines — that's why you loved them so much — will rule the actions of all the peacekeeping forces here in General Santos and even elsewhere. I'm also tasking the general to assure that foot patrols to have a visibility of the government peacekeeping force in all sensitive areas that they will continue and even be reinforced.

I will continue to monitor the events and situation here personally through former Mayor Antonino to countercheck the information I am given to the formal government hierarchy. Again, I am doing this not only because I know the importance and contributions of SOCSKSARGEN to the economy of the Philippines but because of my true and genuine concern for the people of General Santos.

After all, among the most memorable events of my career before I became president, was what I mentioned earlier, my participation as undersecretary of DTI and putting together the Mindanao development plan which eventually became the SOCSKSARGEN master plan. That's why I share in the pride of your successes and I share in the fears of your apprehensions. I am one with you in difficulty and in triumph. And I greatly admire the vibrancy of your community.

I commend the strength of your collective determination to compete globally and also to take care of your peace and order problems. Our cooperation has born many, many fruits. Remember the last time i came to GenSan, I was happy to announce that after a successful encounter, commander tropical, the head of the Abu Sofia, the kidnapping syndicate was killed by those whom the people of General Santos chose to be their law enforcers. Today, I am here in General Santos again, and I am proud to announce that the number one drug pusher here in the region, commander bravo was also killed late last night by the law enforcers who have been working with the people of General Santos.

And so I say, with regard to development and with regard to peace, sa kauswagan ug sa kalinaw, carry on! My government will always be behind you.

Thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Megayon (Unity) Festival

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Megayon (Unity) Festival

[Delivered at the Baganian Cultural and Trade Center, September 5, 2002]

Daghan salamat, P.A. Jess Dureza sa imo pagpa-ila kanako.

Atong mga igsuonan diri sa Zamboanga Del Sur ubos sa gobernador sa Zamboanga Del Sur Aurora Cerilles; ang atong Mayor diri sa Lakewood, Mayor Domingo Mirrar ug tanang mga opisyaes sa Lakewood ug tanang mga opisyaes sa probinsiya ug sa mga laing-laing lunsod sa probinsiya sa Zamboanga Del Sur; atong Congresswoman diri sa distrito, Congresswoman Nenette San Juan; and may I greet a very, very special guest who came all the way this far away to see how we can spread friendship and cooperation with the United States of America, American Ambassador Frank Ricciardone; ang Atong Silingan, ang gobernador sa Sibugay, Governor George Hofer; mga laing opisyaes gikan sa sibugay ug mga Laing-Laing People's Organization gikan sa sibugay sama ni Prinsipe Datu Tukan e Dakula VI, ang Datu Dakula of Sibugay. Asa siya karon? Salamat sa imong regalo kanako; ang aton nga usa sa mga anak sab sa Mindanao na uban sa akong Cabinet, ang atong Presidential Adviser for Jobs Creation Cito Lorenzo; Vice Governor Ariosa; mga board members; tanang mayors; Vice Mayor Magaso; tanang members sa Lakewood Municipal Council; Deputy Presidential Assistant Boyet Dela Cruz; Ato Vera Cruz; aton mga Laing-Laing opisyaes; usa pa nga Silingan, mayor sa Pagadian City, Mayor Pulmones; aton mga kaigsuonan sa tibuok Zamboanga Del Sur tungod kay ang atong selebrasyon karon, selebrasyon sa tibuok probinsya, malipayong anniversary, golden jubilee kaninyong tanan. At salamat sa inyong theme nga 'Megayon', nga ang iyahang meaning mao ang unification sa aton mga Laing-Laing tribu diri, mga kristiyano, mga Lumad ug mga Muslim.

Nahibalo ko nga diri sa Lakewood 70 percent sa katawhan mga Subanen. So akon nga espesyal nga pag-abi-abi sa mga subanen diri sa Lakewood ug sa Zamboanga Del Sur.

Maayo gyud nga ang inyong theme 'Megayon' gyud tungod kay usa sa akon mga prinsipyo alang sa Mindanao mao nga kinahanglan maka-ilat tatanan nga ang Pilipinas usa ka multi-ethnic society asa kon ikaw tagalog o Cebuano, ikaw Pilipino. Kon ikaw Muslim, Christian, Lumad, ikaw Pilipino. Kon ikaw Chinese, kon ikaw mestiso, ikaw Pilipino. Ug kinahanglan kay daghang kaayo ang atong laing-laing kultura kinahanglan dunay social justice alang sa tanan. Kinahanglan dunay institutionalize accommodation sa tanang ethnic traditions ug USA sa mga maayo diri sa Zamboanga del sur nga diri nakita nato nga dunay gyud institutionalize accommodation sa tanang ethnic traditions labi na ang kristiyano, Muslim ug Lumad.

Diri sab sa Zamboanga Del Sur usa sa inyong mga maayo nga nahimo sa kining akong administrasyon ang inyong tabang dili ra sa akong prinsipyo sa Mindanao kundili sab sa akong agricultural modernization. Tingali dili naton nakita diri sa Lakewood kay bukid man kining Lakewood apan sa mga plains didto sa lowland sa Zamboanga Del Sur kauban na diri ang atong Laing-Laing pioneers sa bag-o nga teknolohiya sa atong agricultural modernization walay lain kundili ang hybrid rice nga maka-doble o tingali triple pa sa atong mga harvest ug income sa aton mga mang-uuma.

Ug diri naman sa Lakewood, sa nahibalo ko tungod kay kini bukid tingali wala pang irrigation, ang inyo mga produkto diri mao ang exotic fruits, murag ang durian ug ang lanzones. Nahibalo ko sab nga abug tingali usa ka adlaw sa kaumag-on ka umaabot sab ang panahuna nga mahimo sab usa nga tourist spot kining manindot kaayo nga lunsod nga Lakewood.

Nahibalo ko sab nga dunay investor kuno na gusto nila masugdan ug palm oil plantation diri sa Lakewood. Apan ingon nila ay ayaw pa, ayaw pa magpakpak. Apan ingon nila na aron makasugdan sila sa palm oil plantation kinahanglan magcutting una sa aton mga CADC. Dili maayo. Ayaw matuo kay nahidapo na ni didto sa lanao ug unsa nahimo sa lanao gi-cut ang mga forest unya gamay na planting sa palm oil. Unya dili man nakumpleto ang delivery kay ingon nila gamay kaayo ang yuta. Layo kaayo ang kalsada dili kuno viable. So nabilin na ang investment ug ang katawhan didto sa katong lunsod walay trabaho hangtod karon.

Dili nahitabo sa akong administrasyon. Apan ang akong administrasyon ang nakakita, naka-investigate sa kining kaso busa dili ko gusto na mahitabo katong sad, kaluoy na experience nga nahimo didto diri sab sa Lakewood. Busa ang importante padayon nato ang atong laing na mga maayo na nakita naton na nga-a, naa ang competitive advantage diri. Kining inyohang mga prutas nga maayo ug kining gamay-gamay nga umaabot nga mga turista alang sa eco-tourism. Apan sa tibuok Zamboanga Del Sur ang ug importante sab kon naa CADC ang importante na padayon nato ang atong reforestation diri sa Lakewood.

Kining... Karong adlaw naa ako laing-laing regalo alang sa inyong 50th Anniversary. Una sa tanan, nakita na nato gikan sa d.a. na nahuman na kining atong farm-to-market road. Ug kining farm-to-market road gigastos ug one million pesos diri sa Lakewood. Ubos ni sa akong project niadtong niaging tuig nga makataas ug domestic demand agi sa agricultural modernization project. Busa diri sa lakewood ang gipili ni Mayor Mao gyud ang farm-to-market road ug nahuman naman na.

Naa pa sab laing-laing tabang alang sa inyong mga mang-uuma diri. Walay lugar diri kay taas ta ug layo sa poblacion apan gusto ko sab maanunsyo kaninyong tanan na naa kita mult multi-flyer farms na naa 20 pullets, 22 cockers ug 1,000 egg capacity incubator para sa inyo mga poultry raisers. Ug naa pa 1,500 nga assorted planting materials.

Mao ang atong tabang alang sa lunsod ug lakewood. Apan tungod karon adlaw na mao ang atong fiesta dili lang diri sa lakewood kung dili sa tibuok Zamboanga Del Sur. Gusto ko ipaabot kaninyo ang usa ka bag-o nga focus sa atong administrasyon mao ang tabang sa atong mga small and medium enterprises. Sa niaging tuig gihatag ko ug one million pesos tanang lunsod alang sa agricultural modernization sama sa farm-to-market road diri. Karong tuig ang atong bag-o nga focus credit facilities alang sa small and medium enterprises. Ang akong gusto nga dunay project na one-town one-product. Murag diri sa lakewood one-town tingali ang atong product ang atong exotic fruits. Ug sa tibuok Zamboanga Del Sur importante nga tanan mga lunsod pilion ta unsa ang maayo nga produkto. Busa gihangyo ko nga muanhi diri sa aton selebrasyon ang akong kauban kaniadto ug higala pa hangtod karon ang provincial director sa Department of Trade and Industry, si Alex Fernandez. Asa si Alex? Ok, Alex.

Agi kan Alex Fernandez ang provincial director muhatag... Tagaan ko ang Zamboanga Del Sur ang initial nga ten million pesos alang sa kining atong small and medium enterprise project — one-town one-product. Pila ka lunsod diri sa Zamboanga? Twenty-six, so tingali kining ten million muadto sa first ten nga makasulod sa ilang project proposal. One Million pesos for every town. So, sa mahuman na kining ten million mubalik si Alex kanako aron maka-loan kita gihapon sa ika-duha ka ten million.

So, hibalo na naton diri Alex, diri sa Lakewood ang one-town one-project mao gyud ang exotic fruits. Busa ang imo kinahanglan na mahimo nga ma-organize sila kauban ang D.A. aron maka-plant ug makabaligya sa ilang produkto ug kining one million pesos mao ang ilang capital para kining project. Loan kay dili dole-out, kinahanglan mubalik sa akong pondo. Kay kining akong gihatag karon ang akong advance apan ang mga papeles muagi sa Landbank of the Philippines. Aron makubra sila sa bayad kay kinahanglan enterprise ni.

Karon sa mga laing siyam nga masunod nga lunsod asa unsa nga lunsod. Ingon gyud ni Secretary Cito Lorenzo usa sa mga maayo ug manindot nga nahitabo diri sa Zamboanga Del Sur, Zamboanga Del Sur karon mai-merge isip ang leading propagator sa bag-o nga hybrid rice. Busa Alex, ang akong gusto nga mahimo nga mangita ka sa mga lunsod asa maka-propagate kita sa seed propagation sa hybrid rice. Unya taga-an mo ang ilang organization ug kunsu ba o enterprise nga capital nga one million pesos. One million pesos sa kada lunsod nga makasugod o makadayon sa iyang propagation sa hybrid rice.

Karon sa mahuman moadto si kita gihapon sa laing-laing lunsod diri sa Zamboanga Del Sur ug ang akong tuyo nga bag-o mahuman kining tuig o tingali bag-o mahuman ang 12 months nga masunod tanan mga lunsod sa Zamboanga Del Sur maka-kumpleto sa ilang one-town one-product small and medium enterprises. Dili micro Alex, ha. Small and medium enterprises. Aniya karon ang atong silingan na gobernador sa sibugay sa masunod, matagaan ta sab sa sibugay kining parehas nga proyekto.

Ngano nga ingon ni Jess Dureza ug ni Nenette San Juan na ako tinuod nga Mindanaoan. Kay ako nidako sa silingan nga probinsya didto sa Iligan sa Lanao Del Norte. Ug sa balay ug yuta ug akong lola naa mi sab nga mga tourist areas kay ang among barangay, ang among sitio mao ang timoga didto Sa Iligan City. Tingali daghan nga mga taga-Zamboanga Del Sur naka-adto na sa among balay ug sa among creek ug sa mga swimming pool sa among mga silingan. Mao nakita nato na duol gyud ang akong kabatan-onan diri sa Mindanao. Dili ra na ako anak sa Mindanao kay ako nidako sa balay ug akong lola sa Lanao del Norte ako usa ka next door neighbor sa Zamboanga Del Sur. Kay ang Lanao del Norte next door sa Zamboanga del Sur.

Kaniadtong week gyud gi-groundbreaking na ang Aurora-Iligan road. Imbitado ako apan dili ko gusto maadto sa mga groundbreaking, basi dili madayon eh. Apan huwaton nato nga masugdan ang construction ug matapos ma-o nga mahimo Pa mas duol ang atong duha ka probinsya.

Apan bisan karon gikalipay ko nga nianhi ako sa katapusan kay dugay na nadunggan ko kung unsa kining Lakewood na gwapo kaayo kuno apan wala sa mapa kay layo kaayo ug kaniadto walay kalsada. Apan tingali karon nakauban nato ang atong mga media pa gikan sa iligan ug kauban nato ang Atong mga national, mga cameramen tingali makita ug bisan mga taga-Manila kana-a diay gwapo nga ang lugar diri sa bukid sa Zamboanga del Sur.

Busa mga kaigsuonan gikalipay ko gihapon nga niabot ako karon gihapon kay last week niadto ako sa kumalarang sa ilahang fiesta. So karon gihapon anhi ako karon apan ang importante dili na tingali ang pagbisita pa ug presidente, tingali modayon kining aton mga small and medium enterprises alang sa kauswagan sa Lakewood ug sa tibuok Zamboanga del Sur alang sa masunod nga 50 years sa kinabuhi kining atong manindot ug maayo nga probinsya.

Daghan salamat ug congratulations kaninyong tanan.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the launching of Ford 2002 ‘ESCAPE’ and third year anniversary of Ford Motor Co. Philippines

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the launching of Ford 2002 ‘ESCAPE’ and third year anniversary of Ford Motor Co. Philippines

[Delivered in Sta. Rosa, Laguna, September 9, 2002]

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much Undersecretary Greg Domingo who is the managing head of the Board of Investments.

Governor of Laguna Ning-Ning Lazaro and Congresswoman of this district of Laguna Uliran Joaquin; and Mayor Arcilles of Sta. Rosa and the other citizens of Laguna and Sta. Rosa lalung-lalo na ang ating magiging na nagtatrabaho dito sa Ford. Ford Motors Philippines President Henry Co and Ford ASEAN Joseph John Parker; and other officials of Ford; Ambassador Ricciardone of the United States; other officials of the U.S. government; and I would also like to acknowledge the presence of the Commissioner of Customs, Tony Bernardo; our other officers taking care of our peace and order, Roy Kyamko the Commander of the Southern Luzon Command; and the Regional Director of Region 4, General Apacible; I'd like to also greet the various suppliers and the various dealers and all of you; ladies and gentlemen:

I think we should all be very happy this is a great day for Philippine manufacturing.

I just came from Nestle also here in Laguna and there we had a ceremonial switch-on of their expansion, two-billion peso expansion. Nestle and Ford within plant are very similar, the products are not similar but they both employ about 500 people in house but give jobs to 10 times as many outside of the factory. And when they launch new products there in nestle and today we launch a new product here. The Ford 2002 “Escape”

Ford 2002 Escape is another milestone for Ford Phils. As Mr. Co said, within a six-month period. Because six months ago it launched Ford Lynx which is now being exported to other countries in the Asian region. And soon Ford Escape will be sold to Thailand and Indonesia. And of course the Philippines. This is the fulfillment I'm very happy to say, of one of the outputs of my trip to the United States last year. Because this expansion, this launching is a fruit of a memorandum of agreement that was signed during my trip to the United States.

I remember Ford has been in the country for many years now. Or at least I'd rather say it was in the country a long time ago. I remember as a young married woman owning a Ford Fiera, aside from other Ford models. But Ford left for a while during martial law, and thankfully resumed operations in the Philippines in 1997. Since then, Ford has grabbed a considerable portion of the automobile market in the country. We should congratulate Ford for boosting the country's image in the automotive exports industry. And I also commend Ford for its support to our economy, particularly its contributions to foreign exchange earnings and job creation. Ford's projected foreign exchange earnings for this year I believe are estimated at 26 million dollars. And the expansion to escape is worth just about that much in investment as well. And in a time of great unemployment, the automotive industry is especially valuable because of its many job-creating linkages.

Since Ford came back to the Philippines, its investments have totaled as we have seen in the show 200 million dollars, 80 million of which went to the construction of this manufacturing facility.

I was looking at its investment in the other countries, I saw 300 million dollars in China and 300 million dollars in India. So we have 200 million dollars. So I was telling Mr. Parker I'm looking forward to your next 100 million dollars in the Philippines.

I thank Ford and our other exporters for our good export performance this year, which exceeded expectations. The July figures show a 23 percent increase in dollar value in total Philippine exports, while in the first semester of 2002, exports contributed 39 percent to our Gross National Product. I hope that Ford and the other exporters will translate their success into hiring more workers to increase our employment rate. Even as we hail the achievements of our export sector, it is important that we fuel domestic demand. In this factory 80 percent of the cars are for export 20 percent for the domestic market Ford Motors, for instance, is not just export-oriented. It also operates in the Philippines because of a good domestic market. But that is not necessarily by choice. It is because the 20 percent is what the domestic market can absorb. But therefore what we should try to do as an economy is to try to increase the capacity of the domestic market so that more of the cars can be produced and sold for the domestic market. Ford Motors is not just export-oriented. It operates in the Philippines because we have a large population with a decent rate of growth and that should make a good domestic market for cars and other consumer products. This domestic market we must strive to increase come what may in the export market.

To expand our own domestic market the model we are following is what economists call — domestic consumption-based “managed asset reflation.” This economic model is focused on domestic consumption and complements multinational exports as a source of growth.

I am focusing on a roadmap based on this model. It is a key response to the continuing uncertainties in the U.S. economy, which is the Philippines' biggest market.

We want to ensure that Ford and other manufacturers have a good domestic market to sell their products to, thus we want to develop new sources of domestic demand, notably capital-efficient small and medium enterprises.

Managed asset reflation, amounts to prudent monetary policy, a gradual reduction in public-sector debt, and a balanced budget in four years.

By developing small and medium entrepreneurs who will be able to afford to buy either their first car or an additional car, we hope to develop a good domestic market for automobiles. At the same time, by developing the motor vehicle industry, we hope to have a better export performance in motor vehicle parts and components, and I hope that Ford will continue to be our largest buyer of local auto parts components. This will not only help augment the country's dollar earnings, it will also help in turn, help small and medium enterprises producing these parts.

It is with the support of industry players like Ford that we will meet our export targets and also develop our small and medium enterprises.

I intend to use fiscal policy to encourage Ford Motors and the rest of the manufacturing sector. To bring in that extra, new hundred million dollars additional investment from Ford in the next two or three years the board of Investment is working together with the department of finance to have tailored-made incentives for the automobile industry.

I remember when I was still also in the board of investments about ten years ago, we also had a vehicle manufacturing industry. But at that time the value added, the local value added for vehicles was only about 10 to 15 percent. Here in Ford Motors the value added is 40 percent the local value Added, so I congratulate Ford for that. Their valued added comes not just from the labor contributed by our very skilled human resources here in-house in Ford but also by the various suppliers of parts and components which range in capitalization from hundreds of millions themselves. Like I see Toti Torres here, who does the wiring harness and Eddie Jose who does logistics. But on the way from a hundred million pesos in investments or even more or even a hundred million dollars for some of them to maybe even just two million pesos in capitalization.

So their suppliers range from large scale to small scale. And because in our thrust now to build the domestic market we want to push small and medium scale industries. We have a concentration on a program that we call one town, one product, one million pesos in loans for small enterprise. So, because Ford has some suppliers that are small and medium scale Gregory Domingo and the DTI representative by provincial director Marilou Orejola will work with Ford to look for a deserving supplier who should be able to expand its business and we will give a loan of one million pesos to that chosen supplier.

I am very happy to have the chance to be here therefore. And to say that our government policies are geared towards supporting the manufacturing sector. When I first became president manufacturing was down. Last year, our economy grew even manufacturing did not. Because our services grew and our agriculture grew. Our manufacturing sector did not grow because export did not grow. This year the source of growth has switch back to export and to manufacturing. And we should sustain this momentum that manufacturing has achieved once again.

It is for this reason that I made a special trip to CALABARZON today, to Nestle's and to Ford to celebrate their respective expansions and to let the whole world know that the Philippines is a good place to manufacture products in. To Ford congratulations. And to the Philippines and to our Filipino workers thank you for making the Philippines a good place for investment.

PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the AFP Turnover of Command

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the AFP Turnover of Command

[Delivered at the General Headquarters Grandstand, Camp Aguinaldo, September 10, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Angelo Reyes for your introduction. And thank you that when many were criticizing my choice of Benjie Defensor to be Chief of Staff, you told me I was doing the right thing.

General Roy Cimatu and the other former Chiefs of Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines; General Defensor and the other generals especially the Major Service Commanders and the members of the Board of Generals; distinguished members of the diplomatic corps; Senator Loren Legarda-Leviste; the members of the House of Representatives who are here today; members of the Cabinet and other Presidential Appointees; men and women of the Armed Forces of the Philippines; distinguished guests; the two governors of the two provinces of General Defensor; Ladies and Gentlemen:

If I could have done it without doing injustice to Benjie Defensor, I would have extended Roy Cimatu some more, but it is time for Benjie to have the crowning glory of his career. Why would I have wanted to extend Roy Cimatu had it not been at the same time an injustice to Benjie? Because Roy in the four months as Chief-of-Staff showed once again the mettle that I saw and many saw in the fourth division commander under the leadership of then Chief-of-Staff Angelo Reyes that Fourth Infantry Division Commander who translated a General and vague order of all-out war into a meticulously planned and magnificently executed campaign that brought back conventional warfare in fashion.

We all remember Roy Cimatu for overrunning 46 enemy camps in a relentless six month campaign. So that when I became president, I wanted to make Roy Cimatu Army Chief, but since I was still getting my feet wet at that time, Two months after Edsa 2, I listened to the advice that Roy was too junior even if he was so accomplished. And so I made sure that he would get his three stars so that he could become a Chief-of-Staff the next time around that the position was made available. As South Commander, Roy continued to impress both Philippine foot soldiers and American top brass with his once again excellent and aggressive campaign plans against the Abu Sayyaf. I remember the Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific telling me that in my South Commander— Roy Cimatu— I have one of the best generals in the whole world.

And so when I appointed Roy Cimatu as Chief-of-Staff, I considered it as a continuation of his work in our most critical military mission: bring peace to Mindanao, enforce the peace in Mindanao. And as he had done the 46 camps in the battles against the MILF he worked as Chief-of-Staff to defeat Abu Sabaya and recover most of the hostages. That is almost equal if not equal to the 46th campaigns that saw the overrunning of 46 camps in Mindanao.

Even when I appointed Roy Cimatu as Chief-of-Staff and I gave him the mission to finish Abu Sabaya, even then I knew I could not extend him for too long, because there are other senior and deserving aspirants waiting in the wings. But I took comfort in the recollection that except for Pope John Paul who died immediately after his election as Pope, Pope John the 23rd was the shortest reigning pope in history. No more than five years in a post that is held for life. And yet this shortest reigning pope in history accomplished the greatest changes in the history of the Catholic church in history since the Council of Trent. Pope John the 23rd gave us Vatican 2 and ushered the spirit of ecumenism and modernization of the Catholic Church.

Like Pope John the 23rd, I knew that Roy Cimatu could accomplished very much in a very short period of time, and he did it.

Last night I watched Roy Cimatu on television. The theme question of the show in on-line was: did Roy Cimatu accomplished his mission? The texters agreed with me two-to-one: mission accomplished. Congratulations General Cimatu. Mission accomplished by the man I call the thinking general, by the man they call the Pacman and by the man that they also call as I found out last night aside from being the thinking general, also the smiling general. In other words, the complete officer and gentleman, that is General Roy Cimatu.

Now as he retires, he can add to his spectacular capture of the 46th camps the equally defeat and watery demise of Abu Sabaya. Add to this as a bonus the perfect teamwork with the police that resulted in the killing of Faisal Marohomsar in a perfectly planned and executed kidnap rescue. And as his swan song, the launching of Oplan end game, to finally finish off the Abu Sayyaf and begin to let prosperity replace terrorism in the Sulu archipelago, especially as I have... Several times heard Roy say especially in the troubled town of Patikul where Roy started his outstanding military career and now in whose battle of liberation we have as the last testament that Roy is bequeathing to his successor. These exploits of Roy Cimatu — bold in the application of science, innovative in the application of conventional warfare which he has again made fashionable, all these must become part of the doctrine of Philippine military warfare.

Long after Roy Cimatu has retired because of what he has contributed to the science of warfare his name will be there in the textbooks of our young soldiers studying to become great heroes and soldiers like him.

When Diomedio Villanueva was Chief- of- Staff, I gave the guidance to modernize our military doctrine. I said, we have enough great battles like the battles led by Roy Cimatu to inspire and serve as models and lessons for our soldiers. I gave this instruction during the stint of General Villanueva, I gave it during the stint of General Roy Cimatu, I am giving it again as General Benjie Defensor begins his stint. During the last air force day celebration, Benjie Defensor reported what he has been doing to follow my guidance about doctrine. And I have heard too some junior officers telling me that they are now learning Filipino doctrine in their training camps. I am happy that through the three Chiefs- of -Staff, since the time I gave my guidance about modernizing doctrine, this has been internalized.

This conscientious continuity of adherence to the Commander-in-Chief's guidance on modernizing doctrine and other guidance, on other issues through three Chiefs- of- Staff, through four if you include the guidance I was giving General Angie Reyes when he was Chief-of-Staff. All this continuity of following guidance and following it with internalize conviction belie the critics' charge that short term in the office of the chief of staff are anathema to stability in the leadership of the Armed Forces.

These critics who criticize short terms are wrong. They are wrong. They do not appreciate the principle of professional continuity in the military command. The command as an institution and not the command as persons. This critics are wrong because they presume that leadership in the Armed Forces is politicized. Leadership in the Armed Forces is not politicized, it is professional. This critics are wrong because they underestimate the loyalty and professionalism of the men in uniform.

It is no great consequence how long a chief-of-staff serves his tenure. What is important and indispensable is the permanence of values, standards and norms in the Armed Forces.

But while values are permanent, doctrine must modernize and change with the times. While my guidance of modernizing doctrine has been internalized by the leadership of the Armed Forces through three commanders from when I first gave it, I believe it is time to institutionalize this throughout the organization. Thus I am lodging the task of reviewing and modernizing doctrine to the deputy Chief-of-Staff of the Armed Forces.

This modernization of doctrine should take into account what is called the post-military affairs revolution thinking regarding the changing military mission brought about by the growth in the power of the criminal, terrorist and other armed non-state organizations that now challenge traditional nation states in many parts of the globe.

The 20th-century U.S. model of civil-military relations and task allocation, in which the military looks outward and law enforcement agencies do the domestic chores, is breaking down everywhere.

The last “revolution in military affairs” occurred in the 1980s, consisting of high-tech warfare as in the desert storm. But this revolution started twenty-years ago and more is over now. A new paradigm is prevailing.

To quote a military scientist Ralph Peters: our national security problems have more to do with innovative behavior than with military-technological competition. The advent of criminal and warlord parastates is a far more urgent challenge than funding the B-2 Bomber Boys Club. We are witnessing multiple simultaneous revolutions and devolutions in worldwide social and governmental structures, and millennia-old patterns of human organization are collapsing.

We face a world in much of which the 19th -century manner of organizing and applying the power of the state has become the least relevant of all thinkable manners. Far from the conventionally armed and recognizably structured forces our analysts imagine as future opponents, we confront, today, creatively organized enemies employing behaviors and technologies ranging from the stone age to those at the imagination’s edge.

Our understanding of an approach to international relations and the use of the military is based upon an assumption of the ubiquity of the nation -state. In much of the world, however, the nation-state might become irrelevant. In much of the world, traditional structures of government coexist nervously with emerging systems of resource allocation and human organization, from techno-capable crime networks to the machete-swinging clans of warlords, from anarcho-capitalism through economic migrations to the re-emergence of the virtual city-state in places like Cali, Sarajevo, and Kabul.

Criminal organizations, to stress only one of the growing and largely ignored threats to our national security, increasingly have more power than other states especially the failing states.

Today, with the efficacy of many formal government in worldwide decline, criminal organizations are becoming new forms of government for want of a new and better world.

This has powerful implications for state-craft and military activities. Over the past few decades, the doctrine of third world militaries has been to evolve toward the 20th-century U.S. model of civil-military relations and task allocation in which the military looks outward and law enforcement agencies as I said do the domestic chores. This model as I said, is breaking down everywhere. Criminal, terrorist, other armed non-state organizations have grown too powerful and adept-in extreme cases, we have seen the emergence of criminal-enterprise armies. And we have seen that here in the Philippines.

In the emerging wars against criminal ghost states, parastates and criminal-enterprise armies, the modernization of our Armed Forces will allow us to possess the material tools for the job. But even if we modernized the material tools of our Armed Forces, we would still lack innovative methodologies and adequately contemporary laws unless we modernized doctrine. To address the broad range of emerging threats, yes, we need new weapons. But we also need new rules of engagement. And I am glad that the military has begun to do the new doctrines. And now, we must manualize them.

Criminal and terrorist organizations, local and international, must be regarded in “peacetime” as combatants during wartime: the goal is to degrade them, to neutralize them until the survivors quit.

The roles and missions of the Philippine military are changing, but the changes must go beyond the legacy of the 1980's revolution in military affairs. The Philippine Armed Forces after all are already involved in struggles against organized crime, local and international.

Fighting drug cartels and combating other criminal "ghost states" is the moral officer's nightmare, full of impossible restrictions, gray areas, and daily opportunities to embarrass the flag and demoralize the force. Drugs and drug-related violence have killed more Filipinos, wrecked more lives, and cost us more in real peso terms than did the Mindanao war in which Roy Cimatu displayed his heroism. Our cities have been raped, and generations of the poor have been lost irretrievably— that constitutes a threat to our national security.

But if "General Pacman" is a difficult act to follow in meeting this and the more conventional threats, our new chief of staff, General Benjamin Defensor, can certainly fit into the challenging shoe. For Benjie is a professional's professional, a pilot with the heart of a poet, didn't we all listen in rapture as he delivered his induction address with such poetry? But Benjie, has the heart of a poet but the instincts of a true fighter. Once again, a true officer and a gentleman.

Since i have bet Benjie I have continually increased my impression and admiration for his professional conduct. It was not easy for him to be at Edsa two, but he was there. I thanked Angie Reyes for sharing with him that moment of truth. There have been other moments of truth for Benjie but he has proven his loyalty to the service, and the flag, and the constitution countless times, including, I must reveal, the days leading up to may one of 2001. Someday, maybe I can tell the story of how Benjie help me prepare for the mayhem of May 1. And that is why we were ready. There should be no doubt left in our minds that Benjie Defensor will uphold the constitutional mandate and sustain the unity of purpose and singularity of direction that now drive the Armed Forces.

Benjie has consistently been known for his innovative spirit and his strategic finesse. His "first force" strategy for the Philippine Air Force, developed in response to my call for a definition of AFP doctrines, is among the solid testaments of the high quality of his leadership and talent. Benjie is indeed, an innovator. He is a pioneer. He is a trailblazer.

For instance, he is the first Ilonggo to become the Chief-of-Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. And as he said earlier, he is one of only three chiefs of the Philippine air force to become head of an institution that is so predominantly dominated by the army.

In facing old challenges, the traditional challenges of the military. In changing the new challenges that have come up with the new threats to national security, I am sure as we have heard in his speech that Benjie Defensor will bring a fresh perspective. I, therefore, ask everyone from the Armed Forces of the Philippines to give your full support to your new chief-of-staff even as I ask you to sustain the courage, the loyalty and the professionalism that are now an indelible mark of the great Filipino soldier.

To Roy, congratulations for a mission magnificently accomplished to cap other great exploits in the history of your career and our own military history. And to Benjie Defensor — fly high. Bring us to new great heights of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. And bring those heights to the service of a strong Philippine republic.

Congratulations and thank you.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Message of President Arroyo for “Kababayan... Sagot Kita” telethon [Filipino]

Mensahe
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Para sa telethon na pinamagatang “Kababayan... Sagot Kita”

[Ipinahayag sa Study Room, Malacañang, ika 12 ng Setyembre, 2002]

Nitong mga nakaraang Linggo, nasaksihan natin ang matinding paghihirap ng napakarami nating mga kababayan na pinabalik mula sa Sabah.

Mayroon pang nandoon ngayon sa Zamboanga at Bongao sa pangangalaga ng National Disaster Coordinating Council o NDCC. Mayroon ding nakauwi na sa kanilang mga bayan ngunit hindi tiyak ang kinabukasan.

Ngayong gabi, sa pamamagitan ng telethon na ito na ating tinaguriang, “Pagbabalik-Tulong.” Sana maka-abot sa kanila ang inyong tulong. Malimit kong sinasabi na dapat ay “magtutungan tayo” para sa kabutihan at kaunlaran ng ating bayan. Ito ay isang pagkakataon upang ipakita natin ang pagiging matulungin ng bawat Pilipino para sa kapakanan ng ating mga kapwa Pilipino.

Ang mga donasyon ninyo na manggagaling sa telethon na ito ay makakaabot sa mga nangangailangan dahil ito ay mapupunta sa NDCC.

Makasaysayan po ang telethon na ito dahil nagtulung-tulong ang lahat ng TV networks. Ang tatlong himpilan ng gobyerno — ang NBN 4, RPN 9 at IBC13 ay namuno sa pag-organisa nito. Ang mga pribadong tv network — ang ABS-CBN 2, GMA 7 at ABC 5 ay tumulong at nagpadala ng kanilang mga artists.

Ang Philippine Basketball Association at ang Kapisanan ng mga Brodkaster sa Pilipinas ay nakikiisa din. Sabi sa akin ng organizers na hindi siya nahirapang kunin ang suporta ng lahat ng tumutulong. Nung kumalat ang balita tungkol sa proyektong ito, kusang tumawag ang marami at inalok ang kanilang tulong.

Sa inyong lahat na nagboluntaryo at nagsama-sama para magawa ang telethon na ito, marami pong salamat. Kaya mga kababayan ko, aking hinihiling sa inyo na tumugon po tayo sa panawagang ito ng pagmamalasakit at tulong na magmumula sa inyo.

Tumawag po sa mga linya ng mga telepono na ipapakita sa inyo.

Hindi po ang laki ng donasyon o dami ng bagay na ibibigay ang importante. Ang mahalaga po ay magkaisa tayo. Ang mahalaga po ay magtutungan tayo. Ang mahalaga po ay ipakita natin sa lahat na may tulong ang pagbabalik ng ating kapwa Pilipino.

Sabihin natin at ipamalas natin sa mundo na: “pagbabalik sa Pilipinas ay may tulong mula sa kapwa Pilipino.”

Aasahan po ni Neneng, ang isang labindalawang taong gulang na batang babae sa Bongao Center ang inyong tulong. Aasahan po ng lahat ng kanyang kapwa bumalik.

Ipagmalaki natin ang ating lahi. Ipagmalaki natin ang ating pagka-Pilipino.

Ang pag-tutulong-tulong natin ay mahalaga sa ating adhikain na lalong palakasin at patatagin ang ating mahal na republika ng Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat at magandang gabi.

Message of President Arroyo for the Silver Jubilarians '77 of the UST College of Commerce on their Grand Alumni Homecoming

Message
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
For the Silver Jubilarians '77 of the UST College of Commerce on their Grand Alumni Homecoming on September 20, 2002

[Delivered at the Study Room, Malacañang, September 12, 2002]

I convey my warmest greetings to the Silver Jubilarians-batch '77 of the University of Santo Tomas College of Commerce as you hold your Grand Alumni homecoming. I hope that your batch will always be united and successful in the years to come.

The Thomasian community is very close to my heart. I share the pride and gratitude that my father and mother had for the university. UST produced two bar topnotchers, one of them became a president and revered leader — my father, Dostado Macapagal; UST produced many good physicians, devoted parents, and loyal wives and one them — my mother, Evangelina Macapagal.

I am therefore happy to congratulate you all for your contributions to nation building. I am confident your leadership in various professions and endeavors will always be guided by the idealism that UST has instilled.

I ask your full support for our efforts in strengthening our Philippine Republic.

Let us strengthen our partnership especially you are from the college of commerce, let us strengthen our partnership in creating jobs for our people in order to win the war against poverty.

Hinihiling ko ang inyong pakikiisa at suporta sa ating mga hakbang upang magtayo ng malakas na republikang Pilipinas.

Mabuhay kayong lahat!

Speech of President Arroyo during the 102nd commemoration of the Battle of Pulang Lupa [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa ika-102 na pag-alaala sa Digmaan ng Pulang Lupa

[Ipinahayag sa Brgy. Balo, Torrijos, Marinduque, ika 13 ng Setyembre, 2002]

Maraming salamat Congressman pareng Edmund sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin. Maari na po kayong lahat umupo.

Kagalang-galang na Governor Carmencita Reyes, Mayor Pizarro, Bishop Oliveros, aking kasamahan sa kabinete na narito, si Secretary Sonny Alvarez at si Secretary Manolet Dayrit. Nandito rin yung Chairperson ng National Commission on Culture si Secretary Evelyn Pantig. At narito yung ating bagong Chief-of-Staff ng Armed Forces of the Philippines nag-birthday siya kagabi. Happy birthday, General Benjie Defensor. Ating iba't-ibang mga nagtatanggol sa ating kapayapaan, ating mga anak, kaanak, kamag-anak na mga bayani ng giyera ng pulang lupa, mga kasapi ng panlalawigang sanggunian sa pamumuno ni Vice Governor Rejano, sa mga kasapi ng Sangguniang Bayan ng Torrijos sa pamumuno ni Vice Mayor Rasa, iba't-ibang mga mayor ng Marinduque, iba't-ibang mga local government officials sa pamumuno ni ABC President Torrijos Chairman Rejino, mga estudyante, mga guro. Mga panauhing pandangal, mga kababayan, maligayang anibersaryo ng pulang lupa sa inyong lahat.

Balitang-balita man din na ang Marinduque ay isang napakagandang probinsiya at mabait ang mga tao dini. Ito baya ang gusto kong mapatunayan at maramdaman muli. Napaksaran na bumalik ng isang lugar na lagi mainit ang pagsalubong ng mga tao. Ang sabi ngani ng iba maliit man ang marinduque kagaya ko malaki naman ang puso kagaya ko, lalu na pagdating sa pag-estima sa mga bisita. Maraming beses ako pumarito sa Marinduque lahat ng bayan ng Marinduque ay nabisita ko na. Ngayon man din, gaya nang sabi ni mayor na pangalawang pagkakataon ko na makapunta dinhi dini sa Marinduque at talaga bayang tingin ko'y lalo pang gumanda at lalo pang bumait ang mga tao dini.

Natatandaan ko na nagtungo ako rito sa Torrijos nung 1996. Ako ay senador pa. Naging guest of honor sa isang provincewide painting contest sa Boac, tapos dumaan ako dito sa Torrijos, hindi dumaan kasi hindi on the way ang Torrijos talagang sinadya ko. Mahaba at mapagod ang biyahe nuon dahil senador pa lang ako wala pang helicopter. Pero ngayon, presidente na ako naging mabilis ang aking pagparito dahil helicopter na ang gamit ko. Sabi ko nga sa aking kasama si Secretary Sonny Alvarez at si Secretary Manolet Dayrit at iba pa: kitay dapat magpasalamat sa mainit sa pagtanggap sa atin dini. Hindi ka ba manasabi sa kanila katabi ko si Manolet Dayrit sabi na niya sa akin napakainit ang pagtanggap sa atin dito. At sabi ko talagang kilala ang Marinduqueño na mabait sa mga bisita, mabait sa lahat ng bagay. At hindi lamang mabait, matapang pa at makabayan. Yun ang ating pinagdiriwang ngayon di ba? Mahalaga ang pagdiriwang na ating ginaganap ngayon sa kasaysayan hindi lamang ng inyong lalawigan kungdi sa kasaysayan ng ating bansa.

Ang "Battle of Pulang Lupa" gaya nang sabi ni gobernadora na naganap dito nung September 13, 1900 ay isa sa iilang labanan kung saan tinalo ng mga Pilipino ang mga Amerikano. Bagama't ang matatapang na guerillang pinamunuan ni Lt. Col. Maximo Abad ay mga lumang baril, kawayang sibat at itak lamang ang gamit. Nakuha nilang talunin ang mga mananakop na may superior na armas.

Sa naganap na labanan apat, na mga amerikanong sundalo ang napatay, lima ang nasugatan at 48 ang naging bihag kabilang ang commanding officer na si Captain Deveru Shields.

Sa makulay na kasaysayan ng ating bansa, maraming inialay na sakripisyo ang ating mga ninuno para patunayan ang kanilang pagmamahal sa lupang tinubuan. Binuksan hindi lamang ng ating mga bayani ng pulang lupa kungdi na rin nina Jose Rizal, Marcelo H. Del Pilar ang mga mata ng kapwa Pilipino sa katotohanan may sarili tayong bansa na dapat mahalin at alagaan. Pinaglaban naman hindi lamang ng mga taga-pulang lupa kungdi na rin nila Andres Bonifacio at Emilio Aguinaldo ang ating kasarinlan at ang kasarinlan na yan ng ating unang republika ang pinaglaban ng walang takot na magigiting ninyong ninuno dito sa pulang lupa.

Kaya sa pagtitipon natin sa araw na ito, sinasariwa natin sa ating mga puso ang sagradong buhay na inalay ng ating mga kababayang martir na taga-Marinduque. Sa ganitong paraan, muli nating nabibigyan ng pansin at nagpapahalaga ang kalayaang ating tinatamasa ng dahil sa sakripisyo ng ating mga ninuno. Ngayon, nararamdaman natin ang sarap mabuhay sa sariling bayang malaya. Kaya naman patuloy tayong nag-aalay ng sakripisyo't buhay upang alagaan ang ating kalayaan.

Nagtatayo tayo ng malakas na republikang Pilipinas. Ang dalawang importanteng kailangan sa malakas na republikang Pilipinas ay: ang una, hindi dapat para sa mga may kapangyarihan kung hindi para sa buong taumbayan lalo na yung mga hindi makapagtatanggol sa kanilang sarili.

Pangalawang, katangian ng malakas na republika ay ito, dapat matatag, malakas ang byurokrasya at mga institusyon. Dapat malakas ang pagtatanggol sa kapayapaan at katiwasayan. Kaya nilalabanan natin nilalabanan ng mga magigiting na kawal at pulis ang terorismo at kriminalidad. Kasing tatag sila sa paglaban sa terorismo at kriminalidad kagaya nang paglaban ng ating mga pinuno dito sa pulang lupa. Habang ang mga mamamayan naman ay nagsisikap na makaahon sa kahirapan.

Ang pagtayo ng malakas na republikang Pilipinas ay pagpatuloy ng rebolusyon ni Bonifacio, ng mga bayani ng pulang lupa na hindi pa natatapos. Nakamit nila ang kalayaan mula sa kastila, mula sa amerikano ngunit hindi pa ang kalayaan mula sa kahirapan. Patuloy ang ating pakikibaka laban sa kahirapan upang mapabuti ang kabuhayan ng sambayanang pilipino at patibayin ang pundasyon ng ating kalayaan. Subalit kailangan din nating labanan ang mga hadlang sa ating pag-unlad— kagaya ng terorismo at kriminalidad. Ang ating paglaban sa kahirapan ay magtatagumpay lamang kung sasabayan natin ito nanag paglaban sa mga sagabal sa ating kaunlaran. Kung ang ating mga ninuno ay nagtagumpay sa pagtataguyod ng isang malayang bansa tulad nang naganap sa Battle of PulangLupa ang ating henerasyon naman ay kailangang magkaisa at magtulungan na pagtaguyod ang isang malakas na republikang Pilipinas.

Binabati ko ang Marinduque dahil mababa ang inyong crime rate dito sa lalawigan. At ang inyong lalawigan ay jueteng-free kaya congratulations din. Ituloy ninyo itong paglalaban para sa katahimikan, katiwasayan. Dapat kayong listo sa mga rebeldeng dumadayo rito upang himukin kayong sumanib sa kanilang paniniwala dahil madali naman ninyong makilala ang mga estrangherong nagpupunta dito. Makipag-ugnayan kaagad kayo sa mga awtoridad kung may mapapansin kayong mga taong kahina-hinala ang kilos. Magiging madali ang ating paglutas sa problema ng kapayapaan at katiwasayan kung handang makipagtulungan ang mga mamamayan sa pulis at kawal.

Ang malakas na republikang Pilipinas ay dapat makakaasa sa sariling sikap lalo na kung naghihirap ang ating mga kaibigang bansa. Sa giyera ng pulang lupa, kalaban natin ang mga Amerikano. Sa kasalukuyan ay kaibigan naman natin ang mga Amerikano, ngunit Amerika mismo ay naghihirap pa rin sa pagbalik sa kanilang ekonomiya pagkatapos nang naganap nung September 11, 2001 at abalang-abala sa paglaban sa terorismo sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng mundo. Kaya lalong dapat tayo, patatagin natin ang sarili nating ekonomiya at sarili nating pagtatanggol sa ating mga mamamayan. Para naman sa ikabubuti ng ating sariling ekonomiya, ang aking tinutukoy ngayon ay ang pagtatag ng mga small and medium enterprises. Linunsad ko ang proyektong tinatawag nating o matatawag nating isang bayan, isang produkto, isang milyong pisong pautang sa small and medium enterprises.

Dito sa Marinduque anim ang inyong bayan di ba? Kaya mayron akong tsekeng dala na anim na milyong piso. Ito ay iaabot ko sa Department of Trade and Industry ng probinsya... Dahil ang dti kasama ni gobernadora, kasama ng mga mayor ay dapat hahanap kung ano ang dapat isang produkto ng bawat isang bayan.

Palagay ko yung isang sinabi ni gobernadora kanina pagkatapos ng ating napakagandang seremonya ng mga paru-paro. Alam niyo itong pagputong alam ko na iyan kasi ilang beses nang pumunta ako dito sa Marinduque at lahat ng bayan napunta ko, nagkaroon na rin ako ng putong ceremony sa ibang mga bayan. Pero ngayon ko lang nakita yung ating butterfly, legend of the butterfly na ginawa natin. Para sa mga national audience, ano itong legend of the butterfly ng Marinduque? Sabi niya, "if anyone desires a wish to come true, they should capture a butterfly; whisper their wish to it, set it free, let it soar high to the heavens your wish will be brought up high to the greatest spirit who hears and sees all". Kaya kanina ito ang ginawa nila. Today, we set this butterflies free, trusting that all our wishes and prayers for our beloved President will be granted. Salamat sa inyong panalangin.

Sinabi ni governor na actually itong Marinduque ay pwede magawang sentro ng butterfly sa buong mundo. Pwede kayong magpalaki ng butterfly, mag-culture ng butterfly. Iyan ang isang magandang pwedeng paglagyan nitong one million peso per town, one product. Kanya lang sabi niya may isang sagabal, may lumang DENR ruling na bawal mag-export ng butterfly. Kaya nandito si Sonny Alvarez. Sabi niya dapat mahiwalay natin yung endangered species at yung common species. Sabi naman ni Governor Reyes, na pwedeng mag-culture para bang yung log ban pero may industrial tree plantation. kung ikaw ay nagtanim pwede mong anihin. Pero yung mga virgin forest hindi pwedeng putulin. So siguro, pwedeng gumawa si Sonny ng ganon. Yung mga huhulihin niyo hindi pwedeng ibenta pero kung magpapalaki kayo baka yun ang pwede. Kaya magpalaki kayo nang hinuli ninyo ipro-pro-pagate ninyo ay yun makatulong yung payout na one million pesos per product, per town.

Palagay ko rin na dapat bigyan ng pangunahing pansin sa payout na ito sa mga bayan na sisikap na mag-develop ng mango fruit basket dito sa Marinduque tulad ng Guimaras. Ang Mimaropa ay dapat magkaroon ng panggagalingan ng superior quality ng mangga na maari makipag-compete sa domestic at international markets. Sana makakabuti sa inyong mga pagsisikap ang aking ginawa na hiniwalay ang Calabarzon region at Mimaropa region. Nung araw di ba kasama lang kayo sa Region IV. Ako po bilang pangulo ginamit ko ang aking kapangyarihan hiniwalay na kayo. Kayo ay sariling region na para hindi kayo second class citizens sa Region IV. Pinagtutulungan at pagkaganon mas lalong makakatulong sa inyo kung meron kayong sariling DTI Region IV-A o mimaropa sariling Regional Director ng Police, Regional IV- A ng Mimaropa, sariling Regional Director ng Region IV- B ng Department of Agriculture ... Para kaya nga halimbawa itong magkaron kayo ng Mango Center kailangan ang da ng Mimaropa region ay makipagtulungan sa inyong pamahalaang panlalawigan at alam kong nagtutulungan na sila. Kaya lang kung buong Region IV ang tutulong aasikasuhin pa nila yung coconut doon sa Quezon, aasikasuhin pa nila yung coffee sa Cavite, kaya dapat hiwalay ang regional office ng da para makatukoy sa pagtulungan sa inyong pamahalaang panlalawigan at sa ganon ay magkaroon ng proyekto mabuo ang inyong pamahalaang panlalawigan at ng Mimaropa region para gawing Guimaras din ang Marinduque.

Para masimulan ito, wala dito si leony montemayor pero meron siyang pasalubong sa inyo. Nagpadala ng da ng 15,000 na grafted na mango seedlings para sa target ng 5, 000 ektarya na bagong mango orchard sa lalawigan na ito. Meron ding mga hakbang ang ginawa ng department of energy para makatulong sa inyong problema sa presyo ng kuryente. Wala si Secretary Vince Perez ngayon dahil nga naghahanda siya ng aking miting kasama ng electric cooperative na gaganapin sa Malacañang pagbalik ko mula dito sa ating pagdiriwang.

Ngunit ang gustong ipaabot ni Secretary Vince Perez, Secretary ng Energy sa inyo ay ganito: nung mayo, ako sinabi ko sa Napocor na dapat bawasan nila ang PPCA or Purchase Power Cost Adjustment sa 40 sentimos bawat kilowatt hour. Ang Marinduque wala kayong PPCA, kaya walang nabawasan. Meron kayong ppa pero walang PPCA. Ang PPCA ay isang bahagi ng ppa yun ang binawasan, dahil yun ang kapangyarihan ng pangulo na mabawas yung bahaging iyon. Yung Energy Regulatory Commission ang siyang may kapangyarihang mabawasan ang inyong PPA sa pilitan. Wala naman talagang PPCA ang kinukubra ng Napocor sa inyo. Ang kinukubra ng Napocor ay foreign exchange adjustment at fuel cost adjustment.

At sana naalala ninyo nung isang taon bumaba ang inyong kuryente ng 30 sentimos bawat kilowatt hour nung pinasa nila Congressman Edmund Reyes yung Power Reform Act at sa mga maliliit na pulo kagaya ng Marinduque. Dapat malaman din ninyo na ang Napocor ay sinasagot ang mga gastos na sangkot sa mga Purchase Power Agreement. Mula nung enero hanggang hunyo, ang subsidiary ng Napocor sa Marinduque ay umabot na sa 123 million pesos. Kung wala itong subsidy na ito, yung electric bill ninyo dahil sa subsidy niyo ay naka-subsidize ng 10 pesos. Ibig sabihin nun kung wala ang subsidy ng Napocor sa inyo ay mas malapit na sa 10 pesos per kilowatt hour ang inyong bill. Kaya itong subsidyong ito ay itutuloy habang hindi pa natatapos ng Energy Regulatory Commission ang review ng mga kontrata sa mga IPP o Independent Power Producer. Kung wala itong subsidy gaya nang sabi ko, mas mataas pa sana ang inyong kuryente ng 10 pesos. Ganunpaman, hinahanap ko yung seedlings 10, 000 na tanim na sa iba't-ibang bayan at yung 5, 000 dumating nung isang linggo.

Anyway, balik tayo sa kuryente. Tuloy-tuloy ang reporma. Magtiwala kayo na binabantayan nating mabuti ang gastos ninyo sa kuryente. Kaya sa halip na matulog ako dito ngayong gabi ay uuwi ako dahil ka-miting ko pag-uwi ko ang electric cooperatives. Ka-meeting ko si Vince Perez. Ano ang pag-uusapan namin, ang pagpapatawad ng utang ng mga kooperatiba sa gobyerno. Siguro naman pag napatawad na ng gobyerno ang utang ng Marinduque cooperative ay mapapasa niya yung kanyang naimpok na hindi na siya magbabayad ng utang sa gobyerno, ito ay inaasahan nating ipapasa ng Marinduque electric cooperative ang savings sa mas mababang singil ng kuryente sa inyo.

Matagal ko na ring nauunawaan ang inyong problema tungkol sa pinsalang dulot ng dating Marcopper mines. Senador pa man ako isa sa aking madalas na pagbisita dito sa Marinduque ay dahil nga sa problema ng kuryente. Ang isyung ito ay aming tinalakay sa aking official visit sa Canada nung nakaraang Enero ...si Congressman Edmundo Reyes dahil sa isyung yun. Sa pagkaintindi ko hindi pa niya tinatanggap ang alok ng Placerdome technical services na maglaan ng 12 million dollars para sa clean -up at one million dollars para sa compensation ng mga apektado sa nangyaring tailing spill dito, dahil gusto ninyo malaman kung magkano talaga ang gagastusin ng clean-up. Kaya naman gaya nang sabi ni Governor Reyes ako ay nag-advance mula sa aking President's Social fund ng 20 million pesos para sa isang kumpletong pag-aaral upang malaman natin ang pinakamagaling na paraan sa rehabilitation at restoration ng mga lugar na apektado ng tailing spill. Kabilang na rito ang Boac river, Oogpog river at kalangan bay. Kalahati ng nasasabing advance money ay nasa provincial government na at pinirmahan na rin ni Secretary Alvarez ang letter of agreement para sa gagawing Marinduque environment and health study na inindorso na niya kay Congressman Reyes. Yun ang papeles na binigay sa akin ni Governor Reyes at Congressman Reyes. At bakit nandito si Secretary Manolet Dayrit dahil si Congressman Reyes ay humihingi rin ng isang ospital. Si Manolet Dayrit na ang bahala doon.

Tayo ay patungo na sa pagpapatayo ng isang matatag na republikang Pilipinas at yan ay tutuparin ko sa abot ng aking makakaya. Ang aking hinihiling sa inyo dito makabayaning lugar ng pulang lupa magsamahan tayo. Ayusin natin yung kalikasan ng Marinduque. Yung mga naiwanan ng mina at yung mga papalakihin nating mga paru-paro. Ayusin natin ang pangkabuhayan ng Marinduque. Ipatatag natin yung mga mangga at yung mga small and medium enterprises. Ituloy natin na ipaglaban ang kapayapaan at katiwasayan. At isegurado natin, bantayan natin yung electric cooperative para sa ganun pag napatawaran ang kanyang utang sa pamahalaan, ibababa niya ang singil niya sa mamamayan ng Marinduque. Ito ang dapat nating maging work program ng Marinduque dito sa darating na 12 buwan. Sa ganun pagbalik natin muli lahat dito sa pulang lupa sa darating na taon, masasabi natin alang-alang sa bayani ng pulang lupa na tinuloy natin ang kanilang paglalaban sa kasarinlan at kapayapaan ng mga mahihirap at lahat ng taumbayan ng Marinduque at buong Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the signing ceremony of Executive Order No. 119 and induction of officers
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the signing ceremony of Executive Order No. 119 and induction of officers

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, September 13, 2002]

Maraming salamat, thank you very much Secretary Vince Perez.

Father Silva, General Manager of Electric cCooperatives; newly inducted officers of PHILRECA, NAGMEC and NEA Council of Leaders; officers and staff of NEA and DOE, ladies and gentlemen, mga minamahal kong kababayan.

Kakagaling ko lang ngayon sa Marinduque. Isang malaking problema nila ay ang PPA. Pinaliwanag ko sa kanila na ang kapangyarihang ng pangulo ay maibaba ang PPCA na bahagi ng PPA. Walang naming PPCA and mga maliliit na pulo kagaya ng Marinduque, kaya walang maibaba na PPCA doon. Dahil sa simula pa, sa umpisa, subsidized na ang maliliit na pulo ng NAPOCOR. Pinaliwanag ko sa kanila na ang subsidy nga ng Marinduque ay halos P10 per kilowatt hour. Saan pa tayo makakahanap ng paraan upang bumaba pa ang singil ng koryente ng mga probinsya gaya ng Marinduque? Ang sagot ay naririto sa ating pulong ngayon.

Ang makakababa lamang ng PPA ay iyong Energy Regulatory Commission o kaya iyong mga utility distributor mismo, kagaya ng mga electric cooperatives. That is why today, I have promulgated Executive Order 119, which I signed last August 28. This E.O. conditionally condones the energy generation-related loans of our electric cooperatives. We want to drive down the cost of electricity in the rural areas to ease further the burdens of our people, and to perk up investments in the countryside.

I am hereby, by my promulgation conditionally condoning 18 billion pesos worth of loans, often tucked into the electric bills reaching our consumers. This condonation, and the conditions that go with it, are bold decisions. But bold decisions make a strong Philippine republic.

The condonation I am granting is conditional, because in return we now demand better services, reforms and the permanent commitment to integrity and transparency. The majority of the cooperatives, including the cooperative today, this morning — the Marinduque Electric Cooperative. Nandito ba yung Marinduque Electric Cooperative? Wala? Pero wala rin duon — have largely met these standards, and the condonation in those well-behaved or norm following cooperatives can proceed without further pre-requisites. Just make sure you pass on your savings in the form of lower electric bills.

Some cooperatives are complaining about the conditions set forth in the Executive Order, but my answer is — strong institutions require strong discipline. And a strong Philippine republic requires strong institutions. We cannot have wimps in an industry that is pivotal to global competitiveness. It is a tight field. One must shape up or ship out. For one, the revocation clause in this EO is not onerous. Rather, it is a challenge and an opportunity to surmount the odds.

As president of a strong Philippine republic, I would be wrong to condone massive loans to the government without exacting a greater public benefit in return.

This is my bill of particulars: transparency in all transactions immediate sanctions for violations of NEA rules and regulations speedy action on negative audit reports efficient, reliable power service dramatic reduction of systems losses acceptable levels of collection efficiency fully justified electric rates.

Corruption will not be tolerated. Our people deserve the best. You have elected the best and the brightest in your group to the leadership of PHILRECA and NAGMEC. I shall gladly work with them.

Allow me, however, to personally congratulate the person who above all has valiantly pursued the ideals that have spurred this meeting. His sense of sacrifice and commitment to reforms is undisputed. He has embraced a life of service that speaks of deep devotion to our republic.

I refer to father Francisco Silva, he started his work as administrator of the NEA a year and a day ago on 9/11. So, he is the terrorist of the inefficient cooperatives. And I ask for your full and unrelenting support for him. He has been with us for one year of pride and achievement. Oh, two day, it's already the 13th. He rescued AKELCO and Boracay and lighted up the tourism industry. He started the rescue of the five cooperatives, the five areas where we have those who stood-up to be recognized. He has rescued them from darkness. On a higher plane, he brought the light of honesty and transparency to the rural electrification sector.

I trust Father Silva. I trust in his noble intentions and his competence to get the job done. Together with Vince Perez, he is taking the industry to new heights of service and excellence.

This event affirms our focus to turn our economic priorities to the domestic market and to the small and medium enterprises. That is what we will focus on promoting this next twelve months. We are turning our economic priorities inward as we seek new horizons of productivity in the countryside to drive the wheels of development. And I am glad you are here as our partners.

Under Father Silva's leadership, we shall prevail against the elements that have so long run this industry aground. We shall provide new hope to our people. We shall win the battle against stagnation and poverty. Thus, to our electric cooperatives, and especially to Father Silva, I say: stay with me. I need you to help me build a strong Philippine republic.

Thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Dinner Reception in Honor of the Pacific Asia Travel Association (PATA) Board of Directors

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Dinner Reception in Honor of the Pacific Asia Travel Association (PATA) Board of Directors

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, September 20, 2002]

Thank you very much, Dick. My very active, aggressive and effective Secretary of Tourism.

And to all of you, headed by Mr. Long, Chairman of PATA; President, Mr. Yong; Congressman Ablan, who is a PATA life member; Dick's very word, his predecessors — Mina Gabor and Narz Lim; Mr. Kohli; Mr. Kitamura; the Mayor of Olongapo City, Mayor Kate Gordon; all of you, members of the Board of Directors, indeed, welcome to the Philippines!

Dick said he was expecting eighty of you to come but one hundred sixty of you came. Thank you very much for your interest in the Philippines.

All our cultures uphold and share the principle of peace, unity and understanding.

All these are achieved through travel and tourism as we strengthen links between our nations and peoples, sustain cross-border social or trade visits, boost our rapidly integrating economies, and most of all, help our peoples prosper by bringing them together.

Tourism is a powerful growth engine and deserves to be a top national priority. In my country, as Dick said, it is a top national priority.

When I made my State of the Nation Address before Congress last year, my first State of the Nation Address as President, I said, that we see in the Philippines as our growth sectors for the future the human resource intensive skills intensive high close service sectors like information and communication technology and tourism.

Tourism is a giant global industry. Seven hundred million international tourists spent 475 billion dollars in the year 2000, including domestic tourists, total spending was three trillion dollars.

Tourism has a huge additional potential for growth. The long-term points to an 11 percent growth in spending. Only 3.5 percent of the world population has travelled internationally. And as the world grows more of them will want to travel. Asia-Pacific which is the area of operations of PATA is projected to grow from a 16 percent share of the tourism market to 25 percent by the year 2020.

Investment in tourism, yes, requires an enormous capacity but it is highly scalable.

The domestic value-added of tourism is 90 percent of sales for a hotel stay in the Philippines unlike manufactured exports, for example, electronics, our number one export only has a 10 to 30 percent domestic value-added.

Tourism is a huge dollar earner. It is the biggest global export. The average international tourist spends over a thousand dollars per visit to the Philippines. There is a low capital expenditure import component: 6 to 8 percent for tourism in the Philippines compared to 35 to 45 percent for automobiles.

Tourism can have a rapid impact. Thailand which is the number one in tourism in Asia increased its arrivals by 25 percent in the first year of "Visit Thailand" in 1987. And when the tourist suddenly start coming existing supply can be improved quickly.

Indeed, tourism deserves to be a national priority. I have given economic reasons why tourism deserves to be a national priority but over and above economic reasons, tourism deserves to be a national priority because of its impact on social development. In terms of jobs, it is what is called a "big tent" industry. It is labor intensive. One international arrival creates one job. It promotes job security because it is personal service oriented, we cannot automate and replace the people who serve the tourists. It is open to unskilled and skilled workers alike. The jobs can be created anywhere that has tourism potential.

Tourism provides excellent training for skills. It provides good personal development opportunities. And the skills it creates are exportable.

The culture of tourism, for instance, the culture of having a safe and clean environment benefits not just the tourists but the entire community.

Tourism is a proven growth engine even in countries that have security problems. We have security problems in the world around us but tourism can still continue. For instance, Egypt in 1996 had security problems, gunmen in that year opened fire on and killed 18 tourists. The next year in 1997, dozens of tourist died in an attack, and yet in those years, each of those two years, 4 million tourists visited Egypt. In Spain, where ETA is one of the Europe's most feared separatist groups, the year 2000 saw 50 million tourist arrivals. In the Indonesia of 1998, where hundreds died from unrest and there were anti-Chinese riots, 5 million tourists still visited Indonesia. And so, therefore, we must not allow terrorism to beat tourism. And these countries have shown it can be done.

Our tourism vision for the Philippines by the year 2010, the year when we would like to say that we have won the battle against poverty is, as Dick said, "more than the usual Wow! Philippines." More than the usual sun and beaches, nature, fun, service and tourist mindset. We would like international arrivals to grow from 2 million in the year 2000 to 5 million in the year 2010. We would like jobs in tourism to grow from 3 million in the year 2000 to double in the year 2010. We would like the contribution of tourism to grow from 7 billion dollars in the year 2000 to 17 billion dollars in the year 2010. And we would like domestic tourism to grow from 800 million dollars in the year 2000 to 2.5 billion dollars in 2010.

How will we do this? What is Dick Gordon doing for this? I chose him to be the Secretary of Tourism because I know he can carry out the resolve to harness the Philippine tourism growth engine. Harnessing the tourism engine requires focus, execution, and coordinated leadership. Which is why as Dick said, I elevated the department of tourism into a super Cabinet member with policy ascendancy over other departments that need to serve tourism. Because we need these other departments to serve our national strategy for tourism.

In this strategy for tourism, we have identified specific tourist segment priorities. First priority are the short-haul beach tourism, domestic tourism, and short-haul sightseeing and shopping tourism. Our approach to these segments is to market the relevant destinations through core multi-channel marketing, spending 60-70 percent of our promotion budget. And this budget will be spent or is being spent primarily on Japanese, Korean and Chinese markets.

Next to the three segment priorities are short-haul recreation tourism, short-haul Eco-tourism and Balikbayan tourism, which means the visits from our overseas Filipinos, and long-haul backpackers. These are niche segments which call for a tailored marketing approach where we will be spending 20-30 percent of our promotions budget on rifle shot promotions tailored to specific niches such as Japanese golfers.

Why do we spend most of our budget on the countries I mentioned. We are prioritizing North Asia within the short-haul market segment because that is where the market is leading us to. Japan has been traditionally our largest market and yet it is still highly underpenetrated. Korea is a rapidly growing market. And China's proximity to the Philippines, especially to the hometown of Congressman Ablan, provides us an opportunity to be a frontrunner in a strategic emerging market with a huge potential.

I am very happy to have been learning from Dick this past several months about our continuing growth in tourism. And our data further indicate that the visitors to the Philippines have certain favorite destinations within the Philippines. They seem to flock to Cebu and Bohol, Manila and its environs, and Palawan. These three seemingly favorite destinations of the tourists are probably favorites because they all have a good carrying capacity; they have a good number of destinations within themselves; they have a good fit with the segment markets that I cited earlier that are coming here, the first and second priority segment markets; they have a good number of major attractions; they have relatively acceptable infrastructure. For instance, Cebu has a good international airport, and Manila, of course, is the primary gateway to the Philippines. Since these are favorite and therefore major destinations, our plan for them is to be the focus of major infrastructure improvement so that we can aggressively close the gaps that tourists identify and we can promote them immediately.

Next to these three major destinations, the favorite special interest destination of visitors to the Philippines seem to be Boracay and the Baguio-Banaue circuit. And for these special destinations or special niche destinations, special interest destinations, we shall increase their accessibility and improve their existing product offering.

The presence of international airports make Laoag-Vigan, I said the hometown of Congressman Ablan, and Clark-Subic, my hometown and the hometown of Secretary Dick Gordon and Mayor Kate Gordon also current tourism destinations. All these destinations, we shall build more attractions to make them good tourism options some more.

And experts considered Davao as a major potential destination. Davao also has an international airport which we will be opening — I mean the airport already exists but the nice airport will be opened about four months from now — and there we can build for the future.

In doing the marketing, Dick follows three steps to successful marketing: build awareness, generate interest, induce trial. How does Dick build awareness, through public relations, also building a distinctive image as he has done "more than the usual" via advertising with sufficient reach and frequency of message. So you see us on international cable TV. Dick generates interest by providing... I mean our plan to generate interest includes providing detailed information via the internet, allowing for a sampling of the country experience via tourism fairs — where the Philippines won the best marketing booth, right, Dick? In Germany last year. Yes, the best marketing effort — and generating hype via special events especially what will happen next year. And Dick induces trial. One way to induce trial is providing segments-specific incentives via direct mail. But because we were very, very big Philippine community abroad, one main effort for inducing trial is recommendation from family and friends. And that is Dick's V-12 program for the Philippines from the overseas Filipinos. And then, the final push by sales promotion that chairman long talked about in New York, and Dick has just come back from China and Hongkong on this sales push.

Thailand, the tourism leader in Asia, employed all these three successfully. And of course, it is good for us to follow proven success.

Our Philippine marketing plan starts with "Visit the Philippines year 2003." If Thailand was able to have a 25 percent increase in its tourism when it had the first "Visit to Thailand Year," I hope we will have a similar increase. We have a 12-month calendar of events, and I hope the PATA executives and directors will help us promote the Philippines during "Visit the Philippines Year."

In our vision for 2010, there are many tourism investment opportunities. The main framework would be tourism enterprise zones. These are an ideal vehicle for focused development at the local level. A tourism enterprise zone is a specially designated priority tourist destination that aligns with one or more of the department's target segments. It will be located in a larger destination area, one of the many that I mentioned earlier. It will have a clearly delineated and sufficiently large tract of land that will receive focused and high-impact development and resources. This estate could be a contiguous land or group of islands, it could be an entirely new development or re-development of an existing area, it could be public land or consolidated private land. This is the kind of tourism that we would like to be able to see by the year 2010. And we are inviting investors even today.

Also, I said in my first State of the Nation Address last year, because we want to promote tourism, we have a policy to liberalize air access. We are releasing air access restrictions to promote tourism flow. Our policy is to liberalize airline policy by negotiating limited open skies from Japan and Korea to Cebu and Palawan, and explore ways to use trigger mechanisms to immediately increase capacity entitlements. In fact, this trigger mechanism is already enforce in our air panel negotiations. We would like to organize or facilitate charter flights to immediately release constraints in key markets. And the Department of Tourism is represented in the air panel I spoke about. In fact, you are Vice Chairman, aren't you Dick? To represent the Philippine tourism interest. We will expand and upgrade the key tourist airports. These have been identified as Coron in Palawan, Bohol and Boracay. And for our thrust towards 2010, they will be upgraded to international standards. In the meantime, as we seek to build them — which would take some years — we will adjust landing fees in key destinations as incentives to additional flights to the area.

Yes, indeed, we can harness the tourism growth engine, and i hope PATA will be there to help us not only in promotion but also in investment in tourism facilities.

We want the Philippines to be a pleasant and safe destination for our tourists. As Dick said, we must not let terrorism defeat tourism. And so, on our part here in the Philippines, we will soon put an end to local terrorists. Even as we speak, the Armed Forces of the Philippines are relentlessly pursuing the Abu Sayyaf who have now gathered in their main lair in one island for their last but hopeless stand.

As for foreign terrorists who may attempt to venture into the country, we are keeping a close watch on our entry points. They won't get far because we have a trilateral agreement with Indonesia and Malaysia soon to be quadrilateral with Thailand to check terrorist incursions in our common seas and common borders.

In the meantime, we have taken determined step to keep the country on a stable growth path. In the light of the prolonged global economic uncertainties, we are shoring up domestic productivity, applying the managed asset reflation principle popularized again by Thailand. This is boosting domestic demand. This is characterized too by prudent monetary policy, a gradual reduction in public sector debt and a balanced budget. It is focused on spurring small and medium industries in the countryside, as it strives to draw greater participation from the private sector while government's limited funds are concentrated on programs that have the broadest social or economic impact.

I am happy that despite government's conservative spending policies and the current global uncertainties, our economy continues to grow along with tourism particularly in the second quarter. The first half of this year, Philippine GNP grew by 5.2 percent. This is the highest growth of Philippine GNP since the fourth quarter of the year 2000.

The rise is attributed to the manufacturing sectors 5 percent upswing from a negative rate, and the service sectors dramatic 17.7 percent increase. The service to the service sector belongs the tourism sector. And so the positive growth rates in tourism that Dick talked about brought about our 5.2 percent growth rate. Also our exports rallied with an 8.9 percent increase. This growth heralds our continuing recovery and the steady growth of our industries including tourism.

As a final note, therefore, I would like to make a strong pitch for our "Visit Philippines Year" program once again. As i told you earlier, the celebration will run the whole year and will feature colorful festivals, cultural fair, food, handicrafts and other products.

I hope your promotional efforts will keep in step with our plans. You can always tell your clients that there are at least 7,000 reasons for them to visit the Philippines. There will always be something here even for the most discriminating visitor.

And most importantly, as said by Mr. Long, the Philippines is home to the world's most hospitable, cheerful and charming English-speaking people. The Filipino people are the best reason for visiting the Philippines.

In behalf of the Filipino people, therefore, and in behalf of our government, I bid you all once again a warm welcome to our country. May our ties ever be strong and rewarding.

My best wishes for a very successful meeting. As Dick said, Mabuhay! And may I add, maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 102nd Anniversary of the Civil Service Commission and conferment of 2002 Lingkod Bayan and Dangal ng Bayan Awards Service Commission, October 2, 2002

SPEECH DURING THE 102ND ANNIVERSARY OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION AND CONFERMENT OF 2002 LINGKOD BAYAN AND DANGAL NG BAYAN
AWARDS SERVICE COMMISSION
2 October 2002, Ceremonial Hall
Malacañang Palace, Manila

Malugod kong binabati ang lahat ng kawani ng ating gobyerno dahil ng nakaraang buwan pinagdiwang natin ang ika-102 anibersaryo ng serbisyo sibil ng Pilipinas.

Itong araw na ito nakita na naman natin itong mga outstanding civil servants na binigyan natin ng parangal, kaya sa inyo, congratulations sa inyong lahat for being so outstanding.

When I became President of the Philippines last January 2001, after my speech at EDSA, my next speech was addressed to the civil service. This was done on my first working day as chief executive of the country. In that speech, I wanted to stress one thing, yung binanggit nga ni Chairperson Karina Constantino David, my great respect for the people in our bureaucracy. Itong respetong ito, para sa akin, ay hindi naman talaga pinapakita sa seremonya. Pinapakita ito sa paggalang ng mga karapatan ng ating mga civil servants.

I inherited the great respect for the civil service from my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal. He was a civil servant before he became a politician before he became a lawyer.

When he was in high school, he decided that he would seek higher education by getting a job in Manila. For that purpose, he took the civil service examination in Pampanga, second grade, and passed with the highest grade in the country. But when he went to Manila, he could not find a job despite his eligibility.

His grandmother, Escolastica Romero, was a midwife in their hometown in Lubao. She had a German patient whose relative, named Vicente Mills, was a division chief in the Bureau of Lands. My grandmother asked her patient to help her grandson get a job. It had to take an influential foreigner to enable my father to land his first job. This reflected the state of our lopsided society and our underdeveloped country.

Sadly today, this is still the plight of many civil service eligibles because there are more civil service eligibles than the rough jobs available. What is important is that we must be able to increase the GNP of our country so that there will be an increase in the services needing public servants; so that all who apply and get a civil service eligibility will be able to have a job.

My father worked as a civil servant under four administrations. His first job was in the Bureau of Lands where he earned P30 a month. He was able to support law studies and get his second topnotch examination result – the topnotcher position in the bar. Then he was able to do legal work for Presidents Quezon and Laurel in what was the equivalent of the Presidential Management Staff.

Later, he served President Roxas and President Quirino in the foreign service. They had the search committee look for the best and the brightest all over government, because they wanted to form the foreign service and show the world the best that the Filipino can show. After that, he ran for congressman.

When I was in government, during my first months at work, my father would counsel me about respecting the civil service and the civil servants. His wise counsel enabled me to have many fulfilling years working with civil servants in my stints as Undersecretary of Trade and Industry, and as Secretary of Social Welfare and Development.

At dahil sa mga parangal ng aking ama, at ang sarili ko na ring karanasan sa DTI at DSWD, talaga na ngang malaki ang aking pagpapahalaga at pagkilala sa napakalaking tungkulin ng serbisyo sibil sa pagbalangkas at pagpapatupad ng mga programa ng pamahalaan.

In my State of the Nation Address, I said that our goal is a Strong Philippine Republic, and I said that a Strong Philippine Republic has two essential attributes: one, the Republic must be autonomous of dominant classes and sectors, so that it represents the people's interests and not the interest of only a powerful minority or powerful minority groups. Second, the Republic must have the capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to implement its policies and deliver its services.

A strong bureaucracy. That is a requirement and essential attribute of a Strong Republic and that is what the civil service is all about. This is what the civil service can contribute to good governance which is an essential institution in a Strong Republic.

When I first made my speech before civil servants, I defined the three pillars of good governance: first pillar is a sound moral foundation to guide our leadership at all levels; second pillar is a philosophy of transparency in all government actions; and third, an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

I see these pillars as standing on the first and foremost cornerstone and institution of a Strong Philippine Republic: an effective government. If we are to be a Strong Philippine Republic, we must have an effective government from the local governments to the national government and a professional and dedicated civil service. Those are the elements of an effective government. Such an effective government delivers basic services for everyone – the most important of which are an environment of peace and the rule of law and the necessary infrastructure. No wonder then that we have several awardees today from the rule of law including two judges.

Not only must an effective state help its poorest and weakest citizens, empower them, and dismantle the structures that make them poor and weak. An effective government rest on the rule of law, and our justice system must be strengthened to become an efficient institution for all, not just the powerful.

Today, once again, we honor exemplary public servants. Those we honor today prove that there is an abundance of good men and women in the public service. I give my special congratulations to the civil servants who consistently render their duties with the highest integrity, morality, and decency. Those of you who are here today have passed that test. May you continue to serve as models and trailblazers for the rest of the bureaucracy, the rest of the government including us – the public officials.

Many of our outstanding civil servants work far from the cushioned comforts of air-conditioned offices. Their work stations are in the open fields where they develop new plant varieties to shore up the incomes of farmers.

I'm happy to have given an award to our gentleman from the Philippine Coconut Authority who developed a fungus to improve productivity in the coconut sector. Civil servants work far away from buildings as grand as Malacañang; they work in the classrooms where they come up with innovative tools for molding young minds.

I am also happy we have so many teachers who received their awards today and I am happy to learn about the innovations that they brought to the classroom. Our civil servants are found not only in the metropolis but also in the rural communities where they render health care to the women and the children in the countryside. They are there in far, far away towns like the town of Dinas in Zamboanga del Sur. You don't even have a good road from the main highway to Dinas. It is closer to the pirates coming from the seas in Ylana Bay than from what you would call civilization. But we have an outstanding civil servant who came from there. My special congratulations to the community of Dinas.

Our honorees have done their job with nerve, with vigor; unmindful of obstacles like the young lady from Caraga who does the work of a prosecutor but has the item of a stenographer. Our honorees are focused on serving the people rather than what is their item, what is their perk, what is their salary grade. This is how things should be in the entire public service. I don't only mean the bureaucracy, I also mean those who were elected to public service.

Tunay na kailangan nating harapin ang hamon at panawagan ng bayan na parating malinis ang hanay ng mga kawani ng pamahalaan at ang dagliang pagtugon sa pangangailangan ng mamamayan.

A republic must be a republic in reality and especially in the difference it makes to better the lives of its citizens.

Your theme for this year's celebration, "Lakas ng Serbisyong Sibil: Lakas ng Bayan" reflects this idea – that a Strong Republic has a strong bureaucracy, a strong civil service.

Mahalaga na alagaan at mapanatili natin ang magandang imahen ng lahat ng mga ahensya ng pamahalaan, lalo na ang integridad ng mga taong kumatawan sa ating pamahalaan. Tayo ay kinakailangang maging mabuting halimbawa sa ating mga pinaglilingkuran. Yes, I believe in leadership by example. We should promote solid traits such as work ethics and a dignified lifestyle. I'm glad that among the criteria is simple living or simple lifestyle, because we must have a dignified lifestyle. In addition, part of the ethic is matching action to rhetoric, performing rather than grandstanding.

Our work must go beyond logging in and out of the bundy clock daily. One, according to Acting Chief Justice Bellosillo, is very productive because she always works up to midnight even on Sundays. Well, not everybody has to work everyday until midnight, even on Sundays. But the point is, that there is more to being a public servant than looking at the clock. And so, therefore. I ask all of you to sign onto this vision of good governance.

Let's all work together in making every government worker a living example of trustworthiness; of a keen orientation towards results and performance; of viewing the fight against poverty as our supreme goal. We may not achieve it this year, next year, the year after. But at least we must do what we can do today so that we can lick poverty in a decade from now.

An ethic of working always improves ourselves and of respecting others the way we want to be respected, and as your criterion said: of living simply according to our means.

It is important, even as we give honor to these individuals, to remember that we give them honor not only because they are personalities, but because they represent values. They represent certain focus and adherence to important issues. As civil servants, let us focus on issues, less on personalities. And as being all part of one government, let us focus on commonalities rather than controversies. Let us focus on a broad front of service rather than parochial interests.

The 102nd anniversary of the Philippine Civil Service gives us an opportunity to rededicate ourselves and reaffirm our oath of office. Let us strengthen our commitment to uphold our responsibility of rendering efficient, effective, and quality service to our people.

Malaki talaga ang ginagampanang papel ng serbisyo sibil, lalo na sa pagbabalangkas at pagpapatupad ng mga programa ng pamahalaan. Inaasahan kong lalong magiging matibay na haligi ng serbisyo sibil ang bawat kawani ng pamahalaan sa pagkamit natin nang matatag na republikang Pilipinas.

Our honorees this afternoon are testimonies to the nobility of the calling of public servants. We are proud of your achievements. You set the example for us, even for me, to follow. You chart the course for us to take so that our voices too may ring with pride when we say that we work in government.

Ugaliin natin angpaghingi ng gabay at pasasalamat sa Dakilang Lumikha. Siya ay nagbigay sa Inyo, sa akin, ng grasya para sa ganoon ay manatili tayo sa mabuting trabaho; at sa ating mga awardees, para talagang umahon ang kanilang mga gawain para makilala ng lahat kung ano ang ibig sabihin ng mabuting civil servant.

Ang kailangan natin ngayon ay sabayang pagkilos, sabayang pagtugon. Tulong-tulong na pag-aksyon sa isang direksyon at isang layunin – ang pagbibigay tulong at serbisyo na makapag-aangat sa pamumuhay ng ating mga kababayan. Sa ganitong paraan lamang natin mabibigyan ng tunay na kahulugan ang mga salitang lingkod bayan.

Congratulations, and may your work be recognized not only in the awards that we are giving this afternoon, but in the better life of our people. Hopefully, not very far from now, can we say that they have been achieved. Congratulations and thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during a Luncheon with the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Luncheon with the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP)

[Delivered at Ballroom 1 and 2, Mandarin Oriental Hotel, Makati City, October 9, 2002]

Thank you Gabby.

Speaker De Venecia please join my table for lunch after my speech. Other members of Congress; Sonny Alvarez; I am not acknowledging any other member of the Cabinet because I tell them they should not make it a habit to follow me all the time where ever I go. Angie Reyes would have come though but he is defending his budget before Congress today. Members of the diplomatic corps; the men in uniform; members of FOCAP; officers; other media practitioners; ladies and gentlemen:

First of all to FOCAP and everybody else who were here last week, thank you for waiting one week for me. I apologize that I have a bout of pharyngitis last week and that prevented me from speaking before you. The night before I was suppose to speak before you.

The night before I was supposed to speak before you in Zamboanga City, an American serviceman died in an explosion. So it's Sgt. Mike Jackson was part of the contingent left behind after exercise Balikatan to complete humanitarian projects in Basilan. We will bring his killers to justice.

His death shall be a monument to the partnership is what I would like to speak about today. This partnership is especially important in our righteous fight against terrorism and poverty.

Today, the war against terrorism has reached another defining moment as the issue of Iraq sharpens in focus. It is a moment for the Philippines to calibrate, recalibrate its foreign policy so that we can continue to achieve our goals of peace, prosperity and stability in the context of the realities lying today in the international and regional environment.

When I first became president, a few days after I became president, before the diplomatic corps in my Vin D'Honneur in their honor, I enumerated these realities. It is my first foreign policy statement after becoming president a year and half ago.

Let me restate these realities today, emphasizing mainly the relationship between the Philippines and the United States.

One reality is that, more and more Philippines foreign policy decisions have really been made in the context of ASEAN. Thus, soon after September 11 last year, we initiated a trilateral agreement with Indonesia and Malaysia to check terrorist incursion in our common seas. Thailand has agreed to join this agreement.

Second, the international Islamic community will continue to be important for the Philippines. Thus, we continue to pursue broad inter faith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity. In fact, this is among the programs of the Christian Democratic International of which Speaker de Venecia is a vice president.

Third, the coming years will see the growing importance of multilateral and inter regional organizations to promote common interests. We look forward to the strengthening of the United Nations for example. Thus, the Philippines supports the case brought by the United States against Iraq before the U.N. Security Council. The U.N. Security Council must give these charges the most urgent and serious consideration for the sake of the whole world.

Fourth, the defense of the nations' sovereignty and the protection of its environment and natural resources can be carried out only to the extent it asserts its rights over maritime territory and gets others to respect those rights. Thus, though this is unrelated to the war against terrorism I am happy that the case against the Chinese fisherman has come to a satisfactory conclusion.

Fifth, our country's economic growth will continue to heavily involve direct foreign investment. This, for instance, gives a strategic importance to our relations with Europe which is now a major investor in the Philippines.

Related to this sixth, a country like the Philippines can benefit most quickly from international tourism. Thus, we deplore that our bid to attract investments and tourism have been sabotaged by those who relish the notoriety brought about by barbaric acts such as hostage taking, political assassination, destruction of property and senseless murder.

Seventh, overseas Filipinos will continue to play a critical role in the country's economic and social stability. Thus, even in the shadow of conflict in Iraq, it is our duty to all Filipinos in the Middle East to prepare for any contingency and to be able to move them to safer ground at a moment's notice.

Finally, but of utmost importance, China, Japan and the United States and their relationships will be the determining influence in the security situation and economic evolution of East Asia.

By virtue of its dominant military and economic order the United States will continue to be an important factor in the affairs of the region and the nation.

The Philippines has had enduring historical, cultural and economic ties with the United States. The Philippines and the United States stood beside each other over a half a century of military cooperation. We fought together in the last World War. We helped maintain the strategic peace of the cold war. Our partnership was redefined with the closure of the military bases in 1992.

The current Philippine-US alliance is a moral partnership. This is a partnership governed by the common belief in strong democratic institutions that will create peace and freedom for people everywhere. We are determined to fight terrorism to the end. We have offered political, security and humanitarian assistance to the United States in the pursuit of her most vital interests against terrorism which coincide with our own.

Our strategic partnership reached a high point in the training exercise Balikatan 02-1. The tenacity of our soldiers coupled with the superior technological assistance of the United States ripened into the correct strategy that has severely decimated the Abu Sayyaf and kept them on the run.

This partnership is fully supported by our people. It is clearly shown in the polls. A minority thinks the Philippines is being slavish to American citizens, to American interests that is, but they do not see the point. Our motivation is not about pleasing America on this issue. Our motivation is, working with the world to save mankind against the perpetuation of terror. Maybe our critics have forgotten the horror of September 11. Maybe they believe that terrorism has gone away, it has disappeared. Maybe they believe that Osama Bin Laden and his cohorts have been reformed. The truth and reality is that we are at war. The whole world is at war with an enemy that is as tenacious and incorrigible as ever in its evil designs. In our own society, we have paid dearly for the persistence of violent groups.

Our efforts at modern democratic governance have been undermined by a climate of incessant conflict. Our determination to bring progress to our nation has been tested by fanatical armed groups who find every ideological excuse to block development. These include the terrorist in the radical left who have lost all moral force to lead any revolution for the poor.

In contrast, our moral partnership with America extends beyond military cooperation. Our strategic partnership with the United States enables our country to maintain political, social and economic stability and growth in an environment of uncertainty and unpredictability. It is a partnership that sustains the most important battles in our own land; the battles against poverty, ignorance, disease and social injustice.

In this pursuit, I met last year with President Bush in Washington. We agreed our military hardware and software for security and development operations. Mutually beneficial trade arrangement, tourism expansion, broader overseas employment for Filipinos, veterans' welfare and direct assistance to Mindanao peace and development program.

The United States Agency for International Development is pouring in some P4 billion assistance to the Philippines for fiscal year 2002, more than half of which is for economic and social projects in Mindanao. This assistance to Mindanao is more than double what USAID provided that island last year.

The agency growth with equity in Mindanao program helps strengthen the competitiveness of Mindanao's fishery, fruit and vegetables industries. It's livelihood enhancement and peace program, or LEAPP, helps former MNLF fighters reintegrate into the local economy. There are already about 13,000 former MNLF fighters who have received such assistance under the program. And now USAID is ready to pilot the same program for the MILF starting with 300 returnees.

The USAID is likewise helping local governments in Mindanao to improve the quality of family planning and rural health services. Efforts are also being exerted to help local governments' combat illegal fishing and logging.

The Bayanihan Assistance which runs from August 1 to December 31 this year aims to improve socio-economic conditions in Basilan and Zamboanga. This entails $2 Million for the construction of hospitals, medical clinics, school buildings, water wells and water treatment facilities.

The next Balikatan which will be held to August or October 2003 will involve the implementation of five security assistance training modules and the improvement of AFP competency on helicopter night flying capability, intelligence fusion, training of light infantry battalion and light reaction companies. These will be supported by some $25 million in military assistance from the United States, and as per my recommendation, it will be done back in the traditional camping grounds of Fort Magsaysay and other nearby camps like Tanay.

America is not only our strategic ally. She is also our largest export market. Cumulatively, she is our largest foreign investor. She is one of our largest tourist markets. She hosts the largest Filipino Community in the world.

The Philippines, therefore, is determined to push forward this relationship to a new era of stronger and more equitable partnership with the United States, a relationship that derive its main promise in greater security and stability for our nation, for the region and the world. We live in trying times. Close partnership and alliances are imperative for peace, security and democracy. This is the strategy of survival. This strategy stands on the determination to shape our relations with America in consonance with existing treaties with our shared goals, but most of all, with our Filipino interests.

Thank you therefore to our friends from FOCAP and the diplomatic community and our policy-makers and policy-implementors for listening to this recapitulation of our foreign policy mainly our policy on the United States.

Now, I'm ready for your questions. Thank You.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 28th Annual Conference of the Financial Executives Institute of the Philippines (FINEX)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 28th Annual Conference of the Financial Executives Institute of the Philippines (FINEX)

[Delivered at the Garden Ballroom, EDSA Shangri-la Hotel, Mandaluyong City, October 11, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Lito Camacho, the head of my economic team.

Chief Manabat, President of FINEX; Mayor Abalos; Edgar Limon, Executive Vice President of FINEX; Benito Soliven, my student; Ronnie Alcantara, Grace Tiongco, Senen Matoto, Esther Magleo, other members and officers of FINEX, Excellencies of the diplomatic corps, other government officials, distinguished members of the financial sector, ladies and gentlemen.

I have always considered FINEX as one of the most important fora for giving policy pronouncements. I have been speaking before FINEX since I was undersecretary of Trade and Industry.

And today, this is an especially important conference especially in these times when business and investment must weave around fluid scenarios of uncertainty.

And so, the financial community must go beyond yourselves as you have recognized, and close ranks and share solutions and resources.

We must identify and focus on key milestone accomplishments, so we have a roadmap.

The U.S. economy is still slow though our exports have been jumping. If you look at the volumes in the ports, they have been more active in this last five months than in the last seven years. Nonetheless, because the U.S. economy is still slow we can't rely, we can't depend on exports for our sustainable growth in the few years to come. It is now up to the domestic economy.

I believe the model we should follow should encourage the shift to new sources of domestic demand rather than rely on exports for our survival. And this new sources though they are not new in the sense that they've been around for a long time but they are new in the sense that we must give them great priority. I would consider most notable among them the capital-efficient small and medium enterprises.

I understand that FINEX has a program to assist these small and medium enterprises, do the documentary requirements to access credit and, therefore, this is a special call to you.

On the part of a government, this model called managed asset reflation involves prudent monetary policy, a gradual reduction in public-sector debt, and a balanced budget in three to four years.

On the part of you, the financial executives, i am asking the banking system to avoid extending credit to unproductive asset sectors such as luxury properties and industries already saddled with excess capacity. Instead, I am asking you to allocate more of your portfolio to the capital-efficient small and medium enterprises.

On my part, I am focusing my energies on this model, and I am leading by example. Though it would be a small portion of the entire resources available in the banking system, I have started the “one town, one product, one million-peso” project as a pump primer to jumpstart the attention to small and medium enterprises. Under this program, a loan of one million pesos shall be lent to SMEs in each of the 1,610 municipalities and cities in the country. The loan shall be utilized for a niche product that has a proven market or the expansion of an existing enterprise.

Aside from SMEs, the main multiplier should be housing. The government does not have the money. So I want to let the private sector, the financial executives drive the domestic economy.

In key areas, I want to free up the private sector from the traditional thinking of bureaucracy at least for a window of 12 months. Thus, in my personal work program for the next 6 months the following are included:

First, SMEs, as I have already explained.

Second, jumpstart housing. How? Banks are very liquid. Even medium-sized banks have billions in t-bills. We will let the private sector jumpstart the housing sector by giving banks policy signal incentives to fund developers on their own then get bureaucracy out of their way.

The middle-income sub-sector, for instance, five hundred thousand pesos to 2 million pesos is bankable even if the market is not as large as the socialized sub-sector, but we must start somewhere. The central bank’s monetary board is the key to liberate the banks. And I am gratified that the BSP has now agreed to increase the loan collateral value for housing accounts to 80 – 90 percent of the loan value. I have also asked the BSP to grant the Agri-Agra reserve eligibility for new housing loans up to 2 million pesos. And they have been quite sympathetic with this request. To follow-up and make sure that these circulars are brought out and carried out is the mandate of Secretary Mar Roxas, the government representative in the monetary board. It is his mandate to overcome traditional thinking in the bureaucracy.

Third item in my work program is to reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon. Presidential adviser Cito Lorenzo and Al Cusi, general manager of the Philippine Ports Authority, have started doing something about these rates by promoting competition at the ports, addressing reported overcharging in cargo-handling tariff, reducing the government share of port fees to 10 percent, amending the bidding terms of reference for cargo-handling services. This reform is now incorporated in the bidding terms to focus on lower rates for the bidders services and not how much will be the share they’ll give the government, and suspending previously approved increases in wharfage and usage fees. This policy bottlenecks now out of the way, I have now instructed DBP to lead for the other measures to bring down cargo rates. DBP has put in place a 30 billion-peso credit facility to fund all of these things that are not very clear in the screen but DBP should have a prospectus to show this in a very, very big map. Because when they gave it to me in a small map, I couldn’t read anything. So I have this now in my office of the president, and I look at it everyday and I have it memorized.

Anyway, this is DBP’s logistics highway. And to finance this, DBP has put together this project, complex of projects. They are worth 30 billion pesos and DBP has a financing facility for loans up to 15 years for financing equipment and infrastructure projects for a sustainable distribution system inherent to maritime transport and related land transport.

This project is geared towards the development of progressive long-haul shipping to constitute the country’s national backbone in the transport of bulk products and the development of a ro-ro ferry and road network to link the islands to the growth centers of the country.

I have instructed Liani Nañagas to go full blast and concentrate DBP on this. Examples would be for DBP to finance logistics, storage and port facilities in Mindanao. Also shipyards, post-harvest facilities and institutional support services like maritime schools and technical and vocational training institutes are included in the program. So with RO-RO ships and ports.

This is open to investors with project feasibility studies, of course, and with the capacity to put up 50 percent equity and with the project equipment as collateral cover. The rates are negotiable and can be as low as 11 percent in peso terms, fixed for the duration of the loan.

So I asked FINEX to promote investments in these areas. There's this whole list of projects which you can't read. But this is to whet your appetite to get the prospectus from the DBP. And if you have investors in any of these areas that are enumerated then please get a credit facility from the DBP within the next six months.

Fourth item in my work program — infrastructure to decongest Metro Manila. We will focus on beginning construction of the commuter links between Metro Manila north to Clark such as northrail, and south to Batangas Port such as completing the tollroad all the way to Batangas Port. This will make housing projects outside of Metro Manila, where land is cheaper and the lifestyle more conducive to family viable. Once the developer see the construction of the transport links breaking ground, hopefully they, with your support will begin work on the ancillary housing projects.

Incidentally again, to lead by example and to jumpstart — though we want this to be primarily a private sector endeavor — I have asked Sonny Vistan to be a special assistant for private sector housing by putting together a package whereby he will make available the inventory of lands owned by the government institutions which will serve as the government equity for housing for government employees. But these lands will be made available for the private developers to put up. With government land being the equity that should make housing truly affordable.

Within Metro Manila, we will monitor the smooth start of the MRT final linkage with LRT. Also within Metro Manila, I have instructed MMDA's BF Fernando to sit down with DPWH's Datumanong (Sim Datumanong) and PAGCOR's Efren Genuino. Since PAGCOR financed the lighting of C-5, which has drawn praises from the public, I have asked the three of them to review MMDA's infrastructure program for Metro Manila. Oh! No, not MMDA's program, DPWH's program for Metro Manila. The mission is to ensure that the program makes sense, and will produce visible results quickly.

Fifth item in the work program, to help Lito Camacho, will be PCGG contribution to fiscal resources. I have instructed my legal counsel Nonong Cruz to work with PCGG Chair Haydee Yorac to expedite the release of the 600 million-dollar Marcos deposit with the PNB. I am also asking Haydee to already work to liquify the coco levy's remaining 27 percent of SMC, which if sold thru bidding, will generate substantial dollars and funding for our system.

Six item in my work program — make Makati a specific urban tourist destination. The D.O.T.-Mckinsey study says that along with Cebu-Bohol, the most popular tourist destination in the Philippines is still Metro Manila. We can combine this finding with the fact that the biggest spending Japanese tourist is the single working female. When I went to Malampaya to inspect the facilities there, and Mar Roxas waited for me in El Nido, while he was waiting for me to pick him up in the helicopter, he came across a group of young Japanese working females. And naturally, they bonded immediately and chatted — that's Mar Roxas for you. but what he found out is that they were spending 1,800 dollars each for four days. That is the kind of tourist we want.

This kind of tourist, the Japanese working female, prefers urbanized destinations like Hongkong and Honolulu, where they travel in small groups of friends for shopping and R & R. Given these two findings, Metro Manila's continuing relative attractiveness and the spending habits of the biggest tourism spender market segment, Makati, with its compact, easy to secure location, world-class malls, entertainment facilities, and cheap shopping can be promoted as an attractive destination, perhaps with a side trip to Boracay or similar resort as part of a package. I can read Benhur Abalos' mind. Mandaluyong can also qualify for that. Well, Benhur you are welcome to put together a similar package.

A Hawaii-based expert who works with an international consultancy firm specializing in tourism recently observed that with proper packaging, Makati offers more than Honolulu does. So I have instructed the D.O.T. to specifically promote this concept to the Japan's tourist agencies and bureaus by hosting groups of officials of such agencies and bureaus to come to the Philippines to see for themselves. Once these are on board, the Japanese mentality of going by groups and the word of mouth will take care of the rest.

Seventh item in my work program for the next six months is to stimulate private investment in agriculture. This may require legislation but it is worth pursuing. The biggest obstacle to the free flow of private sector investments into agriculture is the rigidity of second-round land transfers under carp, that is agri-business' entrepreneurs are not permitted to consolidate land that has been carped in order to create economic-sized estates. This also discourages you, the banks from accepting such land as collateral. So I have tasked Lito Sarmiento and Cito Lorenzo to work with D.A. and DAR on this problem. Sergio Osmeña, I believe last year, filed a bill to address this issue. And I have counted it as one of my five top priority legislation when I made my state of the nation address this year.

Even as I believe that this work program which had seven points for the next six months will create economic impact, I am also keeping watch over potential land mines in the near term. And that gives me an eight item in the work program.

The upward trend in oil prices is a key point of focus. While imported crude oil now accounts for a mere 11.75 percent of the power generation mix — unlike in the last gulf war when it was the majority of our requirements — the transportation sector is heavily dependent on oil imports.

The social impact of transport cost cannot be overstated. I am determined to undertake all reasonable means to keep transport costs down.

I have instructed Transportation Secretary Larry Mendoza — and Lito Camacho knows about some of these because he would be involved — to explore ways and means to stem the upward pressure on fares. Larry is in constant dialogue with various groups in the transport sector to explore other forms of reasonable relief from rising costs other than just merely raising transport fares. The good news is that MRT 3, LRT1 and the Philippine National Railways are not going to hike ticket charges.

Let me take this opportunity to assure everyone that the supply of oil and oil products in the country is more than sufficient and adequate. We have a highly diversified source of oil products. Thus, any possibility of a supply shortage is negligible.

Upon my instruction, Energy Secretary Vince Perez has been monitoring even more closely the inventory levels of oil and oil products in the country. Our country's oil inventory levels remain within the normal range of between 50 to 65 days supply, which in itself is sufficient to see the country through any of the foreseeable scenarios in the case of a war against Iraq.

There has not been in the last twenty years, an incidence of serious supply interruption to world's oil supply even during the desert storm of 1991.

We can also take comfort in the fact that today the Philippines currently sources its oil products from 15 different countries, of which only three are in the middle east. This will give us alternative sources. Following a series of meetings with Vince, the local downstream oil players continuously and unanimously reassured us that they have arrangements in place to ensure a steady and sufficient supply.

The government has and will continue to pursue arrangements with oil supplies including Russia for alternative deliveries of products that will provide us an uninterrupted supply in the likely event that the contingencies will be needed.

The government will also exhaust all possible avenues to provide even more supply security to the Filipino people within the limits of practicality and economic good sense. I have instructed Vince to continue to examine stockpiling measures and demand-side management contingency plans. These will be implemented if they ever become necessary and for as long as they will not needlessly increase the price of our oil products.

Financial executives, these are some of the things that will occupy... Oh, these are most of the things that will occupy my mind for the next six months. Be with me in carrying out these initiatives.

Let us join hands in meeting formidable challenges. Our country deserves our best working together. Our country deserves our looking beyond ourselves in order to make sure that our economy makes it through this trying times. And that we all build a strong republic to win the battle against poverty within the decade.

Thank you.

Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa pagdiriwang ng ika-63 anibersaryo ng pagkakatatag ng Lungsod ng Quezon at Gabi ng Parangal

Maraming salamat Mayor Sonny Belmonte sa iyong napakagandang pagpakilala sa akin. At gusto ko lamang sabihin na kung natupad ko 'yung ilang mga sinabi mong natupad ko sa isang taon at kalahating pagka-pangulo ko. Ito ay dahil meron akong mga gabay at mga nagsusuporta sa akin na matatag kagaya ni Speaker Sonny Belmonte noon at ngayon Mayor Sonny Belmonte ng Quezon City.

Binabati ko rin ang ibang mga officials ng Quezon City sa pamumuno ng ating dalawang Ccongressman and woman na narito ngayon — si Congressman Chuck Mathay; at saka si Congresswoman Naneth Daza; pati na rin 'yung members ng city council, sa pamumuno ni Vice Mayor Herbert Bautista; at saka 'yung mga barangay chairmen sa pamumuno ng ADC president si Almario Francisco; binabati ko 'yung mga ating mga awardees; unang-una 'yung nagbibigay ng napakaraming trabaho at buwis sa Quezon City, ang outstanding businessman na si Ginoong Henry Sy; pinagmamalaki ko rin na 'yung anak n'ya na aking ka-eskwela ay number 39 sa fortune women. Mas lalong malaking karangalan pa 'yon. International Fortune ha, hindi 'yung fortune dito sa Pilipinas. Kaya naman hindi tayo nakakaila na ang daming trabaho ang nabibigay ni ginoong Henry Sy. At dahil anak n'ya one of the 39 top businesswomen in the whole world, pangalawang henerasyon pa natin maaasahan nating marami pang trabaho at buwis ang makukuha ng Quezon City sa pamilya ni Henry Sy.

Doon sa mga ibang awardee naman. Binabati ko at ipinagmamalaki ko. Isa sa pinaka-naaasahan kong Cabinet member — si Secretary Angelo Reyes. At nandito ang minamahal n'yang nanay. Congratulations, Mrs. Reyes. Dahil parating sinasabi ni angie na kung ano s'ya ngayon ang naghugis sa kanya ay 'yung kanyang nanay na si Mrs. Reyes. Kaya tamang-tama naman na naririto s'ya para sa ganun ay makibahagi rin sa gantimpala ni Secretary Reyes bilang outstanding soldier ng Quezon City.

Binabati ko rin ang ilang mga ka-contemporary ng aking mga magulang. Napaka-importante rin sila sa ating bansa at napaka-importante rin sa Quezon City. Unang-una, 'yung isa sa mga dalubhasa ng reporma sa lupa — si Justice Mila German. Isa ring contemporary ng aking nanay. Kapwa doktora ng aking nanay at 'nung panahon kong kami ay mga bata, alam na niya isa sa pinaka de kampanyang pediatrician — si Dra. Fe del Mundo. Magugulat kayo na masasabi kong kaibigan ng aking tatay dahil ang tatay ko ay ng first wife n'ya bago s'ya nabyudo ay kapatid ng mga artista. Kaya isang artistang kaibigan din n'yang nakilala ko at 'nung ako'y batang maliit parati pinapanood ko sya sa mga party. Ganun pa rin ang itsura n'ya ang hanggang ngayon — si binibining Rosa Rosal.

Binabati ko rin, wala s'ya ngayong gabi. Sabi nga ng anak n'ya, he would have loved to be here pero may ka-edad na rin at may sakit. Pero malaki ang kanyang contribution sa edukasyon — si Dr. Onofre Corpuz. Kaya binabati ko ang kanyang anak. At 'yung mga medyo ka edad ko. 'Yung naaalala ko pa, we were so proud nung naging grand master at world champion s'ya ng chess — si Eugene Torre. At s'yempre hanggang ngayon pinapanood pa natin s'ya sa television, nahuli dahil sinirado n'ya 'yung Frontpage, ngayon bukas s'ya ang Frontpage — si Mel Tiangco. Tapos nun mas mababang henerasyon naman, mas batang henerasyon, 'yung bagong henerasyon. Nasa Amerika s'ya ngayon ngunit napakalaki na kanyang tulong sa mga kabataan, sa kalikasan at 'yan ay si Gina Llopez na rine-represent ngayon ng aking ka-eskwela na si Dulce. Wala rito si Pangulong Aquino pero alam naman ng lahat s'ya ay nakatira sa 55th Times street. At marami s'yang nagawa sa ating bansa. Hanggang ngayon bilang Former President marami pa rin s'yang naibibigay n a payo sa inyong lingkod. Halimbawa, dito sa ating pinaghahandaan na baka magkaroon ng giyera sa Middle East at kung papano asikasuhin 'yung ating mga overseas workers sa Middle East dahil noong 1991 ay naranasan na rin n'ya 'yung Operation Desert Storm. Meron s'yang mga naipahayag at naibahagi sa akin sa kasaysayan. So, hanggang ngayon malaki pa rin ang tulong sa ating bansa ni President Cory Aquino.

At isang ... Ewan ko kung contemporary ko ba s'ya, contemporary ko na rin at parati tayong nanonood sa kanya lalo na 'nung panahon ng lahar — si Dr. Rey Punongbayan.

Ang ganda-ganda ng pagpili ng ating mga pangunahing mamamayan ng Quezon City. Ngunit sabi ni Sonny Belmonte wala s'yang kinalaman sa mga pagpipili kung sino ang magiging outstanding citizens. Sa palagay ko, una sa lahat batiin pa rin natin si Sonny Belmonte dahil bagamat hindi s'ya ang pumili ng mga awardees meron s'yang innovation dahil ito ang first time na merong award para sa outstanding citizens ng Quezon City.

Doon naman sa pagpili, palagay ko dapat mag-congratulate tayo doon sa chairman ng foundation day activity — si Dr. Vic Vic Enrigo. Naririto ang ating mga, hindi lang si Mr. Henry Sy, narito rin 'yung mga iba't-ibang businessmen na aktibo dito sa Quezon City. Binabati ko sila lahat sa pangunguna ng pangulo ng PCCI na si Sergio Luis Ortiz, si Jun. Saan s'ya rito? Sabi dumating na raw. Saan si Jun? Huh, wala pa. Ok, wala nga s'ya kanina, sabi dumating na s'ya. At 'yung tiga-Quezon City naman na si Nathan Zulueta.

Mga panauhin, gaya nga ng sabi ni Sonny Belmonte, meron pa akong sore throat hanggang ngayon. Kaya hindi ako magtatagal ng aking pagbabati sa inyo. Gusto ko lamang sabihin na itong lungsod ng Quezon City ay napaka-importante sa ating bansa. Kung anong anyo ng Quezon City, ganun ang anyo ng ating bansa. Dahil una sa lahat, Quezon City ang ating capital city. At pangalawa, Quezon City ang pinakamalaking lungsod sa buong Pilipinas. In fact, kung titingnan mo ang mga probinsya, tatlo lamang ang probinsyang mas malaki kesa sa Quezon City, dalawa lang ang mas malaki probinsya kesa sa Quezon City. Kaya ang Quezon City kahit na ituturing mong probinsya, number 3 biggest province sa ating bansa. Kaya syempre kung ano ang anyo Quezon City, ganun ang anyo ng ating bansa. At malaki ang problema ng Quezon City dahil bagamat s'ya ang pinaka malaking syudad at kung iisipin mong probinsya, s'ya na ang pinaka pangatlong pinakamalaking probinsya. S'ya rin ang pinakamalaking poverty incidence. Napakarami ang mahihirap sa Quezon City. Napakarami ang maralitang taga-lungsod na iba ang anyo ng kahirapan sa lungsod kung ihahambing natin sa kahirapan sa probinsya. 'Yun na lang ang hamon ni Mayor Sonny Belmonte na kailangan sugpuin ang problema ng kahirapan sa Quezon City. Dahil sa laki ng Quezon City at dahil sa dami ng mahihirap sa Quezon City. Malaking kontribusyon 'yun sa pagsugpo ng kahirapan sa ating buong bansa.

At kailangan natin 'yun. Ngunit doon sa hamon ng paglaban sa kahirapan, maraming kahirapan din ang magaganap ng isang administrator o isang executive ng isang lugar. Kaya kung gusto nating masugpo ang kahirapan sa quezon city maging sa buong pilipinas, ang kailangan natin ay malakas na republika. At ano ang kailangan ng malakas na republika. Malakas na mga insitutusyon at kasama sa malalakas na institusyon na kailangan para sa malakas na republika ay 'yung mabisang pamahalaan mula sa national government hanggang sa local government hanggang sa mga bukrasya na sila ay inaasahan nating malasakit sa taumbayan. At 'yung relasyon sa Kongreso at sa Senado, ang gusto natin ay una sa lahat, hindi magkatunggali pero gusto rin natin ay hindi horse trading ang ginagamit para magkaisa.

Kaya kanina nung nagsimula ako ng aking pagbabati, 'yun nga ang sinabi ko — bagong pangulo ako, si Sonny Belmonte ay naging speaker of the House of Representatives. At kahit na minana ko 'yung kongreso na 'yun, kaya maraming hindi ko kapartido. Maaalala n'yo nagpalit tayo ng administrasyon. Sa laki ng suporta ng mga kasamahan ni Sonny Belmonte, hindi adversarial ang relasyon ng kongreso at presidency. At hindi rin horse trading ang ginamit ni Sonny para mapasa 'yung mga importanteng batas na kinailangan ko 'nung s'ya ay speaker. Kaya doon pa man sa kongreso tumulong na si Sonny sa akin na magtayo ng matatag na republika.

Kaya hindi tayo nagulat noong si Sonny ay nanalo bilang Mayor ng Quezon City. Di ba Sonny sa dami ng barangay, dalawang barangay lang natalo sa Sonny. 'Yung isang barangay pa, ano 30 votes, dun s'ya natalo. At pagkatapos nun ay naging mayor s'ya at 'yun na nga naging mayor s'ya sa madaling panahon. Ang daming problema ang kanyang nasagot at nasugpo. Kaya doon sa matatag na republika kailangan din natin na talagang lumitaw ang creativity ng ating mga local governments. At 'yun ay nakikita dito sa Quezon City.

Kaya ako'y nasisiyahan na maging bahagi nitong selebrasyon ngayong gabi. At gusto kong batiin si Sonny, gusto kong batiin kayong lahat — mga officials na tumutulong sa kanya — para maging malakas ang lungsod, ang puno ng ating bansa. At binabati ko 'yung mga outstanding citizens ng Quezon City dahil kayo rin ay tumutulong para ang lungsod ng Quezon City ay isang matatag na lungsod na kailangan na ganon ang pinakamalaking lungsod at pinaka-pinunong lungsod. Dahil uulitin ko, kung ano ang anyo ng Quezon City, ganun ang anyo ng republika ng Pilipinas.

Kaya muli — sa ating honorees, sa officials ng Quezon City at lalo na sa punong lungsod ng Quezon City. Happy Anniversary at congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the first year anniversary celebration of the Malampaya-Camago Deepwater Gas and launching ceremony of the Natural Gas for Public Transport Program

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the first year anniversary celebration of the Malampaya-Camago Deepwater Gas to power project and launching ceremony of the Natural Gas for Public Transport Program

[Delivered at the Department of Energy Compound, Makati City, October 16, 2002]

Good morning.

Secretary Vince Perez; Secretary Llarry Mendoza; MMDA Chairman Bayani Fernando; PNOC Chairman Serge Apostol; the other undersecretaries who are here, Art Valdez of DOTC; Demetrio Ignacio of DENR; Emmanuel de Dios of DOE; Pedro Aquino of PNOC; our friend from SPECS, Jeremy cliff; our investors and friends of the energy sectors; yung mga lider ng transport sector si Claire at lahat ng mga bus operators; at jeepney operators na narito:

Salamat muli dahil pumayag sila na hindi muna magtataas ng presyo ng transportasyon. Ang hinihingi lamang nila sikapin naman natin ng buong — kung sinong makangyarihan sa presyo na hindi lumampas sa 15.50 ang presyo ng diesel.

Kaya itong araw na ito, eto ang ating sinisikap nga na maisigurado ngayon at sa mga mas matagal ng panahon. A year ago we opened the flow of Malampaya deep water gas to power project to its on-shore plant in Batangas. Malampaya is a partnership between Shell, Chevron and PNOC. Kaya, dito natin sine-celebrate ang anniversary sa PNOC compound. That event reduced the dependence of our power sector on petroleum.

Now, on this first anniversary we want to move a step forward in independence not just the independence of the power sector but the independence of the transport sector.

So, first and foremost what I did was to, in order to propagate that there is a vehicle that does not rely completely on gas, gasoline, the other day when i visited Toyota to listen to their expansion plans where they will produce transmission for the Japanese market, they also donated to the Office of the President a vehicle that runs only one half on gasoline. It runs one half on gasoline, and one half on the battery power. So, this oh its raining, I'll rush my announcements. This an important new vehicle so I'm lending it to the Department of Energy so that they can propagate and demonstrate and let people know about its availability because that reduces our dependence on fuel gasoline.

And I'm also pleased today to let you know that since Malampaya has been operating, now Sta. Rita first gas, San Lorenzo gas, Ilijan all of these gas plants are using Malampaya gas with the combined capacity 2700 megawatts. And therefore they contribute 18 percent of our energy requirements. And if there should be a which is not likely, a crisis of supply from the Middle East, Malampaya can even provide up to 25 percent of our requirements. Versatility is imperative in the long term.

And aside from energy self-sufficiency the good thing about Malampaya, is that the energy they are providing us is clean energy. And it's a good new way of thinking.

So much so, that... Naku! Talagang bibilisan ko na ito umuulan... In so much so that in the Johannesburg Summit the Malampaya Project got an award as outstanding investment on sustainable development.

And now we have a relevant twin event to reduce our dependence on gasoline, on oil and also to bring about clean, clean fuel for our transport sector.

Is this on the road this diesel engine Isuzu Highlander vehicle? The one that ah, ok the DOE has converted a diesel engine Isuzu Highlander vehicle to a 100 percent natural gas engine unit. That's the first natural gas vehicle or NGV in the country. Where's that? Parked over there. Okay. It should have been here. But anyway what do I expect, I only told Vince Perez about this yesterday afternoon.

Anyway, this was followed by the conversion of three more vehicles, two shuttle buses, there; two shuttle buses in December 2001 and January 2002 and the Nissan Patrol service vehicle, over there in January 2002. Then PNOC jointly with Petron as developed the Enviro 2002 taxi units, this one. So, that's why we have our transport sector here. This is Filipino resourcefulness at its best. And we want to have all of these on the ground, on the street, on the roads so that we can be less dependent on oil, but also more in keeping with clean sources of energy.

So, I congratulate the people of this pioneering venture — the DOE, under Secretary Vince Perez, PNOC under Serge Apostol and Petronas Malaysia, those who developed these vehicles.

And now, I want to promote for the transport sector this kind of fuel, the environment-friendly compressed natural gas.

Accordingly, in order to promote the use of compressed natural gas, we are doing the following policy initiatives:

One, the DTO will classify natural gas conversion kit as spare parts. Therefore the tariff will only be one percent.

Two, the BOI will also enhance the existing package for natural gas conversion kits, original engine manufacturers, and other related facilities. So more incentives from the BOI.

Third, the DOTC, through the LTO, will consider, as having complied with a mission standard, those who use natural gas.

Fourth, the one other red tape removed. Okay fourth, the LTFRB, Dante Lantin is here. Very good friend of the transport sector they always come to a good consensus. The LTFRB will grant three franchises for natural gas bus fleet—two for the Batangas-Manila route. Ang tawag pala doon ngayon ay batman route, Batangas-Manila eh. And one for the Batangas-Bicol route. And I understand that there's already a bus company that intends to undertake a pilot project involving up to 100 buses next year using compressed natural gas. I am asking also shell, Caltex, Chevron, Texaco and first gas to construct CNG refilling stations and related facilities. And I am asking the Malampaya consortium to supply natural gas for transport at one half the price of diesel. That's great ha.

Fifth, the DENR shall fast track the issuance of the ECC needed for the natural gas facilities and the refilling station. Demet? Okay. Good.

Sixth, the DBP will establish a financing window to promote the use of natural gas vehicles and related infrastructure facilities.

Seventh, the DOST will promote and develop locally manufactured conversion kit.

Eighth, according to MMDA Bayani Fernando, he will consider opening c-5 to buses, but only for buses that use CNG. Now where is that?

The DOE will spearhead all these efforts. That's why it has turned over to me today the natural gas policy and regulatory framework, and this part of the longer term plan of the DOE which is the holistic energy plan for our country for the next decade.

So once again, we congratulate Malampaya, all the partners, Shell, Chevron and PNOC where we are holding the celebration today on the first anniversary, and to all the movers and shakers of our new natural gas transport program, more power to you.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 80th Foundation Anniversary and 45th Nurses Week Annual Convention of the Philippine Nurses Association, Inc.

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 80th Foundation Anniversary and 45th Nurses Week Annual Convention of the Philippine Nurses Association, Inc.

[Delivered at the Millennium Hall, Fiesta Pavilion, Manila Hotel, October 21, 2002]

Maraming salamat kay Dr. Cordero, ang pangulo ng Philippine Nurses Association.

I would also like to greet Commissioner Antoinette Ibe of the Professional Regulation Commission; Dr. Yu-mei Chao, Vice President, International Council of Nurses, who looks like a Ffilipina — look at her; si Don Emilio Yap ang ating host; Ms. Linell Malimbag, the Chairperson of the Philippine Nurses Association; Marilyn Yap, the Overall Chairperson of the convention; Mrs. Ruth Padilla, the Vice President of the Philippine Nurses Association; other officers and members of the nursing profession; distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen: good noon to all of you.

Careng Cabalen kong Capampangan na nurses maayap aldaw kekongan. Dagiti kakailayak ni Ruth ken kakailayak ko naimbag nga malem yo amin ading. Sa atong mga nurses gikan pa sa Mindanao, maayong ugto kaninyong tanan. Sa mga nurses nga kasimanwa sang akong bana nga ilonggo, maayong ugto sa inyo nga tanan.

Sa inyong lahat binibigay ko ang aking congratulations. Congratulations to the Philippine Nurses Association because your association is 80 years old, 80th founding anniversary of your association and the observance of the Nurses Week in our country.

I'm happy to be here because my mother, the late Dr. Evangelina Macaraeg-Macapagal, was once an honorary president of your association. As president, of course, for me it's hard to be honorary president of anything but it has been a pleasure and pride for me to have worked with nurses throughout my own professional career — perhaps some of them are here with us today. I have worked with nurses in community service especially in times of calamity in my work in social welfare.

And having worked with you, I have witnessed your compassion, your courage, your patriotism, your civic spirit in quiet acts of selfless service and heroism.

Indeed, heroism is what we need most today as our nation undergoes the trials of fighting terrorism, poverty and corruption. There are those who continue to try to push us back, to inflict fear in us, to paralyze our efforts through terrorism and corruption, which are both most inhuman deeds, but we shall not be cowed.

People of less temper would cower at the call of duty, but not the nurses. And dramatically, symbolically not one nurse that we know, the one who offered her life for the sake of the welfare of others. We have a symbol of nursing courage at its greatest. Who among us would ever forget the modern day heroism. We don't have to talk about Florence Nightingale anymore, we have our own Eediborah Pamaran Yap.

Even in the darkest depths of adversity, Ediborah stuck to her professional oath. She is our model of devotion not just to her profession but of humankind. Gracia Burnham told us and her children many stories of how she was a true nurse and heroine for all seasons.

Indeed, the heroism of a nurse in a war-torn province has become a defining point of what it truly is to be of service to others.

It also defines terrorism as a universal fight and not the challenge of a single profession or a single nation or a single region. The tragedies of Bali and Zamboanga once again show that terrorism knows no boundaries. We must work together to fight terrorism. We cannot sit back and wait, we must take this fight to the terrorists before they undermine our very way of living.

We understand the challenge terrorism poses for all people that value peace and order. And certainly, nurses enter the profession because you value peace and care for one another. And for my part, from the moment I took office, I declared war on terrorism in the Philippines. Because I have inherited the terrorism especially from the Abu Sayyaf. A few of my opponents have criticized my decision, but I have to tell you: I make no apologies for aggressively seeking to root out terrorism in the Philippines and to putting considerable effort into seeking regional consensus on fighting terrorism.

These terrorists have proven once again that they are not guided by moral or religious conviction. They are nothing more than murderers of innocent people driven by an ideology of mayhem. We have experienced this mindless violence in the Philippines for sometime. Your nurses have experienced this violence. Ediborah is the one who made the greatest sacrifice among them. But there are many other nurses who continue to labor under the threat from terrorist. The only antidote is to have no fear and to crush their efforts.

The story of Ediborah Yap defines the nursing profession as the kind of profession where greatness beckons every hour. Greatness is not only there in her spectacular story. It is in the story of every nurse who leaves her family to work abroad, to secure a home and a future for them. Greatness is for the nurse who stays with her family to work here, to serve her countrymen in the most isolated far-flung places.

The exodus of nurses is an economic issue. Skilled nurses are being offered far higher salaries and benefit in other countries. While it is good for individual nurses, this quantum leap in the world demand for nurses puts a strain on nursing education and on the nursing profession in the Philippines. Thus, we must seek a balanced strategy of professional development and deployment.

As a result of the continuing dialogue with the nursing sector, reforms are moving forward.

And today, I am pleased to let you know that I have signed into law the Nursing Act of 2002. As you very well know, because you have been working with the government, with Congress and the Senate for this bill, the Nursing Act of 2002 makes the nursing profession more responsive to the ever-changing health needs of our country and the whole world.

I must, of course, thank both houses of congress for their leadership in this cause. I would like to make special mention of Senator Juan Flavio Velasco, the sponsor in the Senate and the author in the house, the husband of Ruth Padilla. also the committee sponsor in the house, Congressman Eladio Jala.

The Nursing Act emphasizes the expansion of the nurses' role to include comprehensive specialty programs, it establishes a minimum base pay for nurses working in government and abroad; it expands the board of nursing membership and enhancement of their functions.

We welcome your efforts to promote your sectoral interests through the democratic process. You were the ones who pushed for this law. Congratulations to all of you.

By enhancing the functions of the board of nursing, the nursing act enhances the professionalism of your calling. The nursing license according to the law identifies you as a true professional and one of good moral character.

I am thinking of another kind of identification system. I wish we could have an effective system that will identify not only the professionals and those of good moral character but also identify the wrongdoers in government especially those involved in anomalies, and be able to prosecute them and send them to jail.

For example, there's the alleged scandal at the Philippine Estates Authority or PEA particularly the allegations of overpricing in the construction of the 8-lane boulevard in the reclaimed area in Pasay City.

Nabasa ko na nagpalabas na ng desisyon kamakalawa ang Senate Blue Ribbon Committee na itong kontrata raw ay dumaan sa tamang proseso, kanya lamang may kataasan pa rin na maituturing ang kabuuang halaga ng paggawa ng kalsada dito sa may reclamation area.

Kaya dahil doon hindi pa rin ako kontento. I still wish to go to the bottom of the controversy, determine the truth, identify the wrongdoers, if any, clear the innocent and possibly revamp the pea for being embroiled in many scandals.

In order to clean up this mess and regain the trust of the public in the PEA and other institutions and government itself:

First, I am ordering the state probers investigating the pea anomaly to speed up the pace of work, unmask the guilty parties, and submit a final report at the earliest possible time;

Second, as you know I have ordered the pea board to go on leave, and I am appointing an interim board of directors. I am ordering the interim board, the top officials and employees of the PEA to cooperate fully with the investigation and conduct a parallel inquiry into the road construction at the reclamation area;

Third, I have ordered the board to make its work fully transparent and above suspicion;

And fourth, I hereby suspend all pending and planned projects of the PEA, especially those requiring public bidding, until the investigation of the alleged overpricing of the road at the reclamation area shall have been completed;

Fifth, if there are members of the regular board of directors — the ones who are on leave — if there are any of them who wish to submit their resignations, I shall be pleased to accept their resignation without prejudice to the prosecution if recommended by the Department of Justice or the Senate Blue Ribbon Committee.

Inaasahan ko na ang mga hakbang na ito ay makakatulong sa paglutas sa kontrobersyang kinasasangkutan ng pea, ng ilang kasapi ng pea board of directors at iba pang mga opisyal ng Philippine Estates Authority.

Ang lahat ng kagawaran at tanggapaning aking inutusan at inatasanang tumulong sa kasong ito ay inaasahan kong kikilos nang mabilis at maayos para maparusahan ang nagkasala at malinisan ang pangalan ng mga inosente.

I share these national concerns with you even though they are not specific to the nursing profession because I support broader political participation by our nurses. I urge you to consider fielding a candidate for sectoral representation in Congress, along with the others from the allied medical professions. There should be no limit to constructive political involvement by any group in our society.

Nurses of the Philippines, the nation needs you, it needs you to take care of the sick. It needs you to prevent having people get sick. But it also needs you to be concerned for its overall well being. The nation needs you to be involved in the schools, in the clinics but also in the community. Let us be allies not only in curing people, not only in preventing sickness but in uplifting people's lives and in fighting poverty, terrorism and corruption.

On this note, let me express once more my deep appreciation for this opportunity to be with you, the professionals, among professionals. I hope we will always be partners for a strong republic.

Mabuhay ang mga narses na Pilipino!

Thank you and may God bless us all.

Speech of President Arroyo during a Dinner with the Filipino-American community of Hawaii

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Dinner with the Filipino-American community of Hawaii

[Delivered at the Tapa Ballroom, Hilton Hawaiian Village Hotel, Honolulu, Hawaii, U.S.A., October 24, 2002]

Thank you very much.

Maraming salamat, Ambassador Albert del Rosario.

And to all of you a warm Aloha!

We're all very happy to be here with you. Our delegation are here with us tonight and I'd like to introduce them to you: we have Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye. He used to be Congressman and City Mayor of Muntinlupa; head of the Presidential Management Staff, Silvestre Afable; and of course, you have met Ambassador del Rosario and you have met Consul General Rolando Gregorio.

Kasama ko ngayong gabi ang aking kabiya, si Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo.

And may I greet our other guests here from the government and the spiritual leadership of Hawaii. Our honoree whom we have conferred the highest award the Philippine government can give, Governor Ben Cayetano and his lovely first lady, Vicky; we must also greet our champion in the U.S. Senate, Senator Dan Inouye; also a member of the house of representatives so-called Philippine caucus made up of the friends of the Filipino people in the U.S. Congress, Congressman Neil Abeilcrombe; the man who sends us all those marines and seabees in our Balikatan exercises, Admiral Thomas Fargo and Mrs. Fargo; thank you also Mayor Jeremy Harris for your very kind welcome in proclaiming this day as Gloria Arroyo day; I would also like to greet Lieutenant Governor Mazie Hirono; Mr. Nathan Oshima; the honorable state senators and congressmen of the State of Hawaii; our spiritual leader here, Bishop Francis de Lorenzo; and still very well known in the Philippines, the Honorable George Ariyosi, former Governor of Hawaii.

Kada kayo nga kakailayak ti bangir ni mamang ko nga maysa nga Ilokana gapo Pangasinan. Naimbag nga rabi-i yo amin. Agyamanak kada kayo ti panag-rugi yo ti Philippine community ti Hawaii idi pay 1906.

Ampu malugud kung Cabalen Capangpangan, pasalamatan cu pung lubus ing pamanyaup yu careng Cabelen tamo a pininsala ning bulkang Pinatubo.

Sa akong mga kaubanang taga-Mindanao asa ako nidako, daghan salamat sa inyong lungsuranon ug manggiloy-on nga proyekto sa mga dapit sa Mindanao.

Kag sa mga kasimanwa sang akong bana nga Ilonggo, salamat gid sa inyong bulig sa Bisayas.

Sa mga tugang kong Bicolano, dios mabalos sa pagtabang nindo sa mga mayong swerteng tao sa rehiyon Bikol.

At sa inyong lahat, maraming salamat sa inyong walang sawang pagtulog sa mga nangangailangan sa ating bansa.

Hawaii is very important to the Filipino people. It is also very important personally to my husband and myself because when we got married many, many years ago, we spent our honeymoon here in Hawaii. And this time, when I was scheduled to come here on the way to APEC and then the bombings occurred in Southeast Asia, I felt that I should cancel my trip as I understand President Putin has cancelled his trip because he has a hostage situation in Russia. I learned though that tonight's affair was already sold out so, therefore, I would have disappointed you so much if I had not come. It was a great dilemma for me but the Lord solved my dilemma because a few days after the bombing in Zamboanga we were able to catch the perpetrators of the bombing incident. And seeing you tonight oh! I would have never forgiven myself for not being able to be here with you to pay honor to you, to pay honor to our leader, the highest ranking Filipino in the United States, and through you to pay honor to all the Filipino-Americans here in the United States.

The Filipino-Americans constitute one-third of overseas Filipinos, but you contribute two-thirds of the foreign exchange remittances to the Philippines.

The Filipino-Americans represent the best in the Filipino. That's why you are the most effective ambassadors of your mother country. Your contributions to American life are tremendous. And I am proud of all Filipino-Americans, whether well-known or anonymous. I am proud of the Ben Cayetano, the George Garcias, the Loida Nicolases, but also equally proud of every Fil-Am who has made an investment in this nation and who seeks closer relations between the Philippines and the United States.

The Filipino worker has become a presence around the world because of your talent and industry. The Filipinos, for instance, are known as the "Musicians of Asia." In fact, Ben Cayetano told me earlier that actually the first Filipinos in Hawaii were not the Sakadas of 1906. They were preceded by some Filipino musicians who played here in Hawaii. And today, we have an international star, Lea Salonga and a cast of Filipino talents, who are impressing audiences in Broadway for their superb performances. Lea is there starring in 'Flower Drum Song' in Broadway.

Here especially in Hawaii, let me pay tribute not only to the great outstanding well-known famous Filipinos like Ben Cayetano but also to the thousands of nameless but unforgotten Filipinos who first landed on these islands nearly a century ago.

Their story is one of hard work and perseverance, written in sweat and blood of the Sakadas from Ilocos, Cebu and other Philippine provinces. For you, I am sure it involved a great grandparent or forebear who left their rustic hometowns seeking a better life for their families.

For Ben, whom we honor tonight, it involved his own father who came here in 1928 to work in a sugar cane farm. This was long before the term "Overseas Filipino Worker" acquired any significance. Yet, the Filipinos of today, of Hawaii like many of today's migrant workers in some other parts of the world, at that time, long time ago had to face miserable labor conditions, an unfamiliar environment, unfair treatment and homesickness. Thank goodness this is no longer true here today. On the contrary, the Filipino reigns supreme in Hawaii. But we must never forget the lessons of the past as we face today's challenges.

Anywhere, our identity and dignity are important. And I am glad, as what the various speakers said tonight, that you continue to practice many of our customs and traditions that have found acceptance in Hawaii. These have been passed from one generation to the next, spreading to neighborhoods and communities, and reinforced by the succeeding waves of Filipino migration.

As has been said earlier today, too the year 2006 will mark the centennial of the arrival of the Filipinos in Hawaii. I am happy to learn that the house of representatives of the state approved the creation of the Filipino centennial celebration commission. This is an acknowledgement of the greatness of the Filipino community in Hawaii. We, in the Philippines also want even more to reciprocate your sacrifice and heroism.

When I was a senator, I had filed an overseas voting bill, but like many other overseas voting bills before me and even after me for a few years, my bill did not even progress beyond the committee level. So, when I became president, I certified as two of my five most urgent bills — one, the Overseas Voting Bill and two, the Dual Citizenship Bill.

And I'm happy that my efforts are bearing fruit. To make sure that I can announce something to you, the senate and the Congress sent me a message to send to you, the Absentee Voting Bill has passed both houses of the Philippine congress. Now, let us pray that the conflicting provisions of the house and senate versions can be ironed out so that the day they ironed it out and have it ratified in their respective chambers, within 24 hours I will sign it into law.

The Dual Citizenship bill has likewise passed third and final reading in the Senate.

Here in the United States, we are also working with the help of our champion senator and our member of the Philippine caucus in the house. We are working for the passage by the U.S. congress of improved benefits for Filipino World War the second veterans.

For many years, our friends in congress were filing these bills, but for many years various administrations were like the Absentee Voting Bill in the Philippines. Last year, when I visited president bush, I talked to him about it and he promised me last year a review of services and benefits for Filipino veterans. That review is now yielding results. There is legislation passed by the U.S. House of Representatives and being sponsored by Senator Inouye in the senate to expand benefit eligibility for health care, compensation and burial benefits for our Filipino veterans.

As I said earlier, the U.S. House of Representatives has passed this veterans health care procurement improvement act, which allows a package totalling 65 million dollars for improving health care of Filipino world war the second veterans living in the United States. And the Senator from Hawaii, Dan Inouye is the sponsor of the accompanying senate bill. Let's wish him luck so that the bill can become a law.

Meanwhile, the bush administration is giving veterans assistance for the Philippines in the amount of 500,000 dollars per year, and the first payment of 500,000 dollars will be made during this month of October.

All these efforts are expressions of faith in the Filipinos who braved this land and who are remembered in the hearts of all Americans.

Indeed, the Philippines has been a partner of America in economic matters, in security matters. The Philippines is a member of the grand coalition against global terrorism and active in a regional effort to organize a special anti-terrorism program in the ASEAN community. as you know tomorrow, I will be on my way to Mexico to attend the 10th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Leaders Summit in Los Cabos, Mexico.

I shall join twenty other leaders, including president bush, who are resolved to collectively reverse the lethargy in the global economy and perhaps build more concrete steps to world security and prosperity.

Ngayon natutuwa akong makakausap ko kayo nang masinsinan sa kauna-unahang panahon ko na makapagbisita sa inyo bilang pangulo ng ating bansa. Inimbita sana ako sa inauguration ng Philippine Community Center noong June. Pero Independence Day, kailangan nandoon ako sa Pilipinas. Pero nung nakita ko kanina, "Wow! Ang ganda. pinakamalaki sa buong Amerika, sa buong mundo siguro. At kasing ganda ng pinakamagandang country clubhouse sa golf club sa Pilipinas."

A year and a half ago, as you remember, i inherited an economy with four million jobless Filipinos and a forty percent poverty incidence.

After a year and a half into the presidency, I have come to realize that for our country to overcome such tremendous odds, we must build a strong republic.

In my state of the nation address last July, I highlighted two essential features that mark out a strong republic:

The first is that the republic must stand for the interest of the people rather than of a powerful minority. A strong republic empowers the poor, feeds the hungry, protects the weak and oppressed, shelters the homeless, and shields those in the midst of peril. Hence, a strong republic takes care of its people and their future;

The second feature of a strong republic is the capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to execute good policy and deliver essential services — the things that only governments can do. Good policies and empowered institutions speed up economic development and enable social reform.

Upon these twin cornerstones, we are building a structure of shared ethical values, a firm consensus to serve the common interest and a common vision of our national future.

Our main goal is to win the battle against poverty within the decade. And we must also seek permanent national stability. Our efforts are beginning to bear some fruit. Despite the desperate resort to hit and run bombings, domestic terrorists, particularly the Abu Sayyaf, on the run. And I heard the prayer about kidnapping, we have crushed at least five kidnap-for-ransom gangs. And the Philippine Chinese community itself has said that all is quiet on the Binondo front.

Inflation is at a 12-year low, driven down by stable food prices and declining power costs. Interest rates are at their lowest in 15 years.

International credit rating agencies upgraded us last year, last January from unstable to stable.

This is not painting a bright and rosy picture. This is the truth despite what the media sometimes report. Because figures tell us the story not perception. The regional GDP growth figure show that the Philippines is the best performing economy in Southeast Asia and even if we include the whole Asia like China the Philippines is the third best performing economy in Asia.

Our fight against poverty is substantiated by our being able to provide stable prices, 14 to 16 pesos now since I started my administration of rice for the poor. And it is also bolstered by the fact that more than 150,000 urban poor families now can buy the land that they are occupying. Schools are being built in barangays where there used to be none, some of them through your contributions. And health insurance is now available for more than 3 million destitute Filipinos. These achievements were attained only during the last year and half of my administration. But no president can build a strong republic single-handedly. My role as president is to serve as chief architect, to see to it that our plans and blueprints are carried out on time and correctly.

But I can do this well only if i can count on the support of the more than 2 million Filipino-Americans, including the more 200,000 or so Filipinos who are living here in Hawaii.

As you got together to build the Philippine Community Center, as you got together to put this lovely banquet tonight, let us get together ‘Bayanihan’ style, each contributing a meaningful embellishment to the plan of national greatness and prosperity.

Thank you, Filipinos in Hawaii for continuing to be Filipinos.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during a Luncheon hosted by Governor Benjamin Cayetano and Mrs. Vicky Cayetano

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Luncheon hosted by Governor Benjamin Cayetano and Mrs. Vicky Cayetano

[Delivered at the Formal Dining Room, Washington Place, Honolulu, Hawaii, October 24, 2002]

Mrs. Cayetano; Admiral and Mrs. Fargo; Honorable Senator; Congressman; State Senators; Supreme Court Justices and Judges; Former Governors; Madame Vice Governor; Ladies and Gentlemen; Leaders of the Hawaiian Political scene who are partly Filipino:

I'm really very happy to be here today and I'm glad to have the chance to spend some time with fellow Filipinos. Tonight with the bigger community and today with those who run the state but are of Philippine origin.

And I'm very happy to realize how close we are to each other. Ambassador Del Rosario took 17 hours to come here from Washington but I only took 10 hours to come here from Manila. So, actually Hawaii is closer to the Philippines than to Washington geographically.

And no wonder then that there are Filipinos in Hawaii. But of course, we know the history of Filipinos here. Ben Cayetano's father is an example of the story, the saga of the first Filipinos who came to Hawaii. He was not here in 1906, he came in 1928, but the story was quite similar.

We know about the first Filipinos who came to live in Hawaii who started here working in the sugar plantations. But today, all of you in this hall are testimony to how important the Philippine community has become. You are such king makers that you have made a governor. And in a federal country like the United States, the governor is the president of his own state. In a unitary country like the Philippines, the senators usually produced a president like in my case. But here in the United States because you have a federal form of government many of the presidents come from the ranks of the governors — that is how important a governor is. And that is why we Filipinos are so proud to have a governor who is a Filipino, and that is the governor of Hawaii.

And so, therefore, it is my honor to come then to give you the greetings of the Filipino people, to let you know how proud they are of you. And how proud they are of the many Filipinos who are here in this hall who are in great positions of authority in the State of Hawaii and even in the federal government of the United States.

Speech of President Arroyo during the meeting with the Filipino community in Los Angeles, California, U.S.A. Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the meeting with the Filipino community in Los Angeles, California, U.S.A.

[Delivered at the Ballroom, Westin Airport Hotel, Los Angeles, California, U.S.A., October 25, 2002]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat, Ambassador del Rosario. And to all of you, good evening to all of you.

May I greet all of you dear friends, kadakayo nga kakailiyak ti bangir ni mamang ko nga Ilokano gapo Pangasinan, agyamanak kadakayo nga umay kayo itatta nga rabi-in.

Malugud kung Cabalen Capangpangan, pasalamatan cu pung lubusing pamanyatang yu ngening bengi.

Sa akong mga kaubanang taga-Mindanao asa ako nidako — oo, Iligan daghan salamat sa inyong pag-abot karong gabi-i una.

Sa mga kasimanwa sang akon bana nga Ilonggo, salamat gid nga nakadto kamo sa akon programa subong.

Sa mga tugang kong Bikolano, dios mabalos asin marhay nga banggui.

At sa inyong lahat, maraming salamat po sa inyong walang sawang pagtulong sa mga nangangailangan sa ating bansa.

I'd like to introduce my delegation to you. We have Press Secretary Toting Bunye, who some of you may have met when he was mayor of Muntinlupa and then Congressman of Muntinlupa; and then not here, somewhere around here, is the head of my Presidential Management Staff, Silvestre Afable. There you are. Maybe he has relatives here and he's sitting with them over there; and then, of course, you know our Ambassador del Rosario. He was also here with me last year; and then I thank him for his welcome, Consul General Jun Paynor, who is also my presidential assistant for foreign travels. Kasama ko ngayong gabi muli ang aking kaniyak, si Attorney Jose Miguel Arroyo. May I greet those who put this lovely townhall meeting together in such short notice, Doctor Carlos Manlapaz, the chairman of the Steering Committee; Doctor Batong Malaque, the President of the Veterans Association of Southern California; Doctor Lambero, the Vice chairman of the steering committee; and the other officers of the various Filipino-American organizations in California.

I'd like to greet the Filipino veterans and also my fellow old girls from assumption — there you are; and the various thousands that are represented by the officers here, the Filipino-American community in California. I'm so happy to see you again.

Dahil nanggaling na ako noong isang taon — noong unang ginawa itong itinerary para sa APEC — supposed to be technical stopover lamang dito sa Los Angeles. Ngunit... Iyon na, dahil sabi nila nanggaling na raw ako rito noong isang taon. Ngunit sabi ko, eh doon pa naman 'yon dadaan sa Los Angeles na hindi makikipag-usap sa ating mga kasama doon, pinakamalaking filipino community sa buong America. Kaya narito tayong lahat muli, narito tayong lahat na magkasama. At salamat na kahit na narinig na ninyo ako noong isang taon, dumalo na naman kayo itong taon na ito. Thank you.

Many times I have said that overseas Filipinos should be called overseas Filipino investors because you are the biggest investors of the Philippines.

That's why when I was a Senator, I had filed an Overseas Voting Bill. But like many other overseas voting bills before mine and even after mine, my bill did not even progress beyond the committee level. So when I became president, I certified as two of my five most urgent bills — one, the overseas voting bill and two, the dual citizenship bill.

And I'm so happy to share with you that my efforts have borne fruit. Our efforts have borne fruit. Because for the first time, after so many attempts in so many administrations, the absentee voting bill has passed both houses of congress on third and final reading. Now, let us pray that the house and the senate can ironed out their conflicting provisions soon because as soon as they do so I will sign that bill into law within 24 hours.

The Dual Citizenship Bill has likewise passed third and final reading in the senate. And here, in accordance with the resolution that the veterans gave me this year and last year, it is true that every time there is a bilateral, the veterans issue is always part of our main agenda. We are working for the passage by the U.S. Congress of improved benefits for Filipino World War II veterans.

You asked me to do this last year. And when I went to Washington, I took it up with president bush. I took it up very strongly and emphatically. Tinarayan ko pa nga iyung Veterans Affairs Department.

And President Bush promised me last year a review of services and benefits for Filipino veterans. I'm also happy that that review is yielding results. Again, for the first time after so many attempts in so many administrations, a bill has been passed in the U.S. House of Representatives to expand benefit eligibility for health care, compensation and burial benefits for our Filipino world war veterans to the tune of 65 million U.S. dollars. That appropriation measure which for the first time in the history of our advocacy passed the House is now in the Senate. So let 's pray that this bill can soon passed the Senate.

Meanwhile, the Bush administration, on the executive level, on the executive branch is giving veterans assistance for our veterans, World War II Filipino veterans, who are in the Philippines in the amount of half a million dollars every year. Again, for the first time after so many attempts in so many administrations. The first half a million dollars will be handed over to the Philippine government right this month of October.

It is an uphill fight, but we are getting to the next level as you have seen, and let us continue. There are many uphill fights we have to make but we must continue.

For instance, our economy back home. I hope you still remember that a year-and-a-half ago, when I became president, I inherited an economy with 4 million jobless Filipinos and a 40 percent poverty incidence. That is an uphill fight. And after a year-and-a- half in the presidency, I have come to realize that to overcome such tremendous odds, we must build a strong republic.

To build a strong republic, my administration is committed to good governance. And I believe that the primordial requirement in the drive against corruption in government is to set the example at the top.

Thus, even my husband, my very supportive husband, has allowed himself not to be above the law. Though I consider intrigues against him as an occupational hazard, I have gone to the extent of encouraging him to face senate investigations to demonstrate that there are no sacred cows in my administration. Thank goodness! By letting the investigations go wherever any evidence might take them, I thank god that the evidence invariably shows that accusations against him are false and politically motivated.

But, because my husband has humbled himself by submitting to senate investigations, I have enhanced my moral authority to investigate anybody else any serious allegation and hold anyone accountable if corruption has been found to take place in his jurisdiction.

Let me assure you that I am working diligently to ensure that the Filipino people are getting the professional and clean government you deserve, for you are still part of the Filipino people even if you are here in America.

For instance, our new e-procurement program is saving billions of pesos and minimizing anomalies.

My Presidential Anti-Graft Commission is investigating a number of bureau directors, government board chairmen and government board members whom I have asked to go on leave pending the results of their investigations. And as for corruption within the courts, while there is separation of powers in our constitution, we are proactive in prosecuting graft among state prosecutors, and with the cooperation of the Supreme Court, we are prosecuting erring judges as well.

Last year, I declared that we will make Customs and the Bureau of Internal Revenue showcases in the fight against graft and corruption. This is still a continuing effort.

But I am happy to let you know that as a result of our anti-corruption and systems' improvement efforts in the bureau of internal revenue under my new BIR commissioner, PMA Class '70. Where's the PMA Class '70 here? Okay, your classmate Willie Parayno is my new BIR Revenue Commissioner.

After one month in office, he has been able to meet his revenue targets, collecting more than one-third more than the same period last year. He has been able to reverse many months of low revenues which had caused our budget deficit to swell. And he is confident that he will meet his targets for the rest of the year and even make up for some of the shortfall of the earlier part of this year.

Upon the cornerstone of a strong republic, we are building a structure of shared ethical values, a firm consensus to serve the common interest and a common vision of our national future.

These goals are also uppermost in my work program for the next six months which I would like to share with you. Even as we are resolving the terrorist threats in our country, I am focused on a tightly consolidated work program for the next six months:

The first is to strengthen our small and medium enterprises. And I'm glad to hear from Consul General Jun Paynor that many of you are willing to participate in the one town, one product, one-million peso loan for small enterprises that we are launching or we have launched to pump prime this drive to strengthen our small and medium enterprises as a source of domestic demand in our country;

The second program is to jumpstart housing;

The third is to reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon;

The fourth is to begin the infrastructure that will decongest Metro Manila;

The fifth is to mark up the contribution of the PCGG to our fiscal resources;

The sixth is to make Makati a specific urban tourist destination for holiday shoppers;

The seventh is to stimulate private investment in agriculture; and the eighth is to begin the complete staff work or to complete the staff work needed to make the reclamation area in Roxas Boulevard another tourism complex to be called "The Bagong Nayong Pilipino."

Our main goal for all of these and for the programs I told you about last year is to win the battle against poverty within the decade. To win the battle against poverty within the decade but we must also seek national stability. Yes, to win the battle against poverty within the decade to seek permanent national stability.

Thus, I am happy to report to you that because of our aggressive drive against terrorism, despite the desperate resort to hit and run bombings, domestic terrorists particularly the Abu Sayyaf are now on the run. Yes, they bombed two parts of Zamboanga, but we have captured the Zamboanga bombers and identified the mastermind of the latest bombing in Manila.

We have crushed at least five kidnap-for-ransom gangs. And the Filipino-Chinese community, which is their favorite target has even said that now all is quiet on the Binondo front.

These efforts are beginning to bear some fruit even in our economy. Inflation is at a 12-year low, driven down by stable food prices and declining power costs. Interest rates are at their lowest in 15 years.

We are rated as stable by the international credit rating agencies. The regional GDP growth figures show that the Philippines is the best performing economy today in Southeast Asia. And even if you take Asia as a whole where China is number one, the Philippines is the third best performing economy in Asia.

What does this mean for the poor in the Philippines? Well, for one thing it means: the price of rice for the poor is stable at 14 to 16 pesos; it means that more than 150,000 urban poor families have acquired the right to buy the land that they are occupying squatters no more; it means that schools are being built in barangays where there used to be none, about a thousand of them; it means that more than 3 million poor Filipinos now have health insurance. These achievements were attained only during my administration.

But no president can build a strong republic single-handedly. I can do this and do this well only if I can count on the support of the more than 2 million Filipino-Americans, especially the 700,000 who are here in Los Angeles.

And so, though I was here with you last year, I am here again with you to ask you: stay with me. Help me build a strong republic.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Plenary Breakfast at the APEC CEO Summit “A Conversation with Leaders”

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Plenary Breakfast at the APEC CEO Summit “A Conversation with Leaders”

[Delivered on October 26, 2002]

Thank you very much.

Es mas facil pronunciar mi nombre Arroyo. Porque somos latinos esta mien con los Mexicanos.

Five years ago, when the Philippines hosted APEC, there was not a single female APEC leader. Today, I'm very happy that the Asia-Pacific region now has staff gifted and thoughtful women leaders like President Megawati and Prime Minister Clark. And I'm very honored to share this platform with them today.

We come from three different countries with three different cultures and three different sets of challenges. But we share common commitments to prosperity, to democracy and to peace.

We were together last year in APEC in Shanghai. That summit took place right after September 11. At that time in that Summit, we all agreed that the attacks of September 11 were an attack not just on the United States but on all who believe in freedom and tolerance. And in that summit, we all agreed to take a strong stance against terrorism. And we discussed how to prioritize our work in order to carry out that strong stance. We made plans about aviation security, energy security and other ways by which we could promote security on the economic front.

Many things have happened since then. Since then, the terrorists were kicked out of Afghanistan. So was the host government that welcomed them in Afghanistan.

In my own country I set to crush terrorism militarily and economically. I challenged the Abu Sayyaf right in their turf and I believe we have made great success. They used to be thousands, now they are a few hundreds. Of course, a rifle shot here and a bomb there succeeds in instilling more fear. But nonetheless, I assure you we are making headway.

However, none of the successes that we have had prepared us for the October attacks, especially the attack on the beautiful island of Bali. That attack and the other attacks of October remind us that this war against terrorism is going to be long, difficult and borderless. And unfortunately, it comes at a time when we are also fearing for the global economy.

My concern is how the terrorists have shifted our attention away from how to work to make the global economy thrive. We have shifted our effort to how to secure ourselves and our countries. My concern arises from my experience. The experience of my country shows that security impedes development and conversely, poverty feeds extremists with recruits. The terrorists in the Philippines are in that southwestern corner of our country — the island of Basilan and the island of Sulu. Not coincidentally, these two provinces are the poorest provinces in our country with the lowest human development index. That indeed demonstrates how closely interlinked is the war against terrorism with the war against poverty. And if we neglect the economic imperative at this time when we are so concerned with terrorism we would be feeding on terrorism by promoting hunger, disease and ignorance.

Since last year, we have been able to build in our world in APEC and everywhere else a coalition to eradicate terrorism. It has worked well. And I believe that this coalition building would work equally well to ensure economic security. Further, it can also work equally well to lift the global economy out of lethargy.

The key step is to build trust once again in the local economy. But how do we do that? Let me just count two ways: first, security. Dealing with terrorism remains our most urgent priority. And our first challenge is to deal with it and make sure that this is a safe and secure world. In the Philippines, we participate in global efforts and we also work to promote this coalition at the regional level. For example, with our sister and neighbor Indonesia as well as with Malaysia we have an anti-terrorist arrangement. This arrangement includes sharing intelligence, tightening border patrols and if need be joint peacekeeping. I think we should expand this coalition and take more aggressive action.

In the Philippines, too where we have Christians and Muslims — actually, we are a Christian nation, a Christian minority in a Muslim region, the Southeast Asia — we pursue broader inter-faith dialogues because the terrorists wish to instigate a religious war. But we must instead make this an occasion for religious understanding, ecumenism and solidarity.

Terrorism as you all know, the CEOs, impacts directly on business. And that is a challenge to reduce border restrictions which are bad for business while at the same time protect these borders against terrorism. That is a great challenge of APEC. This challenge needs a combination of new technology and cross border cooperation.

Let me now go to the second way by which I believe we can restore faith and trust in the global economy. And this second way use to address the perceived inequality in receiving the benefits of integration. We must start with the WTO. We need to reengineer the WTO to assure that there is a level playing field. That the rules of trading are not stopped in favor of developed countries who preach liberalization to the developing countries on the one hand, but practice protectionism against the developing countries on the other.

It is our challenge in APEC to reengineer the WTO, because the Doha round that we are undergoing offers that opportunity. APEC as APEC is a voluntary organization in the sense that our commitments are voluntary and not treaties that are legally binding. But APEC is very influential in the WTO and therefore the role of APEC should be to reinforce the leadership in the WTO and make sure that the Doha round is truly what it is build as a development round.

One way would be to influence WTO to come up with an early harvest of results that will benefit the most number of people in the world.

What should these results include? May I enumerate: one, the elimination of harmful agricultural export subsidies; two, the opening up of markets for tropical agricultural products and other products of interest to developing countries such as tuna and textiles; three, the liberalization of services where developing countries can benefit most including labor mobility in sectors such as information technology, health care and education; and fourth, the enhancing of capability. The enhancing of the capacity of the developing country-members to negotiate effectively, implement commitments and improve the competitiveness of our products.

To do all these, we don't expect APEC to finance. We do not expect APEC to finance all these capability building. But we do expect APEC to use its influence to turn to other sources of funds and to turn to others that have mandate for capability building. At Monterey, here in Mexico, some time ago, the participants in that summit agreed that development and security go hand and hand. The developed countries pledged new resources to fight poverty in order to fight terrorism. And the developing countries promised to put these resources to good use by instituting reforms in their countries and economies. This new approach is a hand up approach rather than a hand out approach. And it recognizes that this is not charity but investment in people. It recognizes that teaching people how to fish rather than giving them the fish leads to sustained prosperity. However, months after Monterey we have yet to see these resources come to the developing countries in a meaningful way. And so, I hope that both sides of the development divide will make good on their Monterey pledges.

We need to pay special attention to the growth of the SMEs. As my beloved sister and neighbor President Megawati said, it is a big part of life in Indonesia. It is a big part of life in other developing countries and the Philippines as well. SMEs and micro-enterprises provide a business approach to the alleviation of poverty. In my country, we are doing this, too with our one town, one product program. And it shows that it can work.

I hope you, the CEOs of APEC, will look at integrating these self-help initiatives in your business plans. We do our SMEs now with greater vigor in the Philippines because we have to rely on domestic efforts to stimulate growth and safety nets because we are not yet sure of the recovery of our export market.

But indeed, a lot of support will go our way and the other developing countries way if the U.S., Japan and Europe can recover. And so we hope that they will recover and we suggest that this is a good time to finally carry out the postponed reforms that may have led to the lethargy of those economies. I mean, not the reforms but the postponement.

Our region especially looks to Japan to resume its traditional role as the engine for growth. We, in ASEAN, of course, also have the responsibility to contribute to global economic security. We are working to make ASEAN integration a reality. And we have to be open to new ideas about creating building blocks for integration. Thus, the ASEAN countries pursue regional and bilateral trade arrangements that were unthought of many years ago. We do have to minimize the adverse impacts of terrorism and maximize the benefits of integration through greater cohesion in trade, capital, labor and security policy.

The coalition in response to terrorism can and must extend to a coalition in economic relations. The global economy will be able to pull through if we approach it the way we have been approaching our fight against terrorism.

And may I assure you, that in the same way that the Philippines is an active partner in the global coalition against terrorism, the Philippines is also ready to work with the global community to meet the challenge of economic security and prosperity for our peoples in the 21st century.

Thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during a Dinner with the Filipino community

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Dinner with the Filipino community

[Delivered at the Marina Ballroom, San Diego Marriott Hotel and Marina, San Diego, California, U.S.A, October 27, 2002]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat, Ambassador Albert del Rosario.

Consul General and Mrs. Paynor, who is not only... Ah, Consul General Paynor is not only Consul General of the Los Angeles and San Diego area, he also doubles up as my Presidential Assistant for foreign travels; Glenn Barroga, thank you very much for organizing this evening together with Ditas Dimani, thank you very much; and to all of the other members of the committee that also joined to organize this evening, thank you so much for taking such a good initiative.

I would also like to greet Bishop Salvatore Corleone. Thank you for your prayers; and may I also greet the distinguished members of the U.S. Congress who we should all be very proud of: Congressman Bob Filmer; Congressman Randy Cunningham; Congressman Gary Isah and Congresswoman Susan Davis. I'd like to let you know in case you don't know that these are the congressmen and congresswoman who initiated what is now called the Philippine caucus in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Thank you very much, Mayor Dick Murphy for the key to the city. I'd like to greet Mrs. Murphy, too and Mayor Shirley Horton. Thank you for coming here. Also supervisor Greg Cup, board of supervisors of the country of San Diego. At sa inyong lahat, maraming salamat sa inyong walang sawang pagtulong sa mga nangangailangan sa ating bansa.

At malugud kung cabalen capangpangan, caracal ko. Pasalamatan Cu pung lubus ing pamanyatang yu ngening bengi.

Kadakayo nga kakailyak ti bangir ni mamang ko nga Ilokano gapo Pangasinan, including Mayor Murphy's two angels in his office. Agyamanak kadakayo nga umay kayo tatta nga rabi-i tan masantos ya labi ed sikayo amin.

Sa akon mga kaubanang taga-mindanao asa ako nidako, daghang salamat sa inyong pag-abot. Walay tiga-mindanao diri? Ah, kamo. Daghan salamat sa inyong pag-abot karong gabi-i una.

Kag sa mga kasimanwa sang akon bana nga ilonggo, salamat gid nga nagkadto kamo sa aton programa subong.

Sa mga tugang kong bikolano, dios mabalos asin marhay nga banggui.

I'd like to introduce my small delegation to you tonight: Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, who used to be City mayor, too and Congressman of the city of Muntinlupa; and the head of my Presidential Management Staff is Silvestre "Yongyong" Afable; you have met, of course, Ambassador del Rosario, who always visits our Congressmen from the San Diego area and the surroundings, and so they have worked together on this Philippine caucus. And I have told you earlier that Consul General Jun Paynor is not just your Consul General, he is my presidential assistant for foreign travels. So he was with me even in APEC. At kasama ko ngayong gabi ang aking kabiyaq, si Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo.

Mike and I bring you the best greetings and best wishes of our family. Not only of our family but also of the Filipino people who love the Filipino-Americans here in San Diego. Filipinos in San Diego Are truly pioneers. Yours is a story of fortitude and hard work. I learned when I was coming here and reading up that the enlistment of Filipinos in the U.S. navy started with the recruitment of nine Filipinos in 1903. Did I get my year right, 1903? To work as stewards and mess boys in the beginning. I had to ask you because we always thought in the Philippines that the first Filipinos in the U.S. were those who worked in Hawaii in the sugar cane plantations. But that was 1906 and this is 1903. So you are the first Filipinos to live in the United States. And then from the 1950s up to 1992 when the U.S. military bases were closed, more and more Filipinos were recruited to join the U.S. navy through the U.S. naval base in Sangley point, in Cavite. Kaya maraming Caviteño dito, 'di ba? Later on, at the U.S. naval base in Subic. That's why this explains why most of you are from Cavite and also from Olongapo in Zambales. Zambales, yes. Olongapo, my Macaraeg relatives from Olongapo, yes. Zambales, Bataan and the neighboring province that includes Pampanga.

Most Filipino navy men and their families settled here in San Diego and in other U.S. seaport cities, and went on to establish themselves in other fields. Because they are now... There's now a new generation. So after our navy men came doctors, nurses, health care workers, accountants, I.T. workers among others.

And today, Filipino-Americans represent the best in the Filipino. You are the most effective ambassadors of your country. When I was coming this week somebody asked me, how can you help the Philippines? You can help the Philippines by being ambassadors of our country to the United States. And you are such credible ambassadors because your contributions to American life are tremendous. I am proud of all Filipino-Americans, whether well-known or anonymous.

Today, the Filipino-Americans, you, you constitute one-third of overseas Filipinos but you contribute two-thirds of the foreign exchange remittances to the Philippines.

I have said many times that overseas Filipinos should be called overseas Filipino investors because you are the biggest investors of the Philippines. That is why even when I was a senator, I had already filed an overseas voting bill, but like many other overseas voting bills before I became a senator, and others that were filed after I became a senator, my bill did not even progress at that time beyond the committee level.

So when I became president I certified as five... As two out of my five most urgent bills the Overseas Voting Bill and the Dual Citizenship Bill.

Nung papunta ako sa APEC from here dapat diretso sa Silicon Valley dahil may mga investors na kakausapin. Sabi ko hindi, dadaan ako sa San Diego kasi meron akong gustong ikwento about efforts bearing fruit for the first time after so many attempts in so many administrations the absentee voting bill has passed both Houses of Congress in the philippines. Now, lets pray that the house and the Senate can iron out their conflicting versions soon. Because as soon as they do so i will sign it into law within 24 hours.

Kanina nung nag-posing ako sa mga veterans, and I'd like to greet them. Meron isa sa kanila nagtanong sa akin, "eh 'yung Dual Citizenship Bill, kumusta na?" I'd like to report to you that it has likewise passed the Senate on third and final reading in the Senate.

Of course here led by your congressman and your other congressman and congresswoman in the area in the Philippine caucus, all of us had been working for the passage by the U.S. Congress of improved benefits for Filipino World War II veterans.

And just like the overseas voting bill in the Philippines, here in the U.S., I believe that this is the first time after so many attempts, in so many administrations the bill has been passed in the U.S. House of Representatives to expand eligibility for health care compensation and burial benefits for our Filipino veterans to the tune of 65 million U.S. dollars. And you have our San Diego congressman Bob Filmer as the principal author to thank for. And Congressman Cunningham, Congressman Isah and Congresswoman Susan Davis because it was the Philippine caucus that made it possible for the bill to pass the U.S. congress. And I know that you in the Philippine community will always support those who support the Philippine cause.

The appropriation measure is now in the U.S. Senate. So, like I said about the overseas voting bill and praying, let's pray now that the bill may soon pass the Senate.

Meanwhile, at the executive level, I have included veterans benefits in the agenda of every bilateral I have had with President Bush. And the veterans administration is giving veterans assistance for the Philippines in the amount of 500,000 dollars per year for the veterans health care in the Philippines. Again, for the first time after so many attempts in so many years. And I'm happy to learn that the first 500,000 dollars will be given to the Philippine government this month of October.

I will continue to advocate for veterans' benefits. When I was with President Bush at the APEC summit yesterday, I reminded him again about our Filipino veterans.

At APEC, together with 20 other leaders including president bush and the heads of big economies like China, Russia, Japan, Canada and Mexico among others, we resolved collectively to adopt policies that will reverse the direction of the global economy away from a creeping march towards another economic recession.

I hope you still remember that a year-and-a-half ago, I became President, first, I inherited an economy with 4 million jobless Filipinos and a 40 percent poverty incidence.

After a year-and-a-half in the presidency, I have come to realize that to overcome such tremendous odds, we must build a strong republic.

Upon the cornerstone of a strong republic, we have to build a structure of shared ethical values, a firm consensus to serve the common interest and a common vision of our national future, the goal to fight poverty and win it within the next 10 years.

In APEC, one of the rich countries there said that 10 years ago they had a 40 percent poverty incidence. After 10 years of constant and focused policy reforms its gone down to 20 percent. So they could do it — that's Chile — we can do it.

And this goal is uppermost in my work program for the rest of my administration as well as for the next six months. Even as we are resolving the terrorist threats in our country, I am focused on a tightly consolidated work program for the next six months which I'd like to share with you.

The first is to strengthen our small and medium enterprises. That's why earlier, when one of you asked me how can you help the Philippines, I said be an ambassador of our country to America. But secondly, I said when you send your remittances send it to your relatives as capital for their small and medium enterprises;

The second program is to jumpstart housing. And I may ask you, too. And if you asked me how you can help the Philippines? Participate in the Pag-Ibig program. You have it, Jun here in the consulate? Buy houses for your relatives in the Philippines. There are a number of good housing projects, and they would qualify the developers and also the take outs will qualify if the houses are anywhere from oh! 15,000 pesos to 2 million pesos. So you have your range for whatever house you think your relatives deserve;

My third work program is to reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon;

The fourth is to begin the infrastructure that will decongest Metro Manila;

The fifth is to mark up the contribution of the PCGG to our fiscal resources;

The sixth is to make Makati a specific urban tourist destination for shopping holidays. It's very safe in Makati, easy to secure;

The seventh is to stimulate private investment in agriculture;

And the eighth is to begin the complete staff work to make the reclamation area in Roxas boulevard a tourism complex to be called "The Bagong Nayong Pilipino."

This work program for the next six months is a part of a bigger medium- term Philippine development plan to win the battle against poverty within the decade.

But, in looking to win the battle against poverty within the decade we must also seek permanent national stability.

Thus, I am happy to report to you that because of our aggressive drive against terrorism, despite the desperate resort to hit and run bombings, domestic terrorists particularly the Abu Sayyaf are on the run. They are hold up, the leaders, and the main fort are holed up in the mountain where they were born to begin with, an area where soldiers have never gone before. We are now into two months into a campaign that is called "operations end game". And we ask your prayers, too that this end game will end very soon. And I'm sure it will be, with the victory for the Philippine Armed Forces. Dapat naman kasi 'yung Deputy Chief of Staff for operations na pinili ko sa Armed Forces ay si Sammy Bagasit, anak ng isang beterano natin dito, ayun. Kaya magdasal tayo.

You heard about Zamboanga being bombed. Alam ninyo, nung nabomba 'yung Zamboanga kina-cancel ko sana lahat ng biyahe, 'yung buong biyahe sa APEC at lahat na ng biyahe sa side trips. Sabi nila, papaano maka-kanselin nakabili na ng tickets 'yung mga tiga-Los Angeles. So sabi ko, "nakul! papaano kaya 'yon." but God solved my dilemma. We captured the Zamboanga bombers kaya nakapunta ako rito. Nabasa ninyo na binomba doon sa Manila isang bus. We've also identified the mastermind of that latest bus bombing and so a massive manhunt is out there against him.

And today, I just got a report from Foreign Secretary Blas Ople that the European Union has officially placed in its agenda the terrorist character of the CPP-NPA. In addition, most of the European governments have indicated that they will individually support a bid to endorse the NPA as a terrorist organization to the United Nations.

We have crushed at least five of the most notorious kidnap-for-ransom gangs. And even the Philippine Chinese community, the favorite victim of those gangs have said that now all is quiet on the Binondo front.

Our campaign against terrorism and crime is reinforced by sound macroeconomic policies that have kept our nation at an even keel. Inflation is at a 12-year low, driven down by stable prices and declining power costs. Interest rates are at their lowest in 15 years. Kaya tamang-tama kung bibili kayo ng tahanan para sa mga kamag-anak ninyo.

International credit rating agencies have rated us as stable, when before I came in as president they rated us as negative. But since late 2001 they have rated us as stable.

And the regional GNP growth figures, our last figures for the first half of this year show a 5.2 percent growth rate in GNP that makes the Philippines the best performing economy in Southeast Asia. Actually, 'yung GDP natin 4.8. Naging 5.2 ang GNP natin dahil 'yung difference 'yon ang remittances na pinapadala ninyo sa atin. That's why your remittances have helped us grow higher than our neighboring countries. It's your remittances that made the difference so we became the best performing economy, or the third best performing economy in Asia and the first in Southeast Asia.

And we tried to use this performance for the betterment of the lives of the poor. The price of rice for the poor is stable at 14 to 16 pesos depending on where you buy it. About 200,000 urban poor families have acquired the right to buy the land they occupy so that now they are no longer squatters. Schools are being built in barangays where there used to be none — 1,000 of them. And more than 3 million poor Filipinos now have health insurance. These achievements were only attained during my administration.

But no president can build a strong republic single-handedly. I can do it and do it well only if I can count on the support of the more than 2 million Filipino-Americans including the 150,000 Filipino-Americans here in San Diego.

And so before I join you for dinner I ask you, stay with me. Even as you are helping building America here in San Diego, help me build a strong Philippine republic.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the “Fil-Am Community Salutes the President” Program

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the “Fil-Am Community Salutes the President” Program

[Delivered at the Davis Symphony Hall, October 29, 2002]

Thank you. Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat, Ambassador Del Rosario. I'd like to greet also Consul General Delia Meñez-Rosal; and I'd like to greet the Governor of the State of California, Governor Gray Davis. Thank you for providing veterans benefits ahead of the federal government; I'd like to thank San Francisco Mayor Willy Brown for his key to the city. Actually, this is the second key to the city. You gave me one when I was Vice President. But this is an upgraded one; maraming salamat kay Mrs. Loida Nicolas-Lewis, the National Chairperson of the National Federation of Filipino-American Association. Thank you for being here, part of the leadership that you display even if you are based in New York; and to Rodel Rodis, who was a very important and brilliant student leader in his time in the Philippines. Now a very important lawyer here. Thank you for your work as Northern California regional care of NAFFAA, and for helping put together... Being one of the leaders of that wonderful global reunion of Filipinos here in San Francisco, held here in San Francisco.

I'd like to introduce the members of my party. First of all, there is my husband Mike Arroyo; my Press Secretary Toting Bunye; I have another Cabinet member here, Secretary for Political Affairs Joey Rufino; and if you have any complaints whenever you arrive in Manila, we have the manager of the NAIA International Airport, Ed Manda.

So, I wanted to introduce the head of my Presidential Management Staff, but he's gone. He left already earlier. And so, I thank Ambassador Del Rosario and Consul General Delia Rosal for being part now of my delegation. And to all of you, good afternoon.

Malugud kung Cabalen Capangpangan, pasalamatan cu pung lubus ing pamanyatang yu ngening bengi.

Kada kayo nga kakailyak ti bangir ni mamang ko nga Ilokano gapo Pangasinan, agyamanak kada kayo umay kayo tatta nga rabi-i, rabi-in itatta. No, malemen pay, malem pay.

Sa akong mga kaubanang taga-Mindanao asa ako nidako, daghang salamat sa inyong pag-abot karong gabi-i una.

Kag sa kasimanwa sang akong bana nga Ilonggo, salamat gid nga nakakadto kamo sa atong programa subong.

At sa inyong lahat — dahil lahat ng Pilipino ay marunong mag-Tagalog, kahit iyung mga nasa San Francisco — maraming salamat sa inyong walang sawang pagtulong sa mga nangangailangan sa ating bansa.

Gaya nang sabi ko, kasama ko ngayong gabi iyung aking kabiya na si Attorney Jose Miguel Arroyo. Dahil noong araw pa, binata pa sila, ang pamilya nila ay parating dito. Dito nila ginaganap ang kanilang bakasyon. Favorite city ng aking mother-in-law. So, I think it would be accurate always to say that we always leave our hearts in San Francisco.

Noong unang ginawa iyung aking itinerary para sa APEC, technical stopover lamang ang ginawa nila mula sa Silicon Valley, dahil nanggaling na raw ako dito noong isang taon. At sabi nila malamang iyung mga taga San Francisco pupunta sa Silicon Valley. Tamang-tama marami nga sa inyo nandoon kahapon. Kaya lang sinabi ko, gusto kong makipag-usap muli sa ating mga napakaraming kaibigan sa San Francisco. Marami silang gustong sabihin sa akin. Kaya one more day, doon tayo sa San Francisco. Kaya ako ay narito ngayon kasama ninyo. At doon naman sa narito ngayon, kahit na nandito kayo noong isang taon, at doon sa mga narito ngayon, kahit nandoon kayo kahapon, lalong maraming salamat sa inyo.

I would like to greet, aside from Mayor Willy Vrown, two other City Mayors, both Filipino City Mayors and we are very proud of them. There's Henry Manayan from Melphitas. You know Henry Manayan is on his last term like Mayor Brown. And well, he's been such a good Filipino here in Silicon Valley. He wants to be a good Filipino representing Philippine interest in the state assembly next time around. I'd like to greet the other city mayor, Filipino city mayor in the Filipino city of California bay area and that is Mayor Mike Guingona of Daly City.

I remember Mike Guingona was there in one of my meetings with the Filipino community in Daly City when I was a senator. And I was telling some of you, some of the San Francisco community about the bill that U had filed then on overseas voting. Well, Loida is right, I prefer to call it overseas voting than absentee voting. But like many other overseas voting bills or absentee voting bills — whatever you call them — before I filed mine and after I filed mine, my bill at that time didn't even progress beyond the committee level.

So when I became president, I certified as one of my five most urgent bills, the Overseas Voting Bill.

And so now I am glad that for the first time, after so many attempts in so many administrations, the overseas voting bill passed both Houses of Congress just a few days ago. Now, let us pray that the Senate and the House can iron out their conflicting provisions soon. And when I go back to Manila, I will convey to them your own recommendations about what the final version should be. And as soon as they reconcile their conflicting versions, I will sign it into law within 24 hours.

The other bill that is so important for you, especially for those who have been here for a long time and have become citizens is the Dual Citizenship Bill. And this is another one of my five most urgent bills that I told Congress about. It has also passed third and final reading in the Senate.

And here in the United States, we continue to work for the benefit of Filipino veterans of World war II. Loida told you that when I saw President Bush, my last parting words to him was "don't forget the Filipino Veterans." Last year, in my first shot when I met him, my first words were, "we've been your partner for so long, don't forget our Filipino Veterans." And at that time, President Bush told me, "yes." His administration would review the services and benefits for Filipino Veterans. And I'm so happy that for the first time, after so many attempts, the Veterans Bill, the Veterans Health Bill was passed in the U.S. Congress. It was passed last July to provide health care for U.S. Filipino veterans worth 65 million u.s. dollars. The appropriation measure is now in the U.S. Senate committee, in the Committee on Veterans Affairs. Upon my request, President Bush has indicated his support for the Veterans Health Bill. Therefore, I ask the Filipino-American community to contact your Senators and ask them to urge the Committee on Veterans Affairs to put the bill to a vote. That should be your job now as Filipino-Americans voting for them.

Meanwhile... Thank you. Thank you for representing the five percent of the Filipino people who don't like Americans. But 95 percent of the people do and I represent them.

Meanwhile, while we're waiting for the Veterans Health Bill to get passed by the U.S. Senate Committee, the Bush administration on the executive side is giving veterans assistance for the Philippines in the amount of 500,000 dollars per year. Again, for the first time, after so many attempts in so many administrations. Furthermore, the first 500,000 dollars will be given to the Philippine government this month of October.

I think we could not have gotten this far, passing it in the house and getting it into the Senate Committee if not for the good work of the Filipino-American community. So, we laud you and congratulate you for your work in bringing the Filipino Veterans Bill this far at last.

We also laud the initiative of the National Federation of Filipino-American Associations headed by Loida and the American Civil Liberties Union in filing a petition for injunction to stop the enforcement of the U.S. citizen requirement for the federalized job of airport screeners. We agree that experience matters in securing U.S. airports and planes. Though this may be an internal issue to the U.S., I have asked Ambassador Del Rosario to make known our sentiments on the matter before the appropriate U.S. officials.

I am here in California for the same reason I was in Mexico at the APEC leaders meeting: to focus on the security and economy of the Philippines. In this interconnected world, opening a door in Silicon Valley can help open an opportunity for job creation in the Philippines.

Whether it's a fight against global terrorism or improving education, at the end of the day, it is always about the economy and improving the lives of our Philippine citizens.

If you remember, when I became president 21 months ago, I inherited an economy with 4 million jobless Filipinos and a 40 percent poverty incidence.

Today, despite the global slowdown, despite the slowdown in Silicon Valley which is our number one single export market, we had a healthy economy that has delivered one of the highest growth rates in the world for the first half of 2002. We are also taking steps to further strengthen our macro-economic fundamentals. We will continue to be vigilant in our efforts to reduce our deficit. And in this regard, we believe that the revenue enhancement measures being implemented by the bureau of internal revenue, as well as the strict controls on government spending that have been instituted will support our success on this front.

As we do this, we will focus on the positive indicators of strength of our domestic driven economy, such things as:

Growth in the Philippines has been fueled this past year by among others continued strength of services and a strong recovery in our industrial sector. The growth in the services sector has been supported by continued expansion in telecoms, trade and private success. May I say that our rebound in manufacturing — which is negative last year — was a result of our rebounding exports, and services has grown and has fueled also our ICT industry. Another one of the services that has grown very fast is tourism. And I thank you, the Filipino-Americans for continuing to be our balikbayan tourists. Another source of growth this past year has been the non-bank and insurance industries. They have pushed the finance sector to post the highest growth in the last four years. The growth in industrial sector has been led by manufacturing particularly manufactured exports. Private construction is on the rebound. In the agriculture sector, fisheries and forestry have been particularly strong. Inflation is at a 15-year low, so with interest rates. And we have increasing levels of remittances from overseas Filipinos, from you — up 39 percent in the last six months. What you have sent your relatives has boosted personal consumption and fueled our domestic economy. Last year, you remitted a total of 6 billion U.S. dollars. This year — yes, thank you. This year, for the first six months alone you already remitted 4 billion U.S. dollars. Filipino-Americans make up one-third of our overseas Filipinos, but you bring two-thirds of our overseas remittances to the Philippines. Thank you so much for your support. On our part, government consumption, it has been flat because we need fiscal discipline, and we are therefore permitting private-sector led growth. Our exports which have fueled our manufacturing increase, are up. They have grown by 20 percent.

When I visited Andy Grove yesterday, and I told him in INTEL that our exports have increased 20 percent fueled by our increase exports to silicon valley, he said, "how surprising because Silicon Valley's growth has been flat." But the reason why our exports have grown 20 percent, why our electronic exports have grown is not because the total market has grown but because we have gotten more market share from other producers.

Our main battle is to win against poverty within the decade. But because of the world around us today, the world of the war against terrorism, we must also seek permanent national stability.

Thus, I would like to report to you that because of our aggressive drive against terrorism, despite the desperate resort to hit and run bombings, the domestic terrorists particularly Abu Sayyaf are on the run. We have captured the Zamboanga bombers. We have even captured one of the perpetrators of the bus bombing in Manila.

We have crushed at least five kidnap-for-ransom syndicates, as a result of which the Filipino-Chinese community, which is the favorite victim of these kidnap gangs, tells me now that all is quiet on the Binondo front.

These macro statistics translate also into benefits for the poor. The price of rice for the poor is stable at 14 and 16 pesos depending on where you buy it. Some 200,000 urban families, urban poor families have acquired the right to buy the land that they occupy, so they are no longer squatters.

Schools are being built in barangays where there used to be none, there are 1,000 of these type of barangays. And more than 3 million Filipino, poor Filipino people now have health insurance — something you take for granted here in America. These achievements were attained during the 21 months of my administration.

For the next six months, even as we are resolving the terrorist threats in our country, I am focused on a tightly consolidated eight-point work program:

The first is to strengthen our small and medium enterprises. The Central Bank is relaxing its financial document requirements for loans to them, and the field offices of the DTI (Department of Trade and Industry) are mandated to concentrate their services on assisting these SMEs with their project proposal documents required to access bank money.

You can help this program especially through your Adopt-a-Barangay by providing a million pesos livelihood for the barangays that you have adopted, because that will go along way. Small and medium enterprises are the most efficient users of capital in our economy. So, until exports revive, or until silicon valley recovers, until the world economy recovers, we must build up domestic demand. We must give the power to the SMEs to do their work efficiently as they do with capital.

These goals really are uppermost in my work program for the next six months as we resolve the terrorist threats in our country.

This a tightly consolidated work program. I'm giving my personal attention to this first, which is the small and medium enterprise development:

To strengthen our small and medium enterprises is the first;

The second program is to jumpstart housing. And again, you can help because you buy houses for your folks back home. Housing has the biggest multiplier and there is bank money for housing — the central bank is relaxing the requirements;

The third is to reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon;

The fourth is to begin the infrastructure that will decongest Metro Manila;

The fifth is to mark up the contribution of the PCGG to our fiscal resources;

The sixth is to make Makati a specific urban tourist destination for your safe shopping;

The seventh is to stimulate private investment in agriculture;

The eighth is to begin the complete staff work to make the reclamation area in Roxas Boulevard a tourism complex to be called 'The Bagong Nayong Pilipino'.

But no president can build a strong republic single handedly. I can do this well only if I can count on the support of the almost 3 million Filipino-Americans especially the extra active Filipino-Americans of California and San Francisco.

And so I ask you, stay with me. Even as you continue to help build this great American nation, help me build a strong Philippine republic.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during a meeting with the Filipino community in Cambodia

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During a meeting with the Filipino community in Cambodia

[Delivered at the Tonle Sap Ballroom, Hotel Cambodiana, Phnom Penh, Kingdom of Cambodia, November 3, 2002]

Maraming salamat, ginoong Tony Gomez. Talagang pwede kang ipagmalaki ng Pilipinas. Ikaw pala ‘yung nagtayo ng magandang airport doon sa bandang Angkor Wat. Congratulations.

Kanina pinakilala na sa inyo si Secretary Blas Ople. Dapat bigyan natin siya ng magandang bati dahil kakagaling lang n’ya sa Europe at ‘yung mga matatagal ng kinakalaban ni Ambassador Gazmin noong siya ay heneral ay dahil sa mabisang misyon ni Secretary Ople ay naturang bilang terorismo — international terrorist. Congratulations, Secretary Ople. Nandito rin si Secretary Manuel Roxas, ang ating Secretary of Trade and Industry na nagtatangol parati ng karapatan ng Pilipinas sa ating iba’t-ibang negosasyon maging sa Asean. Kaya ito po si Secretary Mar Roxas.

At kanina nakilala na ninyo si Secretary Richard Gordon. Marami ba ang magdadala ng V-12 tourist doon sa Pilipinas? Gusto ko ipakilala rin sa inyo muli si Press Secretary Toting Bunye. Kung sakaling may mga bandang Muntinlupa dito, s’ya ‘yung dating Congressman at Mayor ng Muntinlupa; at ‘yung ating eksperto sa BIMP-EAGA, ‘yung isang sub-grouping sa ASEAN, si Secretary Paul Dominguez; mukhang hindi pa n’yo masyadong kilala ‘yung namumuno ng Presidential Management Staff, si Secretary Yongyong Afable; doon nakaupo naman ‘yung namumuno ng Philippine International Trading Corporation, eto is Tony Abad. Kung meron sa inyong gustong mangalakal sa Pilipinas, ‘yan ang isang magandang paraan dadaan sa PITC kasi developmental ang kanyang trading.

At siyempre binabati ko si Ambassador Volts Gazmin. Salamat sa iyong pag-aalaga sa dalawang libong Pilipinong nandito sa Cambodia. Maging sa relasyon natin sa Cambodia. Alam n’yo bagay na bagay si Ambassador Gazmin dito dahil ‘yung namumuno ng Cambodia ay isang heneral din at magaling mag-golf. So, bagay na bagay sila. Kaya maganda rin ang relasyon ng Pilipinas at Cambodia. Kasi isang importante rin dapat magka-vibes ‘yung ambassador at saka ‘yung head of government. Ganun din ‘yung mga ibang bansa sa Pilipinas eh. Ang dami doon, pag may bagong ambassador babae ang pinapadala. So, binabagay talaga sa head of government ‘yung ambassador.

At sa inyong lahat naman hindi lang kay Ginoong Gomez, lahat kayong mga FilCom officers at saka members, Filipino community binabati ko dahil kung saan-saan pala kayong bahagi ng Cambodia dumating dito para sa itong affair na ito, salamat. At ito ba, palagay ko kayo ay... At gusto ko rin batiin si Father Ochoa. Meron pa palang Don Bosco dito. Ang galing, parang Philippines... Away from the Philippines ang Don Bosco. At kayong lahat, palagay ko kayo ay microcosm din ng ating cultural diversity sa Pilipinas.

Atin bang Capangpangan keti? Pasalamatan cung lubus ing pamanyatang yu ngening aldo.

Adta kakailyak nga Ilokano. Kakailyak ti bangir ni mamang ko nga ilokano gapo Pangasinan, agiaman kadakayo nga umay kayo tatta nga aldaw.

Dunay taga-mMindanao, asa na dugay si Ambassador Gazmin isip commander ug asa nagikan si Secretary Paul Dominguez. So, daghan salamat ako sab didto ko nidako. O, ni alam n’yo, sa Iligan city. Didto sab nadugay si Ambassador Gazmin. So, sa aton mga kaubanan didto, daghang salamat sa inyong pag-abot karong adlaw.

Sa mga kasimanwa ni Secretary Roxas nga Ilonggo, kasimanwa sab sang akong bana, salamat gid nga nakadto kamo sa atong programa subong.

At sa inyong lahat, saan man kayo nanggaling sa Pilipinas. Saan man kayo nanggaling sa Cambodia, ako'y natutuwa sa inyong pagdalo ngayong hapon. Ang inyong pagbibigay halaga sa ating pagtitipon-tipon ngayon ay isang tunay na pagmamalasakit at pagmamahal sa ating bayan, sa ating pamahalaan, at sa buong sambayanang Pilipino.

I am very proud that Filipinos have been worthy partners of the people of Cambodia in nation-building. I understand that this started when the first Filipinos arrived here during the early 1990s when Ambassador Gazmin was the head of the Presidential Security Group at that time. And when this country was still in turbulent times and the United Nations transitional authority came to Cambodia to supervise Cambodia's administration and help create an atmosphere in which free elections could take place. Your contribution to democracy is important as our contribution as a country is important. You were sent here to oversee the transition to democracy because Filipinos, the Philippines, we are the most vibrant and dynamic democracy in Asia, and we are very proud of it, and we are very proud of you.

Since then, Filipinos here in Cambodia have made your mark after just one decade as managers, engineers — ayan si Tony — teachers, school administrators, entertainers, doctors, social workers, agricultural experts, members of religious organizations like father Ochoa, and many other callings. And you have been exemplars — gaya ng sabi ni ambassador — of the great Filipino worker known worldwide for discipline, talent, professionalism and a shepherding and compassionate spirit.

My administration is determined to bring government closer to our people, including our overseas Filipinos.

Even when I was a senator, together with Senator Ople then, I already felt that way. That's why when I was a senator, and Secretary Ople was also a senator, separately we filed our overseas voting bills, but like many other overseas voting bills before and after ours, our bills did not even progress at that time beyond the committee level.

That's why when I became president, I certified as one of my five most urgent bills the overseas voting bill.

And so now at last, for the first time after so many attempts, the overseas voting bill has passed both houses of congress. Most of you are Filipino citizens still so let's pray that the house and the senate can iron out their conflicting provisions soon because as soon as they do so I will sign the bill into law within 24 hours.

Through this act of empowerment, we envision our overseas Filipinos like you to have greater stake in governance and the future direction of our country even if you are here. We want you to maintain your bond with your homeland and deepen further your appreciation of your national identity.

I encourage you all — sabi kasi ni Tony gusto n'yang tumulong — one way by which you can help is to be our ambassadors of goodwill and maintain our friendly relations with the Cambodian government and people.

As you know, I'm here in Cambodia for the ASEAN leaders' meeting. I'm here for the same reason I was in Mexico at the APEC leaders' meeting last week: to focus on the economy and the security of the Philippines. Whether it's a fight against global terrorism or improving education which many of you are doing here in Cambodia, at the end of the day, it is always about the economy and improving the lives of our Philippine citizens.

If you remember, when I became president 21 months ago, I inherited an economy with 4 million jobless Filipinos and a 40 percent poverty incidence.

Today, inspite of the global slowdown we have an economy that has delivered one of the highest growth rates in Asia, and we're also taking further steps to strengthen our macroeconomic fundamentals. We will continue to be vigilant in our efforts to reduce our budget deficit and, in this regard, I believe that the revenue enhancement measures being implemented by the bureau of internal revenue as well as our strict controls on government spending that have been instituted will support our success on this front.

As we do this, we will focus on the positive indicators of the strength of our domestic driven economy. This includes such things as:

Growth, as I said earlier. One of the highest in Asia maybe in the world. This has been fueled by among other factors the continued strength of services and a strong delivery in our industrial sector;

Why have the services been so strong? The growth has been supported by continued expansion in telecommunications, trade and private services including tourism. I don't know if Dick has told you that the October figures of tourism show a growth rate of 4 percent inspite of the Bali bombing.

Eh, noon ngang nagkaroon ng Dos Palmas incident, 'yung may-ari ng Pearl Farm linagay pa nila 'yung kanilang regional headquarter sa Pilipinas, even after the Dos Palmas incident. At kahit na nangyari itong mga bombing ngayon, nandun si Dick, naka-naka-organize pa s'ya ng world tourism organization, anti-terrorism summit na gaganapin doon sa Manila at the end of this week. Kaya tuloy ang ating turismo.

The non-bank financial institutions and insurance industries have also pushed the finance sector to post the highest growth in four years; and as for the growth in the industrial sector. This has been led by manufacturing which was negative last year but now it's a leading sector for growth particularly manufactured exports, because exports are up by 20 percent;

Private construction is on the rebound; and in the agricultural sector, fisheries and forestry have been particularly strong; inflation is at a 15-year low so with interest rates; and we have — thanks to you — increasing levels of remittances from overseas Filipinos, up 39 percent from January to June 2002. This has boosted the personal consumption of your relatives. Last year, you, the overseas Filipinos remitted 6 billion dollars. This year, for the first half year alone you have already remitted 4 billion dollars. Thank you so much for your support. But because of our budget deficit, government spending has been flat, permitting the private sector to lead the growth.

Thus, for the next six months, even as we are resolving the terrorist threats in our country, I am focused on a tightly consolidated eight-point work program to push private sector-led growth:

The first is to strengthen our small and medium enterprises. To do this, the central bank is relaxing its financial documentary requirements for loans to small and medium enterprises. And the field offices of Mar Roxas, the DTI are mandated to concentrate their services on assisting the SMEs with project proposal documents required to access bank money.

Salamat nasabi ni Tony, gusto n'yong tumulong sa pangkabuhayan ng Pilipinas. Kaya pag magpapadala kayo ng remittances sa inyong mga kamag-anak para magtayo sila ng maliliit na negosyo, sabihin n'yo rin pwede na silang magpatulong sa dti para 'yung padala ninyo 'yon ang equity tapos pwede pa ring i-leverage 'yon at humiram sa mga bangko dahil ini-encourage natin ngayon silang humiram sa SMEs.

The second program is to jumpstart housing. There are eight big developers in our country and they're taking a leap of faith. They are going back into housing construction after three years that they've been do so. And for the first time, they're going to do end-user financing.

Sabi ni Tony, gusto n'yong tumulong sa pabahay. Unfortunately, walang pag-ibig dito. Kaya si Yongyong Afaible na ang aking pms para hindi ko makalimutan, sasabihin ko kay Yongyong na sabihin n'ya sa pag-ibig magpadala sila ng selling mission dito para makapag.... Sa ganun makapag-member kayo o kung members na 'yung mga kamag-anak ninyo ay makapagbili kayo ng bahay, pabahay para sa kanila.

The third is to reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon. The policy reforms have already been done to reduce port fees. Now, the Development Bank of the Philippines has 20 billion pesos to lend to investors on a roll-on/roll-off port and ferry system including access roads, maritime institutes, vocational and technical schools, and post-harvest facilities to put together a sustainable logistic system connecting the islands of our archipelago. Para diretso, diretso anywhere from Mindanao, anywhere to Luzon.

The fourth is to begin the infrastructure that will decongest Metro Manila. This means beginning the construction of the system that will complete the mass transit system in metro manila, also that will connect Manila to Clark-Subic by train, and Manila to Batangas port by a modern highway. We want to start this construction within the next six months.

The fifth is to mark up the contribution of the PCGG to our fiscal resources by pushing for an early decision on the Marcos deposits in the Philippine National Bank and the liquification of the government's 27 percent share in San Miguel Corporation.

The sixth is to make Makati a specific urban tourist destination. This will cater to the most important specific tourist market segment today — the working Japanese female who likes to go on group shopping holidays.

The seventh is to stimulate private investment in agriculture. We are pushing legislation to allow farmer-beneficiaries to sell their land so it can be used as collateral.

And the eighth is to begin the complete staff work to make the reclamation area in Roxas Boulevard a tourism complex to be called 'The Bagong Nayong Pilipino.'

Our main goal for all of these is to win the battle against poverty within the decade. But as mentioned by Tony, we must also seek permanent national stability.

Thus, I'd like to report to you that because of our aggressive drive against terrorism, despite that sometimes they desperately resort to some hit and run bombings, the domestic terrorists specially the Abu Sayyaf are on the run. We have captured the bombers of Zamboanga of October and also one of the perpetrators of the bus bombing in Manila. All saints' day was very peaceful because of our alert law enforcers, soldiers and intelligence agents who hardened the terrorists' target.

Alam mo, dumating ako sa Manila mula sa APEC, November 2. I left San Francisco, Manila time, about noon time, 1 o'clock pm. So I called up... before I left I called up Secretary Reyes — Defense Secretary. "Kumusta na d'yan?" "Everything is quite," sabi n'ya. "No untoward incidents." so I hopped on the plane. I don't know what happened on the other half of November 1. When I got back, I asked the Chief of Staff, General Defensor, "O, kumusta?" "Fine, everything peaceful." at nagbibiruan pa. Siguro ikikwento ko 'yung isang biro ko. In announce na raw ng military na they're gonna field so many policemen, so many soldiers, so many dogs, sniffing dogs. Ah, inannounce ni ... Kaya tuloy ang dami nagtext raw kay General Ebdane ng Chief ng Philippine National Police kasi fieldings so many dogs in the cemeteries... Nag-text sila, "Salamat sa pagkain." anyway, two hundred dogs... Pero two hundred dogs pa rin ang bumalik. Kaya biro lang 'yon.

We have crushed at least five kidnap-for-ransom gangs. And the Chinese-Filipino community na s'ya ang paboritong biktima itong mga gang na ito, sabi nila sa ngayon matahimik doon sa Binondo.

These macro statistics translate into benefits for the poor. The price of rice for the poor is stable at 14 to 16 pesos depending on where you buy it. 'Yung rice for the poor 'yung regular-milled rice. Pero ngayon pati raw 'yung well-milled rice 18 pesos na lamang. And some 200,000 urban poor families have acquired the right to buy the land that they are occupying, so that they're not squatters anymore. Schools are being built in barangays where there used to be none, about a thousand of them. And more than 3 million poor Filipinos now have health insurance. These achievements we attained during the short period of the 21 months of my administration.

But, no president can build a strong republic single-handedly. I can continue to do this and do this better only if I can count on the support of the more than 7 million Filipinos overseas.

You are part of this wellspring of support, the network of Filipinos all over the world that I'm counting on.

Kaya nagpapasalamat ako sa binanggit nga ni Tony, inyong pagmamalasakit sa ating kapwa pilipino at sa ating bayan. Ipagpatuloy natin ang ating... At ang inyong magandang gawain, ang ating pagbubuklod-buklod, at ang ating pagkakaisa. Dahil tuloy pang mahirap ang hinaharap ng ating mundo. Kaya mas lalong kailangan ang ating sariling sikap at pagkakaisa.

And so, even as you are here helping build the renewed Cambodian nation, help me too to build a strong Philippine republic.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during a meeting with the Filipino community in Vietnam

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a meeting with the Filipino community in Vietnam

[Delivered at Function Rooms 1 and 2, Mezzanine, Melia Hanoi Hotel, Hanoi, Socialist Republic of Vietnam,
November 6, 2002]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Blas Ople.

At gusto ko ring batiin ang ating Ambassador dito sa Vietnam, si Ambassador Willy Wong; salamat rin kay Mr. Joel Mermida, ang ating pangulo ng samahang Pilipino dito sa North part ng Vietnam. Salamat sa inyong magandang sinabi; at salamat din kay Gerry Paglinawan. Sorry, at hindi ako nakapunta ngayon sa Ho Chi Minh City. Salamat at ikaw ang pumunta rito.

Gusto ko muling ipakilala ang mga kasapi ng Philippine delegation. Narito si Secretary Ignacio Bunye. Sa kabila ni Secretary Ople na nabati na natin si Secretary Ignacio Bunye, siya ang ating Press Secretary; si Secretary Silvestre o Yongyong Afable, siya ang namumuno ng Presidential Management Staff; at saka ‘yung pangulo ng Philippine International Trading Corporation — wala s’ya dito sa head — ayon si Tony Abad. At... Kasi dito sa Vietnam state trading ang ginagawa kaya dala-dala ko din ‘yung presidente ng ating state trading para baka kayo makahanap kayo ng oportunidad sa pangangalakal, kontakin ninyo si Tony Abad bilang counterpart doon sa Pilipinas.

At kayong lahat naman mga minamahal kong kababayan dito sa Vietnam, magandang tanghali sa inyong lahat.

Balam mu atin kung cabaleng keti. Maupad na panapon , dakal na salamat.

Adta ngarod nga Ilokano. Kakailyan, kakailyan ni mamang ko, mga gapo ti Pangasinan, naimbag nga malemyo amen, apo.

Ug dunay... Oo, dunay balai taga-Mindanao diri? Ah, ok. Asa ko nidako, maayong udto kaninyong tanan.

Kag sa kasimanwa sang akong bana, kon may-ara, ha? Ilonggo? Oy, si Tony, ayon. Maayong ugto sa inyo nga tanan.

At sa lahat sa inyo, ako ay nagpapasalamat na kayo ay pumunta rito. Limang daan ang Pilipino dito sa Vietnam. ‘Di one-fifth ng Filipino ay narito na, magkasama tayong lahat. Maraming salamat.

At bagamat maliit ang Philippine community dito, sa pagka-alam ko na nga na dito sa Pilipinas ang mga Overseas Filipino ay maganda ang inyong kontribusyon dito sa Vietnam. Halos lahat ng Overseas Filipino workers dito ay professionals, matataas ang pwesto n’yo sa management, sa executive position. Kaya binabati ko kayong lahat at nagpapasalamat ako sa inyong tulong din sa inyong mga kamag-anak at sa ating ekonomiya.

Ako’y pumunta rito dahil inimbata ako ng pangulo ng Vietnam, si president Tran Duc Luong dahil siya rin ay nagbisita sa Pilipinas. At dumaan nga ako dito mula sa Cambodia kung saan ako ay nagdalo sa ASEAN meeting.

Ako'y nagpunta sa Cambodia para sa ASEAN meeting sa parehong dahilan kung ba't ako ay pumunta sa Mexico para sa APEC Leaders' Meeting, at 'yon ay para ilakad na makasigurado ang ekonomiya at ang seguridad ng ating bansang Pilipinas. Kasi, whether ang pinupuntahan natin ay para labanan ang mga gumawa ng alyansa kontra sa global terrorism o magbisita dito na ang Vietnam ay isa sa pinakamalaking supplier pag tayo ay nag-i-import ng bigas. Lahat n'yan ay parating para sa ekonomiya at kung papano aangat ang buhay ng ating mga mamamayan.

'Yung aking administrasyon ang kanyang hangad ay talagang maglingkod ang pamahalaan sa ating mamamayan. Maging nasa Pilipinas o maging nasa ibang bansa.

Kaya noong ako ay senador pa kasama ako ni Senator Ople. Kami, noon pa ay naniniwala na dapat ang mga Pilipinong nasa ibang bansa ay pwedeng bumoto sa ating bansa. Kami ay nag-author ng Overseas Voting Bill noong pa'y kami ay kapwa senador. Kanya lamang 'yung mga bill na 'yon — hindi lang 'yung aming fi-nile, 'yung iba pa — ay hindi lumalampas sa committee on suffrage. Kaya noong ako ay naging pangulo. Sabi ko sa ating senado at kongreso, meron akong limang batas na pinakakailangan. Binanggit ko 'yung mga batas na 'yon at isa nga doon ay 'yung overseas voting bill. Kaya ngayon sa wakas, pagkatapos ng napakaraming beses na sinikap na i-file — halimbawa, kami ni Secretary Ople — ngayon lamang umabot sa wakas na napasa na 'yung panukalang batas sa Kongreso at napasa na rin sa senado. Ngayon, kaka-report lang ni Secretary Ople sa akin na nandoon, nagmi-miting ngayon 'yung senador at Congressmen sa tinatawag na bicameral conference committee, at doon ay pinagtatalo nila 'yung kanilang dalawang magka-ibang version. Kaya inaasahan ko at magdasal tayo na sa madaling panahon ay magkaisa sila, magkasundo sila sa isang version lamang. Dahil kung magkasundo na sila sa loob ng beinte kwatro oras ay pipirmahan ko na para maka-boto ang Pilipino sa ibang bansa.

Dahil inaasahan ko na pag kayo ay may pagkakataon na maka-boto mas lalo pang interesado kayo at mas lalo pang tutulong kayo sa mga pangangailangan ng ating bansa kahit na kayo ay nasa ibang bansa.

Siguro kung naalala ninyo dahil marami naman sa inyo ay hindi long-term na narito. Baka nand'yan sa Pilipinas noong ako ay naging pangulo o bago nasara 'yung sandali 'yung Filipino channel nakakapanood kayo. Noong ako ay unang naging pangulo, ang bansa na aking minana ay may apat na milyong Pilipinong walang trabaho at ang poverty rate ay 40 percent.

Kanina nag-kukwento kami ng Secretary of Health ng Vietnam, 'yung babae. Siya kasi ang aking minister-in-attendance. At sabi n'ya dito sa Vietnam, 12 million Vietnamese ay mahirap. Ang population nila ay 78 million. Tayo, population natin ay 78 million din pero 30 million Filipinos ay mahirap. Kaya mas malaki pa ang hamon na minana ko kaysa ang sitwasyon ng Vietnam ngayon bilang kahirapan ng ating bansa.

Ngunit sa ating pagsisikap, meron na ring konting mga bungang lumilitaw. Ngayon, kayo hindi n'yo siguro masyadong nararamdaman dito sa Vietnam dahil malakas ang pag-angat ng Vietnam, pero sa ibang bahagi ng mundo talagang may global slowdown. Ngunit tayo, ang Pilipinas kasama ng Vietnam, tayo ang pinaka masasabi nating kasama sa pinakamatataas na growth rate dito sa Asia. At sinisikap din natin na ibayuhin 'yung ating kailangang gawin para 'yung ating mga tinatawag na macroeconomic fundamentals ay ating makamit.

Halimbawa, tuloy-tuloy tayo na sinisikap natin na 'yung ating budget deficit ay mababa at ang gusto nating gawin dito para bumaba ang ating deficit ay: isa, ikontrol ang paggastos ng gobyerno; at pangalawa — mas importante — iangat ang ating koleksyon ng mga buwis through better efforts at efficiency, and also fighting corruption.

Pag-usapan natin 'yung corruption ng ating bansa. Importante kasi na kung tayo ay talagang aangat, kailangan natin ng good governance. At ako ay naniniwala na kung gusto nating labanan ang corruption, kailangan nagsisimula ang halimbawa sa pinakamataas. Kaya ako, kahit na 'yung aking asawa hindi exempted. Naniniwala ako na 'yung mga nag aatake sa kanya, 'yon ay pulitika. Ngunit kahit na pulitika, sinasabi ko pa rin sa kanya, "eh di sige, gusto kang i-investigate, magpa-investigate ka." kasi ang kabutihan noon kahit pulitika dahil siya ay nagpakumbaba at hinarap n'ya ang mga investigation, ngayon tuloy umangat ang aking moral authority para mag-investigate na rin kahit kanino.

Kaya gusto kong isigurado sa inyo na ginagawa nating lahat para magkaroon ang taumbayang Pilipinas nang tinatawag nating professional and clean government. Kasi 'yon ang talagang nararapat para sa inyo.

Halimbawa, meron na tayong e-procurement sa gobyerno. So, marami tayong savings at kumokonti pa ang katiwalian sa mga bidding. At meron akong Presidential Anti-Graft Commission. Sila ay nag-e-examine, nag-i-investigate ng mga matataas na appointees. At meron d'yang mga government board corporations, meron d'yang mga bureau directors. Ah, pagmalakas ang ebidensya o malaki ang iskandalo ay sinasabi ko kahit na ini-investigate pa lang mag leave of absence na, at habang na-investigate... Para iba na ang maglilingkod.

At ngayon, 'yung corruption naman sa mga husgado. Meron tayong separation of powers. Ganun pa man, kasama na ang Supreme Court sa ilalim ng liderato ni Chief Justice Davide, sabay nagpo-prosecute ng mga erring prosecutors at nagpo-prosecute pati ng mga... 'Yung mga huwes. At ang ginawa ko, na 'yung bir na gaya ng sabi ko umaangat na ngayon ang kanilang collection nga dahil dito sa anti-graft drive. Pati Customs 'yon ang gusto kong gawing showcase doon sa atinglaban kontra sa katiwalian. At ito ay tuloy-tuloy pa rin ng ating trabaho. Layunin nito para bumuti ang ating ekonomiya, para magkaroon ng trabaho ang ating mamamayan.

Gaya ng sabi ko kanina, na kasama ng Vietnam, tayo ay umaangat ng mataas haming sa buong mundo. At ang nagpapa-angat sa ating ekonomiya ay 'yung ating services. Hindi nakakagulat na kayo ay narito dahil services ang inyong specialty. Services rin ang nagpapa-angat sa ating bansa ngayon sa Pilipinas.

Kasama dito sa services na umaangat sa Pilipinas, pinakamabilis na pag-angat telecommunications sector. Tapos 'yung trade, pangangalakal at saka private services na kasama ang tourism.

Alam n'yo tinatanong ni Prime Minister Mahathir sa akin noong isang araw, "kumusta 'yung growth rate ng inyong tourism?" nagulat siya nung sinabi ko na 'yung October figures natin, October last year to October this year, 40 percent ang ating growth rate ng tourism.

Tapos 'yung mga insurance at iba pang mga financial institutions maliban sa bangko, sila ay umaangat ngayon, the highest growth rate in the last four years. Doon sa industriya last year, negative ang ating growth rate ng industriya. Pero ngayon nag-recover lalo na dahil nag-recover ang ating exports. At ang ating... Ito rin ang isang nakakagulat. Tinatanong din sa akin nila — sino nga ba 'yon? — sina thaksin ng thailand, kumusta 'yung ating exports. Sabi ko 20 percent growth. Ang gulat n'ya. Pati nga sa Silicon Valley, si Andy Grove ng Intel, sinabi ko 20 percent growth, ang gulat n'ya. Sabi n'ya, "bakit?" sabi ko, dahil sa electronics export. Sabi n'ya, "bakit, hindi naman umaangat ang Silicon Valley." ang paliwanag ng mga manufacturers sa Pilipinas ay dahil... Hindi dahil lumaki ang market kung hindi nakakuha tayo market share sa ibang bansa dahil efficient ang ating workforce.

'Yung private construction ay bumabalik na rin. At sa agrikultura ang lumakas 'yung fisheries at forestry. At sana totoo 'yung nabasa ko sa peryodiko kahapon o kanina ba 'yon, na nagkaroon tayo ng bumper crop. Ewan ko, baka si Mr. Co can tell me kung totoo 'yon o hindi. Kasi kung hindi, nandito siya para bumili ng bigas dito sa Vietnam.

'Yung... At siyempre... At saka 'yung inflation natin nabasa ko din sa peryodiko kanina. Again, bumaba na naman ang ating inflation rate, 2.9 percent or 2.7 percent. Kaya mahina ang pag-akyat ng presyo. Sana nararamdaman ng taumbayan na 'yung presyo ng bigas ay hindi tumataas. I mean 16 to 18 pesos para sa mahihirap... Ay no, 14 to 16 'yung bigas ng mahihirap, 18 na 'yung bigas ng mga maykaya. Tapos nun 'yung pang syempre ang ating big saver. Kung four or four-and-a-half ang growth rate ng GDP nagiging 5.2 ang growth rate ng GNP dahil 'yon ang kasama na ang remittances ng mga Pilipino kagaya ninyo.

Noong isang taon, kayong mga Pilipino, ang pinadala ninyo sa Pilipinas 6 billion dollars. Ngayon, for the first three quarters of the year, 6.4 billion dollars na ang pinadala ninyo. Kaya maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

At ang gobyerno, gaya ng sabi ko, hindi inaangat ang gastos para sa ganun ang ating... Lahat nitong development na sinabi ko sa inyo, ito ay private sector led. 'Yung mga bunga, macro statistics ito eh. Pero gusto kong sabihin, anong ibig sabihin ng inflation rate na 2.7 or 2.9 percent lamang. Ibig sabihin noon, gaya ng sabi ko 'yung bigas, at ibig sabihin din noon na may ibang mga bunga para sa mahihirap. Halimbawa 'yung mga squatters sa metro manila, 200,000 families ay nakakuha na ng karapatang bilhin ang lupang tinitirikan nila. Ibig sabihin noon hindi na sila squatters. At saka meron din tayong eskwelahan na tinatayo sa mga malalayong barangay na noong araw walang eskwelahan. Isang libo ‘yung nabilang nating barangay na walang eskwelahan noong araw. Nagtatayo tayo doon ng mga eskwelahan ngayon. At tatlong milyong mahihirap na Pilipino ay merong health insurance na ngayon. At lahat itong kinukwento ko sa inyo ay nakamit dito sa nakaraang 21 months ng aking administrasyon kahit na mahirap ang kalagayan ng buong mundo.

Kasi para sa akin, ang pangunahing layunin ay manalo tayo sa kahirapan sa loob ng isang dekada. Ngunit kailangan din natin na magkaroon ng matatag na republika kung makakamit natin dito. At kailangan din natin na magkaroon ng kapayapaan. Kasi ‘yan ang pinakasaligang batayang pangangailangan ng taumbayan — law and order.

We are addressing law and order through a holistic approach consisting of political, economic, security components. Meron tayong anti-crime program na sinimula ko noong July, noong second session ng congress na kasama pangdagdag na resources para sa pulis, mas nagko-coordinate sa intelligence activities, at meron tayong reward para sa mga criminal. Halimbawa, si Abu Sabaya kaya siya nakuha ay dahil may sumagot sa alok nating 5 million-peso reward para sa kanya. Kaya merong pumunta at na-trace natin siya sa pamamagitan noon. Sa kidnapping, may limang ransom gang na na-neutralize na. In fact, binabatikos nila ako nagpo-pose sa bangkay. Eh, papano natin malalaman, papano malalaman ng taumbayan na talagang na-neutralize na ‘yon. Kailangan makita nila. Ayaw kong nasa page 20, tapos akala pa rin nila ang dami-daming mga kidnappers na lumilibot. Hindi. I hope that Joji Co will confirm this pero ‘yung mga Filipino-Chinese community na sila ang paboritong biktima nitong mga gangs na ito ay sabi nila ngayon na matahimik na doon sa Chinatown.

Noong nangyari ‘yung 9-11, agad akong nagtrabaho para sugpuin ang terorismo sa ating bansa both militarily and economically. And I move aggressively to challenge the Abu sayyaf in their own turf militarily. Ngayon, nandoon sila sa bundok kung saan nagsimula ‘yung Abu Sayyaf, doon sa Patikul sa Sulu. Nandoon ang ating sundalo kung saan kahit na kailan noong araw hindi pa sila nakakaabot all these centuries. Kaya mabigat ang laban ngayon pero palagay ko dahil nakaabot na tayo doon ay mananalao na tayo. Noong araw libu-libo ‘yung Abu Sayyaf, ngayon they’re only a couple of hundreds. Kaya lang siyempre pag may isang bomba, pag may isang rifle shot, takot na naman ang taongbayan. Pero gusto kong isigurado sa inyo na tayo ay umaangat dito sa ating pagsisikap na ito.

Kanya lamang walang pangulo na pwedeng magtayo ng matatag na republikang mag-isa lamang. Magagawa ko lamang ito ng mabuti kung merong akong suporta ng ating mga kapwa Pilipino pati na rin ‘yung mga Pilipino sa ibang bansa kagaya ninyo. Kasi bahagi kayo sa aking inaasahan ‘yung network ng Filipinos sa buong mundo. Kaya ipagpapatuloy natin sana ang ating pagkakaisa. At sa Pilipinas, pinagpapatuloy ang sariling sikap dahil tuloy pa rin na mahirap ang buong mundo.

Kaya lalong hinihingi ko sa inyo, tulungan n’yo ako even as you are contributing to the development of Vietnam with your expertise, help me build a strong Philippine republic.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during a State Banquet

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During a State Banquet

[Delivered at the International Conference Center, Hanoi, Socialist Republic of Vietnam, November 6, 2002]

His Excellency President Tran Duc Luong; other officials of the Vietnamese government; ladies and gentlemen:

Thank you, your Excellency for your graciousness and for your generous hospitality accorded to our delegation. On this day, we raise to a higher plane with the ties of friendship and cooperation that will then fuse relations between our respective nations and peoples.

The Philippines prides itself in being one of the first to establish diplomatic relations with Vietnam in 1976. It is also a customer of Vietnam because Vietnam is a principal supplier of Filipinos rice imports. It is also an investment for Vietnam because 21 important businessmen in my country has put up factories here in Vietnam.

Your Excellency's State Visit to the Philippines on this same month last year was a giant step forward in our friendship. It reaffirmed our close and traditional fronts that hopefully my visit will also make stronger.

Vietnam's struggle for independence was a historical requiem of the post world war ii period. Today, Vietnam's political consolidation and economic recovery makes us all admire you in greater measure. We are proud to be your allies in ASEAN and your partners in the larger realm of world peace, security and prosperity.

I am deeply impressed by the great strides achieved under your government's 'doing our way' drive over the past 16 years. Your people have shown the will and capacity to maintain political stability, master and develop productive forces in the economy and improve living standards. We welcome these developments as a boon to more efficient trade and business activity which has made the way for Vietnam's integration into the regional and global economy.

You have our best wishes for your sustained success. I am here in Vietnam on your invitation as part of the continuing journey that brought me to the APEC Leaders Meeting in Mexico last week and to the 8th ASEAN Summit in Phnom Penh which ended yesterday. Our agenda follows a common pledge to the economy and security of our region.

The Philippines and Vietnam are neighbors separated only by the sea, the South China Sea. Our two countries are firm in our commitments to work within ASEAN in pursuing a strategy to achieve competitiveness while attaining sustainable growth and development.

In the same day, our two countries are steadfast in our common abhorrence of all forms of terrorism extremism. I would like to assure you that the Philippines is intensifying our efforts to crush the cause of terrorism within our territory and across our common seas in the region in cooperation with the other states.

Finally, I would like to take this opportunity in behalf of the more than 500 Filipinos in Vietnam, in behalf of the Filipino investors in Vietnam, some of whom are here tonight, my gratitude to the Vietnamese government for its hospitality to our overseas workers and to our investors. I am proud to note that these Filipinos are contributing in their own way to Vietnam's national development efforts.

May I invite all of you, excellencies, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen to a toast to the good health of President Tran Duc Luong, to the prosperity of the Vietnamese people, and to the lasting friendship and mutual cooperation within the Philippines and Vietnam.

Mabuhay!

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the International Conference on Anti-Terrorism and Tourism Recovery

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the International Conference on Anti-Terrorism and Tourism Recovery

[Delivered at the Rizal Ballroom, Shangri-la Manila Hotel, Makati City, November 8, 2002]

Thank you, Secretary Gordon. And congratulations because in the month of October compared to October last year, tourism arrivals increased by 40 percent. Thank you, Dick. Congratulations.

Secretary Roy Golez who organized this meeting together with Secretary Gordon. And I'd like to also greet Dr. David de Villiers of the World Tourism Organization; Ambassador Taylor from the United States; Ambassador Shigeta from Japan; the Ambassadors who live here in the Philippines, I'd like to greet all of you; the foreign and local participants of the International Conference on Anti-terrorism and Tourism Recovery; other national and local government officials; conference lecturers and resource persons; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

I'm very happy to be here with you tonight. I thank you all for coming here at such short notice, considering that I asked Secretary Golez to invite you only as I departed for the APEC Summit in Los Cabos last October 24.

The fact that you all arrived in such short notice only emphasizes the urgency and importance of our undertaking.

We share the pain and suffering of the families of those who were killed or injured in the terrorist attacks. We must find strength in our actions and not seek refuge in fear.

Terrorism impacts directly on tourism. Given the impact of terrorism on tourism, our first challenge is to deal with it and make this a safe and secure world.

As a forum for facilitating the movement of people across borders, the world tourism organization indeed has a stake in making sure that we are able to have a safe place in this world today. We must work together as nations and therefore this is truly an important forum. The World Tourism Organization has the responsibility of moving people, goods, services, information, investments. And that's why your organization faces the challenge of making sure that this world is safe at the same time you also still facilitate the movement of goods. It's a twin job that's very important — achieving the goal of making goods move and people move but also taking necessary steps to protect against terrorism. This requires a combination of the application of new technology and cross-border cooperation among government agencies.

We must work together as nations around the world to fight terrorism. We can't sit back and wait — oh, Secretary Lina. I'd like to acknowledge the presence of Secretary Lina, in-charge of our police. He knows we must not just sit back and wait — we must take this fight to the terrorists before they undermine not only our tourism but our very way of living.

We understand the challenge terrorism poses for all countries that value peace and order. It confirms that we must continue to take a firm stand against terrorism and work diligently with the family of nations in the global campaign to end the scourge of terrorism once and for all. On my part, the moment I took office, I declared war on terrorism in the Philippines. That's why when 9/11 happened I immediately declared my solidarity with the global coalition and joined the family of nations in the fight against terrorism.

After September last year, the Pacific countries, the European countries, countries all over the world crafted an initial response encompassing financial monitoring, aviation security, energy security, customs enforcement.

Many things have happened since then. In short order, the terrorists who were behind the attacks in 9/11 were driven out of Afghanistan and the government who played willing host to them was sent packing. Here in our own country, we set to work to crush terrorism militarily and economically. We moved aggressively to challenge the Abu Sayyaf on their turf, militarily and have met success, cutting their numbers to less than 200 or about 200 from numbering thousands. Of course, it takes one rifle shot or bomb to project yet more fear in society, but we are making significant progress.

The Abu Sayyaf remain a threat but a diminished one. We have worked to crush their armed soldiers and break up their intelligence cells. Remember, solitary acts of destruction are still possible. What is increasingly more difficult for Abu Sayyaf is extensive, coordinated military attacks.

These terrorists have proven once again that they are not guided by moral or religious conviction. They are nothing more than murderers of innocent people driven by an ideology of mayhem. We have experienced the same mindless violence in the Philippines. The only antidote is to have no fear and crush their efforts.

No religion calls for mass slaughter of innocents. We have Muslims in the Philippines, particularly in the southern islands and the vast majority of them are peace-loving people. Their wants are for a better life and to be lifted out of poverty. The terrorists are out of touch with their religion and with basic humanity.

No civilized nation can condone terrorism on moral or religious grounds. I won't, the Philippines won't.

I'd like to acknowledge the presence of Foreign Secretary Blas Ople.

In the Philippines and even abroad, we are pursuing inter-faith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity. Terrorists wish to instigate a religious war. We must make this an opportunity for religious understanding, ecumenism and solidarity.

The Al-Qaeda connection in the Philippines is real but not necessarily strong. It is possible that after Afghanistan, more Al-Qaeda are making their way to Southeast Asia. The real issue is breaking up the regional and global network, stopping the money flow and breaking up the militant cells wherever they may be across the globe.

The Philippines is just one of many nations, scattered throughout the world — including the United States and Europe — where Al-Qaeda is trying to operate. If anything, we are better prepared and taking more aggressive steps to stop terrorism in the Philippines than in many other parts of the world. Because we know from first-hand experience the pain of terrorism. It becomes a cancer if you don't cut it out.

We support a U.N. resolution on Iraq. This must be a fight of the community of nations against a nation that are shown it doesn't intend to abide by U.N. resolutions to destroy its weapons of mass destruction.

Here, I can assure you that we are doing everything possible to protect our citizens, our governments, our tourists here in the Philippines.

A few of my opponents have criticized my decision. I knew the moment last year, when I committed the Philippines to a leadership position in Asia in the global war on terrorism that I would be subjecting our nation to a heightened degree of attention on this issue.

But, I also knew that we had to share with the international community our experience, including our challenges and our successes, in dealing with terrorism if this effort was to be a true coalition.

I have to tell you: I make no apologies for aggressively seeking to root out terrorism in the Philippines and to putting considerable effort in seeking regional consensus on fighting terrorism.

Coupled with our participation in global efforts to stamp out terrorism, we are also working to promote cohesion and cooperation at the regional level. For example, last may, we created a three-nation anti-terrorist working arrangement between the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysia. Cambodia joined this coalition last July.

Such successes, however, did not prepare us for the horror inflicted in Bali just a couple of weeks ago. It reminded us that the war against terrorism is going to be long and difficult and that it knows no boundaries. It comes at a time when there are fears that the global economy may be in for a double dip.

In this regard, may I go back to the Philippines and our economy. I am glad that the labor solidarity movement, the umbrella organization of the country's mainstream labor groups: TUCP, FFW, AFW and Tupas have decided not to press for a wage increase at this time. This is an act of patriotism that was immediately followed by the employers confederation, who committed to pay for any increases in workers' contribution in SSS premiums for as long as there are still no wage increases.

While government works hard at creating new jobs through investment as well as through tourism and the encouragement of small and medium scale businesses to build up domestic demand, we must also put in place job preservation mechanisms at a time when the world is in economic difficulty. This patriotic act by the labor unions — the four biggest labor unions of the country — is one such mechanism by which existing jobs can be preserved.

The same is true of the employers group who made their own contribution to a social accord that will allow us to weather this difficult time.

On the part of government then I wish to direct the following agencies to ensure that government does its share:

The Department of Labor to strictly enforce existing labor standards so that the workers may get their lawful due; the National Food Authority to assist workers to get cheaper rice and other basic necessities; the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council to intensify its drive to provide affordable housing to workers through rent-to-own and similar schemes that will allow workers decent dwelling places.

We must learn to conserve our gains during difficult times. More important, we must stand together to move this country, our country forward.

Here, in this country, I thank labor and management for understanding that today dealing with terrorism is our most urgent priority.

In the aftermath of Bali, we are looking to expand our coalition — Thailand joined our trilateral and then quadrilateral coalition earlier this week. Through this coalition, which is now a five-way coalition, we work to share intelligence on terrorist activities. We will tighten border patrols and if necessary partake in joint peacekeeping operations. We are looking to take more aggressive action through this international conference on terrorism and tourism recovery.

In December or early next year, the Philippines will again host another event — this time, multilateral seminar games on emergency responses to terrorist threats. I'd like to invite once again your security, defense and police officials to these seminar games. We are hosting these games in accordance with one of the initiatives in last year's ASEAN Summit.

Our collective actions have constrained terrorists operations, but by how much and where, we don't know. But it's very clear, we have to expand deterrent measures especially talking about tourism to include airport security, tighter airport security and others.

We support measures to secure movement of people from point of origin to point of destination in the same manner that we support measures that will deter movement of terrorists across borders. We are here in this meeting to promote the principle of secure tourism.

But just as we are taking security measures to prevent terrorist acts, we should also address the poverty and hopelessness that provide recruits for terrorism.

Anti-terrorism is a global fight if not the challenge of a single nation or region. The tragedy in Bali once again shows this that i said that terrorism knows no boundaries.

Thinking globally is what we must do in this fight against terrorism. Thinking globally means: sharing information, following every lead, and taking harsh measures to destroy militant cells. But we must also seek out and destroy the handmaiden of terrorism which is poverty. The family of nations must unite and fight to defeat poverty as it unites to defeat terrorism. We must also work to build our democratic institutions to allow for greater freedom and participation for our citizens in civic life.

I would like to join my Southeast Asian neighbors in asking the western countries to refrain from issuing travel warnings and advisories that discourage tourism and investment from going to our countries.

We should not be penalized by those who are well aware of the tough decisions and the actions we have taken to not only deal with terrorists on our own shores but also to work with other countries to ensure that in our region and around the world we cooperate by sharing intelligence and by assisting in apprehending terrorists who are not restricted by national borders.

On the part of the Philippines, I believe the strongest argument we have against such penalties is the reputation of the Filipino workers all over the world.

I do hope that our friends in the western world and elsewhere will think long and hard about how they can support the efforts we are taking to not only remove the scourge of terrorism from the Philippines and the other countries in Southeast Asia but also the work we are doing to ensure that the various countries in our region are just as active in fighting this global war.

We need cooperation from our friends internationally, not misguided condemnation. At the end of the day, they must realize that no nation is not doing anything to fight terrorism. On the part of the Philippines I would say that though there are many others fighting just as much as we are nobody's fighting more than we are. We look forward to working closely with the western world and our neighbors in what is unfortunately going to be a long war.

Just as we search out and destroy terrorism, we must search out and destroy the terror of poverty. There is evil in being hungry just as there is evil in being a destructive terrorists. We must work together as a family of nations to alleviate both.

Whether it's the fight against global terrorism or the promotion of tourism, at the end of the day, it's always about the economy and improving the lives of our citizens.

And so I congratulate you for being here in this anti-terrorism conference. And I hope that from the resolutions that have been made and are being made, we will be even more triumphant in the fight against terrorism and in the promotion of the movement of people across nations.

Thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 12th General Assembly of the League of Municipalities of the Philippines

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 12th General Assembly of the League of Municipalities of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Fiesta Pavilion, Manila Hotel, November 14, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Romulo sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin. Alam n'yo si Secretary Romulo sa dami ng paper work na ginagawa niya dahil halos lahat ng aabot sa akin ay dumadaan sa kanya muna, halos hindi siya lumalabas ng Malacañang. Pero narito siya, ganoon ka importante ang League of Mayors of the Philippines.

Ti kailayak diay binalonan, Pangasinan Mayor Ramon Guico, thank you very much for your leadership in putting together the agenda of the Mayors League; gusto ko ring batiin 'yung ibang mga Executive Committee Officers, our very young mayor from Bogu, Cebu, Mayor Celestino Martinez. Kasama ko siya doon sa japan, hindi ba? And I hope that upon your nomination... And I hope that he's been able to help also the other mayors in disseminating the opportunities that there are for Japanese ODA.

Gusto ko ring batiin si Mayor Melchor Nacario ang EVP for external affairs. Saan si Mayor Nacario? Queng cacung Cabalen Mayor Boking Morales, from Mabalacat, the home of Clark; Mayor Jose Salonga, our Vice President for Luzon. Asan si Mayor Salonga? Ayun. Ano mayor kumusta ka? Mayor Elizabeth Delgado, our very young mayor from Surigao; Mayor Armando Sanchez from Batangas; Mayor Sylvia Adame from Bohol, how are you mayor? Mayor Melquiades Azcuna; Mayor Francis Olbis; Mayor Julio Uy, ang ating legal counsel; at si Mayor mayor, ang kanina nagpahayag ng resulta ng inyong mga workshop.

At narito rin — ganoon kayo ka importante — alam n'yo sinasabi ko sa mga Cabinet members ko, kaya usually sa ibang mga affairs, kung minsan 'yung host naglalagay ng isang buong mesa para sa Cabinet members. Pero walang naka-upo doon. Kasi ang usapan namin, marami silang trabaho 'wag na parating sama ng sama sa akin. Pero dito hindi sila nandito para sumama sa akin nandito sila para makipag-ugnay sa inyong lahat. Kaya ito ang ating mga Cabinet members.

Nandito si Secretary of Defense, si Angie Reyes. Dahil napaka-importante kayo lalo na ngayon sa mga laban kontra sa terorismo at iba't-iba pang mga disaster whether natural o man-made; si Nani Braganza, na ang trabaho niya whether its for re-distribution or for conversion kailangan ang mabilis na kilos ng mga local government executives, kung hindi sa kanya tatama ang complaint tungkol sa katagalan ng proseso kaya kailangang-kailangang kayo ni Nani Braganza; at narito rin si Secretary Ging Deles, siya ang partner ninyo sa kalahi. 'Yon ang ating kabalikat laban sa kahirapan; at hindi siya Municipal Mayor pero siya ang ating host, City Mayor of Manila, Mayor Lito Atienza; at hindi rin siya mayor, city mayor, ni hindi siya municipal mayor pero siya rin ang ating host, ang pinuno ng Manila Hotel si Don Emilio Yap; I also like to thank USAID Mission Director Michael Yates for your support to the local government; at sa inyong lahat mga punong-bayan ng buong Pilipinas, malugod kong binabati kayong lahat, mga kagalang-galang na pinunong lokal mula sa iba't-ibang dako ng Pilipinas na narito ngayon para samang balangkasin ang mga programang tutugon sa kahirapan, lilikha ng mga gawaing pang-kaunlaran at pagpapasigla sa ating ekonomiya.

Our local governments have truly come of age. The DILG reported to me recently that by and large, the municipalities you stand for now collectively exceed the national government in performance. Sana nakatulong at sana hindi pa ninyo nakalimutan na siguro naman marami sa inyong nagawa ay dahil binigay ko sa inyong buo ang inyong IRA. At hindi lamang 'yon, nagbayad pa ako ng utang sa inyo ng nakaraang administrasyon. Noong nagkataon na tayo ay nagka-problema sa budget deficit just recently, may panukalang bawasan ang inyong IRA dahil binabawasan ng national government ng allocation. Ngunit sabi ko, hanapan natin ng paraan na buo pa rin ang ira ng mga local governments. Mag-sakripisyo nang dagdag ang national government, ngunit sikaping buo pa rin ang ira ng local government, dahil mahal ng ating administrasyon ang mga local government.

You are important to the administration because you are the direct link to the people. The credibility and motive force of a strong Philippine republic largely rests upon your shoulders.

A strong Philippine republic has two essential attributes: first, the republic must be autonomous of dominant classes and sectors, so that it represents the people's interest and not only the interest of the powerful minority groups; second, the republic must have the capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to implement its policies and deliver its services.

The first and foremost strong institution of a strong Philippine republic is an effective government from the national to the local governments with a professional and dedicated civil service. Such a combination for an effective government delivers basic services for everyone the most important of which is an environment of peace and order and the rule of law and the necessary infrastructure. In addition, an effective republic must help its poorest and weakest citizens, empower them and dismantle the structures that make them poor and weak. An effective government rests on the rule of law, and our justice system must be strengthened to become an efficient institution for all not just for the powerful.

Ito ang ating sinisikap na magkaroon — an effective government that performs.

A strong republic makes sure that essential services especially peace and order and the necessary infrastructure reach the people, whether these services are provided for by government or by the private sector.

That's why earlier today before coming here, I was in Batangas City to witness the completion of the largest natural gas-run power generation facility in the Philippines. What I did this morning was a milestone event for our country, because now with the opening of the Ilijan natural gas power plant now more than 52 percent of our total energy requirement is supplied by resources from right here in the Philippines. Prior to our administration, we were importing most of our energy resources. And this Ilijan power plant not only accelerates the development of our indigenous industry, but also enables the increase utilization of environment-friendly fuels, because natural gas is environment friendly.

The Ilijan plant is also the largest investment of South Korea in the Philippines with a total project cost of 1 billion dollars. And the good news is that the investors told me they are still looking for other investment opportunities in the Philippines. So, I invite our mayors to court them and other prospective investors for your localities.

I also arrived last week from the APEC Summit in Mexico and the ASEAN Summit in Cambodia. These leaders' meetings underscored a significant new trend among nations and leaders, namely: the recognition that we must fight terrorism hand-in-hand with the fight against poverty.

The best antidote to terrorism and poverty is political freedom and economic opportunity. That's why as the leader of a developing nation like ours, I cannot achieve one without the other. That's why my fight, our fight against terrorism on our own soil must be accompanied by efforts to bring jobs, education and opportunity to our people at the same time.

In the fight against terrorism I would like report to you that this morning, AFP Chief General Benjamin Defensor presented to me the top, the very top bomber of the Abu Sayyaf, the leader of their bombing and terrorism group. Their group was planning a series of bomb attacks against government installations, foreign embassies and shopping malls in Metro Manila. The self-confessed bomber is implicated by his own cohorts who were arrested earlier and this bomber, this number one bomber of the Abu Sayyaf, the number one bomb expert was the mastermind of the bombings in Zamboanga last October, and also he was personally present in the dos palmas kidnapping last year. He carries a one million-peso reward for his capture. That's why we need to work with one another. Because we must make sure that the rest of his kind are put behind bars.

That's why let us continue to be united in our vision cost-effective.

Kanina sa mga diskurso ni mayor Mayor at ni Mayor Guico, napag-alaman ko na sa loob ng mga nakaraang buwan ay nag-sagawa rin kayo ng ganitong malawakang pagpa-plano sa tatlong major island conferences na inyong ginanap sa Luzon, Visayas at Mindanao.

Ang mga programang pinagtibay ninyo mga municipal mayors ay tugon sa ating kampanya para manatili ang kapayapaan at labanan ang kahirapan sa pamamagitan ng pagtataguyod ng pagkain, trabaho, buhay at edukasyon ng inyong mga nasasakupan. Natutuwa ako sa inyong maagap at angkop na pagkilos bilang tugon sa hamon sa aking state of the nation address at noong nakaraang league of mayors general assembly. Your newly-created working agenda will ensure concerted and cohesive support by the local government units of the national government's efforts to fight terrorism and criminality. Local action moves the nation and local victories eventually become national triumphs.

Let me stress that under the provisions of the local government code, local chief executives are automatically deputized as agents of NAPOLCOM, thus, because you are deputized by NAPOLCOM, you are empowered to exercise operational supervision and control over the police forces in your respective territorial jurisdictions. This is aside from your being chairman of the Local Peace and Order Council.

Ganunpaman, pinakikinggan ko 'yung mga presentation ni Monching Guico ng inyong agenda at mukhang pinakagusto ninyo sa agenda ay 'yung ammendment ng Local Government Code. Kaya 'yon ay sinusuportahan ng ating pamahalaan.

In the meantime, the DILG has a police-community anti-terrorism plan with the following four points of LGU participation:

First, the governors, the city and municipal mayors, and the punong barangay must immediately convene your respective Peace and Order Councils or Committees.

Second, these peace and order councils or committees must adopt or implement your respective public safety plans, including a provision on reporting and feedback mechanisms, to ensure regular monitoring of unusual and suspicious movements of people in your localities.

Third, barangay assemblies all over the country under the guidance of the mayors — if the barangays don't do it themselves — must convene to educate their constituents on how to deal and cope with terrorist threats in their respective barangays. Also, please take note that the other day, the Cabinet approved the draft of the NDCC Under Secretary Reyes that will incorporate in all our contingency plans the management of the consequences of terrorist incidents. And this include the local government, the mayor. In other words, when an incident actually occurs — how to rescue, how to make sure that the place is safe and all that — it is the mayor who will be in charged.

And fourth and last, all public safety officers under you must undergo mobilization and training through distance education on intelligence gathering and on the reporting system. They should conduct regular daily "rondas" and searches in accordance with law within their respective areas of jurisdiction.

I commend your workshops for tackling head-to-head on the issues concerning the use of a municipal identification system. Maraming salamat sa inyo doon. I commend you for tackling head on the issue of the selective arming of barangay tanods in high-risk areas. The condition for this is they must be accredited as CAFGUs with the commensurate training.

And I am also glad that because the fight against terrorism must go hand-in-hand with the fight against poverty, I'm glad that you are supporting the Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan or Kalahi program that was put together by Ging Deles as our common strategy for poverty reduction. The war against poverty and the war against terrorism are two sides of one coin. Poverty provides the recruits for terrorism, and terrorism strengthens poverty. Because we spend all our time and resources fighting terrorism instead of fighting poverty.

And in our battle against poverty for the next six months, even as we are resolving the terrorists threats in our country, I'm focused on a tightly consolidated work program to push private sector-led growth. Dahil may deficit tayo at 'yung ira ninyo ay hindi binabawasan, 'yung maraming gagawin sana ng national government ipapaubaya natin sa private sector.

The first item of this program is to strengthen our small and medium enterprises. To do this — to make the thrift banks and the rural bank bring out their funds to your SMEs — the central bank is relaxing its financial document requirements for loans to small and medium enterprises. And the field office of the department of trade and industry are now mandated to concentrate their services on assisting your SMEs with how-to-do project proposals required to access bank money.

Last year, I hope you remember, that you and i pump-primed the economy by having a sharing — one million from the national government and one million from you per town — that was for agricultural modernization.

You know, this project of ours last year, together with giving you the IRA in full and also paying the IRA debts of the last administration, this pump-priming we did with your full IRA and your extra IRA and the one million per town for agricultural modernization, this was identified by the economists as a major source of domestic demand which gave us one of the highest growth rates in Asia even if our export growth was negative.

Now, this year, we have the “one town, one product, one million-peso loan” for SMEs. The key to greater activity in the domestic market is the accelerated development of small and medium scale enterprises which have proven to be more capital-efficient than the larger business concerns.

Under this project, a loan of one million pesos will be lent to SMEs for one product in your town. In each of the 1,500 or so towns, municipalities in the Philippines, to encourage greater economic activity in the countryside. We have so far released 90 million pesos for this project.

Ibig sabihin noon, 90 towns have availed of this. Eh, 1,500 kayo. Kaya sana makipag-ugnay kayo sa DTI para malaman ninyo – kasi 'yung dti hindi naman devolved eh, may DTI provincial officer — makipag-ugnay kayo sa dti kung papano maka-access ang inyong sme dito sa pondong ito. Pwede rin ninyong isama ang pag-angkat ng murang gamot sa ilalim ng “presyong tama, gamot pampamilya” program. I urge municipalities once more — kasi marami ng munisipyo gumagamit na kayo nito. Nagbebenta na kayo ng half-priced medicine — I encourage more municipalities to join the half-priced medicine program that's being administered also by the department of trade and industry through the PITC, so that affordable quality drugs will be available to your constituents. With this program, complemented by the national health insurance program, our local officials can serve more of our poor and needy people. I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate all the mayors who have championed PhilHealth's insurance program.

'Yung namumuno ng PhilHeath kababayan namin ni Monching, si Dr. Tingkoy Duque. Kasi kayo mga mayors marami sa inyo nagdadala ng reseta, nagdadala ng mga doctors na kailangang magpahospital. Eh, kesa gagastos pa kayo sa sarili ninyong bulsa kung 'yung munisipyo ninyo ay mag-iinvest sa half-priced medicine at saka kung ang munisipyo ay mag-iinvest sa health insurance na 100 pesos per month — 'di ba monching? 100 pesos per month per family na mahirap — ay malaking saving. Hindi na kayo kukuha sa bulsa ninyo para sa gastos nila pang-doktor at hospitalization.

Kaya ito mga programang ito ay dapat mas marami pang makinabang na local government para ganun maganda ang serbisyo sa mamamayan at hindi masyado mabigat sa personal na bulsa ng punong-bayan.

Naaalala ko ang isang newspaper supplement na inilabas ninyo kamakailan kung saan binigyan ninyong diin ang salawikaing, and I quote: “nagkakaisang mamamayan, matatag na mga bayan. Isang malakas na bansa, mabilis ang kaunlaran.”

Dito ay inyong hinihikayat ang ating mga kababayan na isantabi muna ang hidwaan — personal man o pulitikal. Ito ang tunay na hamon ng ating panahon. Kaya paglingkuran muna natin nang may dedikasyon at buong tapat ang mga mamamayan at ang ating inang bayan. Kailangan nila tayo. At kailangan natin ang matatag na republikang Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Luncheon Meeting of the Joint Foreign Chambers of the Philippines

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Luncheon Meeting of the Joint Foreign Chambers of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Shangri-La, Makati City, November 15, 2002]

I want to thank you very warmly for this opportunity to highlight again some of the main features of our government policies relating to the interests of the foreign business community in the Philippines. I have always been consistent about my vision for uplifting our economy. I outlined that vision from the very first day of my administration. While at EDSA, I said that our challenge must be that within this decade, we must win the fight against poverty.

I reinforced that vision in my first State of the Nation Address where I highlighted four elements as priority in the fight against poverty.

First, an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century.

Second, a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity.

Third, a social bias towards the disadvantage to balance our economic development plan, and;

Fourth, to raise the standard of morality in government and society.

In my last State of the Nation Address, I acknowledged that the fast and economic development of social reforms which are needed to win the battle against poverty are the result of good policies and empowered institutions that are the features of a strong Republic.

A Strong Republic should have the capacity, represented through institution and a strong democracy, to execute good policies and deliver essential services.

In that last State of the Nation Address, I focused on the need to execute the good policy of fighting corruption and to deliver the essential service of peace and order.

Fighting corruption is an essential part of the broader policy that we know as good governance. I believe that the primordial requirement in building a strong Republic is good governance and fighting corruption starting with setting the example at the top.

Thus, even my husband is not above the law. Though I consider intrigues against him as simply an occupational hazard, I've encouraged him to face Senate investigation to demonstrate that there are no sacred cows in my administration and let the investigations go wherever any evidence might take them. I thank God that the evidence has invariably shown that the accusations against him are false and politically motivated. But because my husband has humbled himself by submitting to Senate investigations, I have enhanced my moral authority to investigate any serious allegation if corruption is found to take place.

Let me assure you that I am working diligently to ensure that you get the professional and clean government you deserve.

For instance, our new e-procurement program is saving billions. The Presidential Anti-Graft Commission is investigating a number of high government officials including cabinet members, bureau directors, government board chairmen, state prosecutors, board members of corporations. In cases where the evidence and the perception are very strong, I have asked many of them to go on leave sending the results of the investigations.

As for corruption within the court where there is separation of powers in our Constitution, because of your feedback, specifically feedback of the American Chamber, we have become pro-active in prosecuting graft among state prosecutors. And with the cooperation of the Supreme Court for prosecuting erring judges, some of these state prosecutors and bureau directors will, very shortly, get their walking papers because the due process is winding up. And that is without prejudice to the criminal cases filed against them.

Last year, I declared the Bureau of Customs and the Bureau of Internal Revenue as showcases in the fight against graft and corruption. This is a continuing effort. It is an effort where I have enlisted the support of the business community. And I ask you to join the Filipino businessmen who are helping institutionally in this effort.

This brings me to one of your concerns about how we can improve the interface between business and government. One of the things that government has an obligation to ensure is that its dealings with business are efficient, clear, and transparent. This is particularly true in the key areas of taxation, customs, immigration, and labor relations.

A lot of interface between you and the government are in these areas; and it's here that the foreign business community is entitled to expect and to receive the highest level of good governance.

My government, therefore, is enhancing its focus on improving the structures and governance practices of these agencies. In terms of improving your interface, while we have a one-stop shop for new investors, we don't have one existing right now for existing investors. We will create one shortly that will include these four agencies and we will place the quick response team of the Department of Trade and Industry under this office.

I understand that another concern of yours is the sanctity of contract. We are all accountable. You are accountable. You are stockholders. I'm accountable to my 80 million shareholders. Thus, I consider it my duty to look after their interest. We respect the sanctity of contract even as we are aggressive in correcting what we see is illegal or grossly onerous.

This is not simply a case of contractors versus the government. In many cases, they may even favor the investors. I'd like to say that I have heard from the investors, those who have had to go through the review of the ICT contract, that they are satisfied with the transparency and the professionalism with which these contracts have been reviewed and renegotiated. But the best defense, of course, is to prevent a situation from arising where we have to renegotiate in the future. We don't want the day to come when the contracts will further have to be reviewed and subjected to adjudication. Many of the contracts that we had to review are contracts that are not the making of my administration. If they are all legal and no onerous provisions could be found, these contracts shall be enforced. But there are a few where, indeed, even the shareholders admit, that shortcuts were taken. I don't want to spend the rest of my retirement facing the Ombudsman for that. It is important that we have the sanctity of contract. But it is important that those contracts be in line with the law from the very beginning.

While each contract is unique, there are many common elements and precedents all over the world. And in the process, all these renegotiations, specifically in the Department of Energy, the feedback so far has been very good. We're compiling best practices of such contracts to give us a resource to draw on in the writing of contracts and serve as benchmarks should there be a legal challenge in the future.

The challenge is to deliver the essential service of peace and order in the fight against terrorism. This is a global fight, and not the challenge of a single nation or region. The tragedy in Bali once again shows that terrorism knows no bounds.

One of the many challenges that have come out of the tragic events of September 11, the Bali bombings, and bombings in other parts of Asia is the impact it has had on the economy of the world. Of course, the human toll is immensely saddening. And worse that the economic toll is widespread. It comes at a time when there are fears that the global economy may be in for a double dip. My greatest concern is how terrorists have shifted the agenda of politics and cooperation from one of economic development to an overwhelming concern about security. Witness the unfortunate decision of some of your governments to issue travel advisory to institute selective procedures for granting visas applicable to 25 countries including the Philippines.

Last year, when I committed the Philippines to a leadership position in Asia in the global war on terrorism, I knew that I would be subjecting our nation to heightened degree of attention on this issue. But I also knew that we had to share with the international community, in the interest of transparency, our experience including our challenges and our successes in dealing with terrorism if this effort was to be a true coalition with you.

But I don't think that we should be penalized by those who are well aware of the tough decisions and actions we have taken to not only deal with terrorists in our own shores, but also to ensure countries in our region and around the world to cooperate by sharing intelligence and by assisting and apprehending terrorists who are not restricted by national borders. It is important as knowledgeable citizens of the countries where you come from, especially those from Europe, that you ensure the close relations between our countries and our peoples. You know that because of our aggressive drive against terrorism, despite the desperate resort to hit and run bombings, the domestic terrorists particularly the Abu Sayyaf are on the run. We have captured the Zamboanga and Quezon City bombers including the mastermind, the head of the explosive unit of the Abu Sayyaf who was presented yesterday.

There is much that you can do to help us. You are important stakeholders in my country. And I hope that you can help bring to your country and your officials a true picture of the Filipino traveler. I believe that the strongest argument we have against such penalty is the reputation of the Filipino workers and seamen in Europe.

I take great exception with the premise of gloom and doom and drift that my critics have engendered. I inherited an economy heading for bankruptcy and a political environment nearing on chaos but I have instilled political order and fiscal discipline.

Just a few months ago, there was a survey that came out that 19 percent of the people want to leave the country. Well, prior to that, there were more people who wanted to leave the country. In other words, those statistics showed a figure on the decline, but that was not how my critics were able to present it. As for the deficit issue, while we recognize that we must address it, I believe it has been overblown because of the preoccupation to the absolute target rather than the more meaningful debt to GDP ratio which is used as the rating standard despite the slippage. The deficit to GDP ratio maybe only point five to one percent higher than programmed, placing the 2002 deficit broadly in line with the 2001 deficit. This ratio compares favorably with the rest of Asia. Speaking of the rest of Asia, our economic growth, our export growth, our tourism growth, they compare very favorably with the rest of Asia. Inflation and interest rates are at the lowest point in more than a decade. Our investments, the needed infrastructure, are underway. Most importantly, I have managed to pass through Congress significant four measures. This includes the Power Sector Reform Law and the Anti-Money Laundering Law. But my effort to maintain support for the reforms we have undertaken is made even more difficult by many countries which do not play by the rules. Some developed countries preach free trade and yet practice protectionism against the developing countries.

Because of the still uncertain global environment, the focus of my attention for the next six months is mostly on building up domestic demand; thus, may I share with you briefly the points of the eight things that I want to do over the next six months.

The first item is to promote the growth of the small and medium enterprise which are the most effective and efficient leaders of capital.

The second is to jumpstart housing that has the biggest multiplier. The other night I had dinner with Senator Manny Villar who, before he entered Congress, was a housing magnate. He's building again, and others like him, are building again. They are not just planning to build. They are building. That's why the National Statistics Office figure shows a 20 to 25 percent increase in construction.

The third item is to reduce transport cost from Mindanao to Luzon through a 330 billion roll on, roll off port and ferry system from Mindanao through the Visayan islands to Luzon to be funded by the Development Bank of the Philippines. The DBP is lending to credit worthy investors as I hope some of you will be in this very important logistics program.

The fourth is infrastructure to decongest Metro Manila, starting on the north rail between Metro Manila north to Clark, and the continuation of the south toll road all the way to Batangas Port. Also, the start of the MRT final linkage with LRT to that we can have a loop around the metropolis. The review of Metro Manila's infrastructure program is on the way to ensure that it makes sense and produce visible results swiftly.

The fifth is to mobilize the contribution of the PCGG to the fiscal resources of the government, particularly the $600 million Marcos deposit with the PNB and the coco levy remaining 27 percent share of San Miguel.

The sixth is to make Makati a specific urban tourist destination with its compact easy to secure location, world class mall entertainment facilities, and internationally considered cheap shopping, perhaps with a side trip to Boracay or a similar resort is part of the package.

The seventh is to stimulate private investment in agriculture by pursuing legislation to enable banks to accept agricultural land as collateral.

And the eighth is to begin the complete staff work to make the reclamation area in Roxas Boulevard a tourism complex to be called the Bagong Nayong Pilipino Tourism Estate.

The program I have just outlined represents a significant part of my Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan and my continuing agenda of reform and change. We have been an active reformist government. I would be the last person to pretend that we're always 100 percent right. But we have a strong record to look at; and we offer it at a time of intense international uncertainty and concern. We offer a record of stability, of predictability, and of knowing what we believe in and what we stand for.

The end result that we are moving towards not today and tomorrow is there. We're moving towards a stronger, more respected, and more resilient Philippine nation. However, in moving towards a Strong Republic, when you are starting from what many have considered for a long time as a soft state, you often have to wait a while before you get the dividend of economic reform. And you can get this if you are willing to undertake the major reforms and face down some of the short term political challenges.

I am glad that you have said, Mr. Daly, that your expectations continue to remain high. I have been in office 21 months; but we have done things nobody was able to do for many years. Repair the damage done to the presidency. Work hard to deliver a stable economy. Lift our country's reputation around the world. It takes three years to construct your factory from the time you conceptualized it. Thus, when say I am moving towards a Strong Republic, don't expect that it should be there the next day. Before you get there, you go through all of these economic and political difficulties. I am going, I am willing to go through them. But I ask you, the members of the international business community, as you're already here, let us share this vision together, stay with me, we will yet make a Strong Philippine Republic together.

Thank you.

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 1st National Convention of the Guardians Philippines Anti-Crime Organization, Inc.

[Delivered at the PCARRD Complex, Los Baños, Laguna, November 16, 2002]

Maraming salamat Ning-Ning sa iyung napakagandang pagpakilala. Mabuti iyong babae sumusuporta sa babae. Maraming salamat ning-ning. Wala ba diyang babae sa mga Guardians? Ah, okay. At saka gusto kong batiin, kakarating si Secretary of Interior, si Joey Lina. Joey, hindi ka nahuli. Ngayon lang alas diyes, nag-umpisa lang tayo ng maaga, 'di ba? At pwede na kayong umupo.

Gusto kong batiin rin ang nagbigay sa atin ng welcome na siya pala ay Guardian, si Mayor Cesar Perez ng Los Baños; at iyung master founder ng Guardian, si Liborio Jangao. Daghan salamat sa imo nga pagka-found sa kining organisasyon; gusto ko ring batiin iyung aking napakagaling na recently retired CIDG, si Nestorio Gualberto; at siyempre kay Bernard Corella, congratulations muli; at sa inyong lahat.

Gusto ko ring batiin ang director ng ating lugar kung nasaan tayo, si Patricio Faylon. Salamat sa iyo nga pag-welcome sa amin dito; at iyong ating mga lider ng mga sundalo at mga pulis — nandito si Sol Commander, si General Roy Kyamko; nandito rin si PNP Regional Director Ike Galang; at saka nanggaling siya sa kabila, doon sa 7th Division pero mahal na mahal niya kayo at tayo, si General Boysie Braganza; nandito iyung ating mga punong lungsod ng malalaking lungsod diyo sa lalawigan ng Laguna — si Mayor Lajara ng Calamba, si Mayor Aquino ng San Pablo; at saka iyung ating guwapong Vice Governor, si Dan Fernandez; kayong lahat mga kaibigan:

Ikinagagalak kong makasama kayong lahat itong araw na ito. (ayun! May mga babae palang Guardians.) Marami sa inyo ay nagmula pa yata sa malalayong probinsiya at bumiyahe kayo dito para dumalo dito sa Kombensyon ng Guardians bilang anti-crime organization. Ito'y patunay ng matapat ninyong hangaring makipaglaban sa krimen na matinding salot ng ating lipunan ngayon.

Pinupuri ko kayo sa inyong tema: "Bagong Pananaw, Bagong Damdamin, Bagong Kabuluhan." dahil noon, iyung hangarin ninyong sinimulan ninyo ang organisasyon ng guardians — kabuluhan, be relevant sa reporma noon sa mga uniformed services. Ngayon, bagong kabuluhan dahil meron tayong mga bagong mga hamon sa ating lipunan kaya hanggang ngayon meron pa rin kayong kabuluhan dito sa ating lipunan ngayon. Kaya binabati ko kayo doon.

Naniniwala akong matapat ang inyong hangaring makilahok sa adhikain ng pamahalaan at makipagtulungan sa karamihan ng ating mga kababayan upang mapabilis ang paghari ng kapayapaan at kaunlaran sa bansa.

Alam ko na sinsero kayo dahil alam ko ang trabaho ng ilan sa inyong mga lider dahil matagal na silang kasama ko sa mga trabaho. At kayo rin pag nagpupunta ako sa mga probinsiya, meron ilan sa inyo nakikilala ko at nakikita ko ang inyong sinseridad na mapabuti ang ating pamayanan.

Talagang kailangan ang pagbabago kung nais nating patuloy na maging makabuluhan ang ating mga buhay. Malaki na ang ipinag-iba-iba ng panahon mula nung nagsimula iyong guardians so many, many years ago. More than a decade na, 'di ba? Ngayon, may makabagong teknolohiya, bumibilis ang pakikipag-ugnayan natin sa buong mundo. Panahon ng information technology na wala pa noon. Panahon ng globalization na wala pa naman talaga noon. Meron na tayo dahil may technology, may globalization, meron tayong mga mobile phones na umaabot hanggang sa ibang bansa, Internet umaabot sa hanggang ibang bansa, iba pang paraang komunikasyon. Madali na rin para sa karamihan ang bumiyahe pa sa ibang bansa. Kaya napakagaling at meron kayong international network.

Nguni't kasabay ng kabutihang dala ng teknolohiya, napabilis din ang paglaganap ng kasamaan tulad ng terorismo at iba pang internasyonal na krimen. Ngayon, pati terorismo multinational na rin. Pati krimen, multinational na rin. In the words of police jargon, transnational dahil nga sa teknolohiya at globalisasyon. Kung maganda ang loob nakakatulong ang teknolohiya, nakakatulong ang globalisasyon. Pero nakakatulong din sa mga masasamang loob kaya naroon ang ating hamon.

Sa dahilang ito, kailangan natin mga bagong paraan ng pagsugpo ng krimen. At lalong kailangan natin ang bagong pananaw para sa lahat ng mga nagnanais na sumali sa laban sa kriminalidad.

Kaya't pinupuri ko kayo sa inyong pagkukusang makipag-tulungan upang magapi na ang terorismo at iba pang uri ng krimen sa bansa.

Binabati ko, una sa lahat, dahil bagong retired lang siya ay gusto kong batiin si General Gualberto. Siya ay napakagaling kong hepe ng CIDG. Kasi hindi ko makalimutan sa ibabaw ng magandang trabaho niya over his career, iyong kanyang huling hirit naka-accomplish pa siya. Nasugpo niya ang mga sindikato ng mga fake video, napasara niya iyong pinakamalaking pabrika ng fake video just a few years before retirement. Itong nasugpo niya iyung milyong-milyong fake na na-confiscate iyung malaking pabrikang billion-peso factory na napasara, matagal nang sinisikap makamit ng marami ngunit nabigo. Pero nagawa iyon ni General Gualberto.

Noong gabing iyon noong na-raid nila iyung factory, iyung napakalaking factory, the biggest of them all. Kasi hindi ba, sa ating bansa nalagay na nga tayo sa watchlist sa intellectual property rights kaya maraming raid. Si Bong Revilla ginawa kong chairman, pero ang kanyang... Tumutulong sa kanya sa operations si General Gualberto. Di sabi ko, ang dami-dami ng raid, ang dami-dami ng na-confiscate sa mga tindahan. Eh sabi ng mga doon sa nag-aasikaso ng intellectual property right sa ibang bansa kasama nang amerika, sana makuha rin ninyo ang mga pabrika. Ah, dadating yuon. At dumating nga noong panahon iyon, iyung isang gabi doon sa Valenzuela.

Eh tinawag nila ako dahil major ito, ano. Major accomplishment ito dahil ilang taon nang sinisikap natin ito. Tinawag nila ako sa pabrika ng fake video na ni-raid nila. Noong pumunta ako doon, ikinon-gratulate ko sila, at sabi ko nga kay General Gualberto dahil magre-retire na siya, "what a fitting curtain call for your police career." Ngunit bagamat tapos na ang career niya bilang pulis, inaasahan ko pa rin na hindi tapos ang kaniyang papel sa aking administrasyon. Mayroon pa siyang second career na inaasahan kong makatulong sa aking pagbuo ng matatag na Republika ng Pilipinas.

And General Gualberto, even as I hope you will continue to serve in my administration in a new capacity, I know that you — si Major Jangao, si Bernard Corella at kayong lahat na narito na mga lider — I know and I hope and I'm confident that you will inspire the rest of your colleagues who are all over the country and even all over the world along the road of responsible citizenship.

I know all of you here today want peace in our land, for you played a vital role in making EDSA I the country's first bloodless revolution. Kaya makabuluhan kayo noon, makabuluhan pa rin kayo ngayon.

I am grateful that along with your new vision — kanina binigay ninyo iyung inyong resolution — you pledged full support for my administration. Maraming salamat sa inyo sa inyong suporta.

The various activities you have undertaken this year indicate your mission of relevance and involvement in nation-building.

Tulad nang nakasaad sa inyong vision statement, ito'y hudyat ng pagbabagong-buhay patungo ngayon sa higit na makatuwiran, mahinahon at makatarungang pagsulong ng adhikain.

I welcome your advocacy of democracy, unity, peace, stability and progress.

These are the very same aspirations of a strong Philippine republic — democracy through strong institutions of representation, peace through strong institutions of conflict resolution, and stability through strong institutions of law and justice.

Marami ang nagsasabi, “sabi ni presidente, strong republic. Eh nasaan iyong strong republic?” Ang strong republic parang gusali iyan. Itong mga gusaling ito hindi natayo overnight. Kaya kailangan sabi ko simulain natin itayo itong gusali ng matatag na republika. At upang magkaroon ng gusaling matatag na republika ay kailangan ang kapayapaan at kaunlaran. Pero kung gusto nating manatili ang kapayapaan at kaunlaran kailangan din ang matatag na republika.

And let’s therefore start working for a strong republic by working for peace and development. Peace and development go together, just as the fight against terrorism and against poverty go together. Solutions to poverty are indispensable to the resolution of irrational violence.

We have seen this in our own history of conflict especially in Mindanao kung saan si Major Jangao nga tiga doon at kung saan marami kayo nakapunta na, na-assign. That’s why whether I am abroad searching for alliances or in our own country, at the end of the day, it’s always about the economy and improving the lives of our Filipino citizens.

Alam ninyo ito dahil nandoon kayo nakasisid kayo sa field. Poverty breeds the recruits of terrorism. At palagay ko nakikita ninyo. You can perceive as I perceive the masses need constant and continuing care and concern.

All of you here know that no nation should cower in fear before terrorists for that would mean conceding defeat. We must instead unite and find strength in our concerted actions to vanquish these evildoers, those who use religion and ideology to force their views and their way of life upon the people.

Alam ninyo ito lalo na marami sa inyo lumaban na sa mga terorista sa iba’t ibang anyo ng kanilang buhay at inyong karera.

The Abu Sayyaf remain a threat, but a diminish one. We have worked to crush their armed soldiers and break up their intelligence cells. Yes, solitary acts of destruction are still possible. What is increasingly more difficult for Abu Sayyaf is extensive, coordinated military attacks.

Even with regard to solitary acts of destruction, our police and military forces have conducted significant raids and intelligence operations that led to the arrest of the mastermind of the bombings in Mindanao and metro manila and the seizure of tons of explosives.

Iyung sa Mindanao, iyung sa Zamboanga mabilis na naka-solve iyung prolema dahil sa pagtulong-tulong ng una sa lahat, for the very first week, iyung trabaho na rin ng cidg. Nandodoon nga si Liborio Jangao kasama sa CIDG and we shall push forward unrelentingly. The men and women in the field are inspired by the victories they have achieved.

But counterterrorism is a long drawn out war. Hindi iyon isang campaign plan, isang battle off kung saan ba iyon. Hindi isang battle of Abubakar, hindi isang battle of Pulomuhaji. Long drawn out. Terrorism and other crimes will not cease merely with the arrest of today’s terrorists and other criminals.

Nor can we just leave the fighting to the police and military forces in active duty. There is need for a full support from a committed citizenry especially you who have been in these fights before.

I, therefore, welcome your efforts to activate your network against crime and terrorism. The strong republic needs volunteers like you because you have a very high sense of vigilance and civic duty.

There are many ways to distinguish yourselves as active anti-crime volunteers.

The DILG, si Joey Lina, recently drew up its 10-point police-community plan which spells out areas of police-civilian cooperation. I am endorsing this plan for the adoption of all your networks.

Specifically, the plan calls on private citizens to report to their own city or town mayors, punong barangays or police officers the presence of suspicious persons or cargos within their municipalities.

The intelligence-gathering process of our police forces depends on the quality and accuracy of the information provided by civilian volunteers. This cooperation has made possible the apprehension of significant amounts of explosives and bomb materials recently.

The plan also seeks the cooperation of the owners and managers of buildings, offices or stores in adopting appropriate safety and security measures within their establishments.

Likewise, the plan seeks the help of NGOs, and you are NGO. It seeks the help of church groups, civic and other organizations to conduct information and education campaigns on dealing with terrorist threats and other crimes.

You can be a special group among our alert citizens. So, I am asking general Gualberto to draw up a proposal and other papers for the conduct of orientation seminars and training for you to be handled by the PNP.

Training should make your members a cut above the rest of the involved citizenry. Pero napatunayan na ninyo iyung disiplina ninyo eh. Kaya konting technical training na lang regarding these aspects on terrorism, kayang-kaya.

I'm aware of your economic program as well through your multi-purpose cooperative. 'Di ba naalala ninyo noong isang taon, I approved a one million-peso loan from my president's social fund for this purpose.

Siguro naman nagamit nang maganda itong pondong ito para mapabuti ang buhay ng mga kasapi ninyo lalung-lalo na iyung hindi masyadong mapalad sa kanilang sariling pamumuhay.

I've also been informed that Congressman Unico of Camarines Norte has agreed to guarantee a downpayment for a portable ice plant to be operated by you. Congratulations for your resourcefulness.

The strong republic calls for action among citizens in the spirit of volunteerism.

Our strong republic needs the total cooperation of committed civilians to defeat crime.

Our strong republic requires the efforts of all citizens to fortify our economy and win the war against terrorism and poverty.

Nasa pagkakaisa at pagtutulongan ang katatagan ng republika.

Kaya salamat na narito kayo. Palagay ko gusto kong asahan ang ibig sabihin nito ay sinasamahan ninyo ako.

Samahan ninyo ako parati. Magtayo tayo ng malakas at matatag na republikang Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat at congratulations sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Real Estate and Housing Industry Pledging Session

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Real Estate and Housing Industry Pledging Session organized by CREBA-SHDA

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, November 20, 2002]

Thank you very much, Mike for your very kind introduction. And thank you for being the first Cabinet member to submit your courtesy resignation. Of course, he was the first Cabinet member because he knew that I would not accept his courtesy resignation.

I'd like to also greet Nani Braganza, who I heard in the papers was the second Cabinet member to submit his courtesy resignation. I didn't get to see it I think because since I had said that I would not be accepting courtesy resignations, the record section didn't bother to send his courtesy resignation forward to me; I 'd like to greet our congressmen who are so supportive of the housing sector. There's Ed Zialcita who is from Metro Manila and Boy Nograles from the business district of Davao City; thank you to Florentino Dulalia, President of CREBA and other members of CREBA, thank you for your pledge of more than 300,000 housing; thank you to President Atencio and the other members of SHDA, thank you for your more than 200,000 houses pledge; thank you also to the various other associations who are here tonight. President... Ah, Chairman Yamson and the other members of builders alliance towards action or BATA, maybe that means you are the younger builders; and to Jean Menguito, vice president of women in shelter and environment. Thank you for telling me as we were having our soup that this is the happiest time in a long time for the housing industry; thank you to Cafe de Manalad for being here. Also for being one of my very small group of campaigners the first time I ran for senator in 1992, thank you; ating Cacung Cabalen, Chairman Wilfredo Tan of the Organization of Socialized Housing Developers in the Philippines or OSHDAP, thank you also for continuing to build socialized housing even if it is not as profitable as the middle-class housing in our country; well I'd like to greet also the other officials under HUDCC, and this is HUDCC Vice Chair Amado Bagatsing who... Who when he was in Congress also he used to be called their father or grandfather as the case maybe of the housing bills; and to Benjamin Bongolan, president of HGC. Now that you have your bond flotation, he's got liquid money again for his operations; Romy Fabol, congratulations. Thank you for your momentous board resolution today, and Atty. Quimpo. I want to ask you, members of the industry, shall I convert his acting status to permanent? And to all of you distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

Thank you, officers and members of all the organizations who are present here today — SHDA and CREBA – for this unprecedented response to our call to build houses for our working class. And thank you for this show of support for my administration.

I was reading a column that said that the business community has given up on me. I can see that you haven't given up on me. Thank you for your help.

And I believe that your housing units will enjoy good sales because the economy no matter what they say — what the critics say — the number show that the economy is on track to achieve a 4 to 4.5 percent growth in 2002, compare this to Hong Kong which has gone back to recession; Singapore which is on recession; Japan which is at zero percent growth rate; and even the U.S. with its dicey numbers coming in to 2003. Yes, the deficit remains a challenge. We got to face that. But we are taking concrete steps to address it. That the economy is on track to meet its 2002 growth projections is evidenced by the better-than-expected performance of leading indicators in the first semester.

Take for instance inflation rates and interest rates, they are at record lows, and i hope that the low interest rates will help your housing projects. inflation averaged 3.2 percent in the first semester and is even lower today. And I believe this low inflation rate is reflected in the cement prices that you have to pay for. So I hope that the good cement prices will also make your housing projects more profitable. Interest rate averaged 5.54 percent in the first semester, the lowest in more than a decade.

So, in as much as GDP grew at 4.1 percent in the first semester, we are quite sure that the second semester GDP will grow at least 4 percent.

Now, let's take the other indicators — exports. What did we expect exports to be in 2002? We expected export growth to be zero because they were negative last year. But rather than being zero in the first semester they grew at 8.8 percent. And now, they are even growing at double digit. So that augurs well for our keeping the economy growing on track.

Imports. Imports are an indicator of economic activity, and I am happy that the imports that are coming in are mainly inputs for value-added exports and they grew by 7.8 percent as of august although we were only expecting imports to grow at 6 percent. So better than expected.

Gross international reserves. We expected that the gross international reserves would be 14.8 billion dollars or worth 4 months of imports but they are instead 15.9 billion dollars worth 5 months of imports. So all of these are indicators of growing economic activity and also stabilization in our economy.

But as I said, we are not we are not pretending that there is no budget deficit problem. The reason why we are working on the budget deficit is that we do not want the budget deficit to contradict our low interest rate policy which is so important for your housing.

Thus, we remain focused on responsibly managing expenditures and maximizing revenue. Expenditures are on track, they provide adequate stimulation to the economy while remaining within the budget authorized by Congress.

Yes, expenditures now are a bigger percentage of our budget compared to previous years but that level of expenditure relative to the authorized budget means that we are more efficient in our disbursement and we have faster project implementation. Controlling the budget deficit, of course, is something that we are determined to work on. And we will operate this in tandem with a stringent anti-corruption campaign reinforced with ICT — information technology-driven reforms — in disbursement of funds and procurement. We also have a quiet but stepped up campaign against tax evasion.

Guillermo Parayno, my new man at the bureau of internal revenue, which collects 80 percent of our tax revenues is preceded by his impressive record as commissioner of customs. He has the personal integrity, the technological competence and the people's skills to meet the target set for the rest of the medium-term plan period.

Under his leadership, several enforcement measures are already in place to increase revenue collections especially for the value-added tax, including cross-checking of importation data from the bureau of customs with that reported to the bureau of internal revenue. And as a result of this cross-checking, last 15th of the month, Parayno ordered the closure of 53 firms for underpayment of the value-added and other taxes.

Audit is being intensified for both corporates and individuals. And now we have, starting October, an on-line payment option widely available, complete with validation systems to make sure that the value-added tax scam that I discovered a few months ago will never happen again.

On the part of the Bureau of Customs, every month it has been progressively reducing its revenue gap until finally for the month of October, at last it exceeded its target.

With the reforms we are implementing, and with the reforms which we hope Congress will enact as soon as possible — led by these two gentlemen who are very active on the house floor that we have as guest tonight — we are confident we will achieve higher growth in 2003 especially with the pump priming of the domestic economy that is provided by the housing sector, the sector with the largest multiplier in the entire economy.

The structural reforms at the BIR include: the bill to corporitize the BIR. Executive order no. 119 which I signed reorganizing the BIR while we are awaiting the bill to become law for corporitization; the indexation of sin taxes, which Congress recommended during the summit that followed 9-11 and which I'm happy to remind you are earmarked for housing. Whatever we collect on the indexation of sin taxes — how much? About three billion pesos? — five billion pesos will be to fund housing another reform that I hope congress will enact is the rationalization of motor vehicle taxes.

On the expenditure side, the expenditure management reforms include the procurement reform bill because this procurement reform bill will allow us to save 30 percent of our budget, and the e-government to electronically release funds to agencies automatically for a more efficient utilization of funds.

The budget deficit. I want to explain to you tonight what we are doing to address it because it's a burning issue among the business community. But I know that today an equally burning issue is the issue regarding Meralco. And as my partners in developing the economy I would like to share with you an exclusive — first time I'm going to share with you my policy on MERALCO.

My mind is clear on how to deal with this issue. It will in the context of the larger power sector as the key reform area facing us today.

First, we are taking steps to ensure the financial viability of MERALCO as an institution. Through the department of energy, the government is shepherding a series of consultations which began yesterday between MERALCO and its creditors. We will see to it that a rehabilitation plan is set up that is fair to creditors, investors, and most of all, the public.

Second, the decision of the Supreme Court regarding MERALCO's obligations shall be implemented. We shall await the finality of the decision and then act accordingly. And if the final decision is refund, I will make sure that one way or another the consumers, you, the consumers will get your refund.

Third, I am duty bound to ensure that there will be no crisis in power services as a result of these financial problems. I'm constitutionally bound to serve the public interest. Nothing will stand in the way of this forsworn duty.

My decisions on these matters will not be influenced by my personal feelings or sentiments. I shall proceed on a comprehensive approach taking into consideration the viability of the company vis-a-vis the larger interests of the power industry and balanced as force against the higher public interest.

I shall not be swayed by populist politics nor vested interests. I shall not please the poor by tearing down the rich nor please the rich by trampling on the poor. We must have an even keel for the ship of state.

In these trying times, in these times of reform, I thank god that I have you as our partners in building a strong republic by building homes for the citizens of that Republic.

Mike Defensor mentioned to you some of the key housing reforms, and as you have said, they augur well for our partnership. We have given the banks the policy signal incentives to fund developers on their own. Because the government has limited funds because of the deficit, and rather than government being the one to provide you with the funds, what we are doing in fact is getting government bureaucracy out of your way.

These policy signals include — as you have thanked me — in the power point executive order no. 45 to fast-track the processing of subdivision licenses and permits. And as you have also mentioned along with Mike Defensor, the lowering of the end-user loan interest which I hear has already had immediate and positive effect on sales. The increase in the socialized housing ceiling to 225,000 pesos is another policy reform that I hope I understand you appreciate.

But even beyond the 225,000-peso houses, I realize that the middle-income housing sub-sector up to 2 million pesos is the most bankable sub-sector even if the market is not as large as the socialized sub-sector. And so I have included this sub-sector in our policy incentives.

And I am happy that the central bank's monetary board has agreed to increase the loan collateral value for housing accounts to 80-90 percent of the loan value, aside from Mike Defensor's 100 percent of the loan value. And that the central bank has agreed to increase the amount for the rediscounting window and eligibility for agri-agra status to two million pesos, which they were able to do because HUDCC changed its definitions.

And as a bonus, we have Bani Braganza which has recently given its ruling on many pending applications. And of course Pag-Ibig has been given the marching orders that it should increase its allocation of funds for housing from 15 billion pesos, not just to 30 billion, but to 70 percent of its portfolio. But they will go for 30 billion first they said, because they want to be prudent. Okay, 30 billion and after that we go for 70 percent.

In response to the policy signals and incentives, the banks have committed, the private banks have committed to fund both the creditworthy private housing developers and the end-users especially of our government employees' housing villages in a project to be packaged by an experienced banker, Deogracias Vistan, and we hope that this will bear fruit in the next six months. So we have bpi, five billion pesos; and Philippine Bank of Commerce, one billion; China Bank another billion. So all in all, together with the GFIs, we have very comfortably sixty billion pesos to fund the 500,000 houses that you have committed to build over the next two years.

I am grateful for your pledges — over 300,000 for SHDA and over 300,000 for CREBA. And as we saw in the presentation of SHDA, this is really a percentage of what the members can actually accomplish. Because only a percentage of its members have so far been covered in this pledging session.

I was also informed that a significant number of projects you have committed are either already ongoing or slated to start next year. I have no doubt in your capacity to live up to these commitments.

It is worthy to note that nearly 38,000 units or 20 percent of the SHDA pledge will be built in Mindanao, the island of Boy Nograles. This will bolster economic development, social reform and peace and order in the region. Pero pinapakinggan ko si Boy Nograles kanina. Sabi, "konti 'yan." he was saying, "kulang, kulang." but anyway, boy there will be more I 'm sure as the peace and order improves in Mindanao.

We see tonight the fruits of our meetings and discussions during the past months. During the anniversary celebration of CREBA in Malacañang last October, we talked about some of the solutions and now they are underway.

When you invited me to your meeting in Baguio I told mike, "Mike, mag-biyahe pa ako, mag-o-open pa ng golf tournament, maghahanda ng diskurso, babiyahe na naman muli sa pag... Let me spend those hours working out the policies instead." and that's why, in my taped message, I was able to present those policies.

And now I 'm happy that our plans and programs are moving forward. And as said earlier, we've made available 200,000 hectares of land for housing and urban development for the next many years.

With these, and with your support, we should be able to reduce hopefully by 50 percent the current shortage of housing units estimated at some 5 million by the year 2010. The year when we hope we would have been able to beat the problem of poverty in our country.

Housing and related infrastructure projects are the traditional pump-primers of growth in developing economy. Your pledges combined with your solid track record will provide the much needed impetus to put our growth... To keep our growth on track.

So once again, dear friends, dear partners in keeping our economy on its growth track, thank you very much. I'm counting on all of you for your continued support, not personally for me alone, but for our people and the future generations.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 2002 General Alumni Homecoming of the University of the Philippines College of Law

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 2002 General Alumni Homecoming of the University of the Philippines College of Law

[Delivered at the Rizal Ballroom, Shangri-la Hotel Manila, Makati City, November 21, 2002]

Thank you.

Thank you, Nonong, for your introduction, and thank you for not submitting a courtesy resignation. Well, first and foremost, I choose whom I want in my cabinet and can add or subtract Cabinet members when I need to based on performance. And I can assure you as I greet the up law alumni headed by Boy Reino and the other members of class '77-'78, and all the other classes, I'm not going to wait on courtesy if someone in my government isn't working out to the benefit of the nation. But I can assure you that Nonong is indeed working to the benefit of the nation.

Chief Justice Davide and Senate President Drilon, congratulations.

Chief Justice Davide's name is now forever etched in the main chapters of our history with his historic role in the impeachment trial and his equally historic leadership of the Supreme Court and its landmark post-EDSA rulings.

Nothing is easy in a democracy, and Frank Drilon also has his difficult role to play. And I believe his mark in history will be in the difficult but landmark legislative reforms that are being passed and will be passed under his watch. These pieces of legislation have real and lasting impact on our economy and the ability to lift our people out of poverty. For instance, among the challenges that he is right now dealing with is the Transco legislation which will make the franchise available to any potential purchaser of the transmission assets of NAPOCOR, and in so doing, enhances the value of these assets. A successful privatization program is one step to creating a more competitive electric power industry, lowering prices for consumers and delivering better services to remote areas of the country.

The power sector is the key reform area that we must address today. The capital needs of MERALCO, NAPOCOR and TRANSCO have ballooned all these decades. Now, they reached about 40 billion pesos annually, and government subsidies to the power sector reaching these amounts should instead be used to fund other services. Because this amount can build more than 100,000 classrooms, irrigate more than 100,000 hectares, put up more than 75,000 low-cost housing or construct more than 6,000 kilometers of road.

Privatization is the key to the reform of the electric power industry. Privatization enables the government to stretch its scarce finances to meet other basic needs that our people should have immediately.

Kailangan ang privatization para hindi na maghanap ang gobyerno ng dagdag na budget para maiwasan ang brown-out sa mga darating na panahon. Ang privatization ang makakalutas ng utang ng napocor at transco. Kung walang privatization, patuloy ang paglobo ng utang ng NAPOCOR at TRANSCO. Patuloy ang ating problema ng budget deficit.

Because of the staggering numbers involved for the power sector, foreign capital and technology are key to privatization. At the core of privatization is the framework for greater competition and a level playing field for power generators. Ang kakulangan ng puhunan at teknolohiya ang dahilan kung bakit masyadong mataas ang presyo ng ating kuryente. Noong ako'y una naging pangulo, ang naabutan kong presyo ng kuryente ay pangalawang pinakamataas sa buong asya. Ito ang dahilan kung bakit... Isang dahilan kung bakit napakamahal noon ang presyo ng mga bilihin noong ako'y unang umupo bilang pangulo. Ngunit sa mga repormang ginawa natin bumaba ang presyo ng kuryente sa nakararami at naging pang-anim na lamang tayo, hindi na pangalawa sa pinakamahal na kuryente sa Asya. At ang inflation rate ay bumaba na rin, pinakamababa ngayon sa mahigit sa isang dekada.

Pero hindi pa tapos ang reporma dito. And it's in the context of the power sector as the key reform area that we must approach the burning issue of today which is MERALCO.

Last night, before a group of housing executives, I spelled out the principles under which we shall move forward on MERALCO:

First, we are taking steps to ensure the financial viability of the corporation as an institution. Through the department of energy, the government which has a 25 percent stake in MERALCO is shepherding a series of consultations which began the other day between MERALCO and its creditors. We will see to it that the rehabilitation plan is set up that is fair to creditors, investors, and most of all, the public.

Second, we shall see to it that the decision of the Supreme Court regarding MERALCO's obligations to its customers will be implemented. The ruling is currently at the stage where there will be motion for reconsideration and a review. And it's not yet possible to measure the total impact. However, we do believe that this decision whatever it is can be manageable. And if indeed the final decision is a refund, it is my duty to see to it that one way or another you, the consumers, will get your refund. Let me add that the Supreme Court is the highest court in the land and nothing will aid our economy and democracy more than strong institutions of law.

Third, I am duty-bound to ensure that there will be no crisis in power services that will result from the financial problems of MERALCO. I am constitutionally bound to serve the public interest.

I shall not be swayed by populist politics nor by power play. I shall not please the poor by tearing down the rich nor please the rich by ignoring the poor, because there is nothing more important to me than the future of this country, not even the elections of 2004.

I take exception to the assertion by some that politics will paralyze the Philippines through the 2004 presidential election. Why? I believe the Presidential election for whomever is running presents a great opportunity to enact positive change, not paralyze the nation. The parties out of power would like to stop the process because it's in their interest to do so. For me, I am energized by focusing on policies and prescriptions that will help create jobs, improve health care, deliver better services, and enhance our peace and order. And I assure you, we will continue to be diligent in this regard. So, I view this time as one of untold opportunity and hope. Any critics will have to come up with a vision on the economy, security and democracy that is real like what I've been fighting for.

It doesn't mean that I am a candidate for president. It means I am the president and will continue to focus on being president, and creating jobs, improving health care and providing a better education to the next generation of Filipinos. I'll worry about the election when the time comes, but it is not now.

Last night, there were real estate developers who were with me. And they committed to build half a million houses in the next two years. They are enthused not only with our housing reforms but also with our central bank and other reforms particularly those that have brought our interest rates to the lowest levels in more than a decade. They are currently building not just planning to build. That is why the NCSO figure show a 25 percent increase in construction this year.

These interest rates will go down even more if our budget deficit will go down, and that's what we are working on. In turn, bringing down the budget deficit depends on revenue reform measures both administrative reforms and legislative reforms. The proposed revenue measures will ensure that everyone pays their taxes and provide the government with spending money on health care, education and job creation.

These are basic services that a government is expected to deliver in a strong republic. But the most important basic service is an environment of peace and the rule of law.

This government is making significant inroads in solving our peace and order challenges.

When I took over the government early last year, kidnapping and organized crime were the main concern. Robberies, high profile kidnappings at least once a month with demand for ransom, so that peace and order was rated as among the top three concerns in the surveys. Now, in a November survey, fighting terrorist groups and fighting kidnap-for-ransom syndicates rate among the top five issues where the government is assessed to be doing a good job.

This administration is tackling the issue of peace and order on many fronts. Fortunately, we have developed a formula that's working. We've become tougher on crime. We look at the drug problem as a source of the peace and order challenge, and we have set up the special drug enforcement agency to address this. Meanwhile, I instructed the chief of the national police to focus on kidnapping and weeding out misfits from the police. We have stepped up intelligence coordination. We have a hot line, telephone number 117. And related to this, community mobilization has been very effective in locating criminal fugitives. My Presidential Anti-Organized Crime Commission secretariat supplements the work of the enforcement institutions. Now, we have inter-agency coordination mainly through stronger police work. The result of all these is a reduction in the crime rate.

In order to preserve and grow the success we've achieved, we are professionalizing the police and fighting the root cause of criminalism by focusing on poverty reduction and sustainable economic development. We have a higher budget to provide higher pay to police and soldiers, who under this new budget will earn as much as the teachers currently do. We have increased the educational requirements of the police, they now have to have a college degree. We have also increased the budget for training policemen.

I make no apologies for being tough on crime and criminals and terrorism and terrorists. Our people deserve no less than to feel absolutely safe to live, work, and raise a family. I will do everything in my power to improve the situation and will continue to do so.

I'm most concerned about taking criminals off the streets in order to preserve the basic right of our people to live in peace, safety and order. My hands-on involvement in this issue in no way impedes suspects of their right to free and fair trial, it does put them and others like them on notice that they cannot hide if they break the law. This is the same warning I have to those who practice corruption in and out of government.

And it is here that I value most the work of lawyers. Fighting corruption is a complex task. And the complexity of modern law is a great challenge to nations and societies especially ours. Weaving through its complexity to bring about good governance and a good strong republic with strong institutions is the job of lawyers as well as many others. But it is specially the job of lawyers not the run of the mill kind but those who have the skill, the acumen and most of all, the commitment to our national ideals.

The up law alumni association has been a well-spring of this breed of lawyers. And so, I ask that you use your special gifts and your privileged education to help me build the strong Philippine republic that we all aspire for.

Thank you.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 6th Asia Pacific-Middle East Regional Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 6th Asia Pacific-Middle East Regional Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, November 25, 2002]

Thank you very much, Mr. Nery.

Her Royal Highness Princess Margriet; Don Juan Manuel Suarez de Toro; Mr. Cherpitel; Mr. Forster; General Canatoy; Justice Luciano; Excellencies of the diplomatic corps; delegates to the 6th Asia Pacific-Middle East Regional Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

To all the Red Cross and Red Crescent movers and shakers of this region, welcome to the Philippines. We are honored that the Red Cross and Red Crescent of Asia, Pacific and Middle East is holding your conference in my country.

And I am also honored and very happy to welcome Princess Margriet. I feel a sense of Deja vu because one generation ago, when my father was president of the Philippines, Her Majesty Queen Beatrix, then princess, crowned princess also visited our country. And my father hosted a party for her in this very same hall.

I'm very honored and we are all honored as Filipinos that Princess Margriet is here because causes are more successful when there are symbols, and Princess Margriet is a symbol. She epitomizes the woman in humanitarian work around the world. I am glad, your highness that you are gracing the conference and providing it and us with inspiration.

Indeed, we must all be workers for humanity especially in this challenging age of terrorism, internal wars, widespread ignorance, disease and injustice.

The work of humanitarian organizations like the Red Cross and Red Crescent alleviates much of the pain of events that kill, maim, displace and cause untold suffering among human beings.

It's our challenge to persevere even against seemingly insurmountable odds in a world of conflict and unpeace. And it is the special mission of leaders like you, of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, who have come to this meeting.

The Red Cross has been our partner for a long time.

I'm glad that we can continue to share not only our work but also the experiences of the Red Cross and Red Crescent right here in our country in your conference.

As Mr. Nery said earlier, your meeting focuses on three elemental areas that are also of interest to our country: health, population movements and disasters.

In our country, health issues are now telescoped on the affordability of medicine and health care. Last year, we started a program to cut in half the price of medicines most often purchased by the poor. We hope to expand that program tenfold this coming year. We have also provided health insurance for millions of our poor countrymen.

In our country, too, population movement is caused by poverty and by conflict. Mr. Nery talked about population movements of Filipinos to other countries and indeed, we have seven million Filipinos all around the world who will be sending us eight billion dollars in remittances this year. But, I believe from the point of view of humanitarian work that crucial population movements are the movements within our country.

Poverty causes our rural population to move to the cities, so that today, 51 percent of our population is urban. Unlike a generation ago, when her... Then the princess now the queen visited, 70 percent of the population was rural. Now 51 percent is urban. And 20 percent live in Manila and the surrounding urban areas. These results in urban blight and unhealthy congestion.

In response to this, my government is developing the infrastructure and logistics backbone, and the new government center concept which will hopefully combine to disperse urban development and decongest Metro Manila. This will open up new options for the urban sector to improve their quality of life. For example, affordable and dependable mass transport from the surrounding provinces to Metro Manila will make it possible to choose to establish a wholesome family life in the countryside where the cost of living is less while still working in the city. But, if it is poverty that causes the population to move to Manila we must address that poverty in the countryside.

To keep the population in the countryside, the infrastructure and logistics backbone which will lower transport costs for agricultural goods to the industrial and urban centers will improve the agricultural sector. And I would also like to thank the members of congress — there are none of them here today — for a bill that they have now passed through four committees in the house of representatives on land as collateral. This will eliminate a major bottleneck to the deployment of capital to agriculture and reduce poverty in the countryside.

But even as we are undertaking these measures to ease population movement caused by poverty, we thank the Red Cross and the Red Crescent for your valuable assistance in the population movements caused by armed conflict.

I thank you, for instance, that the last of the evacuees of the recent war in Mindanao have gone home. And we thank you for making that easier. We have a ceasefire in place with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and the MILF has started to organize their own NGO that will undertake development projects and receive assistance. In the former Camp Abubakar, which used to be the center of gravity of the secessionist rebellion, there is now a bustle of community development.

We also thank the Red Cross and Red Crescent, for your consistent presence in the various disasters that have visited our region including our country.

Today, terrorist incidents are becoming the most serious disasters. And I thank the work of the Red Cross and Red Crescent in soothing the suffering of the victims of terrorism even as I ask you to elevate other issues related to conflict or terrorism to a higher place in the agenda of your action and advocacy plan.

One, is an active campaign, I hope, against the employment of children and minors in combat. This comes to my mind, because just a week ago, I attended a surrender ceremony of former communist rebels and saw how they still continue to be recruited at such an early age to wage war against the government. I ask for your support and cooperation in facing this serious challenge to the community of civilized nations.

In my last state of the nation address before the Philippine congress last July, I spoke of the need for a strong Philippine republic to carry out vital reforms needed to win the war against poverty within the decade.

I spoke of the need for a strict enforcement of the law and the strengthening of the institutions of governance. I spoke of a sharp constitutional cutting edge against crime, terrorism and corruption.

Now, I would like to call through you for a chain of strong republics across the region traversing the Pacific, Asia and the Middle East, so that we can strive to ensure our collective security against terror and Transnational crime, and build societies that will help one another defeat poverty. This is my call on the other side of our equally great effort to build the institutions of human dignity and institutions. Institutions like yours that make for a just, humane and peaceful society. For institutions like yours are indispensable institutions of good governance and strong republics.

A strong republic tempers steel with humanity where this is deemed imperative for the common interest.

Even if we must stand uncompromisingly against the dark forces that seek to destroy humanity, we must work with compassion to uplift the poorest of the poor, to heal the sick, to teach the ignorant. And in this work, I say, “carry on Red Cross and Red Crescent. You are doing a great job for humanity.”

Congratulations and thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the AFP Change of Command Ceremony

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the AFP Change of Command Ceremony

[Delivered at the General Headquarters Grandstand, Camp General Emilio Aguinaldo, Quezon City, November 28, 2002]

Thank you very much, Secretary Reyes. And the first among the Chiefs of Staff that have served in my administration.

My predecessor as president and the predecessor of General Defensor and Santiago as Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, his Excellency President Fidel Ramos; a dear friend of the new Chief of Staff. In fact, the one who alerted me a long time ago to the virtues and qualifications and bravery of General Santiago, Speaker Jose de Venecia; I congratulate and thank the other members of Congress who are here today. I thank them because they are here I'm sure to express their continuing support for the Armed Forces of the Philippines; I also thank the local government officials who have come to join this installation of the new chief of staff, they represent the local governments of the communities where General Santiago spent very important parts of his career; of course, I congratulate the now most recent former Chief of Staff General Benjie Defensor; I would like to greet all the other uniformed officers both of the Armed Forces and of the police; and as I greeted President Ramos, all the former chiefs of staff who are also here to greet a new member of their very exclusive club; I greet all the officers, men and women of the Armed Forces of the Philippines including the ladies of the Armed Forces, the wives of our brave officers and soldiers whose support has been so crucial in their bravery and their courage.

Sa inyong lahat mga kababayan, magandang umaga. And now I asked the Commanding... Troop Commander Teneral Teodocio to give 'tikas pahinga.'

Once again today, we observe the tradition in the changing of the guards. I have presided over the ceremony several times now. I presided over the change of command from General Angelo Reyes whom we call the philosopher general to General Diomedio Villanueva who served as our Chief of Staff for more than a year. I presided over the change of command from General Villanueva to General Roy Cimatu whom we call the thinking general. I presided over the change of command from General Cimatu to General Defensor whom as we all see is the poet general. And now, I am presiding over the change of command from General Defensor to general Santiago, the Chuck Norris, the Delta Force of the Philippines. Each of these chiefs of staff have their own distinct and remarkable personality, but I think they have one thing in common. All my choices for AFP Chief of Staff have shown outstanding leadership, loyalty to the constitution, and faith in the chain of command and the commander-in-chief. That is why I am unperturbed by criticisms of the short terms of the last two chiefs of staff. For it is leadership, not time that is the sole measure of command.

And I shall continue to judge the command only by the high standards of merit and professionalism.

I believe that there is no essential relationship between the brief stints of our last two chiefs of staff on the one hand and the stability of the Armed Forces on the other.

Our last two chiefs of staff are our best argument that the length of command is not the most relevant trait of good military leadership.

Under General Benjie Defensor, the AAFP started to untie the "Gordian knot" of local terrorism, insurgency and poverty through successful military operations against the Abu Sayyaf and the local communist movement, and I enjoin General Santiago to continue untying that "Gordian knot." The move of General Defensor was reinforced by closer coordination in intelligence and operations between the AFP and the PNP, and the civic action campaigns to win back a large number of rebel and terrorist sympathizers.

When Benjie Defensor accepted his post, he promised to make the AFP perform as “one force” for the country’s defense and security. And in fulfilling his promise, he demonstrated brilliance and innovation in making the force faster, smarter and deadlier. The “one force” that Benjie promoted precluded relying just on ground forces or almost totally on ground forces to achieve military victory. Having come from a major service other than the army, Benjie was more conscious of making all the services equal partners in a campaign plan. Thus, his spectacular victories in the Sultan Gumander battles are significant contributions to doctrine especially on the role of the air force as the first force in softening the enemy targets.

Under Benjie’s leadership, “Oplan Hurricane” dealt a big blow to terrorist and insurgent forces in the Lanao provinces. This Oplan secured the communities by preventing hostile acts that could have been launched from a newly-built enemy camp.

I am proud that Benjie has met his goal of the entire Armed Forces as “one force” — faster, smarter, deadlier and more poetic.

The poetry was not only in the term that he call his operation “gordian knot.” The poetry was in his blending of conventional and unconventional approaches which resulted in significant arrests and breakthroughs in our anti-terrorism and anti-insurgency campaigns.

The arrest of Miel Gracia Laurenaria, Ceferino Borlaus and Lydia Tuastumban, the capture of the NPA headquarters in Bag-gao, Cagayan Valley, the coming in of 150 NPA regulars of Quezon province are good examples of these.

I was also privileged to preside personally over the coming back to the fold of the entire backbone of the rebellion in Rizal province. So significant coming from the center of gravity of the insurgency in a highly strategic area so close to the seat of government of the republic.

Better AFP-PNP intelligence and coordination unearthed information vital to our national and global anti-terrorism campaigns. This network, this teamwork led to the exposure of new links between local terrorist groups to the Jemaah Islamiya which is further linked to Al-Queda.

But Benjie showed his versatility also when he convinced 308 rebels to give up their fight, with the oldest MILF leader, Kumander Bantac, setting the example.

Under Benjie Defensor’s leadership, our forces have pushed the Abu Sayyaf back to their point of origin. And I expect each of them to be accounted for in due time.

With Benjie’s encouragement and guidance, air force intelligence operatives did him proud by capturing Abdulmukim Edris, the foreign-trained mastermind of the Zamboanga City bombings before the latter could blow up key places in Metro Manila.

And, even today, just as Benjie was going to turnover the command to the new chief of staff of the Armed Forces, even today his troops, our troops again delivered a major military victory against the rebels in San Quintin, Pangasinan. A good going-away present for General Benjie Defensor as outgoing Chief of Staff.

The adverse global environment has provided opportunities to address our national security concerns. Nine-eleven, the subsequent war on terrorism, and the looming war in Iraq have all combined to dampen the world economy. But even before 9-11, we had already been waging a war on terrorism. You will recall that the Abu Sayyaf was able to generate at least 20 million dollars in ransom from Sipadan, which strengthened their capability for terror. But with our decisive response to 9-11, we gained foreign allies in our war against terror, which enabled us to neutralize the notorious Abu Sabaya in June of this year, and to degrade Abu Sayyaf strength from thousands to a couple of hundred there in Patikul.

Benjie's sharp tactical gains have been counterbalanced against good strategic sense. He has played an active role in the evaluation of the AFP basic doctrine and the accompanying doctrines development manual.

I am glad to know that most of the division manuals have been approved and are up for deliberation by the AFP doctrines board. I have had positive reports from junior officers about these developments. Even as they also give me positive reports about their appreciation that for the first time in history, the soldiers will be sharing the same Christmas benefits as the civilian personnel in our government.

The modernization of the AFP would not be complete without a doctrine appropriate to modern times. The practices of the 20th century cannot apply to all the problems of the 21st century. In the great battles that our Filipino soldiers have waged including the great battles of Sultan Gumander are at least as rich in lessons as the historical battles of the world. And warfare must take new approaches to effectively respond to the whole range of new threats spawned by new technologies and the vagaries in the global political and economic scenario.

As I said when I installed Benjie Defensor as chief of staff, the modernization of doctrine should take into account the post-military affairs revolution thinking regarding the changing military mission brought about by the growth in the power of the criminal, terrorist and other armed non-state organizations that now challenge weakened traditional nation states in many parts of the world.

We need this modernization, not only of the AFP but also of doctrine because we need to build a strong Philippine republic. For the last 100 years, we have failed to build the strong republic. We were the first republican state in Asia. Yet today, we have become one of the weakest. Thus, we have to be honest to ourselves and find out what our basic problems are. Only then can we find the solutions.

I've been in office 20 months now, and the daily problems i have had to face are among the most difficult in our country's history. But I gained experience and maturity from both my correct decisions and my mistakes. Thus, i can now face the future with greater certainty of what needs to be done. The starting point is plain talk and an honest recognition of our national weaknesses.

Why is our state weak? A state is weak if dominant classes or sectors control it or shape its policies especially those dealing with the economy. This is our decades-old fundamental weakness. From Bonifacio at Balintawak to Cory Aquino and FVR at EDSA, we have struggled to correct this weakness by bringing power to the people. As I said in my first State of the Nation Address or SONA: "we also see in our great revolutions — from Bonifacio to EDSA — a progressive advancement towards the ultimate goal to transfer power over the state from the traditional economic and political bosses to the people."

Our task is to complete this revolution. And as I said in my first SONA: "the enemy to beat is ourselves. When we spread division rather than unity; when we put ourselves above country and profit above fairness. When we make politics replace patriotism in our country's hour of need."

What are the symptoms of the weak state that our generation of Filipinos has inherited? One is a large gap between rich and poor, a gap that has been exploited for political ends. Another is a political system based on patronage, and ultimately, corruption to support patronage. Another is, in recent years, the use of destabilization, black propaganda and character assassination as political tools of the trade. The common word in these is "politics" — too much politics. And that's why I am glad that we have an Armed Forces that is above politics.

I am a politician, there are several in this audience who are politician, because all those who are in elected leadership, whether administration or opposition are politicians, and all exist within this system. Too much politics contributing to a weak state is a collective blame we must all share in. What is important is the willingness to change, and over time, this can happen.

The adverse global environment has aggravated our weakness. Following the 1997 Asian currency crisis, our ability to generate public revenues steadily deteriorated. The ratio of revenues-to-GDP declined from 19 percent in 1997, to 17 percent in 1998, to 16 percent in 1999, to 15 percent in the year 2000. This trend weakened us financially, limiting the resources we have to fund development and modernization, and increasing our need to borrow.

During my first year as president, we were able to arrest the decline sustaining the 2000 ratio of 15 percent into the year 2001. However, the decline has resumed this year, 14 percent revenue-to-GDP ratio because low interest rates while being good for business they have also led to lower taxes on interest income. Because while agricultural growth in exports is good for the farmers and good for those who work in our export manufacturers, the growth in the economy was in agriculture and exports and they don't pay taxes.

Also, we have the low inflation rate, and while this is good for the consumers, low inflation reduce vat values, non-dutiable imports increased. And while it is good for the riding public to have excise tax free automobiles, when excise tax free automobiles dominated vehicles sales that also reduced our tax stake.

Another reason was that specific taxes on liquors and cigarettes don't increase with higher prices. But most of all, we have had continuing problems of tax administration. Prompting me to tap the services of a classmate of General Santiago, Guillermo Parayno, PMA class 1970 to head the BIR. He's not here today because I suppose he has to attend to a lot of problems in the BIR. But Dionnets' classmate, Parayno, is preceded by his impressive record as Commissioner of Customs during the administration of President Ramos. And Parayno has shown his personal integrity, his technological competence, and the people skills to meet the targets set for the rest of the medium-term plan period. He is the right man for the job. Not the least reason of which he is from class 1970, the class of Dionnet Santiago.

Because now I have Parayno, PMA 1970, heading our revenue collections. I have Jun Ebdane, PMA Class '70, heading our police force, our enforcement. I even have Roy Golez, Annapolis Class '70 putting together our intelligence coordination. And now, Dionisio Santiago PMA 1970, heading the Armed Forces of the Philippines. We have four classmates in-charge of enforcing the law and enforcing law and order. And I count on the four of them to be interactive and to make all our rule of law agencies the "one force" that Benjie Defensor envisioned.

Focused, action-oriented and combat-honed, Dionnets Santiago has distinguished himself in various battlefields in Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao. He conceptualized the formation of light reaction companies in all tactical units of the Philippine army, which has proven to be one of the most cost-effective strategies of counter-insurgency and counter-terrorism.

Dionnets is equally comfortable in the field as in the board room, having once served as assistant chief of staff for plans of the Philippine Army, a director of the National Security Studies, a trade attache at the Philippine Embassy in Kuala Lumpur, and an Attache at the Philippine Consulate in Seattle, Washington.

But, to me, the greatest part of Dionnets preparation for his present work is not really in his biodata. Most of all to me, from what I have seen of him, I considered Dionnets as the SoCom Commander — that's why I call him the delta force and the Chuck Norris — but he was the SoCom commander who put his career on the line for the people in the events leading to January 19, 2001. And this is why I trust him with my life. And I trust him, I entrust to him the leadership of the Armed forces of the Philippines I join the men and women of the AFP in saluting the new chief of staff.

And as for Benjie, he is ready for his second career. And as Benjie goes off — not riding into the sunset, not even living just the life of a poet in retirement — as Benjie goes off to capture newer worlds, let us for the last time salute him as chief of staff and congratulate him for 33 years of excellent, unselfish and loyal service to the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the people of the republic of the Philippines.

Maraming salamat sa iyo, Benjie Defensor. Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the awarding ceremonies of the 16th Golden Shell Awards and Top Export Performers Award Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the awarding ceremonies of the 16th Golden Shell Awards and Top Export Performers Award

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, November 29, 2002]

Thank you very much, Secretary Mar Roxas for your introduction. And I would also like to thank Secretary Roxas for being a champion not only of exports but also of domestic demand particularly the reforms in small and medium enterprises that the economy has been seeing.

Congressman Harry Angpin and Mrs. Angpin. Thank for being here. Congressman Angpin has been a champion of Philippine Business and Exports in the house of representatives; I'd like to thank Philippine Export President Jun Ortiz Luis for his continuing leadership of the export sector even during the especially trying times of last year; and I'd like to greet not only mar but all the other officials of the department of trade and industry, my former colleagues and still my friends even up to today; excellencies of the diplomatic corps; members of the board of judges; and of course, our awardees and other leaders of the business community:

Today, we are honoring exceptional Filipino men and women and Filipino resident companies who have produced star quality exports. It's a good time to remind ourselves that despite the harsh domestic and global conditions, our country is moving forward. Our exports have resumed growing. As of September, exports grew at 8.8 percent, not because the international market is recovering, but because we are getting market share.

For instance, Silicon Valley growth is flat but Philippine electronics exports are growing. And that's why we have awardees from that sector today. For instance, we have Toshiba moving its computer manufacturing from United States plants to the Philippines. And that is why some of its component manufacturers and suppliers are among our awardees today.

Toyota for the first time will be exporting to Japan from the Philippines the transmission component. And again, the same thing with Honda, which has expanded its markets for its transmission not only from... Not only to Asian but now to the whole world, and again that is why some of their component suppliers are our awardees today.

China has entered the WTO, but Philippine exports to China have grown by 80 percent. And from a trade deficit with china last year of 300 million dollars, now we have a trade surplus of 700 million dollars. And I am very happy that one of our awardees — in fact, the gentleman who spoke in behalf of the awardees — Fujitsu has just expanded 2.2 billion pesos approved last week. Thank you very much for your continuing faith in the Philippine economy.

You, the exporters deserve credit for all these, for our 8.8 percent growth in exports despite a fairly flat overall growth in exports around the world. Your accomplishment, I would say is the triumph of Filipino expertise in management, design and production.

Your expertise is the reason why our designs and products are in such demand abroad. This is why foreign buyers come here for sourcing. Our awardees were able to achieve their outstanding accomplishments inspite of the long-drawn challenges we are confronting here and around the world.

Their success in the face of adversity may be attributed not only to their resilience and versatility, but to their individual competence, and I would like to think the market-friendly policies that our national government is putting in place to cushion the impact of recurrent crisis.

Thus, in the first three quarters of this year, Philippine GDP grew by 4.1 percent and GNP by 5 percent, powered by the recovery of industry especially exports and continuing strengthening of services. Industry grew by 3.8 percent as i said earlier fueled by the 8 percent growth in exports. Services grew by 5.1 percent. Our economic growth is surpassed only by the industrial giants — China and Korea — and by Vietnam which started from a much lower base.

Our inflation is low at 2.7 percent. Our interest rates are low, with the 91-day Treasury Bill steady at around 5 percent. These rates are at their lowest in more than a decade.

Demand for the talents and skills of the great Filipino worker remains as strong as ever, particularly in sectors like information and communications technology, tourism and nursing aside from the urgent growth in export demand.

And while the deficit is a concern, we have brought in a new team headed by the likes of BIR commissioner Parayno. And I am forming an anti-smuggling intelligence and investigation center to handle the smuggling that takes place outside the customs area. And this is to be headed by a very reputable man with a sterling reputation for integrity, former police General Miguel Coronel. He will be the head of the new anti-smuggling intelligence and investigation center. And with their combined efforts, the goal is to increase tax and customs revenues to reduce the deficit and reduce the interest rates that you, the exporters have to pay.

The market-friendly policies of the government include tariff and incentives rationalization, as I said the lowering of interest rates and the relaxation of stringent requirements to access financing programs, and also loan restructuring among others.

The requirements to access financing programs will continue to be relaxed particularly for small and medium enterprises. We have given banks incentives and policy signals to fund the SMEs. For instance, upon motion filed by my representative to the monetary board, Secretary Mar Roxas, the central bank has decreased reserve requirements on rural banks and thrift banks to 6 percent. It has reduced the risk-weighting on SME loans to 75 percent from 100 percent. It has reduced the rediscount to 91-day t-bills minus 1 percent on all loans. We hope that this will help the small and medium enterprise exporters and also your sub-contractors who are small and medium enterprises.

We are also committed to long-term structural reforms to ensure continued strength in domestic demand, bolstering the diversification of the GDP and enlivening the climate for investment. Both for the investment for the domestic market and the investment for exports.

The passage of the Special Asset Management Company Bill — used to be called the Special Purpose Vehicle Bill. Now it's Asset Management Company bill, and that's a better description of what it really does — This bill is now in bicameral conference committee in Congress. And I think Congressman Angpin will confirm that both houses of congress find the sailing quite smooth in the bicameral conference committee. This will free up more bank resources for export and other projects that the government is not in a fiscal position to fund.

This special asset management company bill is not meant to just bailout banks. It is meant, first and foremost, to liquify their assets so as to ease up credit and help borrowers get back into business.

Banks are only as important as they contribute to the economy. The special asset management company is not intended to help banks for themselves. The entrepreneur remains the engine of the economy, and you, the entrepreneurs, i know, you need to be fueled up again with loans to get the economy moving.

There is another bill — and I'm glad that we have agricultural exporters among our awardees — the bill to make agricultural land acceptable as bank collateral passed the house on third and final reading yesterday. And to Congressman Angpin, let us thank the congressmen for their quick response to the certification as urgent. This will reduce... This will remove, in fact, the rigidity of the second-round land transfers under the agrarian reform program. And when agricultural land, even land reformed land is available as collateral then that will bring private investments back to agriculture.

Indeed, the government is committed to sustaining economic and political measures to counter the effects of global recession and terrorism.

Nine-eleven, the subsequent war on terrorism, and the looming war in Iraq have all combined to dampen the world economy. That's why our 8 percent growth in exports is truly remarkable. But even before 9-11, we already had been waging a war on terrorism, largely by ourselves.

You will recall that the Abu Sayyaf was able to generate at least 20 million dollars in ransom from Sipadan, which strengthened their capability for terror. But with our decisive response to 9-11, we gained foreign allies in our war against terror. We brought down the fighting strength of the Abu Sayyaf from the thousands to the hundreds, and we took down their leader in June of this year.

In our war against terror, we look out primarily for our own interests. This includes making common cause with foreign countries where those interests materially overlap.

We don't know when or where in the whole world terror will strike again, but we are doing everything to thwart its attempts or mitigate its effects. We shall remain on alert.

These measures — economic, political, security — are all designed to make the Philippines a safe and desirable place for business; a safe and desirable place for exports.

And let's not forget that sound macroeconomic management goes side by side with good governance practices including leadership by example, transparency and the integrity of transactions.

Take for instance, the accusation against Secretary of Justice Hernando Perez. You now know, of course, that he has gone on leave. It had been his intention even before the matter came to a head on the floor of congress. But now I appeal to his accusers: rather than filing you charge in the media, file it with the office of the ombudsman. Submit your documents to speed up the investigation. In the meantime, my presidential anti-graft commission, with whatever little it has in his hands as evidence is also doing its own investigation.

Take now the PIATCO issue. This is not just a simple problem, but a test case of the integrity and efficiency of the republic in building the infrastructure the nation requires. An international airport is any nation's gateway to the world, the first contact of foreigners with the Philippine republic, especially those foreigners who have not been in contact with the wonderful exports of the Philippine economy; those foreigners who have not had the benefit of enjoying Philippine export products. Because for them when they see your products, that's the face of the Philippines they see. But if they are not exposed to your products, there's the airport. That is the first face of the Philippines they see. Therefore, it's not only a matter of opening it but making sure that it is a world-class airport that operates without any hitches at all and without the slightest risk to travellers.

But it's also emerging as a test case of my administration's commitment to fight corruption, to rid our state from the hold of any vested interest.

The solicitor general and the Justice department have determined that all five agreements covering the NAIA terminal 3, most of which were contracted in the previous administration, are null and void.

I cannot honor contracts which the executive branch's legal offices have concluded are null and void. I'm therefore ordering the Department of Justice and the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission to investigate any anomalies and prosecute all those found culpable in connection with the NAIA contract.

But despite all of the problems involving the PIATCO contracts, I'm assuring our people, our travellers, our exporters: my administration will open the terminal even if it requires invoking the full powers of the presidency under the constitution. And we will open a safe, secure and smoothly functioning airport, a world-class airport, as world-class as the exporters we are honoring today.

Today, the natural inclination to trade nourishes the economic engine of our country.

Indeed, government should step back when private initiative offers the greatest creativity and dynamism as in the case of the export sector. Even as government should not hesitate to step in when private greed threatens the greatest damage and paralysis to society as in the case of onerous and illegal contracts. There is no inalienable right to fleece the public. There is only an inalienable right to do profits honestly.

It is there in the history books. From the United States to Germany and Japan, rich countries are made by strong governments. The private passion for profits is indispensable to bold enterprise. The public call to service is necessary for the wider public good.

In the global struggle for economic survival, progress and even preeminence, the engine of growth has always been the private sector — you, our exporters. But the ultimate goal has always been national strength.

Even in an increasingly globalized world, where the ways of doing business and making progress have toppled national boundaries, each people have only one place where they are truly welcome; one place they can really call home and that is their country. Therefore, profit must be topped by patriotism.

And it is patriotism to capitalize on our renowned artistry that we are honoring today. Our innovations have been found useful and exceptional even in foreign lands. Our designs have established strong footholds especially in high-end markets.

Our awardees do our country proud. They are rekindling the collective Filipino spirit with their commendable determination to compete and prevail.

The will to struggle and prevail is a hallmark of a competitive exporter. It is also the hallmark of a strong nation, it is also the hallmark of a strong Philippine republic. Thus, we all have the same goal.

And so, in moving towards this goal, let me say, thank you and congratulations to our awardees. May this award inspire you to pursue greater success not only for yourselves but most especially for the glory of our country and people.

Mabuhay ang ating mga exporters!

Speech of President Arroyo during the celebration of National Heroes Day and 139th Birth Anniversary of Andres Bonifacio

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the celebration of National Heroes Day and 139th Birth Anniversary of Andres Bonifacio

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang on November 30, 2002]

Thank you, Secretary Romulo, for your introduction.

I'd like to thank the cabinet members and all the other officials who are here. I'd also like to thank our Commissioners Bambam Aquino, Mark Gastrosdes, Ariel Arcilla, and our other commissioners who took their oath of office today for being the prime organizers of the event.

To all of you members of the youth organizations, student leaders who are here today; distinguished guests; mga kababayan.

Ang Araw ng mga Bayani ng Bansa – iyan ang ipinagdiriwang natin ngayong araw na ito. At ipinagdiriwang din natin ang kapanganakan ng dakilang anak-pawis, si Andres Bonifacio, at ginugunita, sinasariwa, ginuguhit sa isip ang pag-usbong ng kalayaan sa ating bayan mula sa dalawang tanim: ang nasang kumawala sa paniniil at ang pag-asang umahon sa kahirapan.

Indeed, the birth of our nation saw the start by Andres Bonifacio of two struggles: one for freedom from foreign control and the other for freedom from poverty.

lisang sandata ang hawak natin dito sa dalawang pakikibaka: ang matatag na Republika, handang ipagsanggalang ang bansa at magdulot ng matimbang na pag-angat sa buhay ng mga napakaraming Pilipinong lugmok pa rin sa kahirapan mahigit sandaang taong pagkalaya.

A state is weak if dominant classes or sectors control it or shape its policies, especially those dealing with the economy. This is our decades-old fundamental weakness, from Bonifacio at Balintawak to Cory Aquino at EDSA, we have struggled to correct this weakness bringing power to the people.

Walang bayang nanguna sa mundo sa tulak ng panlilinlang ng sarili at kapwa. Walang bansang umakyat sa pakpak lamang ng pagnanais mahigtan ang abot ng tunay nitong kakayahan.

And so, I do not and will not make policy on the basis of baseless fears.

Take the Meralco issue. I tell our people again: "If the Supreme Court orders with finality that the refund will be implemented, I will make sure that you, the consumers, will get your refund." Our concerns will be exclusively: justice through full restitution for Meralco's consumers as the Supreme Court rules, but without undermining the stability of the nation's leading energy company.

On the PEA issue. Arising from another of its controversial projects began in the previous administration. Let me make myself very clear: "I am abolishing the Public Estates Authority." I'm abolishing it through a bill I will submit to Congress next week. All its assets, mostly public lands, shall be transferred to the appropriate agencies which will hold strictly to account the officials concerned.

I had already accepted the resignation of all the current members of the PEA Board, including the general manager. Now, I'm dismissing the deputy general managers, the assistant general manager, and the senior corporate attorneys. I'm referring this latest controversy to the Ombudsman for the filing of the appropriate charges against all officials involved, including the old PEA board members.

On the PIATCO issue. The solicitor general has submitted to the Supreme Court the government position that all five agreements covering NAIA 3 are null and void.

I've received preliminary reports that a significant chunk of the airport's cost of the $657 million didn't go to actual construction costs. No wonder the necessary access tunnel connecting terminal 3 to terminal 2 is still missing, there's not even a road.

I'm sworn to uphold the law, how then can I honor contracts contrary to law. What I can do is to order a criminal investigation into the PIATCO project with a view to the prosecution of the parties responsible for the gross irregularities. Let me, however, assure the stakeholders: your legitimate claims will be honored to the last peso and the terminal will open early next year.

On the budget deficit. Following the 1997 Asian crisis, public revenues steadily declined from 19 percent of GDP in 1997, to 17 percent in 1998, to 16 percent in 1999, to 15 percent in the year 2000. This trend has robbed us of the resources to spend on important initiatives.

In my first year as President, we were able to arrest the decline and sustain the ratio of 15 percent in 2001. However, the decline has resumed this year as terrorism added its toll to the global recession.

In this country, people don't pay the right taxes, especially those who can afford it. The Customs, the BIR, the New Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Commission, now led by new commissioners, must work harder so that whether you are big business or small – forget the accounting tricks, just pay your taxes and duties or see you in court.

The two million-dollar man. If the charges are true, all that money is not reflected in anybody's income tax return. If charges are true, everyone involved is going to jail at least for tax evasion in addition to bribery.

To the man who claims to have blown the whistle I say, "Time to show the evidence and file the case in court, and hurry up before you are extradited."

With what I've learned, I face the future with a deeper grasp of the problems, a better sense of the way to go, and a confidence that together we shall overcome. The next six months will show this.

Upang makalikom ng yaman para sa isang matatag na Republika ng Pilipinas, bumubuo tayo ng mahusay na grupo ng opisyal na magpapalaki ng singil sa buwis at taripa. Samantala, pakikilusin natin ang mga bangko upang pondohan ang pabahay, munting negosyo, at pagsasaka. Gumagawa rin tayo ng mga patakaran para pumunta ang private sector sa napakahaiagang industriya ng koryente.

The passage of the Special Asset Management Company bill or SAMC, now in bicameral conference committee in Congress, should free up more bank resources for housing and other developmental projects that the government is not in a fiscal position to fund.

Kailangan nating ipagbili ang TRANSCO, ang operasyon ng NAPOCOR sa distribusyon ng koryente. upang magamit ang salaping ginugol ngayon sa pagkalugi nito. Kikita rin ang gobyerno ng hindi bababa sa P3 bilyon sa pagbenta ng TRANSCO, at mahigit P100 bilyon sa paghusay ng serbisyo sa elektrisidad. We are hopeful that the Senate will pass the TRANSCO Bill to bring this about as expeditiously as the House of Representatives did.

To improve the quality of the government workforce for a Strong Philippine Republic, we shall have time for substantive improvements – first, in affordable housing where the needs of teachers, soldiers, policemen, and other government employees will be addressed in an especially packaged project. At sa pagtatayo rin ng mga bagong sentro ng pamahalaan, magbubukas ng bagong pagkakataon para sa pag-angat ng kanilang buhay at trabaho.

Para sa dagliang ikabubuti ng taga-siyudad, sisimulang ipagsama ang mga modernong sistema ng transportasyon at ang mga bagong sentro ng gobyerno upang lumago ang mga kalunsuran sa labas ng Kamaynilaan. Sisimulan natin ang pagtayo ng bagong paraang mapaganda ang buhay sa siyudad. Halimbawa, transportasyong pangmasa na maaasahan at abot-kaya sa pagitan ng Metro Manila at mga karatig probinsiya. Extensions of the north and south expressways and the rail link to the north will be underway, and my dream of a roll-on/roll-off port-linked archipelago has broken ground with funding from the Development Bank of the Philippines.

Para sa dagliang ikabubuti ng taga-bukid, babawasan ng mga modernong sistema ng transportasyon ang gastos sa pagdadala ng mga produkto mula sa lalawigan patungo sa industriya at kalunsuran. Samantala, salamat sa batas tungkol sa pagsasangla ng lupang sinasaka, na pinasa ng Kamara noong Huwebes. Maaalis ang isang malaking balakid sa pagpasok ng puhunan sa agrikultura.

Ako'y nagpapasalamat kay Secretary Leony Motemayor na nanggaling sa hanay ng NGO na napangibabaw niya and boses ng maliliit na magsasaka. Kaya nakuha natin mga batas para sa kanila: Mga patakaran ng ehekutibo para sa kanila. Now, the new law on agricultural land as collateral will open up a whole new world of vast opportunities for the farmers to graduate from subsistence-living advocates to modernizing agri-business practitioners. And to initiate this graduation, this transformation, I am appointing agri-businessman Luis Lorenzo as the new Secretary of Agriculture.

Si Sonny Alvarez maraming sinakripisyo upang ipairal ang kanyang mga paniniwala tungkol sa likas-yaman. In the next two weeks, he must firm up initiatives on environment, especially toxic and hazardous waste, watershed, and the social justice program of the Macapagal-Arroyo government to build a new Diwalwal. Then, on December 15, he will move on and turn over the Department of Environment and Natural Resources to his successor, the noted environment expert Elisea Gozun, whom the environmentalist know as Bebet Gozun.

The other initiatives, including a program for youth empowerment, will soon reveal themselves in their implementation. I know that people have become cynical and will believe only what they see.

Trust me, you will see what serious government can do as opposed to what a merely popular government just promises.

I thank the National Youth Commission for initiating this National Heroes Day celebration. Our national heroes were young. Rizal was 26 years old when he wrote the Noli Me Tangere. Aguinaldo was 29 when he became President of the First Republic. Bonifacio was 33 at the Cry of Balintawak. Ninoy Aquino, our modern-day hero, was 22 when he first entered politics.

The youth remind us why we have to strengthen the Philippine Republic. The institutions we build will survive beyond us, for the youth now and the youth of the future.

The things we need required time to get started. They will even need more time to get finished and felt. But they are there quietly and surely beginning. Don't let impatience throw it all away. Stay the course. Stay with me.

Sino pa ang mag-aahon sa bayan, sa kahirapan ng mga Pilipino kundi ang matatag na Republikang Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during a meeting with the Filipino community in Japan

Maraming Secretary Blas Ople sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin. At gusto ko rin ipakilala sa ating mga kaibigan dito sa hapon, mga pilipino sa hapon ang inyong maybahay, si Mrs. Susan Ople. Nandiyan siya.

At gusto ko rin ipakilala sa inyong lahat, although nagkasama na tayo noong isang taon, kasama ko rin ang aking kabiya, si Attorney Mike Arroyo; dala-dala ko rin ngayon ang aking anak, si Luli Arroyo; ang aking anak at ang aking manugang, na si Mikey at saka si Angela Arroyo; siyempre gusto kong batiin 'yung ating ambassador dito sa Hapon at nagpapasalamat ako sa maganda niyang pag-organize nitong ating pagbisita dito, si Ambassador Siazon. At alam niyo naman si Ambassador Siazon ay Japanese by heart dahil ang kanyang maybahay ay haponesa, si Mrs. Kay Siazon.

Nandito rin ang ilang aking Cabinet Member. 'Yung ilan ay ipapakilala ko sa inyo, si Secretary Lito Camacho kasama si Mrs. Camacho; si Secretary Mar Toxas na wala pang Mrs.; si Secretary Dante Canlas; wala yata si Governor Buenaventura dito ngayong gabi. Gusto ko rin bigyan ng bati ang ating Senador mula sa Mindanao, si Nene Pimentel; at isa ring Congresswoman na ang puso rin niya ay nasa Hapon dahil ang kanyang kabiya din ay Hapon, si Congresswoman Nene Ramirez-Sato; narito rin si Congressman Jing Paras; at saka si Congressman Antonino Roman ng Bataan; narito rin si Governor Tommy Josen; at saka si Governor Caballero at saka si Mrs. Caballero ng Compostela Valley; si Governor Plaza at saka 'yung kanyang matriarch ng Plaza family, si Mrs. Valentina Plaza na nakaupo doon, former governor; si Mayor Boking Morales ng Mabalacat; at saka yung nag-aalaga sa inyo, si Secretary Pat Santo Tomas.

Meron rin tayong ilan pang mga Cabinet officials na naririto, si Secretary Toting Bunye, ang aking Press Secretary; isang Hapon na mestizo dahil kasama 'yung kanyang lolo sa unang wave ng immigrants from Japan to the Philippines to Baguio, si Secretary Yongyong Hamada Afable si Secretary Joey Rufino at saka kanyang maybahay si Ching; 'yung tumutulong sa atin na ayusin 'yung mga red tape sa ODA si Mai Jimenez; inyong sugo, inyong naglilingkod sa Overseas Workers Welfare Administration si Ver Angelo. Saan siya? At saka gusto ko rin batiin galing sa Osaka, si Consul General Antonio Villamayor.

At sana hindi ko na babangitin lahat ng pangalan nila pero papatindigin ko yung kasapi ng Philippine Business delegation, nandoon sila sa banda roon. Nariyan din ang Philippine media. Kaya sa inyong lahat, sa kanila, sa inyong mga kababayan minamahal ko, Merry Christmas sa inyong lahat. Welcome to this Christmas Party. At Caring Malugud kung Cabalen Capangpangan, pasalamatan cu pung lubus ing pamanyatang yu ngening bengi. Makareng cu.

Kadakayo nga kakailiak ti bangir ni mamang ko, naimbag nga rabii yo amin, kadwan ti Abraeñon Association in Japan, Agiaman kadakayo nga umay kayo tatta nga rabii. Sa akong mga kaubanang taga-mindanao asa ako nidako ug asa nagikan si Senador Nene Pimentel, daghang salamat sa inyong pag-abot karong gabiuna.

Sa mga kasimanwa sang akong bana nga Ilonggo, kaupod ang Organization for the Development and Advancement of Negros in Japan – ngano kamo, oriental o occidental? Occidental. O, salamat gid nga nakadto kamo sa atong programa subong.

Mga Batangueño at 'yung mga kababayan ni Tommy Josen, Japan Association of Novo Ecijanos. Malaki ang ating Nueva Ecija delegation ngayon at nandiyan din si Presidential Assistant Rene Diaz at saka member of the Board ng San Miguel, si Rico Fajardo.

Binabati ko ang iba pang mga asosasyon at samahan ng ating mga kababayan na narito ngayong gabi. Hindi ko alam kung kumpleto ang aking listahan pero sa alam ko nandito ang samahang Pilipino, isa sa pinakamalaking grupo ng Filipino sa Hapon. At yung Philippine Men's League, 'yung Association of Filipino Students in Japan; 'yung Science and Technology Advisory Council ng Japan, salamat at tumutulong kayo sa pagbibigay ng "Unlad Kabayan at Tuloy Aral" business courses sa ating mga OFW.

Narito rin daw ang Filipino circle for advancement and progress; ang Overseas Filipino World Net Foundation — ah, wala. Ah, nandiyan; ang Association of Filipinos in Tokyo; ang Circle of Friends; ang Philippine Ladies Association in Japan; ang Filipino Wives of Japanese Association. Dapat gawin niyong member si Congresswoman Sato, ha? O, member siya; hawak kamay sa mahal na ina; Overseas Workers Association; Philippine Development Society; 'yung kumintang Teatro Kanto; United Filipino Group of Yokohama; United Philippine-Japan Association; Philippine Association for Common Cause; Kabayan-Yamato; Filipino Maritime Network.

El Shaddai Japan Chapter; Akabane Sampaguita; Christian Diocese of Traditional Laymen's Evangelization; Kapatiran; wow! Filipino Missionaries Group; mga kinatawan ng Filipino Community mula sa Kansai at Osaka area.

At salamat ang aking ipinaaabot, I am thanking the all-Japan Seamen's Union for their big help once again tonight in our party here.

You know, in Manila we conducted the First International Employers Award just a few days ago. The outstanding Foreign Employers of Filipinos were honored for their continued preference for Filipino workers and seamen, for installing programs that raised our OFWs productivity and performance, and for providing extraordinary acts of assistance and aid to OFWs in times of hazard or distress. Ninety-three employers received awards. Nineteen received a Presidential Award of Distinction. And of the 19, nine were Japanese including the all-Japan Seamen's Union. Congratulations at Arigato, all-Japan Seamen's Union.

Pero binabati ko rin hindi lang kayong lahat pati na rin ang Philippine Embassy lalo na... Lalo na dahil bukas sila ngayon kahit sabado. Naalaala ninyo kasi marami kayo nung minsan na narito ako 'yon ang isang ipinagbilin ko inoong huli ako'y narito. At natutuwa rin ako na patuloy ang serbisyong medikal para sa mga kababayan natin dito sa Japan, sa pakikipagtulungan sa iba't-ibang asosasyon at samahan. At nais ko ring pasalamatang ang Philippine Assistance Group na kaagapay ng ating embahada sa pagbibigay ng repatriation at medical services sa ating mga kababayan dito.

My administration is determined to bring government closer to our people, including the Overseas Filipinos. Even when I was a Senator I already felt that way. That's why when I was a Senator, I filed an Overseas Voting Bill, other Senators did too. Some filed before me, some in the same session, some afterwards but like many other Overseas Voting Bills before and after mine, at that time when I was Senator, my bill didn't even progress beyond the committee level. So when I became president, I certified as one of my five most urgent bills, the Overseas Voting Bill.

Now, at last, for the first time after so many attempts, the Overseas Voting Bill has passed both houses of Congress. Salamat sa ating Senator at mga Congressmen. And let's pray that the House and the Senate can iron out their conflicting provisions because as soon as they do so I will sign it into law within 24 hours.

At bago kami umalis ng Pilipinas, pinag-isipan namin nila Secretary Pat Santo Tomas kung ano ang magandang aginalong mabibigay sa inyo ngayong pasko. At eto, maglulunsad tayo ng mga programa upang makapundar sa kinabukasan ninyong mga pilipinong nagtatrabaho sa ibayong dagat habang pinagaganda ang buhay ninyo at ng mga pamilya ninyo sa Pilipinas. Hayaan ninyong ihayag ko sa unang pagkakataon na tinalaga kong sugo sa ating mga kababayang nasa ibang bansa ang aking mahal na kabiya, si Attorney Jose Miguel Arroyo. Siya ngayon ang aking special representative to the OFWs. Kaya lang, Mike, walang suweldo ito kundi ang aking pagmamahal. Tutulungan si Mike ng isang inter-agency team na ang mangunguna ay ang DFA at kasama ang DOLE, HUDCC — iyung sa housing — at saka SSS na magdadala sa ating mga bagong bayani ng programang tinatawag nating "Kabayanihan." at dito sa Hapon, inilulunsad itong programang ito.

The “Kabayanihan” seeks to install an integrated delivery of basic services to OFWs in your worksite abroad and also at home in the Philippines. Under this program, you will be able to avail of the following services:

OWWA on-site welfare services including expanded and voluntary membership with OWWA.

DOLE/OWWA/POEA Electronic Identification Card or E-card services. The e-card is the ultimate identification card of OFWs. With that E-card, it will no longer be necessary for an OFW to fall in line at the POEA to obtain an overseas employment certificate for the purpose of exemption from the travel tax and the airport terminal fee. So, by simply presenting the E-card, you can have immediate access also to OWWA Welfare Services, POEA processing requirements, and even duty free shop discounts. You can also use this as a credit card and as an ATM card for Philippine Commercial Banks.

Another service is health maintenance service through the OWWA Medicare program.. The OFW and members of your family will be entitled to benefits over and above those which are granted by PhilHealth.

Isa pang serbisyo, ‘yung Pag-Ibig fund. Kanina masayang-masaya ‘yung mga Pag-Ibig desk doon. Dami raw ng nabenta nilang housing services. The DOLE and the Pag-Ibig fund have already signed a Memorandum of Agreement for the Joint Implementation of the Pag-Ibig Overseas Housing Program. This program aims to expand Pag-Ibig membership among OFWs and provide you with the opportunity to buy your own homes back home but at very affordable means. And I’d like to inform you that the Pag-Ibig fund has reduced the equity requirements of its housing program for OFWs. Kasi nung araw malaki ang inyong counterpart. Ngayon, ililiit na rin ng Pag-Ibig.

Isa pang serbisyo, ‘yung SSS provident fund or flexi-fund services. Ito ay para sa OFWs lamang, exclusively. It was designed to enable you to save your hard-earned money while working abroad. When you invest in the flexi-fund at a very affordable cost, you are guaranteed continued earnings after your retirement. So, I encourage you to invest in the flexi-fund. It’s like a savings account but with higher interest rates. And more importantly, you can withdraw it anytime.

Umpisa sa Enero 2003, magbubukas na ang “Kabayanihan” ng sariling website na maaari ninyong gamitin upang maipaabot sa akin ang inyong mga mungkahi kung papaano higit pang mapapabuti ng pamahalaan ang mga serbisyo para sa inyo.

Bukod naman sa “Kabayanihan” — ngunit suportado ko rin — ay ang programa kung saan pumayag si bise-presidente Teofisto Guingona na manguna. Ito ay binuo ng Overseas Filipino Investment Bond na magbibigay ng serbisyo mediko at seguro sa OFW, at pabahay sa katapusan ng bond. Ang programa niya ayon dito sa Taguig itatayo ang unang pabahay sa OFWs ay kasama rin sa programa ang panukalang Magna Carta for seafarers.

Gaya nang sabi ni Ambassador Siazon ako, sampu ng aking mga kasamahan ay muling narito this time sa isang state visit sa paanyaya ng Emperador at Emperadora ng bansang Hapon. But I’m here for the same reason I came two times since becoming president: to focus on the economy and security of the Philippines. Whether it’s the fight against global terrorism or improving official development assistance, at the end of the day, it’s always about the economy and improving the lives of our Philippine citizens.

If you remember, when I became president 20 months ago, I inherited an economy with 4 million jobless Filipinos and a 40 percent poverty incidence.

Today, inspite of the global slowdown, we are an economy that has delivered one of the highest growth rates in Asia. In the first three quarters of this year, Philippine GDP grew by 4.1 percent and GNP — wasn’t it, Dante — 5 percent? GDP was powered by the recovery of industry and continued strengthening of services. Industry grew by 3.8 percent because exports grew by 9.5 percent, and construction is on the rebound. NCSO says that construction has rebounded by 25 percent growth.

Services grew by 5.1 percent because of the expansion of telecoms, trade and private services including tourism. ‘Yung turismo noong October ang kanyang growth rate compared to October last year was 39.5 percent or 40 percent kahit na may Bali bombing. At isa pang nagpalaki sa ating ekonomiya ngayon yung financial sector maliban sa bangko. It has host including insurance. It has posted the highest growth in four years.

Pero kung umangat ang ating GDP ng 4.1 percent, ang ating GNP ay umangat ng 5. The difference between our GNP and GDP is the contribution of our Overseas Filipino Workers like you. Your increasing remittances have boosted consumption growth in the Philippines. Nanunuod ako sa TV kagabi, pinapakita nila ‘yung mga tiangege, ‘yung mga shopping areas, punung-puno ng namimili ng Christmas shopping at November 30 pa lamang — ah, no, no December 1. A lot of it is because of the money you sent. Last year, you, the Overseas Filipinos remitted six billion for the whole year. This year, for the first half of the year, you already remitted four billion. And for the first three quarters, you already remitted the six billion that you remitted last year. Thank you so much for your support.

Sabi ko sa inyo our economic growth is one of the highest in Asia today. In fact, it is surpassed only by the industrial giants — China and Korea — and by Vietnam, which started from a much lower base.

Our inflation rate is low at 2.7 percent. Rice for the masses is priced at 14 or 16 pesos per kilo. At pag may nagsusumbong na sa isang palengke ay wala ‘yung 16, ay ako ay tinatawagan ko agad ang NFA. Our interest rates are low, kaya panahon ngayon magpag-ibig kayo at bumili ng bahay. Yung 91-day treasury bill has been steady at 5 percent. These rates are at their lowest in the last fifteen years. Kaya talaga ‘yung pag-ibig doon dapat talagang masigasig ang kanilang sales.

We are also taking steps to further strengthen our macroeconomic fundamentals. We will continue to be vigilant in our efforts to reduce our deficit. Ang Customs, ang BIR, at ang bagong tinayo kong — ‘yung BIR at saka yung Customs — ‘yung bagong tinayo kong iyung Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Commission, na ngayon ay pinupuno ng mga bagong commissioner ay kailangang magtrabahong masigasig. Kasi ang mensahe ko sa ating mga kababayan sa Pilipinas na umiiwas magbayad ng buwis ay ganito: “whether you are big business or small, forget the accounting tricks, just pay your taxes and duties or see you in court.” Pero kayong mga OFW income tax exempt kayo, ‘di ba? Kaya tulungan na lang ninyo akong manawagan sa inyong mga kaibigan sa pilipinas na magbayad ng tamang buwis.

We are sustaining a no-nonsense drive against corruption, insulating our procedures better from graft, and putting graft busters in the sensitive agencies.

‘Yung peace and order situation naman it has improved. Ang report ng ating pulis bago ako umalis ay bumaba na ng 35 percent ang kidnapping, dahil anim na sindikato ay nabuwag na natin.

The adverse global environment has provided opportunities to address our national security concerns. Nine-eleven, the subsequent war on terrorism, and the looming war in Iraq have all combined to dampen the world economy. But even before 9-11, alam naman ninyo, in the Philippines, we were already waging a war on terrorism. You will recall that the Abu Sayyaf was able to generate at least 20 million dollars in ransom from Sipadan, long before 9-11, which strengthened their capability for terror. But with our decisive response to 9-11, we gained foreign allies in our war against terror, which has enabled us to neutralize the notorious Abu Sabaya last June and to degrade the Abu Sayyaf strength from thousands to hundreds.

Nananawagan ako na ipagpatuloy ninyo na magdasal para sa ating pamahalaan, para sa ating bansa kagaya ng dasal ni father kanina. Ituloy ninyo ang inyong pakiki-isa sa gobyerno upang lalong tumibay ang ating pagkakaisa sa isang pambansang layon na maahon ang ating bansa mula sa kahirapan.

No president can build a strong republic single-handedly. I can do this only if i can count on the support of the more than 7 million Filipinos overseas.

You, the Filipinos in Japan, are part of the wellspring of support, the network of Filipinos all over the world that I’m counting on.

Nagpapasalamat ako sa inyong pagmamalasakit sa ating kapwa Pilipino at sa ating bayan. Ipagpatuloy natin ang ating magagandang gawain — ‘yung mga binanggit ko kaninang ginagawa ninyo — ang ating pagbubuklod-buklod. Salamat at narito kayo kahit na nandito na kayo nung isang taon at ituloy natin ang ating pagkakaisa.

Sa inyong lahat, mga Pilipino dito sa Hapon, congratulations because you are great ambassadors of the Philippines. You are great Filipino workers.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo before the Joint Session of the Diet, December 3, 2002

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
Before the Joint Session of the Diet

[Released on December 3, 2002]

Thank you very much.

First of all, I would like to thank Prime Minister Koizumi for being here today to listen to me. Thank you, Mr. Prime Minister, you honor me.

President Kurata, Speaker Watanuki, honorable members of parliament, members of the Philippine delegation, ladies and gentlemen.

It's an honor for me to be in this August Assembly to express to the Japanese people. Through their distinguished representatives, the appreciation of the Filipino people for what Japan has been to us—a reliable ally, a sincere partner, a compassionate friend.

I undertake the first state visit between our two countries in the year President Ramos was the last state visitor to Japan from my country almost a decade ago. Since then in the last 10 years, so much has taken place within our two nations, our region and the world. In my country, the past decade saw efforts to deepen the roots of democracy and private enterprise, restructure the economy and make Philippine industry more globally competitive.

It also saw Filipinos rise as one to manifest their abhorrence of corrupt government, their yearning for genuine social justice and for freedom from the shackles of patronage. After 10 years, East Asia. Our common home, is also a deeply changed place. With peace regained in Cambodia, stability has been restored to Indochina.

The three decade old dream of a Southeast Asia united under ASEAN has been realized. Hong Kong and Macau have peacefully rejoined the sovereignty of China. East Timor has become the newest member of the community of nations. Yet, the luster and exuberance of the boom years are gone. Muted by the crisis few thought could happen and just as countries in the region were, again getting back to the rhythm of normalcy, terror struck in Bali.

On the global scale. Interdependence is so much truer now than ten years ago. Multilateralism in pursuit of world security and economic goals is taking a firmer hold but difficult global challenges have, likewise, multiplied or deepened. Hundreds of millions still go hungry and unschooled against their will. As the new century rolled, we awakened to the fact that no country, not even the most powerful, is immune to tragedies inflicted by agents of discord and terror.

During the last ten years, we saw freedom march on. But we also saw the rise of new forces ranged against it. We saw peoples' yearning to chart their own destiny and achieve nationhood. But we also witnessed people lose control of their nations to the thugs of radicalism. We saw kindness mobilized to comfort the afflicted, but we also saw fear and intolerance creep upon many nations. The challenges are enormous, the threats are many. We have to keep carrying on with courage and a singleness of aim. For the larger truth is that free people have in their own hands the capacity to overcome adversity to prosper and to stay free.

My country was fortunate to be spared the full brunt of the Asian crisis. Though barely, the Philippine economy managed to grow, even while the financial storm was cutting a wide swath of devastation in the region.

This encouraged many analysts to expect our economy to rebound fast and strongly as the storm passed, but regretfully, it also encouraged complacency. Thus, my administration was to inherit an economy that had lost momentum, had lost steam. With confidence in the past leadership fast ebbing, and capital flight and fierce competition ... economy. The country was cast adrift just about when it needed most a firm mooring.

When I assumed office in January 2001 last year, my most immediate tasks were to rally my nation out of despair and to restore business confidence. We reined in the rising interest rates that stunt business. We stemmed the rising prices that denied poor the access to many of their basic needs. We restored the people's trust in the integrity of the highest leadership of government.

Private analysts forecasted Philippine growth in 2001 to be below 3 percent. But GDP actually grew by 3.4 percent, and GNP by 3.7 percent in the first year of my administration. Now, in the first three quarters of this year, GDP grew by 4.1 percent. And GNP by 5 percent GDP was powered by the recovery of industry and continued strengthening of services. Industry grew by 3.8 percent because exports grew by 9.5 percent. And private construction is on the rebound. Services grew by 5.1 percent because of the expansion in telecommunications, trade and private services including tourism. And with continued responsible fiscal monetary and supply side policies. Inflation and interest rates are the lowest in more than a decade. Given the hurdles that the Philippine economy had to overcome, the only explanation for our economic performance has been the resourcefulness and industry of the great Filipino workers, as well as their support for the policies of the new government.

My economic team and I are determined to fully restore the economy's financial health and to further improve business conditions for investment. We have initiated a budget deficit reduction program to prevent government from crowding out the private sector for investment funds. We are also focused on continued price stability. To further strengthen the financial sector, my urgent proposal to create a special asset management company sector designed to efficiently address the non-performing loan problems for the banking system has already passed both houses of the Philippine Congress. Our overriding vision is to conquer poverty within the first decade of this century by building a strong Philippine Republic.

Development is an enormous task in this globalized world. It is also practically impossible to go it alone. We know this well, fortress economies wither, closed economies die. That is the reason why since the EDSA Revolution that reinstalled democracy in my country in 1986, successive administrations have pursued a continuous path of engaging with the world. We need ASEAN, we need APEC, we need East Asia, we need Japan.

For the Philippines, cooperation is best achieved through one East Asia. East Asia's economic miracle is first and foremost about people. The miracle is that for the first time, the majority of children in the region have become better schooled for life in an era of fast, fleeting and profound change. This has permitted families to attain the highest savings rates in the world, not simply as in the past, to hedge against hard times. But increasingly to invest in a brighter and more brilliant next generation.

It has meant for the first time in the region's history. That a middle class could be raised, nurtured and poised to become leaders in transforming their societies.

Our redemption and our future are always here, already in our hands. They lie in our people. We must not waste this most valuable, this most precious resource. That was why, when the 1997 crisis very nearly to lay the human resources to waste was truly unfortunate. Almost overnight, as good jobs vanished, as savings were decimated, as purchasing power eroded, and as consumer and investor confidence evaporated, the nascent middle class was besieged.

Families were being swallowed up again into the ranks of the poor. For the first time in two or three decades, the war against poverty was in danger of being lost in many parts of the region. The danger came and passed. We were bruised by it but not completely maimed because we were not alone.

We had friends and partners to assist us, one of them—and we will always remember this—is Japan. With the counsel of hindsight, let's look to the future.

The continuing challenge is to build, through our joint efforts, the capacity in the region to prevent the recurrence of economic shocks like the one that hit us in 1997. The ASEAN plus three Chiang Mai is a landmark agreement for, among other things, harnessing regional coordination of economic and monetary policies to ensure stability of currency and financial market.

In Southeast Asia, we are forging towards full implementation of AFTA. Barely a month ago, ASEAN and China signed a framework for the establishment of the ASEAN-China free trade area while ASEAN and Japan agreed on the framework for the establishment of a comprehensive economic partnership.

Expectedly, not everyone is agreed on the significance or desirability of these region wide developments. For instance, some see the slide of ASEAN into irrelevance. Some warn that smaller Southeast Asian nations risk needing to defer once again to the larger powers. But the fact that ASEAN has many suitors shows its attractiveness, its relevance here and now. But does one necessarily become irrelevant by marrying to a family, even a bigger family? I do not believe so.

The emergence of China as a market economy is integral to the further growth and development of East Asia. The Philippines regards it as a catalyst for more rapid expansion and greater stability in Asia. But for now and the foreseeable future, ASEAN's need for Japan and its continued cooperation is far more essential.

The revival of the Japanese economy, the resumption of its traditional role as a growth engine is of utmost importance to the Philippines, to East Asia, to the world.

On the bilateral plane, the recent entry into force of the Japan-Singapore comprehensive partnership agreement inspires our efforts to conclude an appropriate agreement between our two countries—the Philippines and Japan.

In our view, an ideal for the proposed agreement is to maximize the many areas of complementarity between our two economies. One such area is human resource development. One facet of our HRD complementarity involves the demographic realities in our two countries.

Japan has an aging population, while the Philippines has a young population which supplies some of the best trained and most compassionate health care workers in the world. A growing number of countries in North America, Europe and the Middle East now host the Filipino health care givers.

In similar vein, Japan is the acknowledged leader in the region in the field of advanced technology including ICT and capital intensive industry. The Philippines, on the other hand, is well acknowledged internationally for its top quality knowledge workers. We can devise the right arrangements to take fuller advantage of these realities.

But all these prospects, all the exciting possibilities for economic revival, for advancement in my country or in Japan, or in the region may not see the light of day without a peaceful and stable political and security environment. Some parts of our region are a tinderbox of inter-ethnic tension. And long before this, a battlefield of ideological rivalry and a focal point of geo-strategic competition in the cold war. No one can, or should say too, that there is no immediate danger of hostilities, because as September 11 has taught us, as Bali has taught us, we sometimes do not know where the enemy lurks much less where or when it will strike next.

There are serious security fault lines in East Asia. We both know them so well. Our two countries have been very close allies for so long. And even as I speak, we continue to work together in addressing some of these. But when or how any of these fault lines will snap, no one can tell for certain. All we can do is prepare, and where we can, provide the safety nets, the safety vents to relieve the build up of pressure and avoid sudden massive explosions.

Under conditions of uncertainty, prudence is the best policy. Venting pressure is prudent and often very effective. Open and active dialogue through the ASEAN regional forum, the ASEAN plus three processes and all other channels must be the enduring means for clarifying the security concerns and assessments of countries, for explaining national defense doctrines and plans, and for containing and removing tension.

We, in East Asia, must reinforce all elements of predictability, stability and balance in the security field. On certain fronts, we're making tremendous progress.

The agreement signed in Phnom Penh on the regional conduct in the South China Sea is an important breakthrough not only for the Philippines and other countries in the immediate vicinity but also for countries served by that maritime area.

But on other fronts, recent developments are cause for concern. The revelation about nuclear weapons development in the Korean peninsula are a big issue. We oppose nuclear weapons proliferation and we will resist a nuclear arms race in East Asia.

Apart from international terrorism, new transnational threats to peace, freedom and progress require our joint attention and action. Transnational crime including the illicit trade in narcotics and weapons, trafficking in human beings, money laundering and piracy in the high seas as well as trans-boundary environmental threats are fields for urgent cooperation. All countries in our region especially those for whom freedom is a matter of national honor are without a doubt determined to do more to contribute to the stability, security and peace in East Asia, but acting singly greatly limits their options for positive action. For so long, Japan has been able to contribute so much.

Your pivotal role in the stabilization of Cambodia, in the transition to nationhood of East Timor, in promoting peaceful dialogue as a medium for settling the foreign issues in the Korean Peninsula. In so many more arenas, these achievements of Japan are not lost on us, and we congratulate you.

The long history of cooperation between our two countries as partners, as friends, as allies, is solid basis for further and more intense collaboration. We both must be ready to act and operate where needed and where necessary as one force for regional security to face the threat jointly and to triumph. This is our common mission—to show the world what interdependence means for us—to preserve freedom, to win prosperity in the 21st century and for all time.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.###

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines

During the opening ceremony of the First E-Services Philippines I.T. Exhibition and Interactive Business Investment Seminar

[Delivered at the Jetro Business Support Center, Tokyo, Japan, December 3, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Roxas.

Mr. Watanabe, chairman and CEO of Jetro; Mr. Izuka, also of Jetro; Secretary General Takashi Onda of the Asean-Japan Center; Mr. Shoichi Kameyama, the president of JCCI-Manila; members of the Philippine delegation — Philippine officials and business delegation both; senior executives and officers of Jetro; distinguished members of the business community in Japan; and of course, the other organizers, sponsors and exhibitors of the first Philippine I.T. exhibition & business seminar in Japan, good afternoon.

In behalf of the entire Filipino nation, I thank all of you for participating in this event that marks a new and Exciting phase in Philippine-Japanese trade and investment relations.

I thank in particular the Japanese businessmen who are with us to explore the many possibilities of mutually rewarding partnerships.

My thanks to the organizers of this exhibition and seminar: Jetro, Meti, the Japanese embassy in Manila — Mr. Ambassador — the Philippine Department of Trade and Industry, the Philippine embassy and our event sponsors: the Asean-Japan Center, the Japanese Chamber of Commerce and industry of the Philippines and Megaworld-Eastwood City Cyberpark, and all our speakers and exhibitors for putting together this Philippines first “E-services Philippines: I.T. exhibition and business investment seminar in Japan”

We have chosen Japan to be the first country outside the Philippines to stage this E-services Philippines exhibition to showcase our unique outsourcing capabilities which Gartner research calls the “best kept secret.”

Because Japan has a long history of business relationship with the Philippines and it’s a world leader in information and communications technology, and likewise in manufacturing, transportation, construction, robotics and animation, to mention a few, all of which depend upon information and communication technologies.

In the area of I.T. and I.T.-enabled services, there is a growing number of Japanese investments and outsourcing initiatives in the Philippines. This is especially true in the fields of engineering design, software development, digital animation and back office operations.

The Philippines has also established itself as a production support center for the famed Japanese anime’. Likewise, we function remotely as your back office operations in documentation, accounting and human resource management services. We also provide your business’ customer services requirements in English and in other Asian languages through our numerous call centers in the Philippines. The Japanese companies that have partnered with Philippine-located I.T. firms have recognized our quality human resources whose flexibility and creativity set them apart from other I.T. players as cited by a Jetro publication, dateline, in its November to December 2002 issue.

Japanese companies are setting the trend of locating their I.T. and I.T.-enabled operations in other developing hubs in our country outside metro manila such as CALABARZON, Subic and Cebu. These areas have an abundance of highly-trainable I.T. knowledge workers supported by the presence of technically competent schools, good telecommunications facilities and offer a lifestyle compatible with Japanese preferences.

Our expression of gratitude would not be complete if we will not cite your support in the promotion of accreditation programs for Filipino I.T. professionals via the Japanese information technology standard examination or Jitse. Likewise, Jetro has held seminars for local I.T. industries in Manila and Cebu, backed up by a business matching system in their website that aims to promote business through the internet.

I hope that my administration strong support for ICT, which we recognize as a key driver of our economy, reassures the Japanese companies of the continued growth of your ICT interest in our country. I personally head the I.T. and e-commerce council of the Philippines. This is our country's highest I.T. policy-making body that counts among its members most of our respected I.T. industry and business leaders.

Our economies' respective strengths complement each other very well. Japan's leadership in various technological fields can be adequately supported by the Philippines' large pool of quality human resources with high I.T. literacy, to boost our joint I.T. prospects and take them to uncharted heights.

In this regard, we wish to further intensify our mutual initiatives in e-services through the following:

Acceleration of the promotion of Japanese investments and outsourcing projects involving I.T. and I.T.-enabled services; Intensification of the conduct of training programs relate to ICT innovation and technology advancement, worker skills upgrading, and project management; continuation and expansion of the existing Certification programs that attune Filipino I.T. workers to Japanese standards; fast tracking of information exchange between our two countries to further develop our respective ICT industries and market.

The opportunities we face are truly tremendous. With this "E-services Philippines: I.T. exhibition and business investment seminar," we are taking the first step in realizing such prospects.

We hope too that with this event, we could encourage you to visit the Philippines and attend the third "E-services Philippines: I.T. outsourcing and Subcon exhibition" which will take place from February 13th to 15th 2003 at the World Trade Center in Metro Manila.

Our Philippine department of trade and industry, which is organizing this event, will set up the appropriate site tours and visits outside of the exhibition and provide business matching services especially for the Japanese delegation.

The Philippine Board of Investments, Japan desk and the Jetro, through the business support center that has just been announced today by Mr. Watanabe, will provide the necessary support to firms intending to outsource to or locate in the Philippines. So we ensure you of the full range of business facilitation.

In closing, I invite all of you to make IT. the Philippines for all your I.T. and I.T.-enabled business requirements. We proudly welcome you to Asia's new e-services hub, the Philippines, and discover for yourself the world's "best kept secret."

With this, I declare the first-ever "E-services Philippines: I.T. exhibition in Japan" officially open.

Thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the State Dinner hosted by their Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Japan

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the State Dinner hosted by their Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Japan

[Delivered at the Banquet Hall, Imperial Palace, Tokyo Japan, December 3, 2002]

Your Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen.

It's my great honor and privilege to be in Japan upon your majesties kind invitation. This visit manifests the deep friendship that binds our two countries and peoples.

As the recent events in our region and in the world have made clear, only through earnest acts of friendship and cooperation especially between neighbors like ours can nations hope to effectively address the common threats and challenges facing them.

The friendly relations between the Philippines and Japan are blessed with a long history. This friendly ties could be traced as far back as the exile of Lord Okun Takayama, a great Christian samurai and his family to Manila in 1614.

Three centuries after that, the Philippines began benefiting immensely from the important contributions of Japanese immigrants to our country.

Road construction in the Philippine summer capital of Baguio, which you visited, your majesties received a great boosts from the first large wave of Japanese migration to my country in 1903.

The centennial of Japanese immigration to the Philippines next year is an important milestone. And we already have lined up appropriate activities to mark the occasion.

A subsequent wave in the same year led to the establishment of a sizable community of Japanese descent in the province of Davao in the island of Mindanao. That community became a catalyst for agricultural development in Southern Philippines which today supplies 90 percent of the bananas and the great bulk of the pineapples enjoyed in Japan today.

On a more personal note, i still vividly remember another milestone in Japan-Philippine relations that your Majesty talked about earlier – the visit of your majesties to Manila 40 years and one month ago. And I am very proud and honored that it was my father, then the president of the Philippines, who hosted the then visiting crown prince and crown princess.

Your visit to my country, your majesties signal the close of a difficult chapter in our common history and signal the start of a new one – a chapter of true friendship, a close alliance of genuine partnership.

This partnership has since born mutually beneficial fruits for both countries. Japan has through all these years been a leading supporter of Philippine efforts for sustainable development and nation-building.

The Asian flu and the Asian crisis affected us both. Yet, at the height of the financial storm that hit five years ago, Japan solidarity was a strong and heartfelt presence in my country as it was in the rest of Southeast Asia.

You Majesties, your Excellencies, I'm here to build upon a robust bilateral partnership. This visit of state is the first between our two countries in the new century. And it comes closely on the heels of the launch of new cooperation paradigms in East Asia.

The Philippines and Japan are vital allies in building and maintaining peace and stability in the whole region. Our alliance can be further strengthened. It can be expanded to reinforce the march towards regional integration.

Japan's contributions to greater East Asian integration is exemplified in its active support for the Asean+3 and the ASEAN regional forum processes. Its comprehensive economic partnership initiatives with Asean and other East Asian countries and its role in building the peace foundation for stability and progress in countries like Cambodia and East Timor.

In this and other important initiatives such as on issues of immediate concern in Northeast Asia, Japan's unflinching advocacy of dialogue has my countries full support and cooperation East Asia is our common home. In this house, dialogue provides the best avenue for resolving differences. It can be the only means to bring closure to a difficult task.

We have witnessed how dialogue could facilitate greater understanding and chart new avenues for cooperation. We saw this in 1999 when in the course of the Asean+3 meetings, Manila hosted the first summit in half a century between the leaders of Japan, China and South Korea.

Japan and the Philippines have both long recognized that common strands run through our stake in the destiny and cohesion of the region. By working together, we can advance together.

Our two countries have laid foundations of amity, deeper and more solid than those of bridges or factories. I saw this five years ago when their majesties received here, my mother, the first lady, who welcomed them in Manila 40 years ago.

Our people shall strengthen this foundation by every passing year. Greater than five thousand Japanese-Filipino couples who exchanged wedding vows each year. They and their many children will provide the strongest bonds that will keep Japan-Philippine relations vibrant and strong, the bonds that only families can build.

In that spirit and in behalf of a grateful nation, let me offer a toast.

To your good health, your Majesty.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Luncheon hosted by the heads of the Japanese Economic Organizations Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Luncheon hosted by the heads of the Japanese Economic Organizations

[Delivered at the Rose Room, Tokyo Kaikan Tokyo, Japan, December 4, 2002]

Thank you, Secretary Roxas.

Chairman Yamaguchi, Chairman Okuda, Chairman Kobayashi, Vice Chairman Sasaki, Chairman Tollumi, Chairman Kaneko, other distinguished representatives from the business community, members of the Philippine delegation, ladies and gentlemen.

I'd like to thank the Japanese economic organizations for inviting me to this luncheon visit during my state visit to your great country.

It is important for me to meet you often because Japan, as Yamaguchi san has said, is the second largest trade partner of the Philippines, and Japan accounts for a sizable amount of foreign direct investments. Your official development assistance constitutes more than 60 percent of what the Philippines receives from abroad.

Japan's economy is the second largest in the world. Japan's GDP is more than half of the entire region. Japan houses leading edge and world-class companies like yours in industries such as automobile, information technology, robotics and machine tools, to name a few. It is therefore in our collective interests to see Japan succeed in sustaining its economy as an engine of global growth.

Let me now update you on developments about the Philippine economy.

The country's growth in this first semester of this year is the highest so far among the five leading economies in Southeast Asia.

And in the first three quarters of this year, Philippine GDP grew by 4.1 percent. GDP was powered by the recovery of industry and continued strengthening of services. Industry grew by 3.8 percent because exports grew by 8.9 percent, and private construction is on the rebound. While export figures to Japan have been sluggish, demand within other parts of Asia more than took up the slack, with exports to china accounting for a large share.

Services grew by 5.1 percent because of the expansion of telecommunications, trade and private services, including tourism. The strength of the service sector is based largely on the gains made by the liberalization and deregulation measures that the Philippines has pursued over the past few years. Thus, following the opening up of long distance service and mandatory interconnections, the communications sector continues to register double-digit growth rates.

And with continued responsible monetary, fiscal and supply-side policies, inflation and interest rates are the lowest in more than a decade.

We are well on our way to meet the World Bank forecast of an overall GDP growth rate of at least 4 percent for the Philippines this year, from the 3.2 percent that was achieved last year. The World Bank forecast for the Philippines is the highest among the four Southeast Asian countries that the World Bank recently reviewed. Furthermore, the World Bank forecasts a growth rate of 4.3 percent for the year 2003.

The transport sector is benefiting from the motor vehicle complementation scheme in Southeast Asia, and from the growing trade in spare parts and components with East Asia. It is in this sector that Japan has proven to be a very important player, and we shall continue to foster our close partnership in this area.

In seeking sustainable growth, my administration continues to focus unswervingly on building a strong Philippine republic similar to the strong Japanese democratic nation. Two essential features mark out a strong nation. The first is independence from class and sectoral interests so that the nation stands for the interest of the people rather than of a powerful minority. The second is the capacity, represented by strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to execute good policy and deliver essential services.

My administration continues to focus on the essential services that concern firms that would invest in the Philippines. This includes the following: power. As Yamaguchi san has said, our program to reform the power sector to assure adequate and reliable power supply to consumers and to industry was initiated with the passage of the electric power industry reform act last year. It was passed last year after a delay of 10 years. And I thank Senator Pimentel and the congressmen and congresswoman who are present here today because they were the ones who did that for our republic. Since then, power cost have gone down. From being the economy with the second most expensive electricity rates in the region, the Philippines has gone down to being number six. And we aim to reduce power cost even more through a comprehensive energy liberalization program that covers power generation, transmission and distribution.

For the work force. The Japanese are witnesses to the creativity, industriousness and skill of the great Filipino worker. And now with all our efforts, we have the lowest strike rate in the last 20 years. The country's mainstream labor groups have announced that they are suspending demands for wage increases. The representatives of workers and employers in the automotive industry recently committed to promote pro-active and responsible use of plant level mechanisms in settling disputes to prevent them from maturing into adversarial actions.

As for the rule of law. The Philippines has a stable system of law and government, and great transparency in the media that forces the officials to behave. In the area of intellectual property rights, significant gains are being made not only in terms of conformity to global rules, but also in terms of very aggressive implementation. Compared to other countries, the Philippines has a competitive edge in terms of the environment for intellectual property.

On peace and order. My administration is dismantling kidnap syndicates and getting rid of rascals in the police, especially in Metro Manila. On the other hand, the global environment, the adverse global environment has provided opportunities to address our national security concerns. Nine-eleven, the subsequent war on terrorism, and the looming war in Iraq have all combined to dampen the world economy. But even before 9-11, we had already been waging a war on terrorism.

You will recall that the Abu Sayyaf was able to generate at least 20 million dollars in ransom from Sipadan in the year 2000 which strengthened their capability for terror. But with our decisive response to 9-11, we have gained foreign allies in our war against terror, which enabled us to neutralize the notorious Abu Sabaya last June and to degrade the Abu Sayyaf strength from thousands to a couple of hundreds.

The Philippines is positioning itself within East Asia — the region of the highest growth in this century — as a regional hub. Geographically, the Philippines is located in the center of the Asia-Pacific, which means all major Asian cities can be reached in 3 to 4 hours. But we intend to become a regional hub not only by virtue of proximity, but also by providing services to the region.

First, in information technology and telecommunications services. The Philippines has an international reputation for its edge in education, English proficiency, adaptability and expertise in e-commerce. The Philippines is highly competitive in terms of getting quality labor in quantity. As an English-literate country, the Philippines is able to absorb high technology easily. This is why world-class firms such as Intel, Texas instruments and Amkor Annam have a strong presence in our country as well as other Japanese firms that exhibited in yesterday's I.T. exhibition.

The growth of private services such as call centers, backroom operations and software design is accelerating even as my government continues to cultivate a dynamic I.T. sector. The I.T. fair being held in Tokyo is a major venue where our I.T. firms can merge their strengths.

As a regional hub, the Philippines is well-positioned to take advantage of the rapidly expanding market of china. With regard china, especially after its accession to the WTO, we see this as a lucrative market for our logistics services, manufacturing and commodity firms. Before China joined the WTO, we had a trade deficit with china of 300 million dollars. After China entered WTO, we now enjoy a trade surplus of 700 million dollars.

We are also working to make Makati, whom many of you know as our premier commercial center, a specific urban tourist destination. The biggest spending Japanese tourist is the single working female. They prefer urbanized destinations like Hongkong and Honolulu, where they travel in small groups of friends for shopping and rest and recreation. Makati in the Philippines with its compact, easy to secure location, world-class malls, entertainment facilities and cheap shopping can be promoted as an attractive destination with a side trip to one of our many beach resorts as part of the package. I have instructed the department of tourism to specifically promote this concept to Japan's tourist agencies and bureaus by hosting groups of officials of such agencies and bureaus to come to the Philippines to see for themselves.

As we position ourselves to be a regional hub, we also take care of ensuring the proper macroeconomic environment for business firms to thrive.

We have put together a good new team to increase our tax collections. It is headed by a new commissioner of Internal Revenue who is preceded by his impressive record when he was Commissioner of Customs, and who has the personal integrity, the technological competence, and the people's skills to meet the target set for the rest of the medium-term plan period. His work will be complemented by a new Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Commission.

We are committed to not only short-term but long-term structural reforms. The special asset management company bill, which has now passed both houses of congress should free up more bank resources for export and other projects that the government is not in a fiscal position to fund.

The bill to make land acceptable as bank collateral, which passed the House of Representatives last week will stimulate private investments in agriculture.

In the international front, the Philippines attaches great importance to ensuring that the Doha round of the WTO delivers its promise to mainstream trade into the development agenda so that it can contribute to economic growth, sustainable development and poverty alleviation.

In the regional front, the interest of Japan, China and India, the dominant economies in Asia to join the ASEAN free trade area indicates the comforting strength of the larger, integrated markets.

By creating a powerful trade area, we expect business firms like yours to direct your investments into the natural strengths of the various member-economies. It makes perfect sense not to limit your investments to only one country, so that you can hedge against political and economic risks.

Japan will always be an important partner of the Philippines, and indeed of the whole East Asia region in our common resolve to build a regional community where there is economic and human security, and where our people would be able to realize their potentials in keeping with their fundamental values.

The business community has a large role to play in realizing this vision. So I ask you, leaders of the Japanese community, let us move forward together. Let us make ASEAN prosperous. Let us make the Philippines prosperous because that is what will make Japan prosperous and therefore the rest of our region prosperous.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the awarding ceremonies of the 2002 Philippine Quality Awards

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the awarding ceremonies of the 2002 Philippine Quality Awards

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, December 6, 2002]

Our other Cabinet Members who are here today, nandito si Secretary Canlas; nandito si Chairman ng NFA, Lito Sarmiento na siyang tatay ng quality awards di ba Lito? Dr. Gonzalez of D.A.P.; and I would like to greet the members of the board of judges, si Mike Varela, salamat sa iyong pag-clarify doon sa ating ... Sinabi n'yang, sinabi mo tungkol sa PIATCO, thank you very much; Dr. Velasco; Mr. Aquino; Francis Ferrer, nandito si Francis? Hi Francis, one of our electronics giants and leaders, and pioneers; Rey Palmario and the members of the committee, Jun Berba, Cynthia Cabasag, Jun Ortiz-Luis, nandito ba siya? Hello Jun! Johnny Quintos, Cedric Bagtas. Nasaan si Cedric? Thank you again for the big support of the labor movement to our economic recovery by saying that during this difficult times he will suspend demands for wage increases. Thank you very much. Dr. Consuelo flora, the awardees, other guests, ladies and gentlemen, good morning:

First of all, let me congratulate the winners of this year's Philippine Quality Awards. I'm proud of these awards, I learned about them because as Undersecretary Cristobal said, they have been around for five years. I learned about them from Lito Sarmiento who would often invite me to the awards ceremony when I was still senator and vice president. And I am very happy that after these were being given as private sector initiative, last year they were institutionalized in Republic Act 9013, one of the first bills I signed into law as president.

And it's timely that we are handing out quality awards today, the day after my arrival from my State visit to Japan, an economy that is known to be a stricter for quality.

Let me share therefore a little report about some of the things that we did in Japan especially related to quality.

I went to Japan for a state visit upon the invitation of the emperor his majesty, for the same reason that I was in Cambodia at the ASEAN leaders' meeting a month ago, to focus on the economy and security of the Philippines. In this interconnected world, opening a door in the Keidanren community can open an opportunity for job creation in the Philippines.

Whether it's the fight against global terrorism or improving official development assistance, at the end of the day, it's always about the economy and improving the lives of our Philippine citizens. Remember that when I became president, i inherited the country with 40 percent of the population living below the poverty line and 4 million Filipinos out-of-work. And this is a continuing challenge that we have to address.

And so, we go with you, the Filipino businessmen to encourage you to create jobs. And we also go to other countries to encourage their businessmen to come and create jobs in the Philippines.

Japan is the acknowledged leader in the field of advanced technology, which is a key to quality. Japan's leadership in advanced technology is one of the factors that will influence the shape of the economic partnership agreement that the Philippines and Japan are negotiating. Let me take this opportunity to explain my idea about this proposed economic partnership agreement between the Philippines and Japan.

In my view, an ideal for an economic partnership agreement is to maximize the areas of Complementarity between two economies. For instance, while Japan is the acknowledged leader in the region in the field of advanced technology, including ICT, and capital- intensive industry, the Philippines is well-acknowledged internationally for its top-quality knowledge workers. We can devise the right arrangements to take fuller advantage of this complementarity.

To illustrate, while I was in Japan I opened the first e-services Philippines exhibition to showcase our unique out-sourcing capabilities, which Gartner research calls the “best kept secret”. Yes, it is a well kept secret because we need to advertise it more.

There are many I.T. companies in the United States who go on an exploratory mission. They would have because the U.S., if their, sometimes they are first, if they go to Europe, they would go to Ireland, they would go India, they would go to the Philippines. Other times, they take the Pacific route, and they would go to the Philippines, other countries in Southeast Asia, they would go to India, they would go to Ireland before they go back to the United States. A number of the I.T. companies have told me that for those — where the first stop was Philippines. They did not proceed anymore to their other stops because they found that here is where they want to do their I.T.

And the exhibition demonstrated in Japan that though Japan is the region’s leader in advanced technology, in the area of I.T. and I.T.-enabled services, there is a growing number of Japanese investments and out-sourcing initiatives in the Philippines. This is especially true in the fields of engineering design, software development, digital animation and backroom operations. These were the items in the exhibit, the I.T. exhibit in Japan, the E-Philippine exhibit in Japan. And in the seminar that opened the exhibit where I spoke, the crowd of Japanese participants was overflowing. There were 200 Japanese firms who participated much, much more than anticipated. So, it was standing room and in order to accommodate the Japanese who were participating, the Filipino delegation even volunteered to give up their seats and they went to the hall outside and waited for us to finish the seminar so that the Japanese who were participating could listen to what we had to say about the Philippine I.T. industry.

And while I don’t have the final results of the reaction of the 200 participants, let me just give an indication of the percentages that we might be expecting from the first Jethrow investment mission to come to the Philippines after I became president in March 2001. At that time Jethrow brought 25 I.T. related firms. And at the 25 I.T. related firms, three put up their I.T. businesses here and eighth, an additional eight from that group are putting up — in the process of putting up their firms. So, that’s 11 out of 25 which is really a good percentage as far as investment missions are concerned.

Another facet of our complementarity with Japan involves the demographic realities between our two countries. Japan has an aging population, they have a problem in their old-aged health-care. While the Philippines has a young population which supplies some of the best-trained and compassionate and best quality health-care workers in the world. A growing number of countries in North America, Europe and the Middle East now host Filipino health-care givers. And so, this is another area of complementarity between Japan and the Philippines.

The market is beginning to recognize the demand for our health care workers, forty new nursing schools, private nursing schools have been set up in the Philippines as a response to this demand. And the job of the government, because this is set up by the private sector responding to the market, is to ensure that these schools will continue the quality education that our nurses who are now all over the world have received all the quality training, because we want that as we increased the quantity of nurses the quality will also be maintained. The quality that has given us a good reputation. That’s why, I am very grateful to Congress especially the Senate under the leadership of Senator Juan Flavier who knows the health sector very well, in reorganizing or rather enhancing and strengthening the nursing board, increasing the number of members of the board because they have to go and inspect all of these new schools to maintain the quality.

In this century of globalization, the Philippines will maintain economic ties and enter into economic partnerships with other countries to the extent that these partnerships are consistent with the welfare of our people.

In the case of Japan, long-lasting close economic ties between the two countries have developed over many years. Japan provides 60 percent of the official development assistance received by the Philippines. Japan is our second largest source of trade, investments, and tourism.

Since we have these long-lasting close economic ties anyway, and since these ties are bound to increase with the inexorable forces of the 21st century, we might as well shape the economic ties in such a way that will strengthen the complementarities of our two economies, rather than making our products compete in each other's markets.

In this competitive 21st century, we do need to strengthen our competitiveness. This means attention to quality. So, I'm glad that today in the field of management, our P-Q-A recipients, PSI technologies and on semi-conductors are this year's best examples of quality. They have also been steady sources of jobs for thousands of Filipinos, and are important contributors to domestic output and productivity in the electronics industry. Both are our biggest exporters of electronic semiconductors. And i congratulate them.

The quality of our electronics products has been largely responsible for the growth of our exports. Despite the global slump, our total exports for this year grew by what? 8.9 percent Dante? As against a forecast of zero growth. That was our forecast at the beginning of the year. The electronics industry posts the highest contribution, electronics is 69 percent of total export earnings.

Our exports in electronics have resumed — because they were down last year — not because the international market is recovering, but because we are getting a bigger market share. Again i congratulate our electronics and semiconductors.

I went to Silicon Valley a few weeks ago, and found that Silicon Valley growth is flat, but Philippine electronics are growing. China has entered the WTO, and Philippine exports to China have grown by 80 percent, and from a trade deficit with China of 300 million dollars we now have a trade surplus of 700 million dollars. And in this new market of China, again our number one export is electronics. You, the quality firms, deserve credit for this. Congratulations to you and congratulations to PSI because you will be entering the China market as well whereas on sells to the U.S. and to Europe.

Our experience with China shows that trade can provide greater opportunities for Philippine businesses. The Philippines is positioning itself within Asia, East Asia the fastest growing part of the world today. Geographically, the Philippines is located in the center of Asia-Pacific, which means that all major Asian cities can be reached in as little as 3-4 hours. And we have the manpower capability to service the various needs that the new economic realignment would demand.

As a regional hub, the Philippines is well positioned to take advantage of the rapidly expanding market of China. We regard China, especially after its accession to the WTO, and given this, would-experience of our electronics firms not to mention our copper and also our tropical fruit firms, China is a lucrative market for these products. It is a market for our logistics services, for our manufacturing, and our commodity firms.

And this is also true for our experience with Japanese firms, further example, Toyota will be putting up a sweet potato factory and plantation in Southern Tagalog to sell to the China market. Japanese capital, Philippine labor, Philippine Human Resources and Chinese market. That's the way to go in the 21st century.

Matsushita will expand their Philippine air condition factory, they visited me in Japan to tell me that. And, they will likely consolidate their operations by relocating their window-type air condition factory from another ASEAN country to the Philippines. But this air condition factory will sell not only to our domestic market, it will sell to the other ASEAN countries from which they will transfer their manufacturing facilities as well as other markets.

Toshiba likewise transferred its computer factory, it's Toshiba right? In the United States, they transferred it to the Philippines, but still selling to the U.S. market. So, when you go there to the U.S. and entered a computer shop and you buy a Toshiba computer —it's made in the Philippines.

Honda started producing automobile transmission components in the Philippines for the ASEAN market, but is now expanding its production to serve the world market as well. Toyota will produce transmission components as well, for the Japanese market. The first time it will produce in the Philippines for its own native market. All these show, that trade provides larger economies of scale for businesses in the Philippines.

There will be more of these developments if we formalize an economic partnership agreement with Japan. Efforts are ongoing to establish this formal partnership. A working group was established last August, led by the DTI which formally met last October and November. The working group discussed areas of cooperation, ranging from trade and investment to various other bilateral partnerships and linkages, not only air condition.

Not only automotive which is a major Japanese investment in the Philippines, not only I.T. service, oh, yes, not only air condition, not only automotive, not only agricultural products but to me most notably — services and human resource development. Part of this, would teach Japanese to our health-care givers and I.T. workers so that they can be more acceptable and successful in the Japanese market.

The inclusion of human resources like health-care givers and I.T. workers makes the Japan – Philippines economic partnership a novel form of economic partnership and could play a catalytic role in accelerating global trade rule-making. Usually when you talk about agreements, you're debating about manufacturing, about agriculture, here, we have strongly advocated the inclusion of human resources especially in health-care and I.T. Prime Minister Koizumi and I have therefore instructed the relevant ministries within our respective governments to work more closely towards the establishment of this partnership.

Those who can take advantage of this partnership are those who produced quality products and services, the types of products and services exemplified by our quality awardees.

And so, once again, to our awardees, congratulations and may your tribe of quality firms increase. Thank you!

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the awarding ceremonies of the 2002 Presidential Awards for Filipino Individuals and Organizations Overseas

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the awarding ceremonies of the 2002 Presidential Awards for Filipino Individuals and Organizations Overseas

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, December 12, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Ople sa iyung pagpakilala.

Executive Director Molano; Congressman Cagas, na naririto dahil ‘yung kapatid n’ya ay isang outstanding Filipino na binigyan natin ng gantimpala; and i’d like to also greet the members of the Executive Committee for the Presidential Awards of 2002 — Bishop Ramon Arguelles, Bil Luz, Senator Benitez, Justice Luciano; the chair of the donations committee of the Philippine National Red Cross; Excellencies of the diplomatic corps, and we have here identified — the Ambassadors of Libya, Italy, Brunei, Switzerland, Indonesia; other members of the Cabinet — I see Secretary Bunye here; and of course, to all of you, the distinguished awardees of the 2002 Presidential Awards; other officials in government; other distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen.

I’d like to begin by congratulating the 35 outstanding Overseas Filipinos and partners in community-building that we are honoring tonight. I’d like to thank Dr. Abella for his erudite acceptance speech. Don’t apologize, you gave us very good food for thought. I hope that we can use some of your thoughts in our longer-term planning for having prosperity in the country so that many of our Filipinos don’t have to look for that prosperity abroad. And to him, to those of you who don’t know him, to those who know him, it’s not surprising that he should give such wise words because he is the number one expert on migration in the international labor organization. So, we’re very proud of him.

We are very proud of him, we are very proud of our honorees. So, to all our honorees, I say, congratulations and thank you for what you do for our country. You epitomize the seven million great Filipino workers and great Overseas Filipino investors who labor patiently in the great Filipino tradition of pagsusumikap at pakikipagkapwa.

Indeed, as Dr. Abella said, the migration patterns have changed so much and have accelerated so much over the past several decades.

Forty years ago, when my father was president, there were 8 Filipinos in Kuwait; now, there are 60,000. Thirty years ago, when martial law began, there were 201 Filipinos in Guam; now, more than one-fourth of the total island population of 160,000 are Filipinos. And in fact, we are proud that the richest tycoons of Guam’s are Filipinos. They received their awards several years ago. In Daly city, one-third of the population are Filipinos, thereby earning for itself the monicker “Adobo country.” when I visit friends in Daly city — and I do have many of them — in fact, I feel like I’m in Quezon City. I go in — Filipino house, Filipino household; turn-on the TV — Filipino channel. And so, the community is so Filipino. And we’ve even elected a Filipino mayor many times over — Mike Guingona, one of our awardees tonight. To date, as Mr. Abella said, close to 10 percent of the Filipino population live or work overseas. These Filipinos shape the history of our nation. They also shape the history of their host countries. And they shape the history of the world because of their numbers.

Thus, early in my presidency last year, when I spoke about my eight realities of foreign policy I said — as one of them — that overseas Filipinos will continue to play a critical role in the country's economic and social stability. And Mr. Abella said, until we reach a per capita income of five thousand dollars, then you will continue to play this crucial role.

I said yes, for the foreseeable future. And also I said, in as much as we will continue to be heavily dependent on overseas worker remittances. Then indeed, that gives us our own obligation to our overseas Filipinos. We have an obligation to our overseas Filipinos not only because of the crucial role that you play in our country — that economic role and the role in our stability — but also because of our humanitarian obligation. Because our country has a humanitarian obligation, our nation has a humanitarian responsibility to our people wherever you are. And that is why, the government works doubly hard to strengthen workers' protection from deprivations of domestic recruiters as well as of overseas employers, agents and officials. And on the other hand, we strengthen bilateral relations with countries, with corporations, with associations, with individuals that host large numbers of Filipinos especially those that do so in a just way.

Labis talaga ang pagmamalaki ng mga Pilipino dito sa Pilipinas at pagpuri sa mga kababayang nakatira at nagtatrabaho sa ibang bansa. Napamalas ng ating mga Pilipino sa mundo na ang Pilipino ay dakila.

At dahil sa mga remittances, milyung-milyong kabataan ang nakakapag-aral, nakakatapos ng edukasyon sa tulong ng overseas Filipinos.

Libu-libong bagong bahay ang naipapatayo.

At dahil sa tulong ng overseas Filipinos, nakakapaglunsad ng napakaraming negosyo maging small business o medium-scale business. Kung minsan malalaking negosyo sa buong bansa.

Kaya noon pa sinasabi ko, kasi ang bansag dati ng overseas Filipinos ay overseas Filipino workers. Noon, manggagawa, totoo. Pero noong sa dami ng remittances, ang laki ng napapaabot sa ating bansa habang overseas Filipino workers ang ating overseas Filipinos naging overseas Filipino investors na rin. Dahil ang Filipino sa inyong 7 billion dollars na pinapaabot sa ating bansa, kayo ay major economic investor sa ating bansa. Kaya ako gustong-gusto kong tinatawag ang mga overseas filipinos na overseas Filipino investors. Hindi lamang 'yung mga nagdadala ng malalaking investment kagaya ni Joann de Asis, 'yung nagpapadala ng kanilang remittances. Kasi 'yung 7 billion sa kabuuan, napakalaking investment sa ating bansa.

At dapat lamang suklian ng bansa ang inyong tulong.

And that's why even when I was a senator, and this is true of senator Ople as well, who's now Secretary Ople, we already felt that way. That's why, we at that time filed our respective bills for overseas voting. At that time though, when we were senators, none of our bills that we filed were able to hurdle the resistance that was taking place right in the committee level. None of our bills at that time, when I was a senator, graduated from committee. None of them got to be deliberated on the Senate floor.

And because I remembered that frustrating experience — it was so fresh in my mind — when I became president I certified as one of my five most urgent bills the Overseas Voting Bill.

Now at last, for the first time after so many attempts for so long, the Overseas Voting Bill has not just passed committee, it has even passed both houses of Congress. The farthest it has ever gone in the history of our legislative attempts. And let's pray that the house and the Senate can iron out their conflicting provisions because as soon as they do so I'll sign the bill into law within 24 hours.

Wala si Secretary Pat Santo Tomas ngayon pero pinag-isipan namin ni Pat, kung ano pa ang mabibigay na sukli o aginaldo, dahil pasko ngayon, sa ating mga overseas Filipinos. Gusto nating maglunsad ng mga programa para makapundar sa kinabukasan ng mga Pilipinong nagtatrabaho sa ibayong dagat, habang pinaghahanda ang buhay nila at ng pamilya nila sa Pilipinas.

Kaya gumawa ng programa na tinatawag nating “Kabayanihan.” at sana mai-kwento ninyo ito sa inyong mga kapwa Pilipino sa pinagtitirahan ninyong mga lugar. The “Kabayanihan” seeks to install an integrated delivery of basic services to overseas Filipinos at worksites abroad and at home in the Philippines.

Under the “Kabayanihan,” overseas Filipinos will be able to avail of the following services:

First, from the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) nand’yan si Virgilio Angelo, ang ating bagong OWWA head. They are now providing on-site welfare services, including expanded and voluntary membership with OWWA;

Second, DOLE/OWWA/POEA electronic identification card or e-card services. The e-card is the ultimate identification card of Overseas Filipinos. With this e-card, it will no longer be necessary for an OFW to fall in line at POEA to obtain an overseas employment certificate for the purpose of exemption from the travel tax and the airport terminal fee. By simply presenting the e-card, the holder can have immediate access also to OWWA welfare services, POEA processing requirements, and even duty free shop discounts. It can also be used as a credit card and as an ATM card for Philippine commercial banks. This and many other electronic cards eventually, we would want to put together to have something that would approximate a national I.D.;

Third, we are now part of this integrated program providing health maintenance services through the OWWA Medicare program. Nung minsan – saan ba yon? When I was in Japan — pumunta sa akin ‘yung mga Filipino doon, “tulongan n’yo naman kami kasi ang mahal na mahal ng pagpapagamot dito.” ay, no wonder they were having a lot of medical missions in Japan for the overseas Filipinos because medical treatment is simply too expensive. But now, with this Medicare, the OFW and the members of their family will be entitled to benefits over and above those which are granted by PhilHealth. Because PhilHealth is for services here. But this health card subsidizes services that the OFW needs even in the host country;

Fourth, Pag-Ibig funds housing services. The DOLE and the Pag-Ibig fund — that’s why we have here the housing people — have already signed a memorandum of agreement for the joint implementation of the Pag-Ibig Overseas Housing Program. This program aims to expand Pag-Ibig membership among OFWs and other overseas Filipinos, and provide them the opportunity to acquire their own homes at affordable means. I’d like to inform you that the Pag-Ibig fund has reduced the equity requirements of its housing program for OFWs. Magkano na ang equity requirements ngayon? Ten percent na lamang. Because that used to be the complaint of the OFWs;

Fifth, we have the SSS provident fund or flexi-fund services. This flexi-fund is solely for OFWs. It was designed to enable OFWs to save their hard-earned money while working abroad. By investing in the flexi-fund at a very affordable cost, the OFW is guaranteed continued earnings after retirement. And so, I would like to ask you, our Filipino leaders, to encourage the OFWs that you know in the places where you live to invest in the flexi-fund. It is like a savings account with higher than bank interest rates. And more importantly, it is withdrawable anytime.

Umpisa sa Enero, magbubukas ang “Kabayanihan” ng sariling website na maaaring gamitin ng mga overseas Filipinos para mapaabot din sa akin ang mga mungkahi kung papaano higit na mapapabuti ng pamahalaan ang serbisyo para sa ating overseas Filipinos. Well, we are also doing this for the Filipinos in the country. We have TXT GMA. And we’re working on a website.

Bukod sa “Kabayanihan” — ‘yung binanggit kong programa kanina, ang tawag doon ay “Kabayanihan” at ang lead na gumagawa noon ay ang DOLE — bukod sa “Kabayahinan” pero suportado ko rin ang ilang mga programa para sa OFW kung saan si Vice-President Teofisto Guingona ang siya ang nagsimula at nangunguna. Ito ay binubuo ng overseas Filipino investment bond na magbibigay ng serbisyo mediko at seguro sa OFW, pati na rin pabahay sa katapusan ng bond. Inilunsad ni Vice President itong OFW bond na ito sa Hapon noong isang buwan. Iyon namang OFW housing na ginagawa niya, sa taguig itatayo ang unang pabahay. Kasama ito ng Pag-Ibig. At I’m very happy that earlier, the presentation was made to me about the whole Pag-ibig program which includes this. And I’m very happy that we have on board as consultant for this housing program, the husband of Joann de Asis, si Jolly Benitez, and the nephew of Senator Benitez. At para sa mga seafarers, pagkatapos ng malawak na konsultasyon, gumawa si Vice President Guingona ng panukalang Magna Carta for seafarers that we shall be submitting to Congress.

And tonight, I've handed out these Presidential Awards tonight for Overseas Filipinos for the same reason I make trips overseas: to focus on the economy and security of the Philippines.

Whether it's reaching out to you, the overseas Filipinos, or fighting against global terrorism, at the end of the day, it's always about the economy and improving the lives of our Filipino citizens. If you remember, when I became president 20 months ago, I inherited an economy with 4 million jobless Filipinos and a 40 percent poverty incidence. And that was complicated by 9-11 and the aftermath. Employment has grown so far by 3 percent this year, but I still feel sad that even with such employment growth, we still have great unemployment, there are still many Filipinos unemployed.

Nonetheless, today, inspite of the global slowdown, including in many countries where you live, the Philippine economy has delivered one of the highest growth rates in Asia. In the first three quarters of this year, Philippine GDP grew by 4.1 percent.

This economic growth in this first three quarters of the year is surpassed only by the industrial giants — China and Korea — and by Vietnam, which started from a much lower base.

Our inflation and interest rates are at their lowest in more than a decade. And inflation is low not because of low consumption — because in fact, consumption has grown. Thanks to the large extent, as Mr. Abella said, to many of the remittances coming in — but the Christmas shopping causing all that traffic that prevented you from having an enjoyable trip to Malacañang illustrates the big consumption spending that's going on. So, it's not the low consumption that is causing low inflation. Rather, there is greater productivity in food items like fisheries. That's why the price of fish is low. And rice for the masses — not the well-milled rice for the middle or rich people — but the rice of the masses is 15 or 16 pesos per kilo. And because our interest rates are low, construction, especially housing, and car sales are moving again. That's why I would like the overseas Filipinos to take advantage of this low interest rates now and buy houses for their loved ones now.

And as far as tourism is concerned, since may, we have had double-digit growth in tourism. So, therefore — because between January and may it was negative and then it went to double-digit — our overall year-to-date growth in tourism is a very decent seventy percent even after the Bali attack.

We are taking further steps to strengthen our macro-economic fundamentals. We will continue to be vigilant in our efforts to reduce our deficit. And Customs, BIR, and the new Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Center, all of them — and I see here Tony Bernardo, who is our fairly new commissioner — I've been telling them, sinabihan ko nga dito sa ating mga bagong Commissioners na kailangang magtrabaho ng masigasig. Madulas iyung mga smuggler na nasa order of battle. Tanungin n'yo kay Tony Bernardo, dahil wala sa pangalan nila 'yung mga kargamyentong nahuhuli. Kaya sabi ko kay Tony, "alam mo naman kung sino sila. I-harass mo 'yung mga lakad ng mga kargamyento nila. Dapat isa-isang inspeksyon paglabas sa Subic o sa Clark, o papasok-palabas sa kanilang mga duty free shops, Tony para malaman nila na alam natin kung sino sila kahit na wala sa pangalan nila ang mga dokumento."

We are sustaining a no nonsense drive against corruption. Limang prosecutor at tatlong bureau director ay pinatalsik ko na, pati na rin ang buong board at senior management ng Public Estates Authority. Ilang huwes ay kinasuhan na rin. Iyung PIATCO airport — with due respect to bill, I saw his comments about that — ito ay nasa kamay na ng korte, pero sinisiguro ko sa inyo na ito ay bubuksan sa madaling panahon para mayroon naman kayong world-class airport na pwedeng ipagmalaki kapag kayo, mga kamag-anak ninyo at kaibigan ninyo ay magbibisita sa ating bansa. Joann represents one of the contending parties. Oo, her principals are here. So I asked, "o, Joann, what do you think of what I did with PIATCO?" she says, "just fine." so, thank you.

And we are insulating our procedures better from graft. I certified as urgent an E-Procurement Bill, and I'm glad it has... It passed the House of Representatives sometime ago and it passed the Senate last week. This Bill will reduce graft in government procurement because it will computerize the procurement and bidding procedures. And it is expected to save at best or at best performance 30 percent of government expenditures. Dahil ito ang tantya na nawawala sa katiwalian sa procurement.

So please, tell the Filipinos who are abroad and also the foreigners in your adopted country that we are doing all these, and also that the peace and order situation in the Philippines has improved. Lalo na ang kidnapping, ito ay bumaba na. Kaya ang aking utos ngayon kay Secretary Joey Lina ng Department of Interior, tukuyin mo naman ngayon ang mga drug lord at mga rascal in uniform. 'Yung nahuli nilang drug bust — kahapon ba 'yon o makalawa? — the biggest shabu bust in the history of our country. Na-trace nila 'yung pinanggalingan, 'yung precursor nasa Navotas. Nandun sila ngayon, 'yung raiding party. So, I told them, you have to sustain this and let the people know what you are doing.

The adverse global environment has provided opportunities to address our national security concerns. Nine-eleven, the subsequent war on terrorism, the looming war in Iraq have all combined to dampen the world economy. But even before 9-11, we in the Philippines had already been waging a war on terrorism. You will recall that the Abu Sayyaf was able to generate at least 20 million dollars in ransom from Sipadan in the year 2000, which strengthened their capability for terror. But with our decisive response to 9-11, we gained foreign allies in their war against terror, which enabled us to neutralize the notorious Abu Sabaya in June of this year, and to degrade Abu Sayyaf strength from thousands to a couple of hundreds. And I think you might have been seeing in the newspapers everyday now new arrests of Abu Sayyaf.

Kaya nananawagan ako na ipagpatuloy ninyo ang inyong pakikipag-isa sa gobyerno upang lalong tumibay ang ating pagkakaisa sa iisang pambansang layon: ang maiahon ang ating bansa mula sa kahirapan.

No president can build a strong republic single-handedly and certainly not overnight. And I can only begin to do this successfully if I can count on the support of the Filipinos overseas.

You, our outstanding Filipinos overseas, are leaders of the well-spring of support, the network of Filipinos all over the world, that I'm counting on.

Nagpapasalamat ako sa inyong pagmamalasakit sa ating kapwa pilipino. Ng daming nakakuha ng award dahil sa mga ginagawa n'yo sa Pilipinas. Nagpapasalamat ako sa malasakit sa kapwa pilipino at sa ating bayan. At sana ipagpatuloy natin itong magagandang gawain, ipagpatuloy natin ang ating pagbubuklod-buklod, ipagpatuloy natin ang ating pagkakaisa.

Muli, ating mga bayani, ating mga dakilang pilipino sa ibayong dagat, maraming salamat sa inyong ginagawa para sa ating bansa.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 28th Philippine Business Conference

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 28th Philippine Business Conference

[Delivered at the Manila Hotel, December 13, 2002]

These are times that try men's souls. Certainly these are times that tax a woman's patience.

I have been in office 20 months now. The daily problems I have faced are among the hardest in our country's history, and, in fact, even in the world's recent history. All the more am I convinced that if we are to confront our problems, we will need strength. The strength that comes from unity; the unity that comes from a singleness of purpose; a purpose everyone can share. I believe this purpose to be the creation of a Strong Republic.

Some have asked, what is a Strong Republic? I have answered the question partially on many occasions, but if there is one occasion where I can impose on an audience a more comprehensive if less exciting explanation, it is this audience – the grave and wise leaders of the business community.

I said in my State of the Nation Address the two essential features that mark a Strong Republic.

The first feature of a Strong Republic is independence from class and sectoral interests.

The second feature of a Strong Republic is the capacity, realized through strong institutions and a strong democracy, the capacity to execute sound policies and deliver essential public services. Hence, a Strong Republic needs strong institutions. I would like to point out four strong institutions that are needed for a Strong Republic.

One, an effective government;
Two, a vigorous free enterprise economy;
Three, a true and vigorous democratic representation; and,
Four, a vibrant civil society. Let me explain a little about each one of them.

By effective government, I mean national security. I mean, securing the persons and properties of each citizens. I mean, upholding the law without fear or favor. I mean, enforcing valid contracts and annulling invalid agreements prejudicial to the public interest. I mean, providing public infrastructure because that is what people pay taxes for. A Strong Republic must go further to dismantle the structures that protect abuse and perpetuate weakness.

The second institution of a Strong Republic is a vigorous free enterprise economy. By this, I mean that to ensure the vigorous and free play of market forces, government must remove monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade and credit. Government must ensure not just a level playing field, but a measure of equality in the bargaining power of the players. No matter how flat the field, the game is not fair where those who own the ball can order the referee around or change the score at will.

A Strong Republic regards its citizens as assets. It commits itself to provide the basic necessities for as many as it can – women, minorities, the old, the young – each a component of the total national strength.

If business is the engine of the economy, a Strong Republic cannot leave its workings entirely to the free market. The problem with the market's invisible hand is that it writes in invisible ink so that you never know where it is going until long after the chapter is finished. Then it's too late to do anything about it.

A Strong Republic does not dictate to the market, but plans the direction of the economy where, the economy should go. Ideally this should be from strength to strength and not from weakness to weakness.

Left to itself, the free market will dictate the devastation of our rivers and forests, the total exhaustion of our mineral wealth, and the blighting of our urban landscapes for instant gain. A Strong Republic will ensure the sustainable use of this. For the long term gain of future generations. I mean, maintaining an ecological balance to ensure for us and our posterity a sustainable environment.

By true and vigorous democratic representation, the third institution of a Strong Republic, I mean that a republic grows strong with more democracy. The more empowered people are, the less political bosses dictate the outcome of the political process so much stronger does a republic grow.

In a Strong Republic, every vote is counted, and no vote is counted that is fake. Just as bad money drives out good, fake ballots drive out true democracy.

Elected officials must be more representative of the people in general than of friends and patrons in particular.

We must find the way to end the adversarial relation between congress and the president, and unleash the energy and creativity of local governments and local communities.

Let me therefore take this opportunity to congratulate our two vigorous local governments – Muntinlupa and Naga City – for their award of being business friendly.

For the fourth institution of a Strong Republic, that of a vibrant civil society, I mean that as we have seen the power of civil society effect rapid political change, we need the power of civil society which includes you, the chamber, to apply more subtle social changes in such areas as women's rights, family support, a more productive synergy between church and state, and the preservation of the nation's cultural values. That's why I thank you for the memorandum of agreement that you signed this morning to put together the benefits of business and requirements of our indigenous populations. I thank you because in the first instance, when you implement this, you would immediately create 5,000 new jobs. Thank you for that. And because you are doing this for our indigenous peoples, you are fulfilling a function of civil society of preserving our cultural values. Because no one can preserve our cultural values better than those directly in touch with it in civil society.

A Strong Republic needs to take strong action where needed. And I know this is what you've been waiting for in this speech.

During the past 20 months, my goal of growth with price stability was realized, despite the various shocks that intervened during the period. I thank Dante Canlas for his contribution to this remarkable macro economic performance. But as I can see from your Congress resolutions, we need to shift from the dominantly macro economic and demand side focus to micro economic and supply side productivity enhancing measures. So I have asked congressional budget planning head and Professor Romulo Neri to be the new Secretary of Economic Planning.

Going now to the micro economic supply side measures that you proposed as the action agenda on graft and corruption and in response to your offer to help ensure greater transparency in government transactions, I'm hereby creating a presidential oversight system for government procurement with powers to review on a proactive basis, any suspected favoritism, overpricing, and unethical practice in the transactions of government agencies.

If you will agree because Jess Estanislao has done work on effective governance, and you even made him the chair of your committee to choose the effective governments, may I ask Jess Estanislao to head this oversight committee. It will be part of your work Jess in effective governance. So therefore, it doesn't make you part of my government. It still makes you part of civil society looking over our shoulders.

I look forward to constructive inputs, suggestions, complaints, and other important information from the PCCI, the civil society, and the consumer groups, who will be our partners in this endeavor.

On other matters, on micro economic and supply side measures, I am asking congress to speed up the bill to corporatize the Bureau of Internal Revenue as the National Revenue Authority.

To further protect intellectual property rights, I have provided more resources, especially intelligence to the Videogram Regulatory Board, which is why they have been able to confiscate millions of counterfeit products, unprecedented quantities, and they have even been able to close down the factories producing these counterfeits and prosecute the persons arrested in the factories.

My administration is bent on curbing smuggling.

A few days ago, to help Tony Bernardo do his work, I created a new anti-smuggling intelligence and investigation center headed by former Police General Miguel Coronel.

What the EIID used to do, this center will be able to do. In our fight against drugs, may I give you late breaking news. Late last night, at 12:00 midnight, the NBI with elements of the PNP and the Drug Enforcement Agency, raided a warehouse in Navotas and seized precursors capable of producing P1 billion worth of shabu. This operation traced this warehouse as the source of raw materials transported to the shabu laboratory which was discovered last week in Lawang Bato in Valenzuela City. In that discovery, the police found P2.2 billion worth of shabu. The biggest operation so far is this combination of the Lawang Bato factory and its warehouse in Navotas. This is a fruit of the government's relentless anti-drug campaign which followed a series of spectacular drug seizures in Real, Quezon Province; San Narciso, Zambales; Pasay City; Varsity Hills, Quezon City; Paranaque; San Juan; and other places. Now if only we can make sure that corrupt judges do not turnaround the work of any of these law enforcers, as some of them have done in some of these cases. That's why we will take closer attention to strengthening our justice system. At the same time, I urged our businessmen to stop using the judiciary as an extension of your competitive activities by not bringing what were the essentially business rivalry into the level of court disputes. We should encourage, instead, the use of business mediation processes.

On infrastructure, we shall accelerate the completion of the South Luzon Expressway to Batangas City, especially the gap between Calamba and Sto. Tomas, and the gap between Lipa and Batangas City.

I have asked Governor Dodong Mandanas who is in his third term as governor, to be the task force manager of this expressway from Manila to Batangas City.

Two days ago, we approved the equity funding needed to commence the long overdue improvement of the North Expressway. Last Tuesday, NEDA approved the Clark-Subic expressway project. I intend to make the Clark-Subic Corridor a magnet and showcase for investments and tourism by declaring the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport as the airline hub for the Asia-Pacific Region.

We need to unleash the goodwill of donor countries and institutions that have long accumulated in unused and untapped official development assistance funds. We have tens of billions of pesos in grants and concessional credit choked up within our democratic apparatus.

The National Economic Development Authority and other agencies must now declog the bottleneck and streamline procedures on ODA and BOT projects. That's part of the assignment of Romy Neri. We have to mobilize the resources meant to construct an array of infrastructure projects so vital to our development process, including the Mindanao to Luzon roll on, roll off cargo ferry system, the modernization of a railway systems and extension of our urban mass transit lines and the reform of the power sector.

My administration is now more resolute in its commitment to strictly enforce policies meant to restore our ecological balance.

Our natural gas program has already taken off to exploit the opportunities with the opening of our Malampaya natural gas plant. Pilot projects to commission public transportation vehicles powered by compressed natural gas are underway because you asked me to stop smoke belching. This is the answer to that.

I'm now instructing the new secretary of environment to review the mandate of the Laguna Lake Development Authority so we will be able to reconcile conflicts between law enforcement and regulatory functions.

The special asset management bill to help the big banks get rid of their non-performing loans is nearing approval by the bicameral conference committee.

And because you've been asking for labor laws, I recently signed Republic Act 9178. This exempts enterprises who have assets of less than P3 million from paying the minimum wage law.

There will be other occasions where I can go into more detail, about the action agenda that you want, to improve productivity. For now, let me say only that the Strong Republic I speak of is not just a vague notion. It is a clear set of reforms and a hard plan of action.

And as you, the participants in this conference have offered to me, I accept your offer, of your time, and your sincere efforts to work closely with me to carry through our action agenda for productivity, competitiveness, a Strong Republic, and a better life for our people in the future.

Thank you and good afternoon.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 106th anniversary of the martyrdom of Dr. Jose Rizal, December 30, 2002

SPEECH DURING THE 106TH ANNIVERSARY
OF THE MARTYRDOM OF DR. JOSE RIZAL
30 December 2002, Rizal Park, Baguio City

Ladies and gentlemen, my beloved countrymen.

Today, we are honoring Rizal. Our national hero is the most gifted Filipino who ever lived, truly the pride of the Malayan race.

A century ago, he made the ultimate sacrifice for the Filipino people, giving up his life at Luneta field. Jose Rizal's martyrdom led to the creation of the Philippine Republic in 1898.

In the hundred years that have passed since Jose Rizal was martyred, the world has undergone rapid change.

Throughout the world, it is now clear the transparent, open and democratic societies give to the fullest opportunities for individual merit and effort to bloom.

These societies have created a culture that allow their citizens to use the advances that technology and Information Age have brought in order to create a better life for both individuals and collective society. In these societies, the result has been the development of mature politics, strong government institutions, and the generation of the material benefits undreamed of during Jose Rizal's time. These are the main elements of a strong and modern society, the Strong Republic that I dream of for the Philippines. We're still far away from that dream but it is within our reach.

Indeed, it's ironic, that ours is the first Republic in Asia. But over the last decades, it has become one of the weakest, steadily left behind by its more progressive neighbors. The fundamental reason is the persistence of an outdated social system wherein vested interests and traditional politics have stunted development towards a strong and modern society. Thus, our country is now only a bit better but the category of backward countries wherein powerful, selfish interests are able to exploit poverty and ignorance to maintain the status quo or impede open progressive development.

Throughout the world, we see sad examples for these countries and, invariably, they are in economic decline, becoming breeding grounds for strife, conflict and even terrorism, but I am optimistic that this will not become our national fate.

I believe this because I see around me the emergence of a new generation of dynamic and progressive leaders, whether in politics, in business or in civil society. They will be our agents of change.

Thus, I believe that we can create a strong and modern Philippine Republic but it will take personal sacrifice from each one of us.

As we honor Jose Rizal today, it is fitting that I ask each Filipino to make also sacrifice for our country. Our country needs our help.

In recent years, our fundamental weaknesses have been revealed in ways that are worrisome to broad sectors of our citizenry.

In the economy, even since the Asian crisis in the 1997, our public revenues have been steadily declining in relation to the size of our economy. This has led to persistent budget deficit.

In society, we have become a nation deeply divided, symbolized by the polarity between EDSA II and the May 1 siege barely three months after EDSA II.

And in governance, there is now too much politics hampering good, productive governance.

The convergence of the national stresses such as these has led to the sense of gloom that many of our citizens now talk of. There is a feeling of too much negativism and conflict in our society.

In the coming weeks, we will be launching a series of powerful, positive actions that will improve the life of our people.

Major announcements will be made in January.

However, we also know that we will soon enter the political period leading up to the elections in 2004. My reading on the political winds tells me that the 2004 election may well go down in history as among our most bitterly contested elections ever. This is because of the deep social and political division that we now have.

If this is true, then sincere efforts to launch programs will run the risk of being derailed by political fighting leading up to the elections.

The government in place after 2004 may merely end up inheriting a country as deeply divided as ever. Consequently, we may end up stalling national growth for a few years more as a result of lost momentum.

In view of all these factors, I have decided not to run for President during the election of 2004.

If I were to run, it will require a major political effort on my part. But since I'm among the principal figures in the divisive national events for the last two or three years, my political efforts can only result in never-ending divisiveness.

On the other hand, relieved of the burden of politics, I can devote the last year and half of my administration to the following:

First, strengthening economy; to create more jobs and to encourage business activities that is unhampered by corruption and red tape in government.

Second, healing the deep divisions within our society.

Third, working for clean and honest elections in 2004.

If we achieve these, my successor as President will be in a good position to lead the Philippines through the next decisive steps for the strong and modern society. United, we can see this dream come true within our lifetime.

Thus, I appeal to each Filipino to help in this endeavor. Following the example of Jose Rizal, let us think of country and not just of self.

Thank you and Happy New Year.

cooperation

Vin D’ honneur Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On meeting the challenges of change through unity and cooperation

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, January 9, 2003]

MEETING THE CHALLENGES OF CHANGE THROUGH UNITY AND COOPERATION

Let me be direct and to the point.

I have faith in our country. I have hope for the future. I am optimistic the Philippines will yet emerge as a prosperous, modern nation within our lifetimes.

We have the hardest working people in the world, the most adaptable and the most congenial to employ.

Our country is strategically located for commerce.

Ours is a vibrant democracy, with a few changes, it will be well up to the challenges of the 21st century.

As you know, I have decided not to seek the Presidency in 2004. This decision wasn’t easy, but it was the right one. Now, no one needs to envy me except for the greatest privilege of all – to serve our country to the utmost of my energy and ability without worrying about the political fallout. And indeed, I want an end to envy and a start of cooperation.

I believe that the things that need to be done for this country – and the world at large – require the power of cooperation. This is the only power that can change a nation and the world.

There is a power that commands fear. This kind of power only invites constant challenge. And then, there is the greater power that invites respect, this is the power that convinces and grows with the cooperation it inspires, by spreading the circle of its benefits. This is the power I seek.

Sometimes, you have to give so as to keep. The “Good Book” says that in giving, we receive. That is certainly my hope.

By giving, I hope to gain the power that can make life better for those who never had it good, and even for those who never had it so good. I want the rising tide that lifts all boats, whether they’re yachts or “bangkang papel.”

I want the Filipino worker to be the most productive possible, to be paid commensurately.

I want the ordinary people to enjoy a decent standard of living – with ever increasing security, comfort and joy.

I want the rich to profit from real and productive investments, not from clever schemes that subtract rather than add to the national wealth.

I want justice to be so pervasive that it will not be taken for granted, just as injustice is taken for granted today.

I want intelligent laws that conduce to peace, progress and prosperity.

All these things I want are things that make up a strong republic.

In a world without borders, we need a strong state to protect our vital interests. The world is not getting smaller, it is getting tighter, and the competition more keen.

National security cannot be attained nor economic progress achieved, without a strong republic. The last decades have shown that the free market is not so much a sure-fire formula for progress, but rather the condition in which all progress must be achieved. It will be a struggle.

By stepping off the political stage in 2004, I take, a step higher in the office I still keep and thereby command a wider allegiance to the policies and projects needed to improve our country.

It will profit me nothing if I succeed, but my successor will inherit a better positioned country, a country better positioned to complete its rebuilding.

I sow, my successor reaps. This is the majesty of democracy. At the time one is given, the steward must make the most of the talents one is given by the Lord.

During the first 20 months as president, I made many good reform-oriented decisions for the people. As a consequence, I made many powerful enemies for myself.

I gave all the Internal Revenue Allotment or IRA to the local government units without regard to their political affiliations. I deprived myself of the billions of patronage funds that used to come from withholding a percentage of the IRA, yet I was accused of ambition.

I pursued land reform, most extensively in Negros Occidental, including the land of my husband's family, and we were accused of greed.

I moved to cancel the PIATCO contract to spare future generations from its onerous conditions, and I was accused of shortsightedness.

I moved to abolish the Public Estates Authority and fired all its key officials, and I was accused of indecision.

I vowed to carry out whatever will be the final Supreme Court ruling on the MERALCO case, while ensuring the financial viability of the corporation, and I got it from every direction.

I provided land for an unprecedented number of urban poor families, even if I was accused of insincerity.

I can say that we made substantial progress since I assumed the presidency. Inflation is under control, exports are up, we are making deep inroads against crime and stemming the tide of corruption in government.

We have established ourselves as major players in the region, successfully integrating trade policy with development.

We have turned around our image abroad, and stepped up our obligations as global citizens to combat terrorism.

We have stabilized our macroeconomic condition. Now, some may ask, “What can I accomplish in a year-and-a-half left?”

The power of one if fearless and focused, is formidable, but the power of many working together is better.

That is why, I stepped away from the destructive politics that has prevented us, prevented the unity indispensable to the salvation of the state.

But, together with you, the nation’s leaders, across the broad political and economic spectrum, and together with our friends from all over the world, the tasks I have set in the short time left will build on the work accomplished in the equally short time that has passed. The measure of an administration’s success is not its length but its achievements.

I hope to oversee the further strengthening of the economy, the creation of more jobs, the encouragement of more business activity unhampered by corruption and red tape, supported when needed by fiscal and trade policy to promote industrial development.

I shall work to heal the deep divisions in our country, and hope to make major progress in the solution to the Communist insurgency, and in the final integration of the Muslim component of our society.

And I expect to see the cleanest and most orderly elections at the end of my term. During that election period, the time I would have wasted on political debate if I were a candidate, will instead be spent on continuing our programs of reforms and recovery up to the last minute of my presidency.

A true leader of this country cannot afford to play politics anymore and ignore the spreading and paralyzing climate of cynicism.

This nation has been rent by political divisions, self-interests and unfulfilled potential. We take one bold step forward, only to find ourselves two steps back. I could go on with politics as usual, or I could arrest the downward spiral of division and despair.

I don’t believe that anyone wants one’s country to fail. I think many are just unaware, but someone was needed to tell it like it is; someone who could make the right decisions without threatening anyone’s political ambition. Someone had to break the ice. Someone had to make the sacrifice.

A new national dialogue on change and reform was critical, but how do you turn divisiveness into dialogue. I declared the unimaginable: I announced I would not run for the presidency in 2004.

This nation is at a crossroad: quite simply, it must reform or perish.

We must shake loose the grip of the status quo and set our country free and on the road of true prosperity.

But let me be clear: I don’t want the unity of blind submission. I want the unity of conscious cooperation. I expect a vigorous debate, but it must be a debate on alternative ways of change.

There can be no falling back. Only the vested interests have something to fall back on, though not for long. Either this country moves forward or dies.

In the vision that guides my administration, I see a country liberated from the grip and greed of past. I see this happening through a revolution in the way we think, and in the way we do politics and economics.

At the center of this revolution must be a commitment to reforms and to putting the people first. In the debates, no topic shall be sacred, no idea or ideology beyond question. We must keep trying something better and new.

I shall do everything in my power to succeed – and trust me, that liberated power is considerable. Relieved of the burden of political ambition, this office has the power to make and unmake.

Today, I am sharing with you that vision that guides my administration. Starting tomorrow and in the weeks to come, I will take the challenge of development to the people and ask for their support – not for the presidency in 2004, but for my initiatives. Starting tomorrow and the weeks to come, I will present to the people the series of programs that I believe need to be embraced, if this nation is to succeed. I will not let an election year impede reforms, stop progress or take this nation back one step.

I may not be running for president, but that will not diminish my efforts one bit.

So, I ask everyone to work with me to insure that we can revolutionize our nation through reforms, honest dialogues and lasting change.

On that note, may I propose a toast to unity and cooperation – within this country and among all nations of the world – as the way to peace, progress and justice. Mabuhay!

Speech of President Arroyo at the Philippine Stock Exchange

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the Philippine Stock Exchange

[Delivered at Ayala Tower 1, Makati City, January 10, 2003]

STRENGTHENING VITAL STRUCTURES IN NATION-BUILDING

As I said yesterday, we did plenty in the past 20 months. And as I vowed yesterday, we will do plenty more in the next 18 months. And as I assured everyone, a president willing to give up her post can be more powerful than a president who wants to hang on to it at any price.

We've made significant progress, if not so much in going forward, certainly, in gathering the strength to do so when the worldwide recession ends. One thing, however, remains unsatisfactory: there are still too many poor, too many jobless, too many homeless people around.

The challenge is not just to reach out to the poor. Every administration does that.

The challenge is to actually alleviate their miserable conditions. And do it in the shortest time possible because, in the long term, as a famous economist said, "We are all dead."

If the poor do not have the strength to hold out and help out, no long-term solution will succeed. You cannot postpone eating, drinking safely, learning useful things and having gainful work. Only those who exploit the weak bargaining position of the poor believe the poor can wait.

But, having resolved to do our best to alleviate present miseries, we should not limit ourselves to temporary solutions. We do need deep and far-reaching reforms that will lead to stronger political and social stability, and to sustained economic recovery. But none of these reforms should ever entail keeping down the poor, or making them suffer some more.

By 2004, I want to see a revitalized economy that adequately serves the needs of our people, creates even more jobs, and raises our people's income levels and pushes poverty to the margins.

Our focus must be on pro-active microeconomic and structural reforms. We cannot rev up the old engines of industry. Global trends have already dismantled many of them. But we can entice new investments in new technologies, by seriously reducing the risk and the bother of doing business in the Philippines.

I will reduce to the bare minimum the national government requirements for doing business. Officials – be they local or national – are the last people who should second-guess a business activity. At most, they should monitor businesses for the harm they might do the community. But that is all. Let a thousand, a million, ten million enterprises, small and big, bloom. Let the market separate the good from the bad.

Filipino business, has great potential. We don't need to tap it. We just need to let it be. What we need is just to create the conditions for its flourishing.

Thus, we need to fast-track the implementation of various infrastructure projects that will be vital arteries of commerce. I have built the Batangas Port after a decade of red tape. That Batangas Port was first conceptualized and planned when I was Undersecretary of Trade for Planning. Then I became senator two times. I became vice-president. I became president, only to find out that the port hadn't been built. So last January 16, 2002, it was built. We inaugurated it. And it's now in operation. I will soon open NAIA 3 under fair conditions to the public. And I will soon complete the San Roque Dam in Pangasinan.

Thanks to investment support and official development assistance from South Korea, China and Italy, the rehabilitation and expansion of the country's railway system will soon commence. Work on the Luzon Railway has actually started likewise the ongoing relocation of urban poor communities along the right of way of the PNR. Within the year, we will build the Balintawak-Malolos and the Manila-Cabuyao legs. We will expand the North Expressway and extend the South Expressway up to Batangas Port.

The MRT and the LRT will soon begin their interconnection so that my successor's administration will enjoy a Metro Manila relieved of the traffic jams that we are suffering today.

The Development Bank of the Philippines has 20 billion pesos to lend to creditworthy businessmen and even local governments or government corporations, who will invest in the roads and roll-on/roll-off (RORO) terminals and ferries that will bring down the cost of cargo from Mindanao to Luzon. To illustrate this project, next month, I invite you — the stockbrokers — to a caravan in the Boracay to Batangas leg. It will be in an 8-hour trip in your cars.

I will soon unveil a masterplan for the power sector that will cure the brownouts we are now beginning to experience in Panay and prevent the brownouts that threaten to darken our country by the year 2005.

The Special Purpose Vehicles Act or SPVA and the Government Procurement Law that I signed today are but two elements of the set of policy actions designed to widen the opportunities for business in the country, and to shore up good governance.

The SPVA seeks to save the banking sector from the financial fallout of lending decisions that went sour after the Asian crisis. The banks have been groaning under more than 300 billion pesos of bad loans and more than 200 billion pesos of repossessed assets.

The SPV Law takes away this burden — for a price, of course. But it allows banks to charge their losses against their taxes.

The SPVA should bring in new money to revive bad loans, find new uses for foreclosed assets, rehabilitate failed businesses, and open wide the lending windows again.

Republic Act No. 9184 or the Government Procurement Reform Act conforms to our three pillars of good governance, namely: a moral foundation to guide leadership at all levels; a philosophy of transparency in government actions; and an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

R.A. 9184 will help government procurement officers stick to the straight and narrow path. It will fight graft and corruption, improve operational efficiency, foster transparency in bidding procedures, and encourage competition. As a bonus, the money that can be saved by making procurement more effective, efficient and less prone to corrupt practices will reduce the budget deficit.

I commend both Houses of Congress and Senate for their careful crafting and passage of these measures, and call on them again to fast-track other key reforms vital to our economic success.

To enable business to cash in on future income flows so that business can use investment funds twice over requires the approval of the Securitization Act. The House has passed it. And I call on the Senate to give its approval.

But to revitalize the securities market also requires unity in the stock exchange. And I congratulate Vivian Yuchengco and Robert Coyoito for agreeing to sacrifice, by withdrawing their candidacies to remove the poison in the stock market, the way that I renounced my candidacy for president to remove the poison from the body politic.

The stock market should also receive a boost from our new policy to revive the mining industry, where the Philippines holds one of the richest ore reserves in the whole world. To realize its potential, I will create a natural resources mining development corporation that will develop our many dormant but high-potential mining areas which we can list in the Philippine Stock Exchange.

In the fiscal sector, we need to enact several important bills that will help return our fiscal balance.

The TRANSCO franchise will facilitate the sale of the National Power Corporation's transmission assets for the best possible price so as to bring in reputable investors to rehabilitate and expand our power grids.

The indexing of sin taxes to inflation should raise 40 billion pesos yearly in additional revenues, without introducing new taxes. But I also ask Congress to rationalize motor vehicle taxes and mandate the registration of heavy construction equipment.

Corporatizing the BIR into a national revenue authority will bring in fresh talent, and infuse the almost century-old agency with energy. And so I ask Congress to enact the National Revenue Authority Bill.

Of course, I would also like to ask the Senate to please pass soonest the General Appropriations Act.

We must build institutions that foster productivity and resolve distortions that hinder productivity growth such as wage rigidities in micro-enterprises. Thus, I recently signed Republic Act 9178 exempting enterprises with assets of less than 3 million pesos from the Minimum Wage Law.

Another rigidity or source of unproductivity is the rigidity of land transfers under the present Agrarian Reform Program. Modern finance and modern agricultural technology favor large land holdings and are often at odds with the demands of social justice on the land under the present shape of our land reform law. But we cannot give up on either modernization for social justice. Therefore, on my certification as urgent, the House of Representatives has passed a bill to stimulate private investment in agriculture by permitting agricultural land to be used as collateral. And I understand the Senate has prioritized its counterpart bill. What SPVA is for the big bankers, farm land as collateral is for the small farmers.

On the part of the executive, we are committed to increasing the productivity and incomes of our farmers through the adoption of hybrid rice technologies and expansion of small water impounding irrigation projects.

Another source of unproductivity is dead assets in land. So we will continue with the unprecedented pace of proclamations giving informal settlers of urban land the right to buy the land that they occupy and use it as collateral for raising their own small capital.

Another source of unproductivity is unfair trade. And so I am adopting tariff policy signals to encourage the manufacturing sector and signal industrial policy. The Philippines is ahead of WTO requirements. Our tariff policies were created a decade ago in the heyday of globalization. Unbridled globalization is no longer in vogue. The 1997 Asian crisis and 9-11 have since hit us. After 1997, our tax collections are short. So I'm instructing NEDA, DTI, the Tariff Commission not to be married to the idea that our tariff program can no longer be revised. I am adopting the policy to slow the program pace only to the AFTA and WTO minimums, and to take full advantage of all exemption windows allowed, such as for the petrochemical industry.

To encourage business, we must fight dishonesty in the private sector and in the public service.

Trust is the heart of business. A vibrant financial system cannot function without it. Yet, there can be no trust where businessmen are not afraid to break contracts because they can buy judges. And where public officials are not afraid to extort from businessmen because they are the law.

Thus, I ask Congress to reform the pay scale of judges and encourage mediation as an alternative to costly time-consuming and rent-seeking court litigation.

The only way to foster trust is to punish its betrayal in the private sector and in the public sphere.

Government will wage an unrelenting war against business frauds on the general public, and against official extortion of business. If anyone in my government tries it, tell me.

I am instructing the Budget Secretary to double the budget of the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission to further empower it to make lifestyle checks and file the appropriate cases.

I'm instructing the Commissioner of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Commissioner of Customs to crack down on big time tax evaders and smugglers. The Commission on Internal Revenue through computer analysis has identified quite a number of big time tax evaders especially in the value added tax and has identified a number of cases pending in the courts. And this will be moving.

These reforms require broad-based cooperation. On the part of the Executive Branch, I shall make the members of the Cabinet realize the urgency for policy coherence and coordination for the need for them to step down.

I thank Congress, which has given me key pieces of legislation I have sought. Though I must say our investors and creditors are not yet satisfied with the harvest.

I appreciate the work of careful crafting done by Congress so that unintended consequences are avoided or minimized. But there is a point where too much care is worse than too much recklessness. Our economy needs the TRANSCO Bill, the Securitization Act, and the other key pieces of economic legislation soonest.

I shall invite to a meeting on January 14 the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) and the chairs of the committees that will deliberate on my key prescriptions for renewal and reform.

What we will not talk about is Charter change. Because I don't want the people to misunderstand the reason for my decision not to run in 2004.

The focus of the discussion must therefore be, exclusively, the economy.

One of the means proposed for healing the deep divisions within our society is a government of national unity. This is a good idea, provided that the basis of unity is my National Agenda. Because no so-called team can supply the energy and focus of a singular executive, where everyone is picked by the president and serves solely at her pleasure.

To each his appointed task, therefore, I ask Congress to give me the good laws, and I will give you firm and efficient implementation.

To avoid the wrong impression of an ongoing civil conflict that has reached a stalemate, I would like to substitute for the term "government of national unity" instead the term "government of national cooperation". Cooperation on the essential things we cannot quarrel about — on the need for reform and good governance, on the components of national survival in these perilous times, and on the elements of national progress in a worldwide recession.

To the business community represented here, gathered here to witness the approval of two substantial reforms to get business going and go back to business as usual, this brief message. “We in government are doing our part. We are taking the risks. We are making the sacrifices. We are doing everything to get this country going forward.”

I now ask you to make your sacrifice. Take a gamble. I took the plunge and I’m glad of it. I’m at the head of the country, seeing clearly the way ahead. Stay with me, I have no motive to lead you or the people astray. Join me. The trip will be short but I think rewarding for all of us who love our country.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Lakas-NUCD-UMDP National Directorate Meeting, January 20, 2003

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Lakas-NUCD-UMDP National Directorate Meeting

[Delivered at Heroes Hall, Malacañang, January 20, 2003]

Thank you very much, Joey, the head of our National Secretariat.

Vice-President Tito Guingona; Speaker De Venecia, our very inspiring opening speaker today, our co-chairman of the party; Nani Perez, the Secretary General; Sonny Belmonte, EVP and also acting Chairman of Metro Manila; Sonny Alvarez, Spokesperson together with Serge Apostol; other LAKAS National Directorate Officers; ladies and gentlemen; my beloved partymates.

I'm happy to have you here tonight. As Joe says, this is our first meeting of the directorate since I became president. Usually, in traditional politics, the national directorate meets only when its time to choose the national candidates, but i think as we move towards new politics, it is more important that the national directorate, made up of the chapter chairmen, should meet more often.

And indeed, among the first people that I chose to speak with, after my announcement last Rizal day, were some of you who are here, my friends and allies in the administration party, the LAKAS Christian-Muslim democrats. I know that as politicians many of you would not find it easy to understand my decision not to run for president in 2004. And I know that it is you my partymates from whom I must seek the highest quality of understanding and support.

The political atmosphere had become so toxic with jealousy and intrigue, and even continuous destabilization. I had to make a signal act of political self-denial and renunciation in order to allow our agenda of reform and progress to proceed.

I said that I will devote the remainder of my term to: first, strengthening the economy by creating jobs and encouraging investments in an atmosphere free of the corruption that drives business away; second, healing the deep divisions in our society; and third, ensuring clean and honest elections in 2004.

All these do not constitute an easy task. But with the grace of God, I'm determined to use the full authority of my presidency and the last bead of sweat on my brow to make this vision happen. Not for selfish agenda because I am not now a candidate for president but to get our country out of the sense of helplessness and on the road to recovery and progress.

My partymates, I ask you, support me in this vision. The stakes are high for 80 million Filipinos who look up to our administration for deliverance from conditions of inequity, deprivation and poverty. You, the provincial district and city chairmen are the backbone of the biggest and most powerful political party today. As incumbent officials or chapter chairmen of the party, you wield considerable political ascendancy in your respective provinces, districts and cities as well as in Congress.

My partymates in Congress, I ask you to pass the measures that make up the structural reforms of our administration. I ask you, for instance, to pass strengthening the anti-money laundering measures. And i thank you members of congress for passing the bill making land reform serve our farmers better by allowing them to use farmlands as bank collateral. Now I ask you to strengthen the revenue measures on sin products and automobiles to finance the gigantic development requirements. I ask you, too to pass the reform of the BIR into a lean and mean corruption fighting corporate machine. I thank Congress for passing the Transco Franchise Bill which will when pass by the Senate mobilize private capital into our power sector so as to avoid massive brownouts by the year 2007. I ask you in bicameral conference committee to pass the Absentee Voting Bill. I certainly thank the House of Representatives for the early passage of some of these bills and they are now pending, some of them are now pending in the senate.

On the part of the local governments, I ask you to support our microeconomic programs to increase productivity and build up domestic demand. These programs include the massive promotion of small and medium enterprises which are the most efficient users of capital; the accelerated jumpstart of housing which has the biggest multiplier effect on an economy; reducing transport costs from Mindanao through the Visayas to Luzon by building a nautical highway made up of roll-on/roll-off ferry terminals, the boats, the silos, and the roads that connect them; decongestion of metro manila and promotion of premier tourist destinations.

When we do all these, you will help me make LAKAS a powerful parallel structure to ensure the success of these initiatives. Help me reach out to the people; help me communicate to them the urgency of these programs; help me enlist the support of local officials and barangays under your influence so that our programs can take root and bear fruit in all our communities.

To do this, I must ask you to set aside politicking for the time being.

I ask you this even as I assure you that I know only too well your anxieties about 2004. I know that most if not all of you are direct stakeholders in the elections to be held next year.

And I know that there are those who wish that LAKAS will undergo a meltdown after I declared I would not seek election as president. I know there are those who wish that a rift will grow among us over the means for Charter Change.

I am not about to surrender to such wishful thinking of our enemies. And I ask, you do not surrender to them as well.

Because, I will still be your president. More than ever your strong president until June 30, 12 noon of 2004.

And as a non-candidate for president, I don't have to be afraid of vested interests, whether they are political vested interests or otherwise. Therefore, I can exercise my authority fully until the last minute of my tenure, and O intend to do so.

I'm not asking you to engage in political abnegation as I did, but I ask you to engage in the politics of performance. The politics of performance in support of my reform program, our administration's reform program. Then I will help those who help me leave a good legacy of change for our country. I will help those who make governance work well for the good of our people. And I'm sure the people will be just as discerning. They, too will take care of you.

As your party chairman, I ask you— stay with me and stay together. In the past, I wasn't exacting or demanding of your demeanor as LAKAS members. But now, I ask for one common response: loyalty to our party. Because as Sim Datumanong said in his prayer, loyalty to our party at this crucial time in our history is synonymous to loyalty to the needs and aspirations of our country.

That sense of loyalty dictates upon each one of us to exercise organizational discipline and cohesion. While I am a non-candidate president, I will not prejudice our right and our need to have a winning standard bearer in 2004.

There is no shortage of materials for the presidency. Even among us tonight, or even those not among us tonight because they are not party chapter chairmen, and that's why they're not ask to come tonight. There are many whose brilliance and track record of service to our people make them deserving of the party's attention and excitement.

To all these stars, be they already rising or still about to rise to national leadership. To them, I say, I have said to them already in a previous meeting, let a thousand flowers bloom. Let all those who seek our support for national leadership make themselves known to us. And together in a democratic way and with divine guidance, let us together choose our standard bearers at the appropriate time, perhaps at the end of this year.

We must choose as one, move as one, and win as one. Huwag tayong magka-kanya-kanya. Huwag nating pangunahan ang kapakanan ng partido at kabutihan ng bansa para lang sa sarili.

I ask you to have faith in our party, to have faith in our party's leadership, to have faith in the process by which we will not only ensure victory in 2004, but assure the nation of a new presidency capable and determined to pursue the reforms needed by our people.

But for now, let the sincerity of our plans and intentions of our people be our politics. Let us, with renewed unity and hope, dedicate our energies to the deliverance of our people out of the abyss of poverty and lethargy into the sunlight of prosperity. In the end, this is our surest road to victory, for our candidates and for our country.

Mabuhay ang lakas!

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 2nd Anniversary of the EDSA II Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 2nd Anniversary of EDSA II

[Delivered at the EDSA Shrine, Ortigas Center, Mandaluyong City, January 20, 2003]

SAFEGUARDING THE LEGACY OF FREEDOM

Isang makabuluhang Anniversary ng EDSA Dos sa ating lahat.

Two years ago, I stood here at EDSA to assume the presidency. It was here that I had to pick up what had been thrown away by a reckless disregard of law and morals.

I took office focused on the causes of a radical political transition that cannot be good for a constitutional democracy to undergo repeatedly.

I took office to fight poverty. I had to be the champion of the poor in real life. I took office to raise those moral standards that allowed the unthinkable to happen in a serious government. And I could do this by the only credible method of government in a negative and cynical time. I had to govern by example even to the extreme of making an example of myself.

Last December 30, I announced a decision that I was after all prepared to make a long time ago. I gave up the advantage of the incumbent and announced that I would not seek the presidency in 2004.

I had to compromise on one thing because I could not compromise at all on the rest. I had to forego the chance of a full six-year term of my own, in order to realize as many of my goals, and as much of my vision for our country in the time remaining to me.

I gave up my ambition to stay in this office beyond the time that destiny gave me in this place so I would be unburdened of the need to play politics.

I realized that fighting poverty meant improving the economy through sweeping structural reforms. Not just the kind dictated from abroad but the harder kind that we must fashion and adapt to our special situation.

I realized that effective reform boiled down to fighting entrenched vested interests; interests that have stood in the way of national progress and prosperity; interests that continue to block the way to a better standard of living for the vast majority rather than just the same small elite.

This situation is unsustainable.

This way of doing things and not doing anything about them cannot go on. As I said, reform or perish.

Free of the burden of having to play politics, I'm liberated to champion the cause of the people and promote with greater energy and resolution the reforms that lift the old barriers to progress.

The microeconomic structural reforms that I have been rolling out since September last year pursue my core belief of fighting poverty.

My December 30 speech lives up to my core belief in a new politics of leadership by example.

Today, we launch an anti-corruption campaign to raise the moral standards in politics and the economy.

I came to the presidency in this place, in the midst of a national outcry against corruption.

I came to the presidency because of EDSA II. Many asked, what was EDSA II? And I can tell them, it was the most powerful answer of the weak to the corruption of the powerful.

To be faithful to the spirit of EDSA II requires a continuing commitment to the fight that was started here. And it's all part and parcel of our war against poverty because corruption is the worst enemy of progress and social justice. And because it robs the state of the resources to prosecute the war against poverty.

The imperatives of the strategy call for another front to be opened in the war against poverty. This front is the fight against corruption. From this fight, there can be no exceptions whether made out of fear or favor, or because of family and business connections.

We must fight the enemy wherever he is found even in our lives, in our work, and our business.

The enemy has many faces. He is the corrupt official extracting money from a favored contractor or supplier. He is a contractor or supplier who comes and bribes a public official. He is the corrupt official who siphons off the taxes and duties due to the government. And he is found in all the three branches of government. He is the citizen who connives with the corrupt official, he is the tax evader who fools the government, as much as the businessman who fools the public and cheats his workers.

For this battle I have drawn a strategy. To this strategy, I will commit the resources to achieve victory.

Given the strength of the enemy and the extent of his reach, we need to mobilize the real victims of corruption – the general public. You, the general public, bear the brunt of corruption in the deterioration of the standard of living of the ordinary Filipino. The ordinary Filipino is thus in the best position to complain.

I am calling a national draft of all good men and women who want to make a difference in your lives and in our country.

I call on you to work with the government to expose those who would rather pay off the tax collector than pay his right taxes.

I call on lawyers to volunteer their services to the Ombudsman and the Department of Justice to fight graft and not to protect it, to prosecute corruption and not to defend it, to expose fraud and not to disguise it.

I call on the idealistic youth as well, as well as the silent majority to be our eyes and ears in the fight against corruption. Tell us about the cases of corruption you know of, give us specifics. I am instructing the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission to receive these reports and follow them through.

I call on Congress to pass the bill allowing the Ombudsman to engage the help of private lawyers for free if possible, for a fee if there are no takers.

Even as we call on the people to mobilize in the war against corruption, I will mobilize the necessary funds to increase the troop complement in our war against corruption and to acquire state-of-the-art weaponry. I hereby direct the Secretary of Budget to provide 35 million pesos for the Ombudsman to recruit 50 lawyers for its investigation and prosecution work, and for it to acquire information technology systems.

In turn, I ask the Ombudsman to make available to the public the statements of assets and liabilities of all public officials, government nominees in private corporations, and anyone else with any kind of government appointment, be it remunerative or honorary, including presidential advisers.

I also ask the Ombudsman to carry out a new task: proactively observe government procurement involving large amounts.

I am directing the Secretary of Budget to provide 700 million pesos to the Bureau of Internal Revenue for its Information and Communications Technology Department. Unknown to the public, but well known now in the circles of big tax evaders is the fact that the BIR has been able to track down tax evaders through the power of information technology.

In my first State of the Nation Address, indeed, I said, I would make the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureau of Customs showcases in the fight against corruption. They have been quietly working up to that challenge. They have been conducting intensive investigations on probable big time tax evaders and smugglers.

We've seen some results in the past several months, of major companies agreeing to pay more than three billion pesos after a tax investigation, of a customs official being arrested, of illegal shipments valued at nearly half a billion pesos being intercepted.

In due time you will see more results.

I am doubling the budget of the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission to create an investigative unit to undertake intensive lifestyle checks on public officials. This unit will become the link between the government's anti-corruption drive and the citizens devoted to fighting graft.

I've also created a special anti-smuggling task force to link our law enforcement agencies with the private sector. I expect this group to bring more results to our anti-smuggling campaign.

I've instructed a crackdown on the Customs Bonded Warehouse System, which has become notorious for smuggling. I'm ordering the closure of more than 300 customs bonded warehouses. I'm ordering the Bureau of Customs to abolish the Bonded Trading Warehouse System, and while phasing this out, I've ordered Customs to ban the entry of finished goods into these warehouses.

I am now ordering the BIR and Customs chiefs to speed up the cases against big fish and spread their net wider, and mobilize resources for this urgent task.

I now order the BIR chief to terminate the existing 45,000 Letters of Authority issued in the past. From now on, only the BIR chief can issue such letters and these letters will be issue-specific and in force for not more than 90 days.

I call on Congress to create the National Authority for Revenue Administration, changing the BIR from a populous and ponderous bureaucracy to a lean and mean corruption-fighting machine.

But we must also ensure the election of the people's real choices. We must protect the votes of those who run on the strength of their public service rather than on the force of their private wealth. I'm hereby announcing the availability of 2.5 billion pesos to computerize the quick and accurate counting and tabulation of votes. I count you all to be in this drive so that we can have this computerized counting and tabulation of votes in 2004. That way, we will not only spare our teachers from tedious manual counting and the pressures of partisan politics, we will also make sure that your vote will be counted correctly. High-tech boto, ito ang susi sa pagbabago.

And this I intend to leave as my legacy to the nation, the certainty that every Filipino will see his vote counted.

It's true I'm going. But I am not a goner, far from it.

A president without the baggage of reelection can move faster, hit harder and work to greater effect.

My interest in the 2004 elections is to promise that it will take place. And furthermore, that it will be utterly clean.

Some of my critics remain unconvinced. I leave them to their self-imposed and self-serving ignorance. They can go on sounding the retreat back to the vested interests that pay their way, back to the corruption that is for many of them the only way.

For my part, I have made the sacrifice. I have sounded the advance and there shall be no retreat.

Ako'y iniluklok bilang presidente sa panahon ng napakaraming hamon sa bansa at maging sa buong mundo. Nguni't hindi ako naduwag sapagka't alam ko na kayo, ang aking mga kapanalig sa EDSA Dos at ang iba pang mga Pilipino sa buong bansa, ay handang dumamay at tumulong para sa ating kaunlaran.

Alam kong darating ang panahon na malalaman ng bawat Pilipino na siya'y may sariling kapangyarihan upang hubugin ang kanyang kinabukasan nang ang bansa'y maging matatag.

Nailatag ko na ang direksyon natin. Magtiwala tayo sa kakayahan ng sambayanan at palakasin pa natin ang ating pagkaka-isa. Ngayon pa lang ay tulung-tulong nating gawin ang lahat nang nararapat upang mapadali ang pagtatag ng ating republika. Huwag na nating hintayin pa na maiwanan na naman tayo ng mundo. Ubos na ang oras natin.

Stay with me. Happy Anniversary EDSA II participants! Happy Anniversary Filipino people! Maraming salamat po.

Speech of President Arroyo at the National Launching of the Small and Medium Enterprise (SME) Program

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the National Launching of the Small and Medium Enterprise (SME) Program

[Delivered at Starland, Metropolis Starmall, Alabang, Muntinlupa, February 17, 2003]

SMALL AND MEDIUM ENTERPRISES: THE BACKBONE OF A REVITALIZED ECONOMY

Sabi nga, pitumpu na itong seminars na ginaganap sa buong Pilipinas para maipaliwanag itong number one program ng ating administrasyon – iyang small and medium enterprise development. Kaya lang sabiko, dito sa Muntinlupa ako ang magbibigay ng seminar. Sapagkat kahit saan ako pumunta kasama parati ang national media kung kaya't ito ang national launching ng ating Small and Medium Enterprise (SME) Program.

At bakit ko pinili ang Muntinlupa? Hindi ko makakalimutan na dalawang beses nang nanalo ang Muntinlupa, two years in a row, as the most business-friendly city in the country. Kaya, kung merong isang lugar kung saan magtatagumpay itong programang ito, para maging huwaran sa ibang mga lugar, iyon na nga – Muntinlupa na nga.

And that's why without further ado, let me now go to the presentation of the National Small and Medium Enterprise Development Program (NSMEDP).

Kung naalala ninyo doon sa PCCI convention, kung saan nanalo na naman ang Muntinlupa bilang business-friendly city, sinabi ko na ang ating macroeconomic growth ay magandang ihambing sa ibang mga bansa. In fact, five percent ang growth rate ng ating GNP noong 2002. Tinatanong ko nga sa ating mga ibang kalapit bansa kung anong growth rate nila: Singapore 2 1/2 percent, halos 2 1/2 ang diperensiya; Thailand 4 percent, mas mataas tayo. Kanya lamang, bakit parang maraming mamamayan ang nagsasabing hindi pa rin nila nararamdaman. Kasi kailangan hindi lamang ang macro-economic growth, kailangan iyang micro measures para dalhin ang lumalagong ekonomiya doon sa mga lugar kung saan mararamdaman ng taong bayan. At number one nga diyan ang small and medium enterprises. Kaya narito tayo, medium enterprises dito sa ating National Small and Medium Enterprise Development Program.

Bakit ko sinasabi na kung pupunta tayo, lilipat na tayo, sabi ko sa PCCI meeting, from macro measures we will go to micro measures. Why is the number one micro measure SMEs? Why? Because the SMEs are vital engines of the Philippine economy. Almost 100 percent, 99.6 percent of total firms are SMEs. The sector employs 70 percent of the labor force. It contributes one-third of the value added to the economy. And its 60 percent are exporters. And so, if we will be able to push for the development of SMEs, kasi kung iiwanan lang natin sa market, kung macro lang ang aasikasuhin natin, alam ba ninyo kung anong sektor ang lumalaki? Telecommunications lumalaki, utilities kagaya ng Malampaya lumalaki, pero hindi naman doon nanggagaling ang equity ng ating bansa. And so, we need to push SMEs because telecoms and Malampaya are big giant enterprises.

We need to push SMEs to have a more equitable distribution of income and disperse economic activities to the countryside. But not just in the countryside because the biggest bulk of unemployment is right here in Metro Manila. So this is a potent force in the war against poverty.

Ninety one percent of the micro small and medium enterprises are micro enterprises. And so, what do we want to do with these micro enterprises? What's the difference between a micro enterprise and a small and medium enterprise? A micro enterprise largely is a one-person operation, even less than a mom or pop operation. It's a self-employment operation. Whereas the small and medium enterprise is an enterprise that hires other people so, therefore, it is really a bigger tool for developing, for addressing what I think is the main problem we have today. And that is employment.

So, inasmuch as 91.1 percent of the SMEs are micro, but the bulk of enterprises are micro small and medium enterprises. Talking about micro measures means that we look at that sector and find out why it is that if left to the market alone, they are not developing as much as we would like them to develop. What are the obstacles in the current situation? What are the structural issues that confront the micro small and medium enterprises? One of them is that they are concentrated in the NCR and neighboring province. But as far as I'm concerned that's very important because then we can use these enterprises to create more employment in the NCR and the neighboring provinces where unemployment is the highest.

Also, majority of the micro small and medium enterprises are in the service sector, but in low value-added activities. Eighty four percent are in services. But what kind of services? Siguro iyung kariton, nagbebenta ng mga – you know – but kung service, it's a service, like a restaurant catering to a tourist, that's fine. Pero kung kari-kariton, then it's not so productive.

Therefore, we have to encourage enterprises in the productive sectors that give more employment. So, in higher value-added activities that's what we would want to do.

So, continuing the productivity of our micro small and medium enterprise is low compared to other Asian economies. But let me say, there are SMEs that are the most efficient users of capital. That is why we want this low productive SMEs to transform themselves into these SMEs who have a very efficient way of using capital.

There are other challenges confronting micro small and medium enterprises, this is a world of stiff global competition. Whether we like it or not, we are in a global world. Whether we like it or not, the Financial Anti-Money Laundering Task Force exists. Whether we like it or not, the banks in other countries do not want to deal with our exporters unless they bring out our documents and examine every recipient of every remittance to find out whether he is a money launderer or not, it happens. That's the way the global world is and our alternative is to become what? A Mongolia? An Albania? A North Vietnam who does not want to deal with outside world? Well, what will happen to our own development?

Another problem is that they have limited access to technology, and most importantly, limited access to financing. And that is so ironic, because the assets of the banking sector is in the trillions not even in the billions, why is there limited access to financing? And therefore, because of limited access to financing, because of limited access to technology, the cost of doing business is high. Because of the limited access to the institutional financing, many of them end up with a "5-6" and that is certainly a high cost of doing business. Many of them still use the mano-mano methods because of limited access to technology and, therefore, you have a high cost of doing business. These are the challenges confronting SMEs.

And so, what do we do since that is the state of Philippine SMEs? Our response there is the National SME Development Program. What is the goal of our program? We want the SME sector to be a vibrant sector providing a strong domestic supply base manufacturing and services for globally competitive industries, whether they're for export or whether they're for the domestic market fighting with the inflow of imports. We want to expand enterprises. If they are micro, we want them to become small. And if they are small, we want them to become medium. That is what we want. And we want to upgrade productivity and value-added capabilities.

How are we doing this? For the next six months, this is what we want to do. Right now, the small and medium segments are 8.7 percent. We want them to graduate to 10 percent. By graduating, as I said, the micro enterprises who are ready to graduate into small businesses and also to generate new small and medium enterprises. There will be 20 small and medium enterprise centers nationwide so that you will have the impression na maraming pera at maraming tulong sa SME ngayon. That is the perception that we want you to be able to feel. And if that is the perception then we will feel that we have succeeded. Now, this is what we want to do for the next six months.

And as I've always said, the majesty of democracy is that one president sows, another president reaps. And if we sow this perception in the next six months and this graduation, then the next president will reap the benefits by having an increase in the share of small and medium segments in this sector from 8.7 percent to 12 percent and productivity in terms of gross value-added increase from 32 percent to 40 percent of GDP. That is what we hope can be achieved in three years from the fruits of what we will be planting in the next six months. So, that is our three-year objective. How to do it? Basic strategies, comprehensive approach. Not just financing, not just technology, not just market, but a comprehensive approach, seamless access to government services. Hindi iyung pag nandoon sa national government maraming tulong, pagbaba sa local ang daming red tape or vice versa. In the case of Muntinlupa, pagdating sa Muntinlupa ang daming tulong, pag-akyat sa national government there's red tape. No, we do not want that. We want that as far as the SME is concerned going from national to local, from local to national, pareho lang ang kanyang experience. Parang isang unit lamang talaga. Iyan ang ibig sabihin ng seamless access to government services. Virtual organization. Marami ang gagamitin nating computer. Alam ba ninyo noong APEC Summit noong 1993, aside from hosting it, ang ating contribution sana ay we're gonna put up a small and medium enterprise center for all APEC economies. Kaya lang nandoon sa Los Baños, sa liblib ng Los Baños. Walang gustong pumunta doon. Sayang ang transportasyon, pati iyung mga resource persons ayaw pumunta. Well, that was 1993, that was ten years ago. Between then and now, we have developed information technology kaya imbes na maglo-locate ng center diyan sa loob, liblib na Los Baños, ilo-locate sa hard disk ng ating mga computer. So, it will be a virtual organization.

And, as I said, aside from the demand – which means that for you who have viable projects, you will get approvals – hindi lang iyon, even on the supply side. The DTI is being reenergized and reengineered to actively seek out and help develop projects that will qualify for this financing. Kasi kung hindi, sayang naman iyung pera baka mababa yung absorptive capacity kung palengke lang ang ating aasahan. That is what we mean by supply side push. And we localize the plan. Hindi lahat pupunta kay Mel sa SB Corporation doon sa Manila. Dapat dito sa mga bangko ninyo kayo makakahiram ng pera. Hindi na kailangan pumunta sa DTI. That is localization of the plan.

The elements of the plan are the human resource side, the market side, the technology side, advocacy for policy, and of course, ang napakaimportante, iyung financing, pinakaimportante sa lahat. So, what are some of the details of the elements of the plan? Iyung human resource kasi ang daming training institutes ng gobyerno: mayroong TESDA, may TLRC, may LIVECOR, may kung anu-ano diyan. Lahat sila magiging bahagi ng training program para magkaroon ng either geographical or sectoral division of labor. Para ma-streamline yung training programs at saka yung fees pare-pareho, standardization of fees. Dahil ang isang malaking problema, sabi ko nga kay Mar, natuto nga silang gumawa ng sabon, hindi naman marunong gumawa ng project proposal, o di wala ring pera. So, there will be 50 SME business counselors nationwide who will teach you how to do your proposal, how to put your financing documents together so that you can access this financing because that is the obstacle. And then, as far as CHED is concerned, the schools, we will review their academic curricula to promote entrepreneurship. So that is as far as the human resource development is concerned.

Now, the market. We have domestic markets. We have foreign markets. We've been having trade fairs but we do not need to have a physical trade fair all the time. We will have the virtual trade fair because we will have the Internet as the center, the exchange between buyers and sellers. And we will be organizing and continue to organize buying and selling missions. The SMEs will have display corners and there will be buyer and supplier matching services, and the SME team will be moving around the country. Kaya nga, mayroon ng 70 seminars in order to promote and let you know about all these elements of our development and also to promote the market. And then of course, SMEs produce small amounts but the market sometimes require big amounts. So this service is also part of including the consolidation of production inputs for SMEs, that is as far as market development is concerned.

Now, for technology. We have the Design Center of the Philippines so we will render advising services for SMEs to conform to standards. Sometimes the sizes are not standard. Sometimes the weights are not standard, one is the weight in the shelf, another one is the weight in the farm gate. So there has to be standards. And there will be product clinics in designing and packaging, product technology and also designing and technical information. There are research outputs that are good. We will help commercialize them especially the alternative uses of indigenous raw materials. And technology improvement, improving raw material preparation so that we will have training to sustain the quality of raw material inputs. And we will set up and strengthen common service facilities. That is for product.

And then, of course, we have to advocate for the good carriage of policy. For instance, I congratulate Congress because they passed the Barangay Enterprise Law. One important feature of this law is that it exempts firms who have an asset base of 3 million pesos and below from the minimum wage law. Not many know that. But for those of you who get to find out about that, what a big flexibility it will give you, does it not, if you are able to avail of this exemption.

We will harmonize, simplify, standardize business forms and fees, hopefully, among LGUs. There is big enough for the market, it's not you who should make a decision. Your only concern is whether people will suffocate physically there or not. In which case, it's an environmental hazard. But obviously it will not, because we were many inside that room and we were not suffocating. So that's what I mean, especially if there is no incentive involved, no franchise involved, no government contract involved, the only concern of the regulating authority is that the business does not do harm to the country. Otherwise, they should give out those licenses and permits. So that's my marching orders to the DTI.

Now, finally, what I'm really after ... because you can access all of those other things, but if you cannot access the money, the trillion pesos in the banking system that's there, doing nothing, so much liquidity, and then so much need, then we are not gonna push our SMEs – that's the biggest. And that's why our program is intended to release 10 billion pesos to the SMEs in the next six months.

Hopefully, if we succeed in the first six months, another six months. So that would be 20 billion for one year. And in my successor's time, hopefully, 30 billion in one year.

How do we do it? One of the reasons why you don't get access is that Land Bank, DBP, etc. are not present everywhere. So you have to go to Makati, in those forbidding walls and corridors to ask for a loan. The ones that go down to the people, down to the small communities are the thrift banks and the rural banks. Therefore, the money must go through them. Unfortunately today, less than one-half of thrift and rural banks are accredited to be conduits for all these bigger money.

What's the reason? In 1997, when we had a crash in Asia ... understandably, the financial institution became very conservative and put up all these very stiff accreditation requirements to the point that they are now higher than what is the so-called International Camel's Rating Standard. So what we have done is to bring the accreditation requirements to the International Camel's Rating Standard. In that way, now more of the rural banks and the thrift banks will qualify to be conduits. And they will be your main sources of financing wherever the money originally came from. They will be your main conduits. Because they may have come from DBP, from Central Bank, from ADB, etc. But they will go through this mechanism.

And so, if there are thrift banks and rural banks in Muntinlupa, we invite you, if you are not yet accredited to get yourself accredited as a conduit of the government financial institutions. And then for all of these conduits, whoever are the conduits and whatever is the source ultimately of the money, there'll be unified common guidelines and rates, and that common business loan application form. So you shouldn't care whether the money comes from Central Bank, DBP, Land Bank, all the same requirements, all the same forms.

So, what are these all the same? What are these details that are all the same? Where is the money gonna come from? It may come from DBP, Land Bank. It may come from the National Livelihood Support Fund. It may come from the Eximbank. It may come from Quedancor. It may come from SB Corporation. But you shouldn't care where it comes from. Because when you go to a thrift bank and you borrow money, it doesn't matter where it comes from because the requirements will all be the same.

What are these requirements? For short-term loans, 9 percent; for medium-term loans, 11.25 percent; for three-year loans, 12.75 percent. So single digit for short-term loans.

The program will not decline a loan only on the basis of inadequate collateral. But surely, if you borrow, you will be able to acquire certain assets that can be used as collateral. Therefore, you must be able to hack that particular asset.

For instance, what can you use as collateral? You don't have real estate, what can you use as collateral? Post-dated checks. The registered, unregistered REMCHM. The assignment of the life insurance and guarantee cover. If you are a franchisee, the corporate guarantee or you assign your lease rights to the bank. Or if it's for export packing, the assignment of the letter of credit or purchase order (P.O.) or the sales invoice. All of these are acceptable as collateral.

When we say short-term loan, payable in one year. And then, of course, you have your export financing and your credit line for temporary working capital.

There are also long-term loans up to five years. And for permanent working capital. Also to purchase equipment or a lot or construct a building or a warehouse. Of course, in that case, your collateral will be the will to building the warehouse, the lot, etc.

And how much will this system finance for a short-term loan? Up to 70 percent on a value of the letter of credit or P.O. or 70 percent of the working capital requirement for a maximum of five million pesos. If it's a long-term loan, 80 percent of the incremental project cost for a maximum of five million pesos. It's the issue of not at least, at most. At most a debt equity ratio of 80-20. If you are a franchisee, 70-30.

And for the preceeding year, we should have been making profit. Because we don't want to finance losing enterprises, we want enterprises that are doing well to get more financing. That's the purpose, because they are the most efficient users of capital.

And if you were not making money last year but you were making money for the last two or three years on the average, then that can also be considered. Those are the hurdles for profitability.

Who can borrow? Any small and medium enterprise except those who import, because that's not really creating jobs. Those who sell liquor and cigarettes, because we don't want to foster unnecessarily more vices. And also mining and other extractive industries, because mining to be environment-friendly really cannot be small and medium. There has to be economies of scale. And the enterprises should be Filipino enterprises, and your assets should not be more than a hundred million. Otherwise, you'll already be considered a large enterprise and not eligible for this special financing window.

Of course, you will have to pay your fees ... 2,000 for every one million you borrow. When you apply, an upfront fee of one-half of one percent of the approved loan, and if you don't use the loan and you don't hire workers then that means that you will have to pay a commitment fee of 0.125 percent of the unavailed balance for long-term loans.

Aside from the loans, the government is also willing to enter into joint ventures, venture capital investment, and that's what Mel Alonzo will be doing. So, we can do equity rather than loan financing. And the old "Tulong sa Tao Program" of DTI, which was really good, and I felt bad about that when I became senator because when I was Undersecretary of Trade and Industry, I was the one who got the loan from ADB to make it spread throughout the country. Then when I was senator, I found out that the repayments were being sent to the Treasury and not being reflowed anymore. Sabi nila because of E.O. 138. Ano ba yang E.O. 138? As President, I'm therefore revoking E.O. 138 to revive the "Tulong sa Tao Program".

I think the reality is that a lot of the loans will be here around Metro Manila, Regions III and IV, because this is where the SMEs are. And this is where there's a large unemployment. But I want to make sure that every town has at least one product produced by SMEs, and every town will have at least a one-million peso loan for some enterprise or other. That is the minimum requirement. That is what you call affirmative action aspect of this program. But over and above that affirmative action aspect, it will be market-driven in the sense that those who are viable are the ones who will get the loans.

So, we thank the Monetary Board because studying this issue, the biggest reason why the trillion pesos was not reaching the SMEs was originally because of certain stringent requirements. But they have relaxed it. You have champions in the Monetary Board for small and medium enterprises. They have reduced the reserve requirements of rural and thrift banks. They have also made the risk weighing on small and medium enterprise loans also more liberal. As I said, you know in the past, for instance, I hope this has been carried out, there were so many documents required of the SMEs including BIR forms. But many SMEs don't have such sophisticated records. And as I said, the job of a bank is to determine whether the SME can pay back the loan or not. So I said, why are you requiring a BIR form, a BIR return? And he said, because we want to make sure they're paying taxes. I think that's the job of the BIR. That's not the job of the bank that's lending money. The main job of the bank lending money is to make sure that it lends money to a creditworthy enterprise. After all, the BIR under Willy Parayno, has its own newly-computerized system which is doing very well in catching the tax evaders. Let's not mix up the SMEs because after all the tax evaders are really not the SMEs, they are the bigger firms. And besides you have so many tax exemptions. So what's the use of requiring additional funding and therefore additional requirements for creditworthiness. That's why the risk weighing on SME loans is now more liberal, allowing the banks themselves to determine. Because after all these banks, if they are Camel's rated, they themselves know what they need to know to determine whether a loan will turn bad or good. Now, if they are less than Camel's rated then, you have to dictate to them. But we're only making the Camel's rated banks the conduits. Therefore, they should be the ones to determine more the risk rather than the Central Bank so the Central Bank has minimized the ratios on risk weighing.

And loans to SMEs are also now subject to a rediscount rate. That is one percentage point less than other loans. In order to make the banks have more incentive to lend to SMEs.

Now, Mel Alonzo's SB Corporation is going to provide collateral substitute guarantee. So that's the reason why you will not be required always to put up the full collateral of the land or the real estate, but just the collateral of the proceeds of the loan. But it will be supplemented by guarantees from SB Corporation.

Also, in order to help the thrift banks and the rural banks determine creditworthiness, we are going to do a credit bureau service. So that you will have in your Internet, hopefully, a master list of SMEs and their respective credit standing. Just like a credit card. Like when we go to a store, the girl who puts the credit card through that machine is really checking on our creditworthiness. That's the same system we want to use. And that will certainly speed up the loan application. So, these are the things that we are doing in order to make the financing more available to the SMEs.

I would like therefore to be able to ask all of you, to be able to join in this program, because we need to have the 10 billion pesos not in the banks, but in the hands of the SMEs, and, ultimately in the hands of the people that you are giving jobs too. And I hope that this program will touch one-fourth of the SMEs in the country. Because 10 billion pesos will be about one-fourth of the financing needs of SMEs. I hope that you'll be able to increase your sales, your customer base. I hope that you'll be able to improve your technical and managerial skills by participating in the programs. I hope that you will be able to upgrade your product offerings to the higher standards.

For instance, our message to the jewelry manufacturers in Bulacan – you can be better organized and therefore get better prices for your products. For the producers in Negros – you can have a wider market reach. For the furniture industry in Cebu – you can become even more competitive. And in areas where there are many SMEs, and that's in NCR, Regions III and IV, we hope to have an expansion of common service facilities.

And so, this is our message to you: there's 10 billion dollars available, use it and create jobs for our people. Thank you.

HARNESSING GLOBAL PEACE AND DEVELOPMENT

UNITY

TOWARDS

Mr. Chairman, I offer you my country's full support for your chairmanship of our movement.

Next to the United Nations, the Non-Aligned Movement is the largest international bulwark of peace. It is a movement that has chosen to temper conflict. It is a movement that has offered its influential offices not only to stop the firing of weapons, but also to steward peace towards the welfare and benefit of the poor.

Our movement can continue to be revitalized if we can harness our unity towards promoting global peace and development in this new century; a century where global challenges have multiplied or deepened; a century where hundreds of millions still go hungry and unschooled against their will; a century where we awaken to the fact that no country is immune to tragedies inflicted by agents of discord and terror.

Our movement can continue to be revitalized on the basis of the first principles of Bandung. These are the ramparts of peace and development, and, this is the path the Philippines has taken.

In 1996, the Philippine Government forged a peace agreement with the Moro National Liberation Front, after four years of negotiations participated in by the Organization of the Islamic Conference. In 2002, my administration resumed peace negotiations with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front facilitated by the distinguished chair Malaysia and the Libyan Jamahiriya. While we have encountered some setbacks in this peace process, we hope to move forward soon with the generous participation of our allies in the Non-Aligned Movement.

In our movement's search for security, we are not against any community or faith. My countrymen and I earnestly pray that war will be avoided. Our movement has consistently held the view that security should be sought to nuclear disarmament, the elimination of weapons of mass destruction as well as balanced and progressive conventional disarmament. This is the reason why the Philippines joins the call of the international community for the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to return to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

I also joined the multitudes who wish Iraq well, and plead with President Saddam Hussein to urgently negotiate a win-win settlement that will spare the heroic Iraqi people the agonies of a devastating war.

In accordance with the call made by U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan, in his message read to us today, perhaps President Hussein might now wish to take the initiative and invite the U.N. Secretary General, the U.N. inspectors, representatives of the doubting countries and of the international media. Perhaps he may wish to show them all they want to see, so that the fears of the world can be assuaged and we can have peace.

I believe this will be recognized as a judicious act by the Iraqi people and by non-aligned nations, and cheered by peoples of all faiths and persuasions. Iraq's friends, the non-aligned nations and the people of the world, will recognize it as an act of the highest statesmanship that will avoid war and save thousands of lives.

There is a great future for the Iraqi people and the North Korean people beyond this crisis and beyond a strategic accommodation with U.N. demands. There is a great future for an outward-looking and pluralistic Iraq, and for an outward-looking and pluralistic Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

An outward-looking and pluralistic Iraq could begin to make peace with its neighbor-states such as Kuwait and Iran as well as with other protagonists. An outward-looking and pluralistic Democratic People's Republic of Korea could continue to work for unity with its neighbor, the Republic of Korea. An outward-looking and pluralistic Iraq and an outward-looking pluralistic Democratic People's Republic of Korea can lead their peoples to peace and prosperity, and perpetuate the names of their leaders in history.

Their respective leaders can serve Iraq and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, as memorably as Chairman Deng Xiaoping served China in his time, if they take the same path and seek ways to integrate their rich cultural heritages with the modern world.

In particular, President Hussein can turn Iraq into an example of the continuing relevance of Islam in modernizing a nation for peace and development as has been exemplified so eminently in this region by our Chairman, Malaysia's Prime Minister Datuk Seri Dr. Mahathir Mohamad.

To Prime Minister Mahathir then congratulations! Not only for chairing the Non-Aligned Movement but also for providing a model for continuing revitalization in the 21st century. Thank you.

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On the amended Anti-Money Laundering Law

AMENDED ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING LAW: BUILDING CONFIDENCE IN OUR FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Anti-money laundering legislation is about reform and the strengthening of democracy, and getting hard-earned money seamlessly into the hands of Filipino families at home.

On one hand, it is understandable for some of our leaders to come to the defense of fundamental democratic precepts they feared were threatened, by international prescriptions tin anti-money laundering. Among them, the right to privacy, the rule on due process and need for vigilance against political abuse and persecution.

The Philippines is in control of its destiny. Without R.A. 9194, what would have been the future for the Philippines? We could have complained all we wanted, but would it have been for the better? We are in-charge of our destiny. We have shown that we have it within our power to craft laws that help our people, stop terrorism and link us to the 21st century and the rest of the world. But we also had it within our power to be on the sidelines, if we wanted to, and go back in time then cede responsibility to others by not fulfilling what the world was expecting on us.

I congratulate the members of Congress for their wisdom, patience, perseverance and patriotic sense of duty. I think I missed mentioning Congressman Escudero and Congressman Locsin – to them and to the rest of those in this table and to the rest of those in the front row – go our special congratulations. I'd also like to congratulate the author, the original author of the Anti-Money Laundering Law, Senator Panfilo Lacson. And my special thanks go to the Senate President, the Speaker of the House, the chairmen of the sponsoring committees, and of course, the members of the bicam panel for their outstanding leadership and forbearance.

I should express my gratitude and appreciation also to our legislators and the representatives of Financial Action Task Force (FATF) member-countries for accepting my invitation to interact with each other. That interaction highlighted the positive engagement of the international community to the genuine concerns of legislators and policymakers. And it helped the international community to understand that this is about Filipinos doing what is in their best interests, and not what is merely in the interest of foreigners.

The anti-money laundering issue is a potent one. The Philippines had to take control of its destiny and do the right thing. The issue is one of progress, modernization, the protection of our OFWs and their families.

In summary, anti-money laundering legislation is central to reform.

With our amended AMLA, we shall move closer to a banking regime that will inspire greater confidence, trustworthiness and reliability, and therefore greater economic activity, investment and resiliency.

In this sense, we shouldn't consider the passage of AMLA II, as I might call it, as a passive and begrudging compliance of the rules of the global financial system, but rather an active pursuit of our national interest.

This issue has generated considerable rancor, tension and division among some segments of our society and certainly among members of Congress itself. But our sense of relief, sense of gratitude and sense of accomplishments should now be shared by all. And let these positive senses now vanish the recrimination and discord among us.

Let's take advantage of this time to forge even greater unity not only among our leaders, but among our people. And with wiser and more enlightened eyes now confront other critical problems that lie before us.

We all condemn in the strongest possible terms the bombing in Davao as an act of sheer cowardice.

Today, terrorism is everywhere – the United States, Europe, Japan, Korea, Indonesia and so on. Today, it picks no specific country but chooses all countries, rich or poor.

The new, bolder form of terrorism is not insurmountable. But it requires a paradigm shift – an adjustment in the way we conceptualize and approach the problem of terrorism.

The paradigm shift is that with the bolder face of terrorism, national government measures are no longer sufficient. Now, the cooperation and vigilance of the entire community and all local government units is required to keep the Philippines safe for both its citizens and tourists.

This paradigm shift requires the need to activate the entire citizenry.

This paradigm shift requires the need to activate all local government units.

This paradigm shift requires the cooperation and coordination between the local government units and the local communities.

This paradigm shift requires the need for the entire community and all local government units, and not just the National Government, to formulate and undertake both preventive and remedial measures – to prepare, prevent, mitigate and rehabilitate.

For the immediate and specific measures: I'm directing the DILG, the AFP, the PNP and the Department of Tourism to formulate security measures to monitor security threats, prevent terrorist attacks.

I'm directing all government units, down to the barangay level, to organize and conduct comprehensive neighborhood watches to monitor suspicious persons, actions and materials.

I'm directing the PNP to organize and deploy nationwide community-based reaction units.

I'm directing all LGUs and the PNP to enhance communication and coordination in order to effectively mobilize and fully utilize all community resources.

I'm directing all LGUs and the Philippine National Police to institute an effective reward system. Extend security vigilance, not just major but all public places.

The Philippines remains safe.

The Davaoeños, with the help of their local leaders, can overcome this tragedy.

Davao has proven effective leadership under Mayor Duterte.

Davao, in the past, has overcome worse problems, notably, if you remember the peace and order problems brought about by the communist insurgency, many years ago.

Davao overcame its problems because of the effective local leadership and indispensable community cooperation. Remember, for example, the Alsa Masa. Remember the Pearl Farm incident.

Davao overcame its problems to become the best livable city in the Philippines and the 17th best livable city in Asia.

Davao's example of overcoming its past problems is a model to meet the bolder face of terrorism: an active local government unit, a vigilant citizenry, and cooperation and coordination between the LGU and the local community.

Once again, we commiserate with the victims of the Davao bombing. Justice will be done. Domestic terrorism will stop.

And as I thank Congress for the AMLA, now I ask Congress to help me achieve justice and stop terrorism. I ask Congress to help me now pass the Anti-Terrorism Act. And to achieve justice, I ask Congress to help me in passing the judicial reforms. And because there is a close relationship between fighting terrorism and fighting poverty, I ask Congress to help me by passing the use of farmland as collateral.

You have done great work, and there is still great work to be done. And if we continue and even improve on the unity we finally achieved, we will be able to make this Congress remembered as a Congress of great reform.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo at the Exhibit Hall, Federation Center

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the Exhibit Hall, Federation Center

[Delivered in Muelle de Binondo, Manila, March 21, 2003]

REFORM OR PERISH!

What an important time for us to be together. We are gathered here today in the midst of a crisis in the Middle East.

It is a good time for me to thank you. I've already thanked Mr. Lucio Tan and the PNB. I want to thank you, members of the federation as well for your contributions to our economic stability in these critical times, especially because you have been ensuring the stability and supply of prices of essential commodities. Thank you very much for your support.

You have shown a high level of social consciousness and conscientiousness, and this is what we need in times of crisis. This is also a time for us to close ranks, to be prudent and to cooperate to address all challenges.

This is a time for us to think about our togetherness as a nation and our sense of belonging to the Republic. This is a time when I want you to especially know that you have a government that cares for its citizens, that cares for you.

Our country as you know, is a participant in the coalition of the willing. This participation does not mean a battle between Iraqis and Filipinos. It is a battle between tyranny and freedom. We are in solidarity with the Iraqi people in their struggle for freedom, just as we stand beside the Coalition Forces in the fight to redeem that freedom.

We share with all Muslims the prayers for the Iraqi people. We pray that the Almighty will keep them safe and sound through this crisis. We stand beside them in awaiting a brighter day of freedom and prosperity.

Our participation in the coalition of the willing is also a battle between security and terrorism. The terrorists as you know from personal experience have been attacking our communities by kidnapping and bombing even before September 11 and even before I became President. These terrorists who have been kidnapping and bombing commercial establishments are linked with terrorist cells overseas. We don't want them to gain access to weapons of mass destruction from their foreign benefactors.

Our battle against terrorism is a battle between criminality and the justice system. The community is the most important part of the criminal justice system, as you also know very well. The cooperation and vigilance of the entire community, as well as the local government units are required to keep our country safe and secure.

I'm grateful to you all. I'm grateful to the business community. I'm grateful to the civil society which includes federations like yours, for your solidarity behind the efforts to meet this current crisis. And I'm counting on you to continue to close ranks, to minimize the material and psychological impact of the war upon our people, here and abroad.

Even if the current war in Iraq may result in some temporary and minor adjustments in our economy, I am confident that it will not bring lingering or permanent damage.

Our assessment of the situation doesn't indicate the need at this moment, for exercising extraordinary powers. This will be considered only as a last resort. Because our economic fundamentals are sound, tourism — and thanks to many of you — exports are up. Port operators tell me that shipments in and out of the country are doing brisk business. Prices of crude oil are going down.

Thus, your convention's theme, "Reform For Prosperity" is quite appropriate. With sound economic fundamentals, we should look beyond the Iraq war and not be distracted from our national ambition to become a prosperous and strong republic within the decade.

I thank you for all your assistance to reform. John Ng and Robin Sy talked about them already. I don't need to repeat them, but I can see from their enumeration of the way you have helped me and will continue to help me, and, that you all recognize that we need to reform to achieve prosperity.

As I have often said, "reform or perish". And I thank the Federation for supporting the difficult reforms I have had to make in my administration, reforms that our economy needs for long-term prosperity.

I thank you for supporting difficult financial reforms inspite of your initial nervousness about it. You even supported the Anti-Money Laundering Law. But I am thankful and hopeful that because we have been dialoguing, the final law that has come out will help us fight criminality, and at the same time will protect your right to privacy.

I thank you for your contribution to our educational reforms. And with your participation, as mentioned earlier in the one-billion component of our program for education, for building school buildings, I hope that in the next 15 months together, we will finally close the gap in classrooms in our entire public education system.

I thank you for your contribution to our agricultural reform, the hybrid rice, in which your Federation has been so active, has resulted in the doubling of the income of the farmers who have participated in that program.

And so, I look forward to the Federation's continuing support. Prosperity beckons, if we seize the opportunities and not just fend off the challenges of the 21st century. Among these opportunities is the great new market that your ancestral home, China, provides with its new engagement in the world economy. The Federation has a unique role to play in mobilizing these opportunities, represented by China's engagement in the world economy for our country's prosperity.

This is what I had in mind when I appointed John Ng as Presidential Envoy for Chinese Affairs, with the rank of Ambassador. His first assignment is to be my personal envoy and representative next week at the Philippine Exhibit in Shanghai. Please join him.

I look forward to John's service in my administration. And I hope that through his leadership in that job, we will maximize the trade and tourism opportunities that the new China makes available for the Philippines.

I also look forward to the support of the incoming officers of the Federation, just as your past presidents supported my father during his term as President of the Philippines. And just as in the first part of my presidency, your past presidents also supported me. In memory of the support of the Federation for my father in his time, and the support you gave me as I began my own presidency during these difficult times, I therefore decided to confer posthumously, presidential citations on three of your great past presidents — Mr. Ralph Nubia, who in his time became almost synonymous with the Federation itself; Mr. Antonio Roxas Chua, my father's very dear friend; and Mr. Benjamin Chua, my dear friend.

These noble examples of social conscience, solidarity and goodwill symbolize the historic partnership between the Filipino-Chinese business community and the Government for a strong and vibrant Philippine Republic.

And so once more, let me say, how I much I cherish your support and shall continue to count on that support. Thank you.

During the launching of the National Seaweed and Seaweed Products Development and Promotion Program

[Delivered at the West Wing Function Room, Waterfront Hotel, Lahug District, Cebu City, April 30, 2003]

Thank you very much Secretary Cito Lorenzo for your introduction. And thank you very much for finally making this MOA possible.

Please sit down.

I would like to greet, of course, the governor of Cebu, Governor Pabling Garcia. We are holding this signing ceremony in Cebu because Cebu is the capital of the seaweed and carrageenan industry of the Philippines. I would like to greet the Cabinet members who are here. You can see how many they are to illustrate how important this event for us — my Chief of Staff Bobi Tiglao; Cito, as I've already greeted; Secretary of DENR Bibet Gozun; we have Undersecretary of DTI Tom Aquino; Undersecretary of DOST, Roger Panlasigue; we have the president of the Landbank, Gary Teves; we have Dean Rhodora Azansa of U.P.; and to represent the industry part of the seaweed-carrageenan industry, Benzo Dacay, the president. And I'd like to thank my friend, Ismael Abubakar for speaking in behalf of the other side, the seaweed growers. Guests, ladies and gentlemen:

First of all, congratulations to everyone who made this MOA signing possible. First, congratulations to the Seaweed Industry Association of the Philippines or SIAP. Congratulations to the DA, to DENR, to DILG but Joey Lina still in the other room presiding over the meeting of the barangay chairmen, DOST, DTI, Landbank, U.P., congratulations to you.

And I'd like to thank you for saying that I am the seaweed and carrageenan industry friendly president. Well, that's because I was still in the Department of Trade and Industry when this industry started to grow or when it really started. I remember coming to Cebu during the birth of the seaweed industry when Benzon Dacay only had 300 workers to start with. Now he has 1,500 workers. That means that since then, if you take him as the microcosm, the industry has grown by that multiple.

And today, it is time that we launch our national seaweed and seaweed products development and promotion. It is an important way to create more jobs for Filipinos. We have almost 4 million Filipinos unemployed and the seaweed industry has such a big potential to close that gap in employment.

In fact, even today, even before this MOA, there are already more than one hundred Filipinos in Mindanao, in the Visayas, in Southern Luzon who are seaweed farmers. Why do we have seaweed farmers in Southern Luzon? You remember Benzon when I was a Senator and I called you up. I was with the farmers of Camarines Norte, and they said they wanted to be seaweed farmers, too. And I said, ok, I'll call Benzon Dacay to buy your seaweed, and that's why we have farmers in seaweed in Southern Luzon. In addition, there are more than 10,000 who work in the seaweed processing firms and related industries, 1500 of whom are there with Benzon.

Last year, total seaweed production was almost 900,000 metric tons. And Mindanao contributed 59 percent of that production. That's why this is a program that will be a means to further the peace and order situation for Mindanao.

Let's find inspiration from the story of Hadji Sali Calbi. Where is he? Hadji? Thank you for your nice words but you didn't tell us your story. So I will tell them your story. Hadji Sali was a commander of the MNLF, tama? Until he stopped being a rebel to concentrate on seaweed farming in the waters of Sitangkay in Tawi-Tawi. Sitangkay is our southernmost town in the country. It is half an hour helicopter from Sipadan. You guys to Sipadan better but Sitangkay is only half an hour away from there by helicopter. Well, anyway, he was one of the pioneers of seaweed farming there, and he is acknowledged as having contributed much to improve the lives of seaweed farmers in Tawi-Tawi.

Kaya 'yung hindi n'ya nakamit nung rebelde s'ya nakamit n'ya nung naging seaweed farmer s'ya.

I hope we will soon have many Filipinos who will follow the example of Hadji Sali. This is not impossible because we have wide coasts in our country. 'Yung seaweed na ito, itong carrageenan na ito, ano ba ito? Well, I learned about it when i was in DTI. The seaweed or gulaman or agar-agar, that is dried and then processed as carrageenan by the big processors in Cebu, grows well in the shallow parts of our seas. In addition, one doesn't need much capital to engage in seaweed farming.

Our first target area for seaweed production is mindanao, where most of our fresh produce are sourced. We want to strengthen this program in all the coastal municipalities of Mindanao.

The first principle after all in my Mindanao policy is that our ultimate objective should be both peace and development. The readiness of our troops will not relent as we explore a broader front in peace talks and diplomacy. Our allies in the OIC — and I just met with them again in Bangkok yesterday — and our peace partners in Mindanao like Hadji Sali remain undaunted in their hopes for a principled settlement of the conflict in Mindanao. We will meet harassments with counterforce, but we will keep the road to peace open.

The environment for peace is looking up. The victory of the coalition in Iraq has neutralized terrorist hubs operating internationally. Our partnership for peace within the ASEAN is strong and determined. I was just with acting Prime Minister Badawi yesterday on a one-on-one while the other ASEAN leaders were having their press conference and he affirm Malaysia's continuing commitment to support and facilitate our peace process. We have launched a massive development effort in Muslim Mindanao. And we hope this MOA will help in that massive effort for development. Exploratory talks are on stream. All the cards are stacked in favor of peace.

SIAP, even if you're here in Cebu can help bring peace and development to Mindanao when rebel returnees and would-be rebels engage in seaweed farming instead of belligerent activities.

What is this seaweed anyway and how come it gives livelihood to all these people? Seaweeds are most familiar to us not really in that form which is a very nice salad but as gulaman. All of us eat gulaman — that's seaweed. Seaweed's are important to our health and to our economy. To our health, they're delicious, they're mineral-rich. They are an important component in the preparation of food additives and the production of medicines and other products that we use daily.

I'm glad to see the coordinated efforts of the private sector and government in propagating and improving the quality of our seaweed products.

We want this to be a comprehensive program, not only about planting and farming but also about production, marketing, financing, research and development.

We want to improve our research and development so that we can produce disease-resistant cultivars. We want to encourage our seaweed farmers to sell raw seaweeds in semi-dried form. We will provide them the drying equipment. They can avail of credit from DA especially Quedancor. The DA together with SIAP will set up a pilot semi-processing plant in Sorsogon to produce seaweed chips.

I also want the industry to improve by finding more uses to carrageenan, particularly in the production of medicine and personal care products — not just the hair, all kinds of personal care products. This is an area that should be further explored by the DOST — Roger — and the DA.

Our national seaweed program has enabled the Philippines to enjoy the status of being the world's number one supplier of dried raw seaweed and natural grade carrageenan. And we are number three as producer of fresh seaweeds, the first being China and the second, Japan.

Last year, our carrageenan exports reached 138 million dollars, 36 million were from Benzoni Dacay. We hope that our harvest as well as the worth of our exports will be higher this year and the subsequent years. The DA, through BFAR, is targeting a production increase of 17 percent or an additional 151,000 metric tons by June 2004, when we will hopefully breach one million metric tons by the time 2004.

To meet this target, the DA and the BFAR in cooperation with SIAP, will also establish 104 nurseries nationwide — 14 will be set up here in Central Visayas. Governor Pabling Garcia said that you are now also producing the seaweeds not just the industrial product. Of course, 59 of the nurseries will be in Mindanao. These nurseries will produce seedlings for almost 2,000 hectares of seaweed farms worth almost 500 million pesos in the market.

I'm glad, that in coordination with the DTI, SIAP is finalizing the government's position for Philippine carrageenan to be included in the generalized system of preferences of the U.S.

When this is included in the U.S., the tariff on our carrageenan will be lifted. There'll be no tariff on Philippine carrageenan that will further strengthen our seaweed market.

But before the U.S. will attend to that they would want to see a settlement of a dispute within the seaweed industry of the Philippines itself that involves an American firm. After all, they want to protect their own investors.

So, this afternoon, Bibet will meet the industry so that hopefully, this intra-industry disputes can be resolved in a win-win solution because we got to win that U.S. market even more.

I'm also encouraging Filipino seaweed processors and exporters to look at China as a market for our carrageenan and other seaweed-based products. You know, ever since China joined the WTO, our trade rhythm has changed from a 300 million-dollar deficit to a 700 hundred-million dollar surplus. So, that's a good market. And carrageenan should take advantage of that.

I call on all of you to sustain the effort to strengthen our national seaweed program so that we can advance the cause of peace and development especially in Mindanao but even in the entire country, even in a province as traditionally prosperous as the province of Cebu.

Daghang salamat kaninyong tanan!

Speech of President Arroyo during the command conference of barangay captains at the 6th National Convention of the Liga ng mga Barangay

Speech

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the command conference of barangay captains at the 6th National Convention of the Liga ng mga
Barangay

[Delivered at the Waterfront Hotel, Lahug District, Cebu City, April 30, 2003]

Maraming salamat Secretary Joey Lina sa iyong pangalawang pagpakilala sa akin.

I'd like to also acknowledge the presence of Secretary Cito Lorenzo of Agriculture. Dahil mamaya lilipat kami ng kabilang kwarto para magpirmahan ng isang malaking proyekto na sana makakatulong sa mga barangay, sa mga coastal barangay. Makakatulong para magtanim ng seaweed sa iba't-ibang mga coastal barangay. Sana matulungan ang inyong mga barangay din dito sa project ni Cito Lorenzo. At kasama niya dito sa pagpirma ay si sSecretary Bibet Gozun ng DENR. Narito rin si Bibet Gozun.

I would like to also acknowledge the presence of our governor of our host province, Governor Pabling Garcia. Unta dunay barangay captain diri gikan sa Cebu province, at least ang iyang presensya diri would be worth it. Pero he is going to go with us also to the other side dahil dito pipirmahan itong Seaweed Memorandum of Agreement dahil ang Cebu province ang sentro ng seaweed industry sa ating bansa.

Batiin ko 'yung ating mga pulis na nagbigay ng mga report ng ating... Dito sa ating sinabi ko dapat command conference, si Chief of Philippine National Police, si Jun Ebdane; 'yung ating bagong Chief of Director ng oOperations ng Philippine National Police, si General Ike Galang. Medyo raw mahaba 'yung presentation niya kasi ito ang first presentation niya bilang director ng operations kaya gustong ipahayag sa mga barangay captain ang kabuuan ng mga operational plan ng PNP at si General Galang palagay ko marami sa inyo first time n'yo siya nakita ngayon. Pero siya ang magiging kaugnay ninyo sa maraming mga operations dahil siya ang director for operations ng Philippine National [olice ngayon. So kung medyo mahaba siya sa entablado at least kilala na n'yo siya.

Later on, after my talk, we will be having a dialogue with you regarding SARS. At ito 'yung napakagaling nating gumawa ng research sa SARS. Kaya hangang-hanga ang mundo sa atin. Alam n'yo, libu-libo na 'yung sars sa China, sa hong kong. Daan-daan ang SARS sa Canada yata, sa Singapore. 'Yung Vietnam na gumaling na raw sa SARS, bago gumaling ang Vietnam sa SARS, 63 muna ang kanilang kaso at lima pa ang namatay. Sa buong Pilipinas... 'Yung, 'yung Thailand meron silang brochure na sila ay SARS zero transmission. Pero pito ang kanilang SARS at dalawang namatay din. Dito sa Pilipinas tatlo ang SARS. Kaya ito ay dahil sa napakagaling na trabaho ng ating mga doktor. At isa dito sa nangunguna sa ating trabahong kontra dito sa SARS ay si Doctor Consorcia Lim-Quizon. Kaya siya ang makikipag-usap sa inyo mamamaya.

And of course, I would like to thank our very dynamic and well loved president of the Liga ng mga Barangay, si James Marty Lim. Alam n'yo, nung ako'y una naging pangulo at magkakaroon ng halalan ang presidente ng barangay, maraming mga lumapit sa akin humihingi ng tulong na ma-endorso sila o kandidato nila bilang liga ng barangay. Pero kami ni Joey Lina ang aming sagot, hindi mo matatanggihan ang tinig ng nasa baba mismo. At ang tinig ng barangay ay gusto pa rin nila na si James Marty Lim ay matuloy bilang pangulo.

Mga punong-barangay na narito ngayon, mga kababayan:

Malugod kong binabati ang lahat ng mga barangay chairman na narito ngayon. Kanina pumasok ako nakita ko 'yung mga kasama ko sa Pasay nung isang araw, binabati ko kayo muli. Nakita ko 'yung mga taga-Laguna, taga-Quezon, binabati ko kayo muli. Nakita ko, natan aw ko ang mga nagikan sa Zamboanga, nagikan sa South Cotabato, maayong buntag, maayong aga sa inyo nga tanan, kaninyong tanan sa gihapon. At nakita ko 'yung taga-Zamboanga

City, buenos dias otra vez. Napakaraming mga pinanggalingan ninyo at talagang napapanahon na magsama-sama na naman tayo muli. Alam naman ninyo ang inyong mga trabaho sa ilalim ng batas. Hindi ko na 'yon iuulit. Ilang taon nang... Taun-taon niri-review sa inyo 'yung Local Government Code. Ang pag-uusapan ko ay 'yung mga pangunahing tungkulin ng mga barangay leaders natin sa mga panahong ito, na kaiba-ibang mga panahon.

Sa mga panahong ito, naku! One crisis after another, kaya ang ating mga barangay chairmen ang dapat maging crisis manager sa inyong mga komunidad. 'Yan ang unang-una n'yong inaasahan ng taong bayan sa inyo. Ano'ng ibig sabihin dito? Kayo ang mangangasiwa sa pagmatyag sa lahat ng klase ng problemang sosyal at ekonomikal na kaugnay ng krisis, tulad ng presyo ng pangunahing bilihin. Kung merong nagtataas masyado ng mask sa inyong barangay, eh kayo ang dapat magsumbong sa mga awtoridad ng dti para sitahin sila. Kayo ang kailangan para tiyakin na ang komunidad ay ligtas sa lahat ng uri ng terorismo na nandyan pa rin.

Sapagka't ang terorismo ay malakas ang loob, hindi sapat ang pagkilos ng pamahalaang nasyonal lamang. Kaya sabi ko sa ating pulis, iprisinta sa inyo ang programa kontra sa terorismo at malaman, magkaintindihan kung ano ang papel ng pulis, ano ang papel ng mga barangay.

Ang bagong siglo, ang bagong banta ng siglo beinte-uno, ang terorismo, at ito ay kailangan ng puspusang pagkilos ng buong pamahalaan hanggang sa hanay ng barangay para bantayan ang mga nakakahinalang tao. Bantayan ang nakakahinalang gawain. Bantayan ang nakakahinalang kagamitan. At kayo, barangay captains, kayo ang makakakita kung sino at ano ang kaiba-iba na nangyayari sa inyong barangay.

The international linkages among terrorist groups have long been established and documented, and some of these linkages are embedded in our own territory. Within our regional neighborhood, a network of Jemaah Islamiyah cells are active, further extending to the worldwide Al Qaeda network. The revelation of a link between the former Iraqi regime and Osama Bin Laden is also significant in the light of our own findings in the Philippines that there are connections between Iraqi embassy officials and the Abu Sayyaf. Tracing all these linkages is important to acquire the knowledge to fight this threat effectively. At importante ang partisipasyon ng mga barangay chairmen para mahanap itong mga kone-koneksyon ng mga terorista sa inyong lugar doon sa mga dayuhang lider ng terorismo.

Ang mga barangay captain din ay information champions para sa katatagan ng ekonomiya at kagalingan ng publiko.

Maaari kayong magpaliwanag sa ating mga kababayan tungkol sa mga isyu na hindi nila nalalaman o di nila gaanong naiintindihan, tulad ng kung papaano maiwasan ang pagkalat ng mabigat na pagsubok na kinakaharap ng ating bansa ngayon, 'yung severe acute respiratory syndrome or SARS.

Mamaya nga, magbibigay ng detalye si Dra. Quizon ngunit gamitin ko itong pagkakataon na magbigay ng ulat sa inyo tungkol sa ASEAN Summit ng SARS.

Kanina lamang kararating ko sa Cebu, madaling araw, alas-tres ng umaga. Sinalubong ako ni General Ebdane at saka ni General Galang. Alas-tres ng umaga, 'no? O three thirty ba 'yon? Pagkatapos ng isang araw na pagdalaw sa Thailand upang dumalo sa Asean SARS summit. Ang naturang pulong ay napakahalaga para pagtugmain at pag-isahin ang lahat ng ating mga pagsisikap sa rehiyon na labanan ang sakit na ito. Kasama ng mga lider ng ASEAN at China, nangako kaming pagsasamahin ang ating mga kakayahan at talino para pigilan ang paglaganap ng SARS.

Sa nasabing pulong din, nagpahayag ako ng espesyal na panawagan sa ngalan ng libu-libong manggagawang Pilipino na nanggagaling sa inyong iba't-ibang mga barangay pero natatagpuan sila sa buong Asean.

Pinakiusapan ko ang aking mga kapwa lider na tiyakin na ang pinakamagaling na posibleng pag-aasikaso ay ipa-abot sa mga Pilipinong pinagsususpetsahan o napatunayang maysakit ng SARS; at ang lahat ng posibleng tulong ay ipagkaloob sa kanila para sa kasiguruhan ng kanilang trabaho sa gitna ng paghina ng pang-rehiyong ekonomiya.

Kailangan nating proteksyunan ang kapakanan ng ating mga kababayan, ng kanilang trabaho at ng kanilang kabuhayan sa gitna ng bantang ito ng sangkatauhan.

As Labor Day approaches, let's reminisce the profound sacrifices being made by Filipino workers here in your barangays and around the world. Our workers are among the most vulnerable to SARS in their workplaces in your barangays and abroad. I was very touched by the statements of Singapore and China during the Asean summit acknowledging the role of Filipino health workers at the forefront of the fight against SARS in these countries. Sabi ko sa kanila, sana naman mga leader, alagaan ninyo 'yung mga manggagawang Pilipino na baka magkaroon ng SARS sa inyong lugar. At sabi ni Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong sa akin, talagang aalagaan nila ang mga Pilipino sa Singapore dahil hangang-hanga sila. Sabi nila, ang mga mag-aalaga ng aming mga SARS victims ay mga Pilipino at 'yang mga nurses ninyo, sabi niya sa Ingles, kahit na on vacation leave sila nung pumutok 'yung sars bumalik, nagtrabaho muli. Dahil sabi nila kailangan ninyo kami sa pagtatrabaho dito. Kaya hangang-hanga sila sa mga Pilipino.

The Filipinos have placed themselves at grave risk in other lands for the sake of humanity, in the name of professionalism.

Let's extol our doctors, nurses and medical technicians, and other workers from your different barangays who are at the frontline of this fight, worldwide.

I was reminded of the fact that more than a million Filipinos were also at risk from the threat of the Iraq war. Day after day, there are acts of Filipino heroism that do not necessarily run to the limelight. That's why, as I said, I made that special appeal in the ASEAN Summit in behalf of our hundreds of thousands of workers spread across the region.

Kanina, sinabi ko sa tagalog, sasabihin ko sa Ingles. I asked my colleagues to protect not only the health but the jobs of Filipinos. I asked them to extend the best treatment possible to our nationals suspected to be or actually afflicted by SARS, and that all possible accommodations be granted to guarantee the security and safety of their jobs in the face of the regional economic slowdown.

Pagkatapos ko nagsalita, at 'yung iba't-ibang nagsalita, 'yung summit ay nagbuo ng kanilang joint declaration. The summit accepted three proposals from the Philippine government:

First, to extend equal treatment to foreign nationals who may be suspect or actual SARS cases under the principle of "no blame, and dignity for all concerned." Ibig sabihin noon, magkasakit ang Pilipino sa Singapore o sa Hong Kong o sa China, sa mainland... Sa mainland China o sa Malaysia, ang pagtrato ng gobyerno sa kanila, ang benepisyo nakukuha nila ay pareho ng mga mamamayan nung mga bansang 'yon.

Second, to convene a meeting of airport authorities from the ASEAN+3 countries in the Philippines, to work out relevant procedures for departure and arrival screening. Sa may 15 magkakaroon tayo ng follow up meeting ng SARS summit, 'yung mga airport authorities ay pag-uusapan ang common procedures para hindi lumaganap ang SARS sa pamamagitan ng pagbiyahe.

Third, to task relevant experts to consider a Health Emergency Fund within the ASEAN Framework, as a means to shore up overall regional capacity and preparedness. Alam n'yo kasi, doon pala sa asean foundation, may one billion dollars na halos hindi nagagamit. Kaya sabi ko, gamitin 'yan para sa ating SARS sa buong rehiyon.

Dito sa Pilipinas sinabi ko rin sa PCSO na magbuo ng one billion pesos para sa SARS. Pwede nga rin kunin ang bahagi nito doon sa ASEAN Foundation. Para hindi rin maubos ang pera ng PCSO. Ngayon ito ay para labanan nating lahat ang SARS. Maging sa kapitolyo, maging sa nasyonal, maging sa barangay.

Naalala ko 5 years ago, ang mga barangay chapters ay nabigyan ng ambulansya. Ngayon, palagay ko dahil sars ang problema dapat hindi kayo i-lock in sa ambulansya. Ang ambulansya more or less 500,000 ang gastos. Kaya sabi ko kay James, imbes na ambulansya ang ibibigay bigyan natin ng choice 'yung mga chapters kung ano ang kailangan para labanan ang SARS. Kaya sa one billion na sinabi ko sa PCSO i-buo at pwedeng kumuha doon sa ASEAN Foundation nangpandagdag, sabi ko, magtabi ng 50 million pesos para sa liga ng barangay. Ang gagawin n'yo titignan n'yo, "ano ang pinaka-kailangan ng barangay ko o ng ating chapter laban sa SARS." Gumawa kayo ng proposal, isa-submit ni James sa SARS management committee, kasama doon si Dr. Quizon. At pagna-approve nila ibibigay ng PCSO 'yung proyektong 'yon sa inyong chapter ng liga ng barangay. Okay, Dr. Quizon, ha.

The World Health Organization has made an assessment that SARS could become the first severe new disease of the 21st century with global epidemic potential. Indeed, as I said in the SARS summit, the SARS crisis is only second to terrorism in bringing quick death to its victims. We must now face it with unerring audacity and solidarity. Audacity, because its causes and full consequences are yet unknown. Solidarity, because it is randomly knocking at all of our doors.

We are an integral part of the ASEAN War Plan. Our government will stretch its cooperation regionally to help check the spread of disease across borders. Like we have done in the fight against terrorism, we shall wield common advocacies, educational programs, surveillance data and action plans. In facing the threat of SARS, ASEAN nations must be viewed within the boundaries of one region having a single army, teaming up under an imagined common sovereignty. Asean must field its troops under one cause, under one flag of humanitarianism, one code of procedures and operations. Regional cooperation will ensure a more permanent victory.

Nguni't kung 'yung ASEAN — ngayon sila 'yung mga joint Chiefs of Staff — ang platoon commanders naman, all the way down, ang mga barangay chairmen.

Dapat masigasig ang bawa't mamamayan sa ilalim ng liderato ng barangay chairmen, bawa't barangay ay makibahagi sa lahat ng programa upang labanan ang SARS.

Ang mga pinunong barangay din, gaya ng sabi ni General Galang at General Ebdane pati si Secretary Lina, ay anti-street crime czars.

Ang pagpapanatili ng kapayapaan sa ating bayan ay hindi trabaho ng mga pulis lamang. Kailangan ng commitment ng bawa't isa sa mga barangay leaders na isiguradong ginagalang ng batas ang mamamayan ng barangay at supilin ang mga dahilang pinagmumulanng terorismo at krimen. Hindi matatawaran ang papel na ginagampanan ng mga barangay chairmen upang magtagumpay ang ating hangaring ito. Sa mga barangay, kilala n'yo halos lahat ng tao. Dahil dito, higit pa ang inyong magagawa kaysa pagpigil sa paghahasik ng terorismo o pagsugpo ng krimen. Kayo rin ang makakagawa ng mga special community operations upang itaguyod ang disiplina sa komunidad tungo sa matahimik na pamumuhay nating lahat.

Ang suporta ng mga pinuno ng barangay ang unang susi para maging epektibo ang programa ng gobyerno sa paglaban sa kahirapan, terorismo, kriminalidad, sakit, at iba pang mga sakit ng ating lipunan. Kaya, magkaisa tayo, magtulungan upang maging matagumpay ang ating hangarin. Hangad ko ang inyong tagumpay dahil ang inyong tagumpay ay tagumpay ng buong bansang Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo on the Labor Day celebration

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On the Labor Day celebration

[Delivered at the World Trade Center, Pasay City, May 1, 2003]

PUSHING FOR A COMPETITIVE LABOR FORCE AS A STRATEGIC RESOURCE

Isandaang taon na tayong nagdiriwang ng Araw ng Paggawa, at sana sa araw na ito kahit sa kahirapan ng mundo, huwag nating payagang malihis ang ating pagdiriwang sa pamamagitan ng mga isyung pulitikal o isyu ng ideolohiya.

Lalong kailangan ngayon ang pagkakaisa dahil dumadaan na naman ang buong mundo at bansa sa mahihigpit na pagsubok. Binanggit na nga ni Nong Kito Mendoza at ni Vic Balais ang mga hirap ng mundo ngayon — terorismo, global slowdown, at iyung SARS.

Sa Asian SARS Summit na ginanap kamakalawa sa Thailand, pinakiusapan ko ang aking mga kapwa lider na tiyakin, na ang pinakamagaling na posibleng pag-aasikaso ay ipaabot sa mga Pilipinong pinag-sususpetsahan o napatunayang may sakit na SARS. I was very touched by the response of Singapore and China, acknowledging the role of Filipino health workers at the forefront of the fight against SARS in their countries.

Sabi nga ni Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong ng Singapore, “Yes, President Arroyo, certainly, we will comply with your request to take care of your Filipinos well, especially in Singapore.” Kinuwento niya ang kanyang paghanga sa ating mga Pilipino. Kinuwento niya na ang ating mga nurses, kahit na iyung mga on vacation leave, bumalik sa trabaho nung pumutok ang epidemya ng SARS dahil sabi nila, alam nilang kinakailangan sila ng lipunan ng Singapore. Hindi natin nalaman ‘yon sa peryodiko, hindi inanunsyo. Sila ay mga bayaning hindi nagkukuwento ng kanilang pagka-bayani, pero mahal na mahal ng Singapore at Hong Kong ang ating mga health workers. Dapat mas ipagmalaki natin sila at dapat dito sa Pilipinas, mahal din natin sila.

All health workers at the frontline of the Anti-SARS campaign will be afforded full protection gear. Si Pat Sto. Tomas, ay kasapi ng SARS Crisis Management Committee, kaya iyon ang isang assignment na isisigurado niya.

We will not take any chances with the safety and welfare of those who are bearing the brunt of sacrifice. Our resources will be used on the most basic and effective points of prevention. Our vigilance will be focused and relentless. I ask our people to follow the lead of competent government authority.

Kung tayo ay susunod sa mga pahayag, dapat nating mas paniwalaan ang ating mga namamahala — nangunguna na doon si Secretary Dayrit ng Department of Health — nang sa ganon hindi tayo malilihis, hindi tayo magpa-panic at hindi tayo mag-ooverreact.

Doon po sa Thailand, kinukuwento ni Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatt, na may malaking fiesta sila nguni’t natatakot ang mga taong pumunta sa piyesta, lahat nakagamit ng maskara. Sabi ng World Health Organization, ang maskarang ‘yan ay false security blanket. Ang dapat lamang daw na gumagamit niyan ay iyung mga health workers na napakalapit ang kanilang kontak sa mga may sakit. Subali’t iyung karaniwang gumagamit sa pang-araw-araw na wala namang close contact sa may sintomas, ‘yan ay paranoia. Kaya ang ginawa ni Thaksin Shinawatt, pumunta siya doon sa piyesta na wala siyang suot na maskara, nag-shake hands siya at sinabi niya, bibigyan niya ng one million baht ang sinumang magkasakit o mamatay sa SARS through local transmission. Wala pa siyang binibigyan ng premyo hanggang ngayon, sabi niya. Bibigyan din daw niya ng dalawang milyong baht 'yung magkakasakit mula sa piyestang iyon subali't wala pa siyang binibigyan ng two million baht hanggang ngayon.

Kaya noong ako ay dumating dito sa Pilipinas, ginamit ko ang halimbawa ng mga dumalo sa World Health Organization, nakipagkamay ako kahit na doon sa mga nanggaling sa China. Nakipag-shake hands ako noong bumalik ako dito sa Pilipinas. At sa makalawa ay pupunta ako sa Vacante sa Alcala, Pangasinan dahil sa kabila ng dapat alerto tayot huwag tayong mag-overreact. Huwag din tayong mag-panic dahil ang panic ay mas masama sa ating ekonomiya kaysa sa SARS mismo.

Ayaw natin ang mag-panic dahil sa SARS sapagka't ito ang magpapahina ng ating ekonomiya at mawawala pa lalo ang trabaho ng ating manggagawa. Kaya sa kabila noon, ang talagang dapat alagaan natin mula sa pagkahawa ay ang ating mga health workers.

Nagpapasalamat ako sa ating mga health workers — nandito yata iyung mga PHIC workers — ipaabot ninyo ang pagpapasalamat sa lahat ng kapwa ninyo health workers. Nagpapasalamat rin ako sa nakararami at iba't-ibang manggagawang nakakaunawa sa inyong tungkulin sa mga panahong ito. Nagpapasalamat ako sa mga labor leaders na tunay na pinag-iisipan ang kapakanan ng mga kasapi, sa mga leaders na nakaka-unawa na ang pinakakailangan sa panahong ito ay panatiliin at madagdagan pa ang mga trabaho.

Kaya congratulations sa TUCP. Sa ibabaw ng ginagawa n'yo para sa karapatan ng inyong manggagawa, naghahanap pa kayo ng trabaho para sa kanila sa pamamagitan ng job corps na hinahawakan ni Senator Boy Herrera.

Sa panig naman ng pamahalaan, dapat ding tugunan ang karaingan na narinig natin kanina, mga karaingan ng manggagawa lalo na sa presyo ng bilihin, bagama't ang inflation rate natin ngayon ay pinakamababa sa labing-limang taon. Sa unang pag-upo ko pa lamang bilang Pangulo, ay laging dumarating na ang mga daing sa presyo, lalo na ang presyo ng kuryente, higit lalo na ang presyo ng PPA. Lagi ko namang pinag-iisipan kung paano natin maasikaso itong daing ninyo at inaasikaso naman.

Noong Abril ng 2001, tatlong buwan pa lang akong pangulo, sinuspinde natin ng dalawampung sentimo per kilowatt-hour ang PPA ng NAPOCOR.

Noong Hunyo 2001, pagkatapos maipasa ang Electric Power Industry Reform Act, binaba ang presyo ng kuryente para sa mga residente ng tatlung sentimo, kaya noong 2001, dalawang beses bumaba ang presyo ng kuryente.

Noong Mayo naman nang nakaraang taon, 2002, ayon sa aking bilin, ang NAPOCOR ay pinahaba ang panahon ng pagbayad ng kaniyang mga obligasyon at naibaba ang kaniyang PPA sa average na walumpu't limang sentimo. Nakita ninyo iyon sa inyong electric bill noong June of 2002.

Itong taong ito, tuloy ang ating pakikibaka upang bumaba ang inyong electric bill. Inatasan ko ang Kalihim ng Enerhiya, si Vince Perez, na pag-aralan kung paano. Ito ang mga nakalap na solusyon:

Number one, justice will be done. MERALCO will have to comply with the decision of the Supreme Court. All that is left to do is to determine how to best implement this judicial mandate in a manner that will maximize the public interest.

The Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC), which is independent, will lead the determination process. The Department of Energy (DoE) will take charge of the involvement of the Executive Branch in the implemental stage. And in that capacity, magpe-petisyon ang Department of Energy sa ERC na maging maliliit lamang ang singil. Yaong mga maralitang gumagamit ng kuryente na napakaliit ang electric bill to begin with, ibabalik nang buo ang sobrang singil doon sa mga maralitang napakaliit naman ang konsumo. Sa mga manggagawa naman na karaniwan at hindi naman gaano kaliit ang inyong electric bill, subali't dumadaing kayo, ang petisyon ng DoE ay gagawing diskwento sa buwanang singil ang refund. We have the confidence in the institutions involved and we will see this through.

Pangalawa, kung anuman ang maging desisyon ng ERC tungkol sa petisyon ng MERALCO sa rate increase, magpe-petisyon din ang DoE na anumang pagtaas ay dapat ipataw sa mga malalaking namimili, sa mga mayayaman. At doon naman sa mga manggagawang namimili ng kuryente, eh, bibigyan ng diskwento pa sa ilalim ng prinsipyong socialized pricing, sa ganun, bababa pa ang presyo ng inyong kuryente, mga manggagawa.

Pangatlo, ang mga power plants na nagbebenta sa MERALCO ay napapayag natin na magbigay ng malaking diskuwento na pwedeng ipasa sa inyo, mga mahal kong manggagawa, bilang mas mababang PPA.

Pang-apat, itong mga power plants din ay may kaya pang magbaba ng kanilang singil, sana hayaan silang mapaabot sa economies of scale ang kanilang produksyon. Ibig sabihin, sa halip na ang NAPOCOR na pag-aari ng gobyerno ay makipagkompetensiya sa pribadong sektor, hahayaan na ang pribadong sektor, power plant nila na lubusin ang kanilang kapasidad, ang kapalit — bababa ang singil ng bawat kilowatt-hour.

Ano ba itong economies of scale na ito? Hayaan niyong subukin kong ipaliwanag sa madaling halimbawa. Ang isang power plant ay parang isang truck, hindi ka makakabiling kalahating truck, hindi ka rin makakabili kung investor ka ng kalahating power plant. Ngayon, kung iyung truck ay maraming sakay na produkto, nahahati ang halaga ng truck sa maraming produkto, kaya mababa bawat isang gamit ng isang produkto. Kung ang power plant ay maraming gumagamit ng kuryente dahil maganda ang negosyo, nahahati ang halaga ng planta sa marami, kaya mababa bawat kilowatt-hour. Pero kung ang truck ay konti lang ang sakay, halimbawa, dahil mahina ang ekonomiya, konti ang produkto, mahal ang singil sa bawat isang produkto. Kung ang power plant ay konti lang ang gumagamit ng kaniyang kuryente dahil mahina ang panahon, mahal din ang singil bawat kilowatt-hour. Sa madaling salita, mas mahal kung tingi kaysa sa maramihan.

Kaya, ang gagawin natin, iyung NAPOCOR ay ida-down scale ang kaniyang operations para makapagbenta ang private plant, power plants nang mas marami at ang kapalit, ibababa nila ang presyo ng PPA.

Kaya sagot sa mga pilosopong nagtatanong kung bakit ba tayo ay nagbabayad ng kuryenteng hindi nagagamit, ang sagot nga sa kanila, iyung economies of scale. Binabayaran ang buong planta, maging malaki o maliit ang gumagamit.

Panglima, ang Malampaya na nagbibigay sa atin ng kasarinlan sa enerhiya at malinis na enerhiya, kaya lamang mahal sa ngayon dahil nga gaya ng sabi ko, hindi pa nakakaabot sa economies of scale. Subali't napapayag din natin na sa susunod na tatlong taon, ibababa rin ang kaniyang singil sa mga powerplant. Sa ganun mapapasa rin ang natipid sa inyong mga manggagawa bilang mas mababang PPA.

Medyo kumplikado, 'di ba? Kumplikado ang paliwanag dahil mas kumplikado ang ginawang research at pag-aaral para makaabot sa mga solusyon na ito, nguni't ang puno't dulo ninyo, gaya nang nakita niyo no'ng isang taon na bumaba ang presyo ng inyong electric bill nang bandang Hunyo ng 2002. Inaasahan na ang lahat na ito at iba pang paraan ay hahanapin at gagawin pa natin upang maibaba ang inyong electric bill, at inaasahan nating makikita ninyo ang resulta sa electric bill ninyo bandang Hulyo ng taong ito.

Makakatulong ang mga hakbang na ito anuman ang mangyari sa darating na panahon, kasama na ang petisyon ng MERALCO na nakasalang sa ERC. Iyon ay napaka-importante dahil alam kong iyon ay pinalakpakan ninyo kanina noong binanggit 'yung PPA. Iyung pangalawang pinalakpakan ninyo ay 'yung mga batas na kailangan para sa proteksyon ng kababaiban at kabataan, at 'yon naman ay ipapaubaya na natin sa mga congressmen na narito.

Binanggit ko iyung mga congressmen, binanggit ko 'yung sinabi ni Ed Zialcita na sa buong kasaysayan na nakita niya bilang isang banyaga ng housing, ngayon ang pinakamagandang mga programa ng housing ng ating bansa. At para sa pabahay, gusto ko ring banggitin na binaba na ng Pag-IBIG ang interest rate na pautang sa pabahay sa mga minimum wage earners sa saibang porsiyento na lamang.

Kaugnay nito, dahil ang Pag-IBIG ay napaka-importante para sa manggagawa, sa inyong mga pabahay, in-appoint ko muli sila Alex Aguilar ng TUCP at si Esperanza Ocampo ng Philippine Government Employees Association bilang mga kinatawan ng manggagawa sa Pag-IBIG.

Ako rin ay hihirang na rin pagkatapos ng mahabang pagsusuri at pag-eeksamin ng mga aplikante, mga bagong commissioners ng National Labor Relations Commission (NLRC) para mas mapabilis ang mga pagreresolba ng mga kaso. Sa NLRC, maging sa ibang mga konseho, sisikapin nating lalo pang ipairal ang tripartism bilang paggalang sa kilusang manggagawa.

Dahil ang tripartism ay napakalaking papel upang mapaganda ang kapakanan ng ating mga manggagawa, at ng ating investment climate. Kagaya ng ginawa ng construction industry kanina. Iyon ay tripartism, at ang tripartism ay nagiging matagumpay kung responsable ang mga namamahala at responsable rin ang mga manggagawa.

And I think today we celebrate the responsible labor movement. Iyon ang nakalagay doon sa t-shirt ni Ninong Kito Mendoza — Responsible at Makabuluhang Unyonismo.

The labor movement has been a bastion of democracy, a pillar of development a vanguard of the Rule of Law. As President I acknowledge the constructive activism of the mainstream labor movement cutting across all vital issues of national interest.

I acknowledge labor's devotion to democracy and its rejection of force in the pursuit of political ends.

I acknowledge labor's discipline and forbearance, the mark of a true ally in the Rule of Law and Constitutional adherence.

Kaya, dakilang manggagawang responsable, dakilang manggagawang Pilipino, salamat na kayo ay makabuluhan, salamat na kayo ay responsable at gaya ng sinabi ng lahat ng nagsalita, mabuhay ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino. Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the opening ceremony of the 1st National Bangus Industry Congress
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the opening ceremony of the 1st National Bangus Industry Congress

[Delivered at the Leisure Coast Resort, Dagupan City, Pangasinan, May 1, 2003]

Thank you very much Nani Braganza, my Press Secretary.

I'd like to also greet Dagupan's most senior sons, Speaker De Venecia and Mrs. De Venecia; our host mayor, Mayor Benjie Lim; I'd like to greet, of course, the organizers and leaders of this conference headed by Jaime To, president of the Bangus Association of the Philippines, welcome to Pangasinan all the way from Sarangani; Mr. Tanjanco, Chairperson of the Congress; and my appointive officials — Garry Teves of Landbank; Cito Lorenzo of Agriculture; Rene Diaz, Presidential Assistant; Dagupan son, Pingkoy Duque, President of PhilHealth; and Dagupan son also, Albert Balingit, member of the Board of Landbank.

Minamahal kong kababayan, tan saray kabaleyan ed Dagupan, masantos ya pista'y dayat tan labor day ed sikayon amin. To those of you from elsewhere, I said, happy Feast of the Sea and Labor Day because today is the feast of the sea of Pangasinan Province.

At ako'y natutuwa sapagkat sa kabila ng matinding pagsubok na ating hinaharap ngayon tulad ng SARS, nabigyan pa rin ninyo ng sapat na panahon ang ilang bagay na may kaugnay sa ating kaunlaran tulad ng pagdaraos ng kongresong ito na naghahangad ng lalong makabuti ang takbo ng ating industriya ng bangus lalo na sa pandaigdigang palengke.

And thank you for coming to the province of Pangasinan, the province of Alcala which is now out of quarantine. This Bangus festival is one of the most important events of pista'y dayat. Importante met ya diad Labor Day yan okasyon. Ito ay nagpapadiin — ginagawa natin ito sa Labor Day — nagpapadiin sa layuning maganda ang kalagayan ng ating mga manggagawa sa pamamagitan ng pagpapaunlad ng ating mga industriya lalong-lalo na sa modernisasyon ng agrikultura at pangingisda.

Even if we face problems such as SARS, this shouldn't be an obstacle to going on with our lives. Say gobyerno, gagawen ton amin piyano naitdan na solusyon yay problema'd SARS. Kaya makabubuting 'wag tayong mag-panic at ipagpatuloy lang natin ang ating mga gawain basta malinis ang ating mga kostumbre. May alituntunin na tayong 'pinapatupad para dito huwag tayo masyadong mag-alala basta alerto lamang.

Doon sa pinanggalingan kong SARS Summit sa Thailand, 'yan nga ang isa sa mga pinag-usapan. Na ang malaking banta ng ekonomiya ngayon ng mundo at ng Asia ay hindi 'yung SARS mismo kundi 'yung paranoia tungkol sa SARS. Doon nga, sabi nang WHO, 'yung mga nagkaroon ng outbreak before March 15 — kasi March 15 nagbigay ang who ng babala tungkol sa SARS — 'yung nagkaroon ng outbreak noon, 'yon ang mga libu-libong nag-SARS o daan-daan na nag SARS. 'Yung mga nagkaroon ng SARS pagkatapos ng March 15, kagaya ng thailand at Pilipinas, 'yon ang konti lang dahil nako-control kaagad dahil alam na natin kung papano asikasuhin ang problema. Kung ihahambing natin, Hongkong at China — 3,000 ang SARS, Pilipinas — 3 ang SARS. At baka maging dalawa pa nga kung mapatunayan na 'yung tatay ni adela ay namatay sa cancer at hindi sa SARS. 'Yung Vietnam, naka-abot ng 63 cases at lima ang namatay pero ngayon SARS-free na ang Vietnam. Kaya kontrolado natin ang SARS. Ang dapat kontrolahin natin ang paranoia. Kaya mabuti nandito kayo.

Talaga naman, totoo umiikot ang SARS dahil global ang ating mundo. May mga disadvantage ang globalization kagaya ng nago-global din ang sakit. Pero may mga advantages din ang globalization na dapat gamitin at pagsamantalahan ng bangus industry ng Pilipinas.

Kaya tamang-tama ang tema ng kongreso ninyo, “Bangus goes Global.” Dahil talagang panahon para mapakita natin ang magagandang katangian ng ating isda na bangus sa buong mundo. We should take advantage of the global market and produce what can compete internationally like products from our delicious bangus.

Alam ko ang delicious bangus. Sabi nga ni Benjie ako ay certified Bonuan bangus-lover kasi tuwing bakasyon dumadaan kami dito sa Dagupan para kumain ng Bonuan Bangus. At hindi pa ako pangulo ginagawa ko na ‘yon. Kaya noong naging pangulo ako sabi ko ba’t ko titigilin ‘yung kostumbre kong ‘yon, kaya ganun.

Napakalaki ang potensyal ng industriyang ito lalo na kung ating iisipin na napakalaki ang produksyon nito. Noong nakaraang taon, ayon kay Cito Lorenzo, higit 200,000 metric tons, 232,000 metric tons ang produksyon. With that big production, I instructed Secretary Cito Lorenzo to study the possibility of exporting our products to other countries.

Ang resulta, meron na tayong roadmap na naglalayong maitatag ang export market ng produktong ito sa loob ng labing limang buwan. Determinado tayo na maipasok ang bangus sa pangmundong palengke. Sampung bansa ang tinatarget sa simula na kung saan may tinatayang 5.6 na manggagawang Pilipino. ‘Yan ay makasiguro tayo ed world market itdan koy suporta so balak yo ya’y 160 million pesos na bangus processing planted Dagupan.

Doon sa 160 million, ang hinihingi lamang naman ni Benjie sa national government ay 50 million. Kaya kung naririnig ni Emi Boncodin itong ating broadcast, “Emi, kukulitin ka ni Cito Lorenzo para ma release mo na ‘yung 50 milion na ‘yon.”

Ang processing plant na ‘to ay maglilikha ng mga frozen, smoke, marinated, deboned bangus. Pati na rin ang de lata at de botelyang bangus para iluwas sa Amerika at iba pang mga bansa na merong pamayanang Pilipino.

By June 2004, we expect to ensure the low-price supply of quality bangus fingerlings. Increase bangus production by 25,000 metric tons and add value to the bangus industry with the end view indeed of breaking into this export market. Ya nagawa ira ya, parakepen tayo facilidades na National Integrated Fisheries and Technology Center Ed Bbonuan. The other existing hatcheries is in Calape, Bohol — meron ba tayong mga tiga-bisaya dito? — which caters to the needs of the Visayas. And a new hatchery will be built in Samar to address the needs of Mindanao.

Doon nga kay Mr. To, sabi n’ya, “‘Yan ‘yung fisheries nila diyan sa ano, sa Sarangani, hindi naman ‘yan fishpond eh, factory ‘yan eh. Dahil napaka-high tech and modern ang production methods nila.” Eventually, as we build more hatcheries we can lower the price of ten centavos per fry. With sufficient supply and lower cost we expect a dramatic increase in milkfish production and the creation of more livelihood opportunities for our agricultural workers in breeding fry production and marketing for our coastal communities.

Tingnan ninyo ang ginawa ni Ginoong Fil Hipolito — nandito ba siya? Si Fil Hipolito? Wala? Naku! Dapat nandito siya. Anyway, let me tell you about him. Siya ay taga-barangay Damortis, Sto. Tomas, La Union. Siya ay nagsanay sa Bonuan Center dito sa Dagupan. Ginawa n’yang bangus hatchery ang kanyang prawn hatchery. Nen ika-3 nga Abril, Angala na 3.3 million bangus ed presyo’n 30,000 pesos. For a period of 22 days, he was able to produce 600,000 fries amounting to almost 200,000 pesos. His gross earnings totalled a 150,000 pesos and this was only within a period of three weeks. Kaya sa mga nanonood — kasi ‘yung mga dito alam na nila ‘yon — kayong mga nanonood, doon sa may mga posibilidad na lugar para sa bangus hatchery pwede itong pagkakitaan. The Bonuan Center of Dagupan is even willing to provide bangus eggs on a pay-later-when-earning’s scheme. Diad samay tagey yay presyo’y feed say nagawaan. Dapat yay daiset labat so osaren so semi-intensive fish farming.

Ang sinasabi ko, dapat hindi na masyadong intensive ang ating fish farming. With the increasing occurrence of fish kill due to intensively farmed and overcrowded fishponds and cages, we have to shift to safe and environment-friendly technologies. Ibalik natin ang feed na lablab na, alam ni Joe ito kasi nakapag... Pinaaral ng tatay ni Joe si Joe at mga kapatid n’ya dahil sa ang tatay n’ya ay isa sa mga pioneers ng bangus. Alam n’ya ‘yung lablab. Sa napag-alaman ko, ito ang pangunahing dahilan kung bakit malinamnam ang Bonuan bangus.

Mampaalagey tayo met na mariculture cage zones or parks. And so on this day, ya if you have mariculture, 'yon din ay that is going to also help us make our bangus production more scientific. And so on this day, as we celebrate pista'y dayat and the value of labor, let this meeting inspire all of us, lalo na sa tapos na ang meeting makikita n'yo 'yung longest bangus grill. May all of that the visuals and the substance in this meeting inspire us to work relentlessly for the continued revitalization, competitiveness and success of our unique Philippine bangus industry.

Balbaleg ya salamat and congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Special Prayer Rally on the SARS crisis

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Special Prayer Rally on the SARS crisis (Nation's Call for Sacred Assembly)

[Delivered at the Malacañang Grounds, May 2, 2003]

Maraming salamat po, Secretary Romulo.

Maraming salamat po, Bishop Eddie Villanueva; maraming salamat, Manolet Dayrit, Roy Golez, Ed Manda, Didi Domingo, Milt Alingod; maraming salamat, Bishop Eñiguez; maraming salamat, Bishop Magbanua; maraming salamat Bishop Tindero; maraming salamat, brother Dan Balais; mga kapatid; mga kapwa Pilipino, maraming salamat sa inyong pagbuo nitong napapanahong panawagan para sa sagradong pagpupulong; maraming salamat sa inyong napaka aktibong partisipasyon sa kampanya ng gobyerno kontra sa banta ng SARS.

Nagbisita po kami ni Manolet Dayrit kanina sa barangay vacante sa Alcala, Pangasinan kanina. Nagpapasalamat tayo sa Panginoon dahil ang Barangay Vacante ay libre na sa SARS. Nagpunta kami ni Manolet sa Barangay Vacante para magpasalamat sa taumbarangay sa kanilang diwa at sakripisyo at pasensiya. Ang sakripisyo ng mga Pilipino maging dito sa Pilipinas at sa ibayong dagat ay mga istorya ng ating pinaka-napapamahal na asal. They are there for the greater glory of God.

Si Adela Catalon at ang kanyang ama ay namatay sa yakap ng matinding pagmamahal sa pamamagitan ng isang ama at isang anak. Hindi ba ganun ang pagmamahal ni Hesukristo sa ating amang diyos.

Ngayon, meron naman tayong JP, ang taga-alaga na kinailangan ibigay ang kanyang buhay sa Singapore habang naglilingkod sa mga kapuwa tao. Hindi ba ganun si Hesus kristo na nagbigay ng kanyang buhay para tayo ay mabuhay sa Panginoon.

Ipaubaya natin sa Panginoon ‘yung mga namamatay sa SARS sa ibayong dagat na kinakailangan umuwi bilang abo. ‘Yung mga namatay ay mga halimbawa ng matahimik na pagkabayani sa kanilang pamilya at kaanak at sa mga iba pang sa mga dayuhang lupa na pinaglilingkuran nila.

Purihin natin ang Panginoon dahil makabayani ang ating mamamayan. Makabayani sila kung saan nararapat at purihin natin ang Panginoon at hingiin natin na ituloy na ipairal ang ating sama-samang pag-alerto gaya ng mga dasal na ginawa ng ating mga elders kanina.

At gusto kong magpasalamat sa Panginoon dahil ang SARS bagama’t isang sakuna ay naglikha rin ng isang kahanga-hangang pagkakaisa sa ating sambayanan sa likod ng ating pamahalaan. Glory be to God!

Ako, bilang pangulo na gaya ng sabi ni Bishop Eddie na isang pangulong kristiyanong bukas ang loob sa Panginoon, pinapaubaya ko ang ating bansa sa pag-alaga ng Panginoon.

Bigyan niyo ako ng panalangin din na ituloy ko na parati akong susunod sa Panginoon kung saan niya ako dinadala, umaabot sa lampas ng ating bansa, humahanap ng tulong sa mga dayuhang lider habang nakikipag-usap sa pinakamakumbabang Pilipino sa sariling bayan. Bigyan ho niyo ako ng dasal na bigyan ako ng Panginoon ng grasya na gawin ang lahat ng utos ng Panginoon sa akin para ikalap ang ating mga enerhiya at kakayahan sa paligid ng isang layunin na manalo ang ating bansa — the people of God sa laban na ito.

Sa gitna ng lahat nito, nananalangin ako, manalangin tayo sa Panginoon na linawin ang lahat ng diwa ng lahat ng taumbayan, para buong taumbayan, buong sambayanan ay magbigay ng buong kooperasyon saan man sila.

Mga kapatid sa Panginoon, huwag tayong mag-alala, ang Panginoon ay laging katabi natin.

My prayer, my presidential prayer is based from psalm 144 verses 12 to 15. A beautiful summary of God's glorious program and vision for every nation and surely for our beloved country. May I read from the new living translation and the new international version:

Verse 12: "May our sons flourish in their youth like well-nurtured plants; may our daughters be like graceful pillars curb to adorn a palace." Mga kapatid, this speaks clearly of a vision of happy, strong families, and if I may add, SARS-free families.

Verse 13: "May our farms be filled with crops of every kind; may the flocks in our fields multiply by the thousands even tens of thousands; and may our oxen be loaded with produce." Hindi nga ba ito, people of God? Isn't this verse a clear picture of economic prosperity which our people all long to enjoy?

Verse 14b: "May there be no breaching of walls, no forced exiles, no cry of distress in our streets." Ito, mga kapatid sa Panginoon, this speaks of social peace and public justice.

Verse 15: "Blessed are the people of whom this is true; blessed are the people whose god is the Lord." This is the foundation of all that we dream and long for our beloved Philippines. A full commitment to God and his righteousness. Without his help, we can never make it.

Community of the Lord, let us pray:

Our heavenly father, as President of the Philippines, I come before your presence in behalf of our beloved people. I praise your name for you alone of all wisdom and power, honoring glory belongs only to you. You determine the course of world events. You control the destinies of nations. It is you who changes times and seasons, who sets rulers and authorities and also removes them according to your will.

I acknowledge with thanksgiving your glorious plan for our beloved Philippines. I agree that indeed according to your words of prophecy, the Philippines will become a strong republic, a prosperous nation that you will use to bless other nations. But Lord, we know that your destiny for us will only be fulfilled if we as a people totally commit our lives to you, Repent and turn away from our sinful ways and acknowledge your Lordship over our nation.

So even now, in behalf of our people, I ask your forgiveness for all our sins. Forgive us for our disobedience to your laws and command, for the sins of idolatry in all forms, for corruption especially in government, for greed and deceit especially in the business realm, for rebellion that has bred violence, for our disunity, divisions and selfishness, for lack of strong will to enforce our own laws, without fear or favor; for marginalizing the poor and depriving them of justice and opportunities to better their lot; for pornography, marital infidelities and moral permissiveness. Lord hear, lord forgive, Lord act.

Now as president, I solemnly offer into your hands our beloved Philippines that may we become the blessed nation you desire for us to be. I pray that you establish your lordship and authority over every Filipino citizen and every Filipino family. That every home will be the center of love, harmony, strength and formation of biblical values — the basic unit for a strong republic.

I pray that you spare our people from the SARS plague and other diseases, and that you continually cover us with the redeeming blood of Jesus. We claim the healing grace of Jesus for our people for you said that by his wounds we were healed.

I pray that you establish your righteousness, integrity and fear of God over every branch, department and office of the government, we cast away the spirit of corruption, dishonesty, injustice and other forms of immorality that have plagued us for so long.

I ask that you continue to expose all anomalies, grafts and scandals. I pray that you intervene supernaturally for a lasting climate of peace and order to reign upon us especially in Mindanao. I cast away the spirit of violence and lawlessness that has bred kidnappings and other crimes.

I pray that you release a miracle favor upon our economy, for the continuous growth of businesses, entry of good investors, more entrepreneurs, more business opportunities, multiplied production in the agricultural and manufacturing sectors that will fuel the engines of economic prosperity. We claim your promise that if we obey you you will blessed us and give us an abundance of all things. We will no longer borrow but lend. We will be the head not the tail. Help us lord to make Jesus Christ the lord the foundation of all areas of our lives, our conduct and that in all our ways, we acknowledge him. Even now, i thank you for the answers to these prayers.

Thank you for prosperity, health and victory for our people. Thank you for strength and unity. Thank you for peace and justice.

I declare the Philippines a strong republic that belongs to Jesus Christ and to Jesus Christ alone.

Jesus is lord over the Philippines. Amen and amen and amen.

Speech of President Arroyo during the National-Local Governments Counter Attack against SARS Forum

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the National-Local Governments Counter Attack against SARS Forum

[Delivered at the PICC, Roxas Blvd., Pasay City, May 3, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Bert Romulo.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat na dumalo dito. Ibig sabihin handa kayong lumaban sa sars. Kaya maupo kayo para malakas tayo sa paglaban sa SARS.

Kagalang-galang na Secretary Joey Lina at lahat ng mga kasama n'ya sa DILG; kasama na rin ang mga nag-organize nito dahil ito nga ay organisado ng DILG para 'yung mga local governments ay talagang on-board sa ating laban kontra sa SARS; Secretary Manolito Dayrit ang ating anti-SARS Czar; ang mga pangulo ng mga liga, the President of the League of Leagues, Governor Delfo del Rosario; president ng League of Cities, Francis Tolentino—akala ko Francis nagpaalam ka sa akin kahapon na hindi ka makakadalo. Anyway, nandito si Francis mabuti na lamang; Mayor Monching Guico, President of the League of Municipalities; si James Marty Lim, pangalawang beses na tayo makikipag-usap tungkol sa SARS. Dahil kasama ko na siya sa mga liga ng mga barangay noong nag-meeting tayo; nandito rin 'yung iba't-ibang mga kasapi ng SARS Management Committee: si Secretary Roilo Halez, nandiyan ba siya? Ayun! Si Secretary DJ De Jesus; wala siya dito sa head table pero dapat batiin din natin 'yung mga kabataan, si SK President Ariel Arcillas; 'yung nagdadagdag ng biyaya para sa ating mga health workers, pangulo ng PhilHealth, si Pinkoy Duque; at siyempre 'yung ating host mayors, mayor ng Pasay City, Peewee Trinidad. Ay! Nawala na 'yung ating host mayor. Anyway, itong lugar na ito nasa border ng Pasay City at Maynila at narito pa rin si Lito Atienza; saan si Peewee? Ayun, nandiyan ka pa. Thank you, Peewee; andami nating mga Metro Manila Mayors na narito, andami nating city mayors, ang dami nating provincial governors. Hindi na iisa-isa ang pangalan nila. Pasasalamat sa ating mga local government officials na dumalo rito. At syempre 'yung ating mga bayaning health workers.

I would also like to greet Dr. John Olive, our who representative to the Philippines. We thank who for all of its support, all of its sober evaluation of SARS in the Philippines. We thank who even as we congratulate Vietnam for graduating from the list of SARS countries. We thank who that in recognition of our efforts we were never listed as a SARS country in the first place.

Nonetheless, we must face the threat of SARS with audacity and solidarity. It's becoming obvious that the SARS has and is already causing tremendous effects on local and international economies. The fear of SARS is actually what is bringing down the economies of the region. Doon sa pista'y dayat, dati-dati ang dami daming tao sa San Fabian. Noong nagpunta ako, konti lamang. Pero wala namang SARS sa San Fabian. Layu-layo ng San Fabian sa Alcala, at wala na ring SARS sa Alcala. Kaya ibig sabihin noon, ang katotohanan ang maglilibre sa ating bansa mula sa SARS. At kailangan kayo, mga local government executives para ipakalat ang katotohanan.

Kailangan natin ng planong pangkilos. Ang ating pangunahing manebwela ng pagka-alerto ay ang mga lokal na pamahalaan, kasama na rito ang mga barangay. Eh siyempre, ang barangay hindi magkakasya dito, kaya hiwalay kaming nag-miting nila James Marty Lim.

It is at the level of implementation in the community that will show our people that we mean business in containing SARS.

Let's together appeal to the public to remain calm and to seek information from credible sources as we also encourage again the media to be responsible sources of verified information. And as government, let us do our share in obtaining the necessary information on developments on SARS as well as in coordinating with the international community on holistic and best practices to deal with SARS.

In the global realm, we have the World Health Organization as the supreme commander of our efforts. The who lays down the standards of compliance and action, and coordinates the strategic points of scientific research and containment.

At the regional level, at the SARS summit in Bangkok last week, we set forth specific action points for the containment of SARS:

First, ensure proper departure health screening for travelers at the point of origin. Napaka-importante 'yon. Kasi kung istrikto ang lahat ng bansa sa departure at di siya nagtatanggap na bansa kahit na may lumusot, kampante na tayo. Kaya noong ako'y umalis sa Pilipinas, nagpa-temperature. Noong bumalik, hindi naman kailangan mag-quarantine dahil hindi naman SARS country din ang Thailand. Kaya importante ang katotohanan, importante rin ang sapat na pangangalaga ang kailangan;

Second, establish standardized measures for proper health screening;

Third, cooperate in providing public information and education to promote awareness;

And fourth, establish and strengthen an early warning system on emerging infectious diseases.

Sa libel naman ng ating bansa, naglabas ako ng Executive Order na nagbibigay ng kapangyarihan sa kalihim ng kalusugan at ang kaniyang mga kapangkat — 'yung mga nilista ni Joey kanina — sa pagmamaneho ng SARS.

Inatasan ko naman si Secretary Joey Lina na ipakilos ang PNP. And, iI also instructed him in that Executive Order to exercise supervision over local governments with regard to and for the duration of this crisis. Alam ko na kayong nga local government officials, diretsong halal ng taumbayan. Kaya hindi puwedeng nagko-kontrol at supervise ang dilg sa inyo sa araw-araw. Ngunit sa panahon ng SARS, may kapangyarihan na magsupervise siya sa inyo sa mga bagay tungkol sa SARS. This is applicable in the following:

First, isolation and control of quarantine areas;

Second, maintenance of peace and order in local communities;

And third, providing the necessary assistance in the conduct of and transport of SARS cases and/or SARS suspects.

Tinukoy na natin ang San Lazaro hospital at ang Research Institute for Tropical Medicine bilang pangunahing ospital para alagaan ang mga pasyente ng SARS. At ang gobyerno din ay magtutukoy ng mga ospital para ipagmaneho ang SARS sa lahat ng rehiyon ng bansa.

Palagay ko, ito'y isang kailangang detalyeng ipaliwanag ni Manolet Dayrit. Saan-saan ang mga itutukoy na SARS hospitals sa iba't-ibang lugar ng ating mga rehiyon.

Sa isang bilyong pisong linaan ko para sa sars, linalaan ang 500 million pesos para ibayuhin ang mga imprastraktura, kasangkapan at kagamitan ng mga ospital na ito na itutukoy bilang SARS hospital.

'Yung ating mga bayaning health worker naman. Lahat ng health worker sa harap ng kampanya kontra sars ay bibigyan ng buong kumpletong suot sa proteksyon. Hindi tayo magsusugal sa kaligtasan at kapakanan noong mga nagkakarga ng kabigatan ng sakripisyo, at 'yon na nga ang ating mga health workers.

Itong mga ginagawa nating ito, itong mga pinapahayag ko sa inyo, ayon sa World Health Organization, tama itong mga gawaing ito para mapigil ang epidemya. At ituloy natin na hindi pa makatala ang Pilipinas bilang bansang SARS. Alam niyo itong SARS na ito, nakilala natin bilang SARS sang-ayon sa ulat ng who noong March 15. Ngunit nagsimula ‘yung SARS, ayon sa pag-aaral at going back to the history noong nobyembre pa doon sa Guangdong, China. November hanggang March, lumalaganap ang SARS, pero hindi pa kilala at hindi pa alam kung papano asikasuhin ito. Kayong mga nahawang bansa ng SARS, ‘yung mga nagka-sars bago March 15 — China, Hong Kong, Singapore, Vietnam, pati ‘yung lugar ng Taiwan — libu-libo o daan-daan ang mga nagkaroon ng SARS. Pero after march 15, noong nakilala na natin at tayo ay ginagawa na natin ang kailangan sang-ayon sa mga payo ng who para maiwasan ito kagaya ng Pilipinas at ‘yung ibang mga nakalista ay tignan niyo sa Pilipinas, kung sa China tatlong libo, sa Pilipinas tatlo. Baka pa nga dalawa, eh. Kasi ‘yung tatay ni Adela, ‘di naman talaga natin alam kung namatay sa SARS o sa Cancer. Dahil naalala n’yo si Adela pumunta rito para nga maghanap ng faith healer para sa tatay niyang namamatay na ng cancer. Kaya tignan mo ang kaibahan, three thousand for those who caught it before March 15. Three for a country like ours where it happened after March 15.

Kaya importante ang kaalaman. Kaya manatiling mulat tayo ngunit mahinahon.

Doon sa Hong Kong, kung saan mahigit isang libo na ang may SARS, sa isang gusali lamang, ang Amoy Gardens, kumalat ang SARS sa tatlungdaang biktima dahil kinalat ng ipis ang mikrobyong dumadaan sa sewage system. Ano ang leksiyon diyan? Let’s learn from that experience. Let’s actively participate in a nationwide clean-up campaign. Dahil SARS or no SARS, ang kalinisan ay kalusugan, ang kalusugan ay kayamanan ng isang matatag na republika.

So carry on, let us win this battle for the sake of our people, for the sake of their livelihood and normal lives.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the commemorative rites on the Death Centenary of Apolinario Mabini

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the commemorative rites on the Death Centenary of Apolinario Mabini

[Delivered at the Mabini Shrine, Malacañang Park, Manila, May 13, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Executive Director Vic Badoy, our friend from Cotabato City and Executive Director of the National Historical Institute.

Manila Mayor Lito Atienza; Uy, mga kababaihan nandito pala; Vice Mayor Lacuna at ang iba't-ibang kasapi ng city council; mga kasapi ng gabinete: Metro Manila Chairman Bayani Fernando, at Secretary Luis Lorenzo ng DA, at si Undersecretary Chito Brillantes, nangangatawan ng Department of Foreign Affairs, si Evelyn Pantig na hindi lamang Undersecretary of Tourism pero siya rin ang Chairman ng National Commission on Culture and the Arts; Excellencies of the diplomatic corps; chairman Noli Barcelona of the Postal Corporation who provided that commemorative stamps that are being issued today; members of the religious; the caretakers of the Mabini Shrine headed by the Curator Azucena Fido; the Inter-Agency Organizing Committee of the Death Centenary of Apolinario Mabini; officers of the military and the police led by General Narciso Abaya and Deputy Director General Edgar Aglipay; I would like to greet the descendants of the heroes of the freedom war represented here by Mr. Roy Daza on stage; mga kaibigan, mga teachers, mga barangay leaders; mga estudyante:

Nagkakaisa ang ating bansa itong araw ng sentenaryo ng pagkamatay ng ating dakilang bayani na si Apolinario Mabini.

Si Mabini ay isa sa pinakamatalino at sikat na bayani natin kahit na siya ay may kapansanan. Siya ay bansag na bahagi ng ating pamanang kasaysayan at kultura.

Napanganak siyang mahirap — nandiyan ‘yung nipa hut. ‘Yan ang replica ng nipa hut kung saan siya napanganak — ngunit naging isa sa pinakamakabuluhang lider ng rebolusyon ng Pilipinas.

Naging abogado siya, sinuporta niya ang kanyang pag-aaral sa pamamagitan ng iba't-ibang trabaho sa iba't-ibang sangay ng hukuman. He served in the Aguinaldo Cabinet as President of the Council of Secretaries and as Secretary of Foreign Affairs. In other words, in Aguinaldo's presidency he was the Bert romulo and the Blas Ople combined.

At sa kanyang trabaho bilang Executive Secretary, siya ay nag-buo ng pinaka-unang mga bayan, probinsiya, hukuman, pulis ng Unang Republika ng Pilipinas.

Mula sa kanyang matalinong utak nanggaling ang programa Constitucional De La Republica Filipina, na siya ang naging pangunahing pinanggalingan ng unang Saligang Batas ng Pilipinas. Siya rin ang nagsulat ng El Verdadero Decalogo o “The True Decalogue” na nagbuo ng prinsipyong moral at pulitikal ng Unang Republika.

Noong panahon ng mga Amerikano, si Mabini ay nadistiero sa Guam. Hindi matagal pagkatapos siya umuwi, namatay siya sa edad treinta’y nueve. Kaya napaka-bata ang ating mga bayani nung panahong ‘yon. Kaya ating mga kabataan na narito ngayon ang dami-daming n’yong magagawa para sa ating bansa bago kayo maging 40 years old.

At si Mabini ang tinatawag na Konsyensiya at Utak ng Rebolusyon. He was known as the Brains of the Revolution.

Sa ating pagparangal kay Mabini ngayon, pinaparangalan din natin ang lahat ng kasalukuyang Pilipino na tumutulong sa paghugis — oh, let me also greet... I saw earlier Congressman Zialcita. Thank you, yes. He doesn't belong to the City of Manila but thank you to the Congressman of Parañaque for honoring the memory of Apolinario

Mabini by being with us. Naalala ko biro mo, Ed I remembered 'yon noong pinag-uusapan ko na 'yang ating mga modern day heroes. Anyway, pag binibigyan natin ng parangal si Apolinario Mabini binibigyan din natin ng parangal 'yung mga kasalukuyang mga bayani, mga huwarang mamamayan na malaki ang ginagawa para sa paghugis ng isang mapayapa, madignidad at maunlad na kinabukasan para sa ating bansa.

Halimbawa, sa gitna ng ating laban kontra sa kinatatatungang sakit, naaalala natin ang manggagawa ng kalusugan na humaharap dito sa ating bansa at sa ibang bansa. What the firefighters and the New York police were in 9-11 our health workers are the hero in the battle against SARS. Not only in the Philippines but in Hong Kong, Singapore and wherever we have health workers all over the world. Sila ang ating bayani ng mga araw na ito. Kaya pag-pinaparangal natin si Apolinario Mabini bigyan din natin ng parangal ang ating mga health workers na napakagaling at may malasakit.

Because of them, so far, we are winning the fight against SARS. Every Filipino must continue to take responsibility for the health and welfare of the entire national community. Everybody has a stake in making the Philippines SARS free.

Pag inaalala natin ang pagkabayani ni Mabini naaalala rin natin ang iba't-ibang pang ating mga bayani na naglalaban ngayon. Hindi lamang lumalaban kontra sa SARS, lumalaban rin kontra sa ibang banta kagaya ng terorismo. Sa gitna ng ating laban kontra sa terorismo, naaalala natin ang mga mamamayan sa ating malalayong pamayanan na tumitindig na alerto.

Kahapon, doon sa Siocon, binigay ko ang pinakamataas na parangal na pwedeng mabigay ng pangulo sa isang pulis 'yung Medal of Valor. Dahil sila ay pinatatag nila 'yung kanilang pagdepensa sa bayan ng Siocon kontra sa mga terorista. Kaya binigyan natin ang Chief of Police ng Siocon ng Medal of Valor.

The government is nearing a decision point on whether to declare the MILF a terrorist organization, and to take the necessary operational and diplomatic measures to strengthen this prospective policy. We are holding this decision in abeyance upon the recommendation of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on International Security. Makikipag-usap usap tayo sa ating mga kaibigan na gusto nang kapayapaan sa ating bansa lalo na doon sa katimugan ng ating bansa. Itong mga darating na Linggo magkikita tayo doon sa isang komperensya. There will be a forthcoming OIC conference of foreign ministers to be held toward the end of this month. And even as we fight terrorism together, we want to thank our foreign friends especially Malaysia, whose ambassador is here and I gave him our thanks today for continuing to patiently help the Philippines achieve principled peace here in Mindanao.

Meanwhile, the security of our civilian communities is of our utmost concern. Punitive actions will continue and the peace talks remain suspended. We will treat those who attack civilians as plain terrorists.

As I said yesterday, in Koronadal, time is running out for the MILF to prove its sincerity in the peace process. It must cut the double talk and make a clear statement on whether it is allied with the Abu Sayyaf and foreign terrorist groups such as the Jemaah Islamiyah or Al Qaeda, or unequivocally reject them.

The MILF can no longer hide behind a veil of legitimacy under the growing suspicion that it is involved in the entire web of terrorism, domestically and regionally.

Kaya sa mga panahong ito, isang daan taon pagkatapos namatay si Apolinario Mabini, marami tayong mga banta, banta sa kalusugan ng ating bansa. Banta sa pagkakaisa sa ilalim ng ating saligang batas na kung saan ang unang saligang batas ay siyang ginawa ang first draft ni Apolinario Mabini.

Kaya sa araw na binibigyan natin siya ng ating parangal, 100 years after his death, ipaglaban natin 'yung mga prinsipyo na ipinaglaban niya, 'yung mga prinsipyo na binuo niya bilang utak ng ating rebolusyon. Lalo na ang ating kabataan, na ang daming narito, mga estudyante, mga girl scouts, mga boy scouts. Si Apolinario Mabini ay kabataan ng ating bansa nung kanyang panahon meron kayong pwedeng maging huwaran ng inyong pagkilos sa kinabubuti ng ating bansa.

Muli, sa lahat ng nakikinabang sa kalayaan na ibinuo ng diwa at ipinaglaban ni Apolinario Mabini at ibang bayani ng ating bansa. Let us remember the memory of Apolinario Mabini and let us live by the ideals of the brains of the Philippine revolution.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 19th Commencement Exercises of A.M.A. Computer University

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 19th Commencement Exercises of A.M.A. Computer University

[Delivered at the Araneta Coliseum, Cubao, Quezon City, May 14, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Dr. Amable Aguiluz V, ang ama ng A.M.A., the father of the A.M.A. Computer University and the pioneer of computer education in the Philippines and many parts of the world.

Dr. Allan Fisher, President, Icarnege Mellon University. Thank you for coming here and thank you for giving me the observation about a wonderful thing about our Philippine culture.

In the United States where I studied, as soon as a student graduates all she or he wants to do is get away from his own home and live by himself, alone, independent of his parents. Dito nakita natin ang ating mga nagtatapos, as our students graduate, they acknowledge the great support of their parents and they dedicate their education to their parents. Family life continues beyond graduation. Nakita natin sa buhay ng ating valedictorian na si Miss Liamzon at ang kanyang magulang at kanyang pamilya.

Gusto kong batiin lahat ng mga nag-graduate ngayon. Gusto kong batiin lahat ng kanilang mga magulang na kinakatawan ni Ginoong Liamzon nanagta-trabaho labing-walong taon na sa Dubai, sa United Arab Emirates. Malaking sakrifício para makapag-aral sa magandang unibersidad ang kanyang anak ganoon din ang sakrifício ng lahat ng mga magulang na nagtrabaho at nagsakrifício. Kaya pwede na kayong umupo para hindi na kayo kailangang magsakrifício pa.

Dr. Rodriguez, Vice President for Academic Affairs, Mr. Michael Hague, the National Computer Center of the U.K. pinapatunay lamang ng A.M.A. hindi lamang nagbibigay sa ating lipunan ng mga graduates ng ICT kung hindi nagbibigay din sa pangmundong lipunan ng certified program graduates. Kasi hindi porke't meron kayong pinag-aralang computer ay may trabaho kayo. Kailangan 'yung certification programs at lahat ng nag-graduate sa ICT sa A.M.A ay certified programmers. Gaya ng sinabi ni Mr. Michael Hague kaya dobleng congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Members of the academe, as I said, the graduates I'd like to also acknowledge the presence of my presidential party here: my Presidential Assistant Dodie Limcaoco, and it so happens 'yung general manager ng airport, si Ed Manda na nandito hindi dahil siya ang general manager ng airport kung hindi dahil isa 'yung mga magulang na nagsikap upang anak niya ay magkaroon ng edukasyon sa A.M.A. Computer University.

Kaiba-iba itong ating seremonya 'di ba. 'Yung pagpapakita ng pagkakaisa ng pamilyang Pilipino. 'Yung pagsasakripisyo ng mga magulang na magta-trabaho pa kung kailangan sa ibayong dagat para maganda ang edukasyon ng kanyang anak. At itong pagtatapos mismo ay gaya nang sabi ng ating mga dayuhang mga bisita isang pangunahing pangyayari sa kasaysayan ng sistema ng edukasyon sa Pilipinas maging sa buong mundo. Dahil itong araw na ito, nakatindig tayo, nakatindig ako, nakaupo kayo sa harap ng labindalawang libong estudyante na nagtatapos mula sa iba't-ibang campus sa A.M.A. sa Luzon, Visayas at Mindanao. Itong seremonya gaya nang sabi ng mga nagsalita na ay hinihimpapawid sabay-sabay sa iba't-ibang lungsod kung saan may iba't-ibang campus ang A.M.A. Computer University.

Pinapamahagi rin itong pangyayari sa mga estudyante ng A.M.A. sa iba't-ibang lugar sa mundo, sa kaharian ng bahrain, sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng mundo. At napapanood rin sa internet ng mga kasamahan ni Ginoong Liamzon hindi lang 'yung 150,000 na Filipino workers sa U.A.E. kung hindi sa iba't-ibang bahagi na rin ng ating Middle East at buong mundo. Kaya gusto kong gamitin itong pagkakataon na ipahayag sa mga Pilipino sa Bahrain, sa mga Pilipino sa United Arab Emirates, sa lahat ng mga Pilipino doon sa Gulf States. Gusto kung ipaabot sa inyo at ipahayag na kaninang umaga pinirmahan ko ang papeles ni Dr. Amable Aguiluz bilang special envoy ng pangulo ng Republika ng Pilipinas sa Gulf Cooperation Council. Itong Gulf Cooperation Council ay binubuo ng anim na bansang nasa Arabian Gulf — iyung Bahrain kung saan may eskwela ang A.M.A.; iyung Kuwait na napapanood natin araw-araw noong isang buwan dahil nandoon ang frontline sa laban doon sa Iraq; iyung Oman; iyung Qatar; iyung kung saan for the last 18 years nagtra-trabaho si Ginoong Liamzon, iyung United Arab Emirates; at iyung Saudi Arabia.

And therefore, speaking of Saudi Arabia let me take this opportunity to express that I sympathize with the families of the victims in the Riyadh bombing in Saudi Arabia. This is a risk inherent in the deployment of millions of Filipinos worldwide. It's also a risk we carry for being part of a global war against terrorism. The world has known for a long time that the tentacles of terrorism stretch across borders and can only be destroyed by international action. Kailangang mawasak ang pangmundong terorismo para sa kapakanan ng ating mga dakilang manggagawang Pilipino, gaya ni Ginoong Liamzon, na kahit saan ay hinahanap at hinahangaan, maging bilang nurse, enhinyero, office staff, manager o knowledge workers kagaya ng mga nagtatapos sa A.M.A.

I am very happy to learn that the Philippines topped the knowledge jobs category in the global new e-economy index or the G.N.E.I. the G.N.E.I. is a technological competitiveness index that determines the I.T. readiness and I.T. capability of each country.

Australia nag-number two, America nag-number three, Pilipinas nag-number one. This means we have more qualified ICT professionals, engineers and senior ICT managers than any other country. And we have a higher net enrollment in the field among persons between the ages of 17 and 34. At nakamit natin 'yung pagka-number one, salamat sa A.M.A. salamat kay King Aguiluz, ang ama ng A.M.A. sa Pilipinas, pati na rin sa Arabian Gulf.

Gaya ng sabi ko, meron ng A.M.A. sa Bahrain. Sabi nga ni Ginoong Liamzon dahil napakaraming Pilipino rin sa United Arab Emirates, siguro darating ang panahon maglalagay din ang A.M.A. doon sa Dubai.

Bilang aking special envoy sa Arabian Gulf, gusto ko, na kung pwede pumunta si Dr. Aguiluz para ipahayag ang aking pakikiramay sa ating mga pamayanang Pilipinong nasawian sa pagbobomba sa Saudi. Our Embassy in Saudi Arabia will work closely with Saudi authorities in Riyadh to get at the root of this incident and obtain justice for the victims. The OWWA will see to the welfare of their bereaved families. This tragedy shows the utter helplessness of the civilians against the agents of terror. We are experiencing this in our own country where we are now thick in punitive actions against terrorists in Mindanao. Sa aton mga graduates diha sa Mindanao nga tuwa karon sa Davao Convention Center, ang akon mensahe kaninyo ug sa inyong mga pamilya, we will not relent in this campaign until we achieve justice of the victims of senseless murder.

The MILF must renounce links with international terrorists. Surrender the terrorists who murdered innocent civilians and stop all forms of terrorism. The people would like to read this from the lips of the MILF leadership. Anything short of these will be considered half measures, which will not do. Punitive actions will continue and we will escalate political and military measures as necessary. Sa aton mga kaigsuonan sa Mindanao, I would like to stress, this is not a fight against Muslims. This is a fight against terror being waged by all decent and civilized Filipinos. We will not acknowledge the false offers of peace or succumb to political pressure. To retreat now would only invite more predations. I have the duty to protect the national interest from greater harm.

Tungkulin ko rin, kasama ng ating kalaban laban kontra terorismo. Tungkulin ko rin kahit may krisis sa mundo, na sikapin ipasulong ang ating ekonomiya upang magkaroon ng trabaho ang ating mga mamamayan. Alam ko, mga nagtatapos sa A.M.A. malaki ang inyong bentaha kasi maganda ang inyong edukasyon, ngunit para sa iilan sa inyo na baka wala pang trabaho naghihintay, gusto ko ipa-alala sa inyo na doon sa SM Megamall ang DOLE ay may jobs fair sa kasalukuyan na nagsimula noong Abril at tuloy-tuloy ito hanggang ika-sampu ng Hunyo. Doon sa jobs fair na 'yon ug naa jobs fair sab sa Davao ug Cebu. Mayroon doon naka-alok sa jobs fair sa SM Megamall, 'yung jobs fair ng DOLE, may naka-alok na isangdaang libong trabaho. Sa huling kaalaman ko, labing anim na libo na ang nakahanap ng trabaho sa jobs fair na 'yon. Kaya merong pang walumpu't apat na libong trabaho na naghihintay sa mga nagtatapos sa A.M.A. at sa iba't-iba pang mga kolehiyo.

Sa ating laban kontra sa kahirapan, kailangan nga ang mga trabahong nanggagaling sa namumuhunan kagaya ng mga trabahong nakahanda sa inyo doon sa jobs fair ng DOLE sa SM Megamall. Kailangan rin ang modernisasyon ng sakahan, ang mga deretsong serbisyo para gumaan ang buhay ng mga mahihirap, at ang mabuting pamamahala. Sa lahat nito, kailangan ang ICT o I.T. gusto kong ipamana na ang ICT ay nakapag-ibayo ng lahat ng ito: pamumuhunan, sakahan, serbisyo sa mahihirap, at pamamahala.

Halimbawa, sa pamamahala. I'm determined that ICT will ensure clean and honest elections from 2004 onwards.

I am determined to lead and support all efforts as I have made the budget available from many sources to ensure that the national elections next year will make full use of computerized canvassing of returns and thereby minimize, if not totally eradicate, the cheating that used to be done through the traditional mode.

As we install more ICT and ICT-based projects in the different programs of effective governance, investment promotion, agricultural modernization and poverty alleviation, the demand for ICT workers especially those graduating from an excellent school like A.M.A. is bound to increase.

I challenge the graduates of A.M.A. to continue to be models, model citizens of an electronically enabled Philippines. You, the graduates of A.M.A., you have what it takes to succeed. I ask you help others do the same.

And as model citizens, never lose sight of your equally important roles in the fight against poverty, ignorance, disease and injustice in our society.

And wherever you go, maging dito sa Maynila, maging sa Makati kung saan nag-graduate si Ann Marie Liamzon, maging didto sa Cebu, sa Davao, maging sa ibayong dagat, I shall continue to depend on your unremitting excellence and patriotism. Graduates of A.M.A University, you are blessed with an excellent education.

Good luck! For the rest of your lives, and may you use your knowledge not only for your beloved parents and your beloved families, but together with them and your families, for the good of the people of the Philippines whom we all love so much.

Congratulations! At mabuhay kayong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the closing program of the National Summit of Women Local Chief Executives and Legislators

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the closing program of the National Summit of Women Local Chief Executives and Legislators

[Delivered at the Coral Ballroom, Manila Pavilion Hotel, U.N. Ave., Ermita, Manila, May 15, 2003]

Thank you very much, Oye for your introduction. And thank you for your valuable support and leadership in bringing this summit about.

Our leaders in the different local governments both in the executive and the legislative; Matin Petilla representing the Female Governors of the Philippines; Marybeth Felgado representing the Lady Municipal Mayors of the Philippines; Mary Jane Ortega representing the City Mayors of the Philippines; Marides Fernando representing the Metro Manila Lady Mayors of Metro Manila; and Mary Ann Villegas representing the Lady Board Members of the Philippines; and Cora Del Mundo representing the Lady Councilors of the Philippines; Mr. Terrence Jones representing our International Development Partners; ladies and the gentlemen who are helping the women leaders of this country:

First, let me begin by congratulating our women local chief executives and legislators on your Manila declaration on gender responsive politics and governance. As a woman political leader of the Philippines, I'm one with you in the commitment to build more humane, just and peace-loving constituencies free of gender biases.

Freedom from gender bias is a trait of a strong union as Undersecretary Devanadera said in her welcome remarks. So are humaneness, justice and peace. That's why today, I would like to announce very happily a major step that we have achieved towards greater humaneness and justice for our women and their children: both houses of congress in bicameral conference have just passed the bill against trafficking of women and children. I would have wanted to sign the bill into law today right here in this summit, except that many women leaders who are not part of this summit meeting want to be present at the signing. So we shall set it for another day soon, but i'm sure many of you will be there just as well. That is a bill to protect the rights of women and children. But beyond protecting the rights of women and children, we must go into affirmative action and that's what your manila declaration is all about.

As we can see in this large gathering, in many parts of our country, gender is no longer an issue in electing public officials. But we must still overcome remaining biases.

Halimbawa, ang dalawang matinding krisis na hinaharap ng mundo ngayon — ang terorismo at ang SARS. Ang laban sa SARS ay laban kontra sa sakit at dumi ng kapaligiran. Sabi nila ito ay labang pang babae, kasi trabaho raw ng babae maglinis at mag-alaga ng maysakit. 'Yung isang krisis ng mundo ay 'yung laban kontra sa terorismo. Sabi nila ito raw ay labang pang-macho, 'di ba? Even in crisis of the world there is a gender bias that we must overcome.

Kaya sa pagharap natin sa mga krisis na ito, pagkakataong lampasan ng mga kababaihang lider ang nalalabi pang gender bias sa ating lipunan. Whether male or female, our government executives must be crisis managers ready to face all kinds of social and security concerns.

We have seen that terrorism strikes anywhere at any time, from the remotest barangays in Mindanao to the capitals of the world. The world in the post-Iraq period has achieved greater strategic stability, but this has driven militant cells to deeper desperation. That's why all Filipinos must be vigilant wherever they are. OFWs must work with their host communities to secure themselves and their loved ones. We must show the terrorist that humanity will not be cowed, that life goes on and that they will be brought to justice. We will intensify our intelligence work at home and strengthen international security cooperation.

We're engaged in a punitive campaign against terrorists responsible for specific atrocities against innocent civilians. The campaign will be selective and limited to these terrorist cells. Women executives, this is a challenge to you, to us. Not only as executives but as women executives. Today, there are two women executives who are not here. But that's because they're busy addressing to the crisis in their own locality. We have Mayor Caling Lobregat who has been taking the leadership in the fight against terrorism in Zamboanga City. We have Governor Daisy Fuentes who has been taking the leadership in the fight against terrorism there in her province of South Cotabato. They are at the forefront and sometimes it is said that they have shown their leadership but they have to show it by being better than the men just to be treated equally in that field of the fight against terrorism.

So, therefore, to the rest of the lady executives we are enlisting the support of the local government units affected in isolating these target groups. We are also on a diplomatic offensive to enlist international support behind our cause. Our objectives and strategies are clear and precise, our operations are phased and time bound. We will ensure that as much as possible, civilian communities are put out of harm's way. Pero 'yon nga sabi magaling tayo doon, keeping the civilian community out of harm's way, evacuation, etc. Oo, magaling ang babae doon pero magaling din ang babae na lumaban sa terorista mismo. And we've seen that in Mayor Caling we've seen that in Daisy. We must see that in all the women executives in whose jurisdiction there is a terrorist threat. And as I said earlier, in this world after Iraq terrorism can occur anywhere.

On the threat of SARS, W.H.O.'s forthcoming decision to remove us from the list of SARS-prone countries will serve as a trophy for the efforts our people have done in controlling the spread of the virus. But while we await this eventuality, the security measures versus SARS must go on with the same intensity until the threat has been decisively diminished. Ah, dito angat na angat ang ating mga local government leaders na kababaihan. Because there's that close connection between hygiene and the sickness and preventing SARS. They say gender characteristic na naman second nature sa atin maglinis ng ating kapaligiran. But we go beyond just what is our trait as women. We go beyond that and we work on physical threats themselves.

The local government official as crisis manager must lead whether it becomes to... Whether it's terrorism or whether it's SARS, the local government as crisis manager must lead in coordinating action from the national to the grassroots level, from the grassroots to the national level.

As women leaders, as I said earlier, our success in meeting these challenges is part of our fight for the advancement of women. Because while people elect women to positions — kung minsan meron pa ring nasa likod hanggang diyan, may glass ceiling pa rin tayo. Now, that there are physical threats to our society, this is a time for all women executives to show that we are equal to those threats. Therefore, let's continue to bond together to advance the cause of women as vanguards in building a strong and caring nation.

Sa kababaihang ehekutibo at mambabatas, mabuhay kayong lahat at ang ating bansa ay tatatag dahil sa inyo.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo on Unity and Reconciliation

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On Unity and Reconciliation

[Delivered in the Cultural Center, Sta. Cruz, Laguna, May 15, 2003]

OPENING THE DOORS OF UNITY AND RECONCILIATION

Mga kaibigan, isa sa mga bagay na tunay na nagbibigay sa akin ng kasiyahan bilang Pangulo at ina ng ating bansa ay tanggapin ang ating mga kababayan na nagbabalik-loob sa pamahalaan. Ako ay nasisiyahan sapagka't ito ay tanda rin ng ating mga pagsisikap tungo sa pagkakaisa at kapayapaan na ito ay nagtatagumpay.

Ang aking administrasyon ay patuloy na naninindigan sa mapayapa at demokratikong paraan para lutasin ang problema ng rebelyon sa ating bayan.

Nilalabanan natin ang rebelyon, na tinuturing natin bilang isang organisadong krimen, at ako ay nagagalak na kayo, tayo ay magkakasama na sa labang ito. Linalabanan din natin ang terorismo, na isa rin na organisadong krimen. Kung minsan nga hindi na natin nakikita ang pagkakaiba ng rebelyon at terorismo. Linalabanan din natin ang iba pang mga organisadong krimen, kagaya ng mga sindikato ng droga. Dito nga sa Southern Tagalog dahil kayo ay bumabalik na, mas matindi pa nga ang problema kaysa sa problema ng rebelyon. Kaya, bagamat ito ay okasyon ng pagbabalik-loob dahil tayo ay nasa Southern Tagalog at may mga officials ng National Government dito, gusto kong gamitin itong pagkakataon na ito para imulat na lalabanan din natin nang mas matindi, ang bawal na gamot.

Gusto kong iulat sa inyo na kanina pumirma ako ng Executive Order na nag-uutos sa iba't-ibang ahensiya, lalo na ang pulis na nasa ilalim ng ating Chairman din ng Dangerous Drugs Board na si Joey Lina, na bumuo ng task force na tutulong sa Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency, para sugpuin ang mga sindikato ng bawal na gamot. Doon sa Executive Order na 'yon na pinirmahan ko kaninang umaga, iniutos ko rin sa Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office, na narito ang Chairman, si Honeygirl Singson de Leon at ang Manager na si Reggie Uriarte. Ang utos ko sa PCSO doon sa Executive Order na 'yon ay magtabi ng isang bilyong piso mula sa gross receipts ng lotto para gamitin ng PDEA at mga task forces ng pulis at iba't-iba pang abensiyang tutulong sa PDEA upang labanan ang droga.

Aba, eh kung doon sa OFW natin sa Iraq, hindi ba nagtabi tayo ng pera sa OWWA para makauwi sila kung kailangan o mailigtas sila doon kung kailangan. Maliit na bahagi lang ang talagang ginastos natin. Hindi ba nuong magkaroon ng SARS crisis namahagi rin tayo ng isang bilyon mula rin sa PCSO para labanan ang SARS, pero iilan lang ba ang biktima ng SARS sa Pilipinas? Sampu, ibababa pa yata sa walo dahil 'yung dalawa na meron... pinadala 'yung blood test kahapon, pagbalik negative pala. Kaya, walo lang ang nagkaroon ng SARS, dalawa ang namatay. Ilan ang namamatay dahil sa bawal na gamot? Kaya kung makakapagbigay tayo ng... makakatabi tayo ng isang bilyon para sa mga OFW doon sa Kuwait at Middle East, kung makakatabi tayo ng bilyon para sa SARS na walo pa lang ang biktima at dalawa ang namamatay, ano pa 'yung droga na ilan? Napakarami, lalo na sa Southern Tagalog ang nagiging biktima nitong napakasamang sakuna ng ating bansa. Ang sindikato ng droga ay walang kinikilingang lahi, relihiyon o paniniwala. At ganoon din ang terorismo. Kaya dapat pareho ang paglaban natin doon sa dalawa. Ang terorismo nakita na natin, bumaba na at kahit saan, kahit kailan. Alam ninyo iyon, dahil ang mga dating kasamahan ninyo palagay ko isang dahilan kung bakit ilan sa inyo ay bumalik-loob ay hindi ninyo makayang gawin ang terorismo. Nangyayari ang terorismo mula sa pinakamalayong barangay sa Mindanao hanggang sa mga kapitolyo ng mundo.

In the world, in the post-Iraq war period, we have achieved greater strategic stability. Ngunit ito ay tumutulak din sa mga militanteng selda sa mas malalim na desperasyon. Kaya dapat lahat ng Pilipino ay maging alerto saanmang dako. Dapat ipakita natin sa mga terorista — maging terorista doon sa NPA terorista doon sa MILF — na ang sangkatauhan ay hindi masisindak, na ang buhay ay patuloy at kayong mga terorista anuman ang ibang bansag para maging glamorous sila ay dadalhin sa karapatan, sa katarungan.

We will intensify our intelligence work at home and strengthen international security cooperation.

At sana itong ating laban kontra sa terorismo ay makakadagdag nang malaki sa kapayapaang hinahangad natin, kapayapaang mas malapit na ngayon dahil kayo mga kaibigan ay nagbabalik-loob. Kalimutan na natin ang inyong marahas na kahapon. Hindi na kayo kasama doon sa ating mga kalabang organisado. Simulan na nating panibago ang inyong buhay. Kayo ay malaya nang makakapamuhay nang tahimik.

Alam ko na hindi madaling desisyon ito para sa inyo. 'Yon ang kinuwento ng ating mga kapatid, ang mag-asawang nagpahayag ng kanilang kasaysayan. Kaya lalong ako ay lubos na nagpapasalamat sa tiwalang ipinagkaloob ninyo sa ating pamahalaan.

Ang ugat ng rebelyon alam niyo ay kahirapan. Ang katulong ng sindikatong krimen at terorismo ay kahirapan. Kaya linalabanan natin hindi lamang ang rebelyon, hindi lamang ang sindikatong krimen, hindi lamang ang terorismo, linalabanan din natin ang kahirapan.

Alam ko, mga kaibigang nagbabalik-loob, na kayo ay nanggaling sa mga buhay na matinding kahirapan bago pa kayo pumasok sa kilusan. Gusto kong masugpo ninyo ang kahirapan sa inyong buhay.

Kaya, kayo ay makakatanggap bilang pansimula muli ng inyong buhay ng 4,500 pesos bawat isa, pansimula. Eto, kita natin itong bigas, ito ay tulong din ng DSWD at Provincial Government para kayo ay mabigyan ng tig-isang kaban ng bigas bilang panimula ng inyong buhay. Kinuwento nga ni Mike Defensor na meron pa kayong lupain. Tinanong ko din sa anak ng Laguna, kay Ka Lix Cataquiz, totoo ba 'yon? Sabi niya totoo, dahil sa Calauan doon sa bayan ni Mayor Berris ay rnerong lugar kung saan kayo pwedeng manirahan kung gusto ninyo. At para sa mga magtatayo ng bahay meron din kayong coco lumber, 'di ba Danny? na maibibigay pang-tayo ng inyong bahay. Meron na kayong pansimula na panggastos, pagkain, pabahay. Gag'awin din kayong miyembro ng PhilHealth. Anong ibig sabihin nito? Ibig sabihin nito matutulungan kayong magkaroon ng libreng pagpapagamot, konsultasyon pati operasyon kung kailangan. Siyempre naman tayo ay lahat namamatay kaya para sa ating mga magniyo-niyog ay meron din kayong libreng life insurance. Di ba libre? At napag-usapan natin ang mga magniyo-niyog, kasi ang dami sa Laguna na nasa kanayunan na magniyo-niyog, bibigyan din kayo ng mga coco seedlings para magsimula muli ng inyong hanapbuhay. Doon naman sa may balak maging mangingisda, iminumungkahi ko na bumuo kayo ng kooperatiba at bibigyan kayo kaagad ni Alix ng Laguna Lake Development Authority ng permit para magpatayo ng fish pens.

Ngunitgusto kong ipahayag sa ating mga officials na itong mga tulong na ipinahayag ko ay hindi lamang para sa mga balik-loob. Ito ay tulong para sa mga pinakamaralitang mga pamayanan sa buong Laguna. Alam n'yo ang Probinsiya ng Laguna ay napakayaman, isa sa pinakamayaman sa buong Pilipinas dahil maraming namumuhunan sa CALABARZON. Kanya lamang, para bang dalawa ang mundo ng Laguna eh. May mundo ng maraming industriya at mayaman sa CALABARZON, 'yung lugar ni Mayor Arcilla. 'Yung Sta. Rosa 'yon ang Detroit ng Pilipinas eh. 'Yung anak pa nga ni Mayor Arcilla ay leader ng ating bansa dahil Pangulo ng lahat ng SK sa buong bansa. Ayun ang isang lugar. Leadership sa buong bansa — ayun pala si SK — economic at political. Nandoon naman 'yung isang mundo ng Laguna na ang darning mahihirap — mahihirap na magsasaka, mahihirap na magniyo-niyog, mahihirap na mangingisda. Kaya kahit na nakikita ang ganda ng mga industrial estates sa CALABARZON doon sa kabilang Laguna ang dami namang mga mahihirap lalo na sa kanayunan ng Laguna.

Kaya gusto ko na si Secretary Lina, na dating ama ng Laguna, kilalang-kilala ang Laguna ay hanapin 'yung kanyang mga dating anak ng mga barangay sa kanayunan na kailangang bigyan nitong tulong kagaya ng ipinamahagi natin ngayon. Ibig sabihin hindi kayo kailangan maging rebelde muna bago matulungan nang ganito. Dapat nga lalong bigyan ng gantimpala 'yung mga mahihirap pero hindi pumasok sa pagka-rebelde. So 'yan ang ating hihingiing trabaho ng ating dating ama ng Laguna. Hanapin mo, 'yung mga apong 'yon ha, Joey? Apong barangay.

Pero sa mga panahong ito, kayo mga kapatid nating nagbabalik-loob, gusto kong sabihin na kayo ay talagang napakaimportante, gayon na rin nitong araw na ito sa inyong pagbabalik. Alam n'yo itong araw na ito ay piyesta ni San Isidro Labrador. Siya ang Patron ng mga Magsasaka. Si San Isidro Labrador ay karaniwang magsasaka. Ang kaibahan araw-araw bago siya pumupunta sa sakahan ay nagmimisa muna, I mean, nagsisimba muna, pumupunta sa misa at tapos nuon, 'di one hour siyang nahuhuli sa mga kasamahan niya. Kaya lang pagpunta niya sa sakahan, pagdating ng ani mas marami pa rin ang kanyang ani kaysa doon sa iba. Kaya 'yung mga nagseselos sa kanya nagsasabi, mag-ispiya nga tayo. Papano siya nakakakuha ng mas maraming ani eh one hour later siya nagsisimula ng kanyang pagsasaka. At ayon sa istorya, kaya siya naging santo, nakita nila habang siya pala ay nagsisimba, may anghel palang bumababa para mag-araro para sa kanya. Kaya tuloy pagdating ng kanyang trabaho tanim na lamang siya nang tanim.

Tayo wala tayong anghel kagaya ni San Isidro Labrador. Hindi tayo lahat mababansagan bilang patron saint. Nagbibigay ang Panginoon ng ilang halimbawa para magkaroon tayo ng inspirasyon. Ano ang inspirasyon ng araw ni San Isidro Labrador? Ang ibig sabihin nuon kung tayo ay may pananampalataya, hindi lahat kailangan manggagagaling lamang sa atin. Ang pananampalataya, ibig sabihin nuon, pag tayo ay may pananampalataya, magiging mabunga ang ating trabaho.

Kaya sa araw na ito, mga kaibigang nagbabalik-loob, salamat na kayo ay bumabalik sa inyong pananampalataya sa katarungan ng ating pamahalaan. At sana nawa basbasan kayo ni San Isidro Labrador na magbunga ang inyong mga trabaho na magbibigay ng tunay na magandang buhay para sa inyong mga pamilya.

Maraming salamat, welcome home to all of you.

Speech of President Arroyo on Housing and Land Utilization Project

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On Housing and Land Utilization Project

[Delivered in Commonwealth Elementary School, Brgy. Holy Spirit, Quezon City, May 17, 2003]

A HOME FOR EVERY FILIPINO FAMILY

Sa wakas, di ba? Sa wakas! Napagtibay na ang matagal na nating hinihintay, ang tawag sa batas na ito ay National Government Center (NGC) Housing and Land Utilization Act of 2003. Ito ay isang local bill ang tawag nila, ngunit bakit nandito lahat ang mgacongressmen at senador, pati mga pinuno ng Senado at Kamara. Bagama't ito ay local bill, ang kanyang kabuluhan ay pambansa.

Kasi kung naalala ninyo noong bago pa lang akong naging Pangulo pumunta ako sa NGC? Sabi ko, hindi kayo ang problema, kayo ang bahagi ng solusyon. Hanapan natin ng solusyon para maipamahagi ito sa inyo. Ngunit ang unang pagsisikap natin ay masalimuot kasi labag pala sa batas na ipamahagi sa inyo. Kaya itong batas ang nagtanggap ng mga masalimuot sa pamamagitan ng lupa dito sa NGC.

Kaya binigyan natin ng mariing pansin at sa tulong at sipag na trabaho ng mga magiging na mambabatas na nandito sa ating entablado, iyon nga, yung mga ibat-ibang congressmen at senador, maging taga-Quezon City, Sorsogon, maging taga-Parañaque; Leyte; o maging taga-Ginebra. Si Bobby kasi ang Chairman ng Committee on Natural Resources. Di ba Bobby? Iyon kasi ang in-charge ng mga batas tungkol sa mga titulo. Kaya salamat sa kaniya, salamat sa kanilang lahat at naipasa na ang batas at ito na magbibigay-liwanag sa hangaring gaya ng sabi ni Mike Defensor – iyon ang problema kasi nauna siya, ginamit niya yung aking linya – hindi na kayo squatter sa sariling bayan. At ito ay biyaya para sa libu-libong pamilyang matagalnang nakatira dito sa NGC.

Kasi naman matagal na. Supposedly, binigyan na kayo ng kapangyarihan, hindi ba? Iyon pala parang peke yung mga binigay dahil labag pala sa batas. Kaya ngayon, uulitin na naman natin lahat pero ngayon may katiyakan na na legal ang inyong kalagayan, ang inyong pagmamay-ari ng lupang naipamahagi noong nakaraan. Itong batas na ito ang nagbibigay ng katatagan para sa mga ginagawa rin dito sa NGC at yung mga gagawin pa dito sa NGC.

Halimbawa, yung pagtatayo ng sonang pangkabuhayan o yung economic zone, at iyung mga pabahay na itatayo.

Sa ilalim ng batas na ito, bubuuin ang National Government Center Administration Committee. Siya ang mamamahala at magsasagawa ng pamamahagi ng lupa. Sinu-sino ang nasa komiteng ito? Ang mangunguna, si Mike Defensor, ayun! Katabi niya yung isang tao na malaki ang trinabaho para itong batas ay maging totoo, si Verna Romulo-Puyat; ang kasama sa Komiteng ito ay si Percy, iyung Commission for the Urban Poor; si Sonny Belmonte, ang Mayor ng Quezon City; si Ed Pamintuan, ang namumuno ng National Housing Authority; ang DENR; ang at mga kinatawan ng NGC Eastside at Westside, kasama kayo sa mamamahala dito.

Ang NHA, si Ed, ang trustee ng programa ng pabahay. Ang Commonwealth Enterprise Zone ay nasa ilalim ng Home Guaranty Zone kaya mabuti kilala na ninyo ang Pangulo, si Bong Bongolan. Itong dalawang ahensiyang ito ay kapwa nasa ilalim ng HUDCC, ang boss nila ay si Mike Defensor, pero ang boss ni Mike Defensor ay kayo, taga-NGC.

Itong batas kinukumpirma rin na walang buwis ang lupang ipinagbibili at ipinapamahagi. Kaya naman ni Sonny Belmonte na walang buwis eh. Kasi ang Quezon City ang number one sa tax collection sa buong Pilipinas. Kaya, iyong pagpapamahagi ng lupa at pabahay, iyon ay tax-exempted.

Alam ninyo, matagal nating hinintay itong batas na ito, ngunit babang hinihintay natin ang batas, ginagawa na natin yung mgapaperworks para sa pagpapatupad nito, at para sa pagpapamahagi ng mga titulo. Kaya noon hinihintay natin yung batas babang dini-debate sa Komite sa Kamara, sa Senado, tuluy-tuloy tayo ng pagsusuporta sa mga proyektong pabahay sa NGC Westside at saka sa Eastside. Kasama na rito yung Memorandum Order No. 83 na nagsasaad na itong proyektong ito, ito ay hanggang taong 2005, para magkaroon ng sapat na panahon para maisakatuparan iyung mga ipamahagi.

At naalala ko noon, mahirap gumawa ng titulo kasi walang survey. Kasi mahal ang survey. Mahal ang documentation. Kaya mula sa aking President's Social Fund ay nagbigay rin ng labindalawang milyong piso para sa dokumentasyon. Dahil kailangan iyon para makapagpatitulo sa NGC Westside at Eastside.

Kaya dito sa NGC Westside, nakapamahagi na tayo ng tatlong libong certificates ng title reservation, at sa araw na ito, mamamahagi pa tayo ng isanlibo at isandaang certificate of lot reservation sa mga kwalipikadong benepisyaryo.

Naipamahagi na rin natin ang natitirang animnaraang apartment, at sa araw na ito ay mayroon pa tayong isandaang apartment na ipamahagi doon sa medium-rise building.

Nabuo rin ng aking administrasyon ang Commonwealth Market para sa inyo, di ba? Ito ay nagbibigay ng hanapbuhay sa mga taga-rito at dahil mura ang upa, mura rin ang mga bilihan. Kaya kung may dumadaing na mataas ang mga bilihan – mga nanonood sa telebisyon – mamili kayo sa Commonwealth Market, murang-mura.

Sa NGC Eastside naman, nakapamahagi na tayo ng halos sa limanglibong sertipikado ng lot allocation at certificate of lot entitlement sa mga benepisyaryong may piano sa kung papaano mapapaunlad ang pamayanan, yung development plan.

Pero sa mga wala pang lupa, mamamahagi naman tayo ng higit na siyamnaraang certificate of project qualification. Pero dapat gawin na yung development plan. Mike, sino ba ang in-charge ng development plan? Kayo? Ayun! So, may bagong gagawin si Mike Defensor.

Bagama't sabi ko nga ang dami nang nagawa ni Mike Defensor – saying, lahat ito sinasabi ko, hindi naman siya tatakbong senador. Pero hindi bale, ikukwento ko nalang sa inyo. Noong ako'y unang naging Pangulo – no, sa aking first State of the Nation Address, sabi ko, gusto ko tayong mamahagi ng, ano Mike? 150,000 titles bawat taon. Noong sinabi ko iyon, tapos na si Mike sa 150,000 niya for the year, kaya sabi ko, naka-boundary na siya. Eh, ngayon sa nagawa niya rito, sobra-sobrang boundary na ito, kaya – gusto ko ring batiin siya at lahat ng mga tumutulong sa kanya – sila Percy, doon sa Caloocan, sa may railroad at saka doon sa Makati, sa may railroad rin ay umaalis na iyung mga squatters nang kusa dahil nakumbinsi nitong ating team na ito. Pumapalakpak si Joe de Venecia dahil si Joe de Venecia ang ating ama ng railroad na kailangan maklaro, malinis yaong mga lugar na iyon para sa ganun, meron tayong railroad, north hanggang south.

Mabalik sa NGC, dahil sa mga nagawa na nating paghahanda dito sa NGC, palagay ko ayos na ang pagpapatupad ng batas na nilagdaan ngayon at trinabaho nitong magigiting na Senators at Congressmen na nasa entablado ngayon.

Kabilang sa magiging suporta ninyo para mabilis na maitupad ang bagong batas ay yung aking Executive Order No. 153 na lumalaban sa mga sindikato ng squatter.

Sa katunayan – Mike, dapat ilabas ito sa telebisyon -meron ng mga kasong isinampa laban sa ilang mga miyembro ng malalaking sindikato na nagsasamantala sa inyo dito sa NGC.

Alam ninyo, noong hindi pa ako pangulo, sa aking paglilibot sa mga pamayanang maralitang taga-lungsod, ang naririnig kong pangunahing hangarin ninyo ay pabahay o kaya katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan. Kaya nang ako ay naging Pangulo, ginawa kong pangunahing programa para sa maralitang taga-lungsod ang palupa at pabahay.

Kaya itong batas na ito, kahit na local government... local bill ay tinulak natin dahil itong batas na ito, NGC Law ay isang malaking bahagi ng pagpapatupad ng ating pangunahing programa para sa maralitang taga-lungsod.

Puspusan ang ating ginagawa para malagay sa maayos ang iba't-ibang programa natin sa pabahay, sa kabila ng napakaraming problema na hinaharap ng ating bansa ngayon, tulad ng terorismo at SARS.

With regards to terrorism, I'm very happy to let the Philippines know, I'm very happy to let our senators and congressmen know, na iyung nalalabing hostage ng Jehovah's Witness ay nailigtas na kaninang madaling araw.

May progreso ang laban sa terorismo ngunit hindi pa tapos. Let's not take anything for granted in our vigilance against terrorist reprisals. Let's watch over our communities kasama ang community ng NGC and be accountable for each other, just as we have done in the case of the SARS threat. Through the close cooperation of the LGUS and the National Government, through synergistic linkages among all involved government agencies, I ask our people to be calm but fully alert in your homes and in your places of work and livelihood. This is not a fight of the government alone. It is a fight of all our people and the whole world. It cannot be won overnight. It will demand the utmost sense of duty and concern for each and every Filipino.

Doon naman sa SARS, lalo na't nandito si Principal Aceo ay gusto kong sabihin din, the opening of classes will demand among our people another round of alertness to protect the health of our students. We've already scored big against SARS and we must follow through. Principal, gusto kong ipahayag sa inyo at lahat ng principal – all school-related sectors must be focused on cooperation and unified action. The DOH and the DepEd must work closely with school administrators, parents associations and student organizations. Our information drive among students must be comprehensive and penetrating. Extraordinary precautions are needed.

Naniniwala ako na dahil ang laban natin sa terorismo at SARS ay hinaharap natin nang lubusan at buong tapang, napipigilan natin ang kanilang paglaganap at pagdulot ng malawakang pinsala. Sa aking pag-alis mamayang gabi papuntang Estados Unidos kasama ni Senate President Frank Drilon at ni Speaker Joe de Venecia para sa isang state visit doon, ito ang babaunin kong alaala: na sa harap ng matitinding krisis, tayong lahat ay nagkaisa at ginawa natin ang ating makakaya para sa Batas ng NGC kung kayaf tayo ay nagtagumpay at magtatagumpay pa.

Sa aking pakikipag-usap sa mga matataas na opisyal ng Amerika, aking ipapaalala sa kanila na dapat bigyang-pansin ang paglaban ng kahirapan dahil dito nanggagaling ang mga bagong sumasapi sa mga grupong terorista. Kaya't kung gusto nating tuluyang sugpuin ang terorismo, hindi dapat balewalain ang pagsisikap na maiahon sa kahirapan ang marami nating kababayan.

Kaya, hinihiling ko sa inyo, mga bagong homeowner ng NGC, samahan ninyo akong manalangin upang maging matagumpay ang aming paglalakbay ni Frank Drilon at ni Joe de Venecia. Ito ay bahagi ng ating pagtahak tungo sa isang magandang bukas.

Patuloy tayong magkaisa at magtulungan, tulad ng ating pagkakaisa at pagtutulungan upang maging totoo ang batasng NGC:

Magkaisa tayo at magtulungan para matupad ang pangarap nating magandang pamumuhay at matatag na Republika ng Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat at congratulations sa inyong lahat!

President of the Philippines

During the mass with members of the Fil-Am Community

[Delivered at the Cathedral of Our Lady of Angels, Los Angeles, California, U.S.A., May 17, 2003]

Thank you very much, your Eminence Cardinal Roger Mahoney. Thank you for your kind gesture of celebrating this special mass with the Filipino community. Thank you also for wearing a beautiful vest made of beautiful Philippine embroidery.

Officials of L.A. county; members of my delegation. I would like to take this opportunity to introduce the members of my official delegation: from the senate, Senate President Franklin Drilon; from the House of Representatives, Speaker Jose de Venecia; also Congressman Monico Puentevella of Bacolod city; and Congressman Teddy Boy Locsin of Makati City.

From the Cabinet: Executive Secretary Bert Romulo; Defense Secretary Angelo Teyes; Tourism Secretary Dick Gordon; National Security Adviser Roy Golez; my adviser on OFWs, Sonny Alvarez; my adviser for Special Projects, Mai Jimenez; my adviser for the North Luzon Quadrangle, Chavit Singson. Lahat Lumington Chavit nung binanggit ko ang pangalan mo.

From the local governments: the Governor of Batangas, Dodo Mandanas; the Mayor of Olongapo City, Kate Gordon; ang ating Ambassador dito sa Amerika, Ambassador Albert del Rosario; ang Consul General natin dito, si Ambassador Jun Paynor. Dalawa ang trabaho ni Jun Paynor: isa, Consul General dito sa Los Angeles at pangalawa, s'ya rin ang aking presidential assistant for Official visits. So, he is coordinating this whole visit. My fellow kababayans, thank you for being here in this special mass.

Like churches everywhere, this place feels like home. What a large gathering of Filipinos! What a grand cathedral! and in this large gathering of Filipinos and Filipino-Americans, and I must pay special homage to the more than 500 Filipino volunteers from this cathedral alone. This large gathering attests to the deep faith of the Filipino people wherever we are. The churches are always filled with Filipino faithful wherever I go. Pero siyempre kaiba-iba ang Los Angeles dahil pinakamalaking Filipino community sa labas ng Pilipinas ay nasa Amerika. At pinakamalaking Filipino-American community, one-fourth ng buong Filipino-American community ay nandito sa Los Angeles area. We are an international people and we have a universal faith. And wherever we are, I see that we testify to a deep and abiding trust in God.

Recent events call for a renewal of that deep abiding trust in God. To the cowardly acts of terrorism and the threats of more wars using methods and weapons of mass destruction, comes now the spread of a deadly disease whose nature and cure still eludes the scientists.

Indeed, times are needed for greater faith. But through all these trials that our current world is undergoing progress is being made, not just in the terrorism front, not just in the SARS front but in many other fronts. Perhaps the greatest progress has been in our attitudes to these threats. We have progressed beyond fear and wonder, we have progressed towards action. And already there are promising results.

On March 20 a U.S.-led coalition of countries decided that the best way to overcome fear was to defeat it. The outcome is a victory welcomed by everyone, except the technocrats of terror and tyranny in Iraq.

That victory in which many Filipino-Americans, young Filipino-Americans participated and fought. That victory now creates a new global environment that requires a new perspective on political and economic security. A perspective that must be based on a recognition of two realities:

The first, that Asia — and that includes the Philippines — must take greater responsibility for its own political and economic security; and the second, that strong relations with the U.S. will contribute greatly to regional stability and progress in Asia as well as greater success in addressing terrorism.

Asian self-reliance will promote immediate and effective response to clear and present dangers before they get out of control. For the Philippines, that new perspective must also take into account that we have over 7 million of our men and women who are making significant contributions to the economic development of many countries.

Filipinos and Filipino-Americans contribute remarkably to American life, not just in the economy but in the social sector as well. Recognizing the important role that our 7 million overseas Filipinos likewise play in the Philippine economy, we passed the overseas absentee voting act so that those who help our country may have a hand in shaping its future as well.

I thank the Senators and Congressmen — as I said represented here by Senate President Drilon, Speaker de Venecia, Congressman Puentevella, Congressman Teddy Boy Locsin — I thank them for passing this long-awaited administration measure.

On the part of the bush administration, the united states also appreciates your contribution to both of our economies. Isa sa mga bunga ng aking state visit ay magiging ito — pero sabihin ko nang mas maaga sa inyo — the United States is launching a project to facilitate the flow of remittances from Filipino workers around the world back to the Philippines. This project will improve the lives of millions of Filipinos by lowering the cost of remittance transactions. It will make it easier for funds to flow to the Philippines from the United States and around the world.

We are proud of the contributions made by our current generation of Filipinos. We are also proud of the contributions made by the Philippine World War II veterans who gave so much in defense of freedom. Thus, we will continue to work for legislation extending equity benefits for Commonwealth Army Veterans and guerillas. Sayang nga noong huling pumunta ako dito pumasa na sa kongreso, umabot sa Senate committee, tapos nagkaroon ng halalan para sa bagong congressmen. Kaya ngayon itutuloy natin ang ating paglaban. But in behalf of the Filipino veterans living in the Philippines, I'd like to let you know that since my last visit to Washington, the U.S. government has been providing medical equipment to the Veterans Memorial Center in Quezon City.

The Filipino experience in this country, particularly in Los Angeles, is a positive outcome of a time-honored friendship based on shared values and traditions. You find a natural home in your host country as you embrace and advocate the ideals of freedom, democracy and the free market. Many Filipinos thrive in this country, particularly in Los Angeles, as I said, home to the largest concentration of Filipinos in the United States. Kung pag-uusapan nga natin ang Los Angeles lamang at 'yung surrounding areas. Alisin natin ang lahat nating ibang filipinos sa ibang bahagi ng amerika. Ang mas marami lamang na Filipino sa ibayong dagat keysa sa Filipino sa Los Angeles ay 'yung Saudi Arabia na one million at Malaysia na seven hundred thousand pagkatapos Los Angeles na dahil five hundred thousand. Seven hundred thousand nga kung isasama pa natin ang mga San Diego area. And I think the reason why you're so at home here in Los Angeles is because of a common political and economic bridge between our two nations across the Pacific.

Filipinos hold important positions and perform important jobs in this community. Filipinos, among ethnic groups, are held in the highest respect and trust. And I congratulate you for that. You hold important positions in the private and public sectors, in the state and federal government. L.A. even has a landmark named filipino town street. And we are grateful to the office of the mayor in Los Angeles county for this gesture.

During my visit to Los Angeles in October last year, I made a special appeal to you to help me build a strong republic in the Philippines, so that the country may steadily strengthen its institutions in such a way that the interest of the many, and not a favored few alone, can be served.

I'm pleased to report that we've made progress in that direction. For instance, in strengthening the security institutions of our country, we have contained the Abu Sayaff threat. Last night, before I left Manila, I welcomed back to civilization the last two hostages of the Abu Sayaff. We are working with the United States on a new set of joint military exercises to finally finish off that threat.

In the economy, the Philippines is one of the few countries in the region that are still expected to grow at least 4 percent this year inspite of the global slowdown. And in governance, after the political turmoil that started in the year 2000, my administration has gradually stabilized our political life. The pivotal role of overseas Filipinos in nation-building cannot be overemphasized. Filipino-Americans constitute one-third of overseas Filipinos, but you contribute 71 percent of foreign exchange remittances. This contribution translates to education because we build many schools; it translates sa housing because you buy houses for your relatives; it translates to anti-poverty programs in the Philippines because you capitalize your relatives and you also make philanthropic contributions. That's why I always say that you're not overseas Filipino workers rather you're overseas Filipino investors.

I'd like to take this opportunity to renew my call for our overseas Filipino investors to continue to support our economy so that our aspiration of liberating our people from poverty can be fully realized.

Tomorrow, I shall leave for Washington to begin the official part of my state visit. I'm confident that my discussions with president bush will elevate the allied partnership between the two countries that I know you love so much. Pray for me that this visit will be a success.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Dinner hosted by the Filipino-American Community

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Dinner hosted by the Filipino-American Community

[Delivered at the Capitol Hilton Hotel, Washington D.C., U.S.A., May 18, 2003]

Thank you very much, Ambassador del Rosario.

Let me also introduce to all of you the different officials in my delegation: from the Senate, we have Senate President and Mrs. Frank Drilon; from Congress, we have Speaker and Mrs. Joe de Venecia; we also have Congressman Teddy Boy Locsin, who's here with Mrs. Locsin. He's a Congressman from Makati; we also have the Congressman from Bacolod City, Monico Puentevella; and we have a Congressman from Bataan, Antonino Roman; from the local government units, we have the Governor of Batangas, Dodo Mandanas.

From the Executive, we have, of course, our Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Blas Ople; our Executive Secretary, Bert Romulo; our Secretary of Finance, who's here with his wife, Lito Camacho; our Secretary of Agriculture, Cito Lorenzo; our Secretary of Defense, Angelo Reyes; our Trade Secretary, Mar Roxas; our Energy Secretary, Vince Perez; our Tourism Secretary, Dick Gordon.

And before I go on to introduce the others, least I forget later on, Dick wants me to remind you about the volunteer twelve program. You know about that, don't you? Oh, we've been talking about it for the past two years with the Philippine-American community. Dick is asking you to bring a friend to the Philippines. Be a volunteer tourism promoter for the Philippines. And there are prizes for the outstanding promoters, those who bring the most number of visitors. But you have fun yourself when you go or even if you send them to the Philippines even if you don't go yourself. It's been successful, but I'd like to let you know — and I think Dick would like me to let you know — that the Japanese, the Koreans and the Chinese have already outpaced the Filipino-American tourist to the Philippines. So, I hope you can catch up with them again.

And to continue with our members of the delegation, we have National Security Adviser Roy Golez; we have the adviser for OFWs, Sonny Alvarez; we have the Secretary for Strategic Projects, Mai Jimenez; we have my Senior Presidential Assistant for Political Affairs, Joey Rufino, who's here with Mrs. Rufino.

Let me thank also the three major organizers of this event. Primarily, of course, the Philippine American Foundation headed by Irene Natividad; the National Federation of Filipino-American Associations headed by Loida Nicolas-Lewis. And I must acknowledge the American Coalition of Filipino Veterans headed by Pat Gao.

I would like to greet the various FILCOM organizations present here tonight, some of them were already mentioned by Irene Natividad. But I think, I should first of all, in general, greet the members of the Filipino-American communities representing the different organizations in the U.S. particularly New Jersey, you're here, aren't you? I met a delegation from Pennsylvania earlier, Michigan. Thank you for coming all the way; yes, Chicago; the individuals from Washington D.C.

Earlier, I also met the Philippine-American Bar Association. And there was a signing with the counterpart international. Also I'd like to greet the Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce. And as Irene mentioned, the Nanay, Mabuhay! And all the other organizations who are present here. I know many of you also belong to the different ethnic groups within our country, so I welcome all of you and thank you to be here.

I'm happy to be with the D.C. community. And I'm happy to see others coming from all over the country here.

I used to be a member of the D.C. Filipino community myself when I was a student in Georgetown University. So was my daughter Luli, who also studied in Georgetown. In fact, Luli and her contemporaries — and many of them, I hope are here, but there are others who have gone back to Manila — and they still get together and they call themselves the “D.C.-itizens.”

Well, when I was here in Georgetown, a long time ago, that was another world. A world with more certainties. The issues dividing the world were clearer then — democracy and peace vs. Totalitarianism and war.

The issues are not so clear today.

There are vast national movements that favor religious totalitarianism and popularly backed dictatorships that favor war. The violence of police states is now matched by the violence of small groups of fanatics who, in a single act, can kill thousands of innocent people by turning the most harmless conveniences of modern life like airplanes into weapons of mass destruction. Airplanes, car bombs, yes, fully-laden commercial airlines.

In this new world of the 21st century, there seemed no clear way out of a world sinking into fear and violence. But the world changed again. And it happened by force of will and strength of character.

It happened on March 20th, when a U.S.-led coalition of countries decided that the best way to overcome fear and answer violence is to oppose them without equivocation and defeat them without question. The outcome is a victory welcomed by everyone. Except, of course, the technocrats of terror and tyranny in Iraq.

That victory in turn has created a new global environment, and that new environment has created the need for a new perspective on political and economic security.

Asia, including the Philippines, must take greater responsibility for our own political and economic security. Yet, we must recognize that strong relations with the U.S. will contribute greatly to regional stability and progress in Asia. And that strong relations with the U.S. will enhance immeasurably the prospects of success in addressing terrorism at home and throughout the world.

You, the Filipino-Americans, especially the young people who made their presentation personify the relations between the Philippines and America. Those relations are no longer just in the realm of minds, or values, or ideology. They are in people, our young Filipino-Americans. You the Filipino-Americans are the human link between the two biggest democracies on both sides of the Pacific. You, the Filipino-Americans are a part of the train of shared values of democracy, free enterprise and economic freedom that are the strongest foundation for a world of peace and progress.

We pay tribute to the Filipino-Americans, the young soldiers, the senior officers, as we pay tribute to the Filipino servicemen and women back home. Yes, servicemen and women back home and Filipino-American servicemen and women out here must be thanked for their enormous contributions in the fight against terrorism in the Philippines, in Iraq and wherever else the threat of terrorism calls them.

We are proud of those who have served with distinction in the U.S. armed forces. We have some of them present here today. We are proud of those who have reached senior officer rank, and we are proud of those, who though they have not reached yet, fought most recently in Iraq.

And so to the young Fil-Am soldiers, and to the senior Fil-Am officers in the U.S. armed forces, I salute you for your bravery and sacrifice for freedom that both our countries enjoyed. You are the spiritual if not the blood descendants of our Filipino veterans who fought for freedom in the Second World War and whose cause we are here to advance again in Washington.

We will continue to work for legislation extending equity benefits for our veterans and our guerillas. The last time I came to Washington, we almost made it, didn't we? After the last time I came to Washington, the Veterans Bill passed the House of Representatives and reached the U.S. Senate appropriations committee. But time ran out when the congressional elections were held, a new Congress was formed, we have to start all over again.

But this was the story, too, of the Overseas Voting Bill that Loida Nicolas was thanking our Senators and Congressmen about. Because the Overseas Voting Bill in the Philippines kept being introduced, reaching committee level sometimes administration after administration. Finally, in my administration, we passed it into law.

Learning from that lesson, let us therefore push the Veterans Bill with the same tenacity in the U.S. Congress. For my part, I will take it up again in my meeting with President Bush tomorrow.

And I am confident that at least as a beginning, President Bush will support legislation extending full rate service-connected disability compensation; eligibility for burial at national cemeteries; burial benefits for new scouts lawfully residing in the United States; full rate dependency and indemnity compensation to the survivors of new scouts, Commonwealth Army Veterans and guerrillas who lawfully reside in the United States; and reauthorization for the Regional Veteran Affairs office in Manila.

Itong mga ito, as a beginning, these benefits come with an appropriation of 75 million U.S. dollars.

I would also like to report that since my last visit to Washington, the U.S. government has been providing medical equipment to the Veterans Memorial center in Quezon City in order to serve the veterans who live in the Philippines.

To give a boost to our veterans' lobby, I have appointed a veteran's son, Jerry Adevos, the son of the famous guerilla leader Terry Adevos, as the representative to the U.S. of the Philippine Veterans Administration. He is tasked to coordinate lobby efforts for veterans' legislation. I thank Irene for the 3,000 dollars that was donated by PAF for this lobby effort, and I will also provide Jerry Adevos a counterpart 3,000 dollars to help our veterans in this lobby effort.

I just came from Hollywood, and I want to let you know that you also have enthusiastic support from famous Hollywood descendants of our veterans. There's Lou Diamond Phillips, whose father was an American soldier in Subic. And last night, I had dinner with Dean Devlin, the grandson of a Veteran from Iloilo, who is the producer of films — I'm sure you know about — the Patriot, Independence Day, Godzilla. Dean Devlin and Lou Diamond Phillips, I noticed have something very much in common. They adore their mothers, and their mothers happened to be full-blooded Filipinas. That's why Dean Devlin, the producer of the Patriot and Independence Day, — the number 6 biggest grossing film in history — is willing to produce a video to support the Veterans Bill.

The chances of seeing the veterans' bill pass have also increased with the formation of an unprecedented U.S.-Philippine caucus in the U.S. Congress. This Philippine caucus formally organized is committed to support Philippine concerns. This development is a clear indication of the growing voting power of the Philippine-American community. In the Philippines, we have a Central Luzon caucus, a northern alliance, a Mindanao bloc. Now, in Congress, in the U.S., there is a Philippine caucus.

In over ten percent of the whole membership of the lower house of Congress have joined this friendship caucus. I congratulate Ambassador Albert del Rosario for working very hard to achieve this. Ambassador del Rosario has been working very hard, not only for congress of the U.S. to form the Philippine caucus, but for many other things to promote the welfare of the Philippines and Filipinos in America. But he could use more help. You, in this room already helped him. But in addition, to have even more help, were establishing three honorary consulates in the United States for a start. For a start, Dr. Angelo Macatangay is our new honorary consul in Miami.

We want to establish as many honorary consulates as practicable, because as a former D.C.-itizen myself, I want to make sure that our government is always within the reach of Filipinos in America. I share with you a personal bond with your families, a bond whose strength and reverence is distinctly Filipino.

And so, as I begin officially my state visit tomorrow, I ask you, Filipino-Americans, let us strengthen that bond even more so that wherever we are, from one end of the world to the other, we can build the strong and proud republic of our dreams.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Dinner hosted by the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Dinner hosted by the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council

[Delivered at the Park Hyatt Hotel, Washington, D.C., U.S.A., May 20, 2003]

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much, Secretary Armitage that was really very kind introduction. And let me take this opportunity also to acknowledge the close cooperation that Secretary Armitage has with our officials in the Philippines and that really contribute to the friendship within our two countries. So, you are one of the instruments that make our friendship stronger. Thank you for that.

I'd like to greet all the members of the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council, all the officials and both on the American side and the Philippine side. I'd like to greet the Philippine officials and also the ASEAN ambassadors. I'd like to greet everybody who's in this room tonight and to let you all know how pleased and honored I am to be back in the United States.

The last time I was in Washington, we were also together. And that was just one month after the horrific events of September 11.

Now, we're here together again. And just this afternoon, America was announced to be on heightened alert. Our terrorists threat is still there. Much work has been done, much progress has been done, but the heightened alert today tells us that much work still continues to be done. But even as we acknowledge this heightened alert, let me pay tribute to the great resiliency that I have seen of the American people. Your example in the way you faced up to the events of September 11 and afterwards are an example for the rest of us to follow.

The state of heightened alert demonstrates that the new global environment really requires a new perspective on political and economic security. That perspective must be based on a recognition that while each nation or region must take greater responsibility for its own political and economic security, it must also recognize that strong international relations will contribute greatly to regional prosperity and stability as well as greater success in addressing terrorism, the most significant threat to world peace and stability today.

We must find a way — this is the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council — and I think that aside from promoting trade and investment and economic cooperation between the U.S. and ASEAN, in the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council, we must also find a way at this point in time to support continued engagement between ASEAN and the U.S. at a time when there are forces working against this relationship, at a time when there are those with an evil agenda who wish to disrupt this relationship.

And as I end my state visit with profound thanks to President Bush and his administration and the American people, I would like to say that we, in the Philippines, shall continue to work side by side with the United States as strongly as ever to overcome the terrorism that knows no boundaries, so that we can together transform fear into peace, progress and prosperity in the world.

As I end the official part of my state visit, I'm also gratified to say that the relationship between the United States and the Philippines has never been stronger. Our common fight against terrorism has brought our two countries closer together — that's one serendipity of that great tragedy. My meetings with President Bush at the White House yesterday underscore a new era of cooperation to advance the peace, security and economic prosperity, not only of the Philippines but of the entire Asia Pacific region of which the United States and the ASEAN countries are a part.

The bond between our two countries is rooted in mutual respect and shared values. And in this modern day and age of real politic I must say, this bond is also based on pragmatism and enlightened self-interest. It is in our interest to be allies of each other.

A world in constant threat of terrorism is a world of instability and unpredictability. Yes, we may know that there's a terrorist threat, that it is specific, it is imminent but we never really know with specific certainty when and where the next terrorist strike will take place. And yet, we cannot surrender our world to fear.

I was listening to the announcement of heightened alert this afternoon. And the announcement said, for ordinary people, ordinary citizens: go on with your work, go on with your plans for leisure. This alert is really for the law enforcers to be more visible and also to be more alert. Indeed, that's what it's called. And I think that was a good piece of advice because we cannot run away from the world when there is a terrorist threat because the whole world is indeed under threat, and what would we do? Hide in our homes. Even our homes can be a target. We have to go on. We have to defy the threat. We have to defy the fear by confronting it, fighting it and destroying it.

We cannot surrender to the instability and unpredictability that terrorism brings with it. Because predictability and stability are essential for business as they are for a nation. You know what you need to do in order to have stability and predictability in your own businesses. As the leader of a nation I had to do what I have to do as well and that's why I have labored to rebuild key strategic alliances for the Philippines in Asia, Europe and of course, North America with the United States.

All countries who want peace and progress need these alliances to further economic exchange, to encourage investment and to secure assistance to fight destabilizing elements. This is true in the Philippines as it is in the United States. That is why I have been calling our partnership with the United States that we are celebrating in this visit — one that is revitalized and one that is maturing. It is not just that we need the United States so that we can be safe and so that we can progress. We know the united states needs us because the United States needs to form coalitions to fight terrorism, to fight tyranny, and it can't do it alone and that's why the Philippines is always there by the side of the United States.

National security is important. It's important to Manila, it's important to Washington. And we know it's important to investment. We also know that national security requires, we also know the courage that it takes.

Strength in security and foreign policy is one facet — I hope now you would realize — is one facet to the jewel that is the Philippines. And I think the state visit that President Bush invited me to is recognition of that strength in foreign policy that we have demonstrated and that he hopes by honoring our country can also encourage other countries to be just as strong.

Another strength of our economy that we would like to promote is international business. And my focus in this trip is clear: our economy.

Last night — or was it this morning? — when I was interviewed on television from back home and they asked me to give my closing remarks, I said this trip in the end for the Filipino people and for me is really all about jobs. Everything that I try to do is what I think I must do so that more people in our country will have more jobs.

Not only am I the head of state responsible for a nation of 80 million people. I'm also the CEO of a global Philippine enterprise of 8 million Filipinos who live and work abroad and generate billions of dollars a year in revenue for our country.

You know as businessmen, international businessmen, you know that the great comparative advantage of the Philippines is our rich human resources: highly skilled, well-educated, English-speaking. This includes the millions of Filipinos working in over a 140 countries of the world, and for the millions more employed in the Philippines in business process outsourcing, manufacturing and other service industries not to mention agriculture.

The foundation for the success of our workers all over the world is simple: education. It is a value embedded in our people. Farmers work hard, squatters work hard just so that their children can be educated. Education is the pride of every family, where an open book today can mean open doors tomorrow. It's also in part of the legacy of America's involvement in the Philippines.

America gave the Philippines a great public education system. And just today when we were having our smaller meeting with U.S.-ASEAN Business Council and we talked about what the council can do. And someone of the Filipino businessmen, supposedly of said send us more Thomasites. Who are these Thomasites? For those who don't know Philippine history so well. These were the American teachers who went to the Philippines at the turn of the century and educated our people in English and many other things western, and that's why we seem so similar today.

We have worked hard to support our overseas workers as well as our workers at home who are increasingly sought out in the global market place for their productivity and efficiency. And this week, tomorrow, I am pushing hard to make sure that the workers of the Philippines play a role in helping rebuild the land for the people of Iraq.

And you officers and members of the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council, I thank you once again, as I've thanked you five times in the past during my presidency and more, if you count when I was vice president and senator. I thank you once again for your hard work in behalf of the Philippines that I myself have seen. I thank you for sticking with the Philippines through thick and thin. And if I am being praised for sticking with America through thick and thin, why I have been reciprocated in advance by the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council.

And having all these years seen how the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council so loyally pushes to promote investments to the Philippines. To work with the Philippines, to encourage us to do the reforms that you hear investors are looking for, I am endeavoring to return your loyalty and dedication by working to build a strong Philippines. A strong Philippines meaning having strong institutions so that we can all prosper. And to strengthen these institutions I know that there are structural reforms that we must make and we are doing them.

Tomorrow, we will take another step forward, as I mention or alluded to earlier, when I will open a new BPO initiative in New York City. And some of you in the U.S.-ASEAN council will be with me there as well as you have been with me in initiating many many other directions in the past.

Like every year, this past year, has seen its shares of ups and downs. But overall, the march of progress is clear. We're continuing to root corruption out of government, as which Armitage has acknowledged. We're prosecuting tax cheats. In fact, Lito Camacho, didn't you tell me that we're just about to file cases against some of the erring Bureau of Internal Revenue personnel who have done falsification and we are pushing through with the lifestyle check because we want to clean up that agency and make it a showcase in the fight against graft and corruption in the Philippines. We are working harder to make sure that the people finally get the fair deal they deserve.

In modernizing, we must also address the legacies of the past. And it's a challenge to preserve our heritage and grow our opportunities while maintaining fiscal discipline. Because if we have had reductions in the tax to GNP ratio since 1997, and large part of it is because we have been very aggressive in trade liberalization, more aggressive than many neighbors, more aggressive than our commitments to AFTA, more aggressive in our commitments to WTO, and that meant aggressive tariff reductions, that meant also large reductions in revenue. We have to accept that legacy but at the same time... In other words, recognize that legacy, recognize that we inherited that. And having recognized that then do what we must have to do in compliance still with all our treaty obligations, but we do what we have to do in order to maintain our fiscal discipline and keep within our budget deficit targets. Because that's what we keep from hearing from everybody, the budget deficit.

The challenge is amplified due to the global economic slowdown. But we've moved forward as I said earlier on BIR reforms. And the proof of the pudding is that revenues are up. That's why despite last year's fiscal deficit, this year our deficit is smaller than expected, because our revenues are much higher than targetted.

We're continuing privatization and liberalization of the power sector. And I hope that when Secretary Abraham goes to the Philippines on his official visit, he will be accompanied by an investment mission organized for the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council, a power privatization investment mission. We invite you there during that visit of Secretary Abraham.

We've written strong anti-money laundering legislation. There's Teddy Boy Locsin who helped draft the final version. There's Senate President Franklin Drilon who also worked very hard, dug into his wellspring of his previous expertise as corporate and labor lawyer before he became Senate President or before he even became senator or Cabinet member for that matter. There's Joe de Venecia, speaker of the house, who very quickly passed that bill when I said that I needed it, so that we would not be sanctioned by the FATF, but also so that we could do basic financial reforms.

We passed this Anti-Money Laundering Law not just to stay within the look of international transactions. We passed it to stop terrorists and government fraud while also modernizing the Philippine financial system.

We've also written a law empowering special purpose asset vehicles to direct greater liquidity into the banking system and provide relief for debt-burdened banks. And I mentioned privatization earlier, even earlier than the money laundering law, even earlier than the special private ... Than the asset management vehicle law was the Electric Power Industry Reform Act.

But it is not just legislation, but real money that must be invested if we're to get a good return for the nation in the years ahead.

So, we are making investments in infrastructure to help move people and goods, and enhance the quality of life. We are building expressways and fast railroads from Manila northward to Clark-Subic and southward to Calabarzon and Batangas port. So, if you are visiting Manila and you want to go to Clark and you encounter traffic, bear with us, that's because we're building a multi-lane highway that will make it easier for you and your goods to travel in the years to come. Oh, there's Monico Puentevella a very very important ally, also in the passage of the Money Laundering Law.

We're building the Batangas port to be the international port for Calabarzon firms and decongest the Manila port. That's why I brought with me the governor of the province of Batangas, Dodo Mandanas, so that he could sign an agreement not only on the Batangas port but also on having a satellite commercial airport in Lipa in Batangas.

We're building logistic chains of roll-on/roll-off ferries, combined with highways, grains silos and cold storage facilities to reduce the cost of transporting products from Mindanao to Luzon. And we will open the new international airport, world-class in security, world-class in services this year.

We continue investing in English language study, which, again, is so crucial to our success.

We're making new investments in small and medium size enterprises. Because we know that if we are to build a big middle class, which will be your market, we must empower the people who populate it. My small and medium enterprise program is an immediate investment but for the future of our people. And I must acknowledge Mar Roxas, who is the architect of that small and medium enterprise program that we have, making available 20 billion pesos over the next year by making available... By working on the delivery machinery for the money to flow from the government financial institutions through the savings banks, rural banks, small development banks to the people. The talent is there; this program is the financial encouragement that the people need and deserve.

Yes, challenges remain. Many of these challenges are economic. Many of these challenges are social. Many of these challenges are political. But everyday I wake up determined to make progress. And I believe I have.

Leading the Philippines means making tough choices. Some loud voices denounce a closer alliance with the United States. But let my state visit here be a message to those who peddle in the false currency of terror: the U.S. can help us wipe out terrorism at home as it wipes out terrorism within its own borders. International alliances keep our region safer and provide economic stability and growth.

In turn, we can also have something to offer. We can provide an island of friendship, stability and security in an uncertain world.

To Bob Driscoll and all of the other members of the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council who told me about some fears, let me tell you, let me tell all of you, I am not going to back off the course I have charted on economic and political reform. In turn, therefore, I ask you to continue to support me as you have been supporting the Philippines for so many years, continue to support me as we make the Philippines into the great nation it deserves to be, and at the same time we sustain the United States as the great nation it has been for a long time.

We must continue to be side by side with each other in meeting the challenges of today. That is the way that we can secure for our children of both sides of the pacific the world for tomorrow.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the conferment of Honorary Doctorate of Laws degree by the Fordham University

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the conferment of Honorary Doctorate of Laws degree by the Fordham University

[Delivered at the McNally Amphitheater, Fordham University, New York City, U.S.A., May 21, 2003]

Thank you very much, Father O'Hare, President of Fordham; Father P'Keefe, Former President of Fordham who play the role of Father O'Hare in my father's ceremony; Father Parks; Father Dominuco; Dr. Gere; Dr. Hollowic; members of my Philippine delegation; excellencies; guests from the academe; ladies and gentlemen:

Two days ago, I stood on the white house lawn as the representative of my country to a rare state visit honoring a deep friendship between the Philippines and America.

Today, I stand here, honored with a doctorate of laws by those who taught me a great deal of what I know and made me, to a great extent, what I have become. In a very real sense, those who are honoring me with this degree today, led me as though by hand to that white house lawn.

You honor me, honorable fathers of the Jesuit community, you honor my country and you honor yourselves. And as you have said before, you'd done it twice within the same family. For as our two reverend fathers have said, in 1964, Fordham University awarded the same honorary degree to my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal. My father dedicated his presidency to the liberation of his people from the feudal bondage of the soil. I, likewise, dedicate my presidency to the liberation of my people from poverty.

I can speak of the value of a Jesuit degree, a Jesuit education because as the reverend fathers have said, I studied at Georgetown in my undergraduate days and at the Ateneo de Manila University for my graduate studies. Not only that, I also helped in part Jesuit university by being a tenured assistant professor at the Department of Economics in Ateneo.

In addition to all that learning and all that discipline that goes with the Jesuit education, I'm now fortunate to be able to add a ram to my menagerie of mascots that include a blue eagle and a Hoya.

I take the Jesuit ideals seriously. Ad Maiorem Dei Gloriam (for the greater glory of God). Homo pro aliis (a person for others). These ideals are ever so relevant to the responsibility entrusted to me as president of my country to improve the lives of my countrymen, to ensure their safety, and to realize their collective potential to become a strong nation.

The closing years of the last century were a time of cynicism and disengagement of the Philippines from the world. Today, the Philippines is emerging from all that. Its economy is growing. There is a greater readiness to act to set things right. This was shown in the political event alluded to earlier, the event that propelled me to the presidency.

Abroad, the country has graduated from a resentment arising from events long past and old misunderstandings to a fresh awareness of new possibilities in a revitalized alliance with the Philippines' oldest defense partner.

Indeed, in my watch, a new and mature relationship has been developing between the Philippines and the United States. Today, that relationship covers a wide range of critical issues, from security, to regional stability, trade and investments, economic reform, and good governance measures.

My state visit enabled president bush and myself to develop a modern framework for our countries' relations that should guide them in decades to come thereby stopping the drift that had increasingly marked those relations in recent years. The Philippine-U.S. relationship is not just back on the same old track, it is forging ahead in a new direction marked by mutual respect and reciprocal trust.

I did this forging for the greater security and progress of my country. I hope in that way to add to the greater glory of god who made my country and protected it as the only Catholic nation in Asia.

I try as well to be a person for others and devote even more of my energy to the work of wiping out mass poverty from my country.

A woman for others cannot do very much alone about the problem of poverty. But a strong government can do infinitely more. As a necessary step towards the eradication of mass poverty in my country, I set my mind to creating a strong republic that can tackle so great a challenge.

Thus, in the first two years of my administration, the work was marked by strengthening the institutions of government, enhancing macroeconomic fundamentals, lowering inflation, stabilizing the currency after the wild spins of the Asian crisis, and instituting major structural reforms that will make the country an active player in the global village and not just a passive victim of globalization.

Strengthening Philippine alliances through aggressive diplomacy, just as I have just completed in Washington, is integral to my strategic vision. This includes the recognition that terrorism in the Philippines must be beaten decisively if we are to free government resources for the task of eliminating poverty. In that regard, the U.S. is an important ally. We face a common foe, identified by the same cowardly tactic of targeting the innocent and hitting those who cannot retaliate.

The other part of my trip focuses on business and investment promotion, I do every single trip overseas.

People are often surprised to know how far the Philippines has evolved into a global country and a global economy. Not only I the head of State of a Nation of 80 million Filipinos, but I am the equivalent of the CEO of a global Philippine enterprise consisting of 8 million Philippine workers deployed in over a 140 countries, generating billions of dollars a year for themselves, for their employers, for their families in the Philippines.

Many economic and social challenges remain.

We have come to grips with the terrorist threat in the Philippines. And I promise you, I will not let go, for terrorism still disrupts the world. Terrorism must be faced and must be fought to the bitter end. But it will not end with just the fighting. As father remembers what I said in the council of foreign relations two years ago, as much effort must go to winning the peace as waging the war. I say this not only in Iraq but also of insurgency-infested areas in my country.

My government can and will in order to strengthen our economy bring the budget deficit to an acceptable level as a percentage of GNP. Our vital signs are strong and indicate a heightened ability to tackle the deficit from a position of strength and sustainable development.

We have succeeded in reforming areas like banking law, money laundering, the stock exchange, revenue collection. Now, we are moving with greater vigor on taxation and anti-corruption reform.

Much remains to be done but what has been achieved shows that success lies well within the realm of imminent possibility. We have a long way to go but we know now the right direction to take and we have the strength to make the journey.

All these tasks are subsumed under one overriding goal: the creation of a strong republic in order to win the battle against poverty.

Two features are essential for a strong republic. The first feature is independence from class and sectoral interests, so that the republic stands for the interest of all rather than of a powerful minority. The second feature is the capacity to execute good policies and deliver essential services through strong institutions and an efficient bureaucracy.

The results of good policies and empowered institutions are faster economic development and more meaningful social reform.

Reflecting on the long task of nation building and anticipating the continued support of friends like the United States, I'm confident that our country will achieve this strong republic dedicated to economic growth and good governance, but sacrifices will be required in the process.

And I shall ask the most from those who have not had to make them by the force of circumstance. A famous president of my country promised: those who have less in life shall have more in law. Now I have to say that those who have more in life shall have more to do to make life livable for more of their fellowmen. This is that Jesuit sense of social justice that would have all of us be men and women for others.

In this spirit of this Jesuit ideal, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Father Joseph O'Hare.

From the outside of ourselves, blood and birth classify a man, but dedication is what makes what he is inside. And inside, Father O'Hare is a Filipino at heart. Father O'Hare spent many years in the Philippines as a student. He taught at the Ateneo for 11 years — about the same length of time I taught in Ateneo. He continues to communicate with his former students at the Ateneo de Manila. He even knows about my husband's school reunion during this trip. Many of the students from the Ateneo are now in positions of influence in government and the private sector. The country has reaped well from the seeds of excellence that Father O'Hare sowed during his days at the Ateneo in the Philippines.

And so, I pray that God will bless Father O'Hare with abundant grace and yet more years as he steps out of Fordham not retiring, mind you, but moving on to pursue other worthy endeavors. He is a true embodiment of the Jesuit ideal of being a man for others. While the Jesuit community will still enjoy his work and services, Fordham will surely miss him. But his outstanding achievements will endure and make Fordham feel that he is still very much around.

As I receive this honorary Doctor of Laws degree from an old and long time friend of the Philippines, I wish to reiterate my sincere gratitude to Father O'Hare, to the board of trustees, the faculty and the administration of Fordham University.

I shall return this honor by doing my best in the service of my country. Ad Maiorem Dei Gloriam. For the greater glory of God.

Thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Cocktails with Filipino community leaders

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Cocktails with Filipino community leaders

[Delivered at the Crystal Room, the Fairmont San Francisco Hotel, San Francisco, California, U.S.A., May 22, 2003]

Thank you very much, Ambassador Del Rosario.

Mayor Willie Brown, truly the mayor of the Filipino-Americans in San Francisco. Thank you for your frequent welcoming of me whenever I come. Thank you for the key to San Francisco that you've given me twice, once as vice president and once as president. And of course, thank you for saving our stockmarket with your strong advocacy with calpers.

I would like to greet also, of course, Consul General Bella Rosal. And I would like to introduce to you our Congressman from Bacolod City, Congressman Monico Puentevella. I thank also Attorney Rodel Rodis for his kind words as well as Attorney Rene Pascual and, indeed, they are familiar faces that show that the Filipino-American is an important member of the San Francisco community. Other leaders of the San Francisco community, distinguished guests, mahal kong mga kababayan.

As you very well know, President Bush honored me but honored the Filipino people by my state visit in Washington. I came to the United States this time on this state visit with the view in mind of formulating a new framework for our friendship with the United States. This is a new framework that is necessitated by the new needs of the 21st century. And in this new framework, aid is welcome but it is not central to the relationship.

When I went to the state visit, President Bush and I discussed the four range of global and bilateral issues, and we reaffirmed how deep and how far reaching is the relationship within the Philippines and the United States. Relations between our two countries are deeper and warmer today than at any other time in recent history. Although, those ties are rooted in shared history, shared values at common interest in global peace and prosperity. And yes, we both agreed that the Filipino-American community is the personification of the close ties between the Philippines and America. You are the personification of those ties.

What Rodel said about the Jews in the United States has become true about Filipinos in the United States. Therefore, because of you we have a revitalized and a maturing alliance.

The Philippine-U.S. alliance continues to play a vital role in ensuring our mutual security. It's not a one-way street. America's alliance with us is good for America as it leads in the fight against global terrorism. Its alliance with us is also good for our security because of the way that we can work together to fight terrorism in the Philippines.

President Bush announced his intention to designate the Philippines as a major non-NATO ally. Many asked what is the meaning of this. Hi! Dennis, how are you? Thank you for calling up mayor brown. Many have asked what's the meaning of this. And I suppose it's important for us to know what this means because this is one of the aspects of that framework of the new relationship, the revitalized and maturing relationship, in the framework that we are putting together for the 21st century.

Designating the Philippines as a major non-NATO ally will allow our countries to work together on military research and development, and give the Philippines greater access to American defense equipment and supplies. Something we lost when the bases left about a decade ago. I guess it is easier to illustrate the meaning of a non-NATO major ally by naming some other major non-NATO allies of the United States, namely: Israel, Egypt and Australia. That is the league in which we are today.

I am grateful that president bush recognize my leadership and strength in confronting terrorism in the Philippines and beyond, because after all our Filipinos have been victimized by terrorism in other parts of the world including lately, in Riyadh.

He reaffirmed the u.s. commitment to support Philippine efforts and defeat terror in all its forms. We reviewed recent progress in the war on terror and agreed that the effort is far from over. President bush emphasized that the United States will continue to provide significant security assistance to support the Philippines in this war on terror.

I welcome the additional counter-insurgency or counter-terrorism assistance for the Philippines in the 2003 supplemental budget. As I said, our relationship is a mature and revitalized relationship, a maturing and revitalizing relationship. Aid is not central to that relationship but if there is aid, it's welcome.

So let me... Now, because this is the last leg of my visit to the United States, give you some idea of the magnitudes of the aid that we welcome.

Our foreign military financing budget for 2003 and 2004 — this is just one part of the defense assistance, it's called foreign military financing. It used to be 1.9 million dollars in year 2000 — now, for the 2003 and 2004 budget, it's 80 million dollars. This consist of military financing and also training for the military counter-terrorism and law enforcement agencies of our country. Incidentally, when I said that we had supplemental budget. The Philippines was the only country specifically mentioned in the add-on budget.

We recalled last year successful deployment of U.S. troops to southern Philippines. We agreed that we will hold another joint military activity. And I'd like to let you know that when the U.S. troops go to the Philippines for Balikatan, that's 10 million dollars exclusive of the soldiers' salary.

We also agreed on the need for efforts to alleviate poverty and other socio-economic grievances which can create breeding grounds for terrorism. For this efforts, over 300 million dollars will fund the efforts for socio-economic assistance.

This includes the u.s. food for peace program. The most popular of which is the PL 480. Economic and development assistance to Southern Philippines including 96 million dollars for child survival assistance in the conflict areas. And a continuing 20 million dollars of assistance for The MNLF rebel returnees.

All these assistance is meant to reinforce my efforts to heal the divisions in Philippine society. And to further advance this agenda, the u.s. will trade and equip to the tune of 25 million dollars a Philippine engineering unit capable of performing civic action and humanitarian projects in the conflict areas.

The U.S. will also provide diplomatic assistance and financial assistance of 50 million dollars to a renewed peace effort with the MILF provided that the MILF renounces terror. There is a carrot and a stick in our approach to the MILF. The stick is going on now because I have before I left I instructed the armed forces to conduct aerial and artillery attacks on embedded terrorist cells in Mindanao. And I will go there on Monday to check on the progress but I understand, I hear from the reports that the campaign is very successful. That's the stick and the carrot is if we had peace U.S. will provide 50 million dollars to help in a mini-Marshall plan for the former conflict areas.

President Bush also agreed to help address the armed forces most pressing need by providing 30 helicopters. First time we've gotten thirty helicopters. We only have nine by the way, right now. As well as ten million dollars worth of spare parts. And the ten million dollars came from president bush's using 15 percent of his entire presidential draw down for foreign countries.

I welcome the U.S. decision to provide tariff-free generalized system of preference benefits for specific items worth 1 billion dollars of market access.

The U.S. is also going to help us in terms of technical and capacity building assistance for the protection of intellectual property rights. That one I don't know how much it will cost.

Other economic assistance includes special credit lines from the overseas private investment corporation and Eximbank worth over 500 million dollars. By the way, two million dollars of that will go to the investment of Loida Lewis in the meat processing plant in Cagayan de Oro.

I spoke about Eximbank combining with OPIC to give investment and export guarantees of over 500 million dollars. Eximbank's participation in this means that almost forty percent of its total budget for Southeast Asia is now allocated to the Philippines.

President Bush congratulated me for my leadership and pursuing needed economic reforms in the Philippines. Hopefully, these reforms will strengthen the Philippines eligibility for the millennium challenge account when it is open to non-member countries of the International Development Association in the year 2005.

Right now, this millennium challenge is only open to countries that have... That are very very poor, less than a thousand dollars per capita income. But by 2005, they will be available to the relatively better off or middle-class countries provided these countries do certain economic reforms. And those are the reforms we happen to be doing, not because we want to qualify, but because we feel they are good for our country. and of course, president bush had a lot of Filipinos in the White House welcome. We had Filipinos even from San Francisco in the White House State Dinner because he recognizes the key role played by, as our Speaker said, 8 million Filipinos spread across a hundred forty nations. That's why the U.S. is launching a project to facilitate the flow of your remittances to the Philippines. This project is similar to a project the U.S. did with Mexico. And basing it on Mexico's experience, this project if ... When we implement it after maybe three to six months of the study will save you, the Filipino-Americans, an estimated 300 million dollars in transaction costs a year.

And, while I was in Washington... I remember when I came here two years ago you said, Veterans Bill, Veterans rights. Well, when I was in Washington, President Bush sent Congress an administration measure extending new benefits for Philippine veterans amounting to 76 million U.S. dollars. Aside from include... And continuing his contribution of half a million dollars to the Veterans Medical Center in Quezon City, or the veterans base in the Philippines, something he started to do after my 2001 visit to Washington.

Secretaries Ople and Powell signed an agreement on science and technology cooperation not yet quantified in terms of dollars and cents because from that agreement framework will come the specific projects. That is as far as the joint communique is concerned.

But in my visit to Washington, of course, I had the chance to receive the leaders of the World Bank and international financing corporation.

The Philippines and the World Bank signed two loans amounting to 84 million dollars for the ARMM social fund and agrarian reform. The world bank also programmed 290 million dollars in loans for judicial reform, rural power, rural electrification, health, environment, urban slum upgrading, land titling so that we can, you know, we have a very very, messy messy land system with multiple titles and all. So we're gonna fix that with this World Bank loan. That's for this year.

And for next year, it will program... Ah no, that was for this year and 2003 and 2004. And then after that, another 360 million dollars program for 2005.

We also triggered discussions on 350-million dollar program loans to strengthen the public sector including the finance sector. And I'd like to say, I'd like to happily say the World Bank noted that during the last two years the Philippines doubled its rate of absorption of foreign assistance. This means we are more efficient in utilizing capital.

The international finance corporation reported to me on a 147 million dollars worth of Philippine projects that they are ready to fund including the Cavite coastal road and also small and medium enterprise programs.

After the World Bank call came the IMF. Well, we have no loans from the IMF. We haven't borrowed from the IMF since I became president. In fact, we've been paying our old loans diligently so that by November our loans will be less than 85 percent of our deposits. We will be a net depositor in the IMF and eligible to graduate from IMF tutelage after 40 long years.

In my meetings with the private sector — because, of course, every visit of mine anywhere includes an investment mission — three large corporations are in the final stages of their decision to invest a combined 750 million dollars in the Philippines. But of course, you, our businessmen here in San Francisco, you know that we cannot name the corporations until their board makes the final confirmation. But we will be announcing them as they proceed because they are in the final stages. And investments are probably imminent.

The Ross Perot Group signifies its intent to consider a 500-million dollar investment in Batangas, an economic zone in the Batangas port, and transforming the Lipa airport into a joint use commercial and military airport.

The PNOC entered into a partnership and the sea solar power — these are two different investments on energy. The two investments will be 290 million dollars. That was in Washington.

In New York, I met with U.S. companies projected to invest in the reconstruction of Iraq. And also with organizations engage in business process outsourcing. According to the Department of Foreign Affairs who was monitoring, who has been monitoring the negotiations, we have a possible early harvest, just the early harvest not the totality of over a hundred million dollars worth of projects from them.

Tomorrow, I will meet the top officials of BechTel which was the first company to actually get a contract from Iraq and which is so far still the only American company on the ground in Iraq.

In sum, the economic benefits of my state visit amount to over 4 billion dollars and still counting.

I had a question earlier about the defense covering the military financing, training, regular training, counter-terrorism training, Balikatan, the support for the peace process, the engineering brigade, the helicopters, the spare parts, the veterans benefits, the defense and security component is at least 300 million U.S. dollars.

This is a partial accounting, because it excludes the commitments made during my state visit to add to the 2004 proposed defense budget. It also excludes the full cost of Balikatan 03-1. And we have not yet quantified the value of technical assistance for intellectual property rights as well as the science and technology cooperation. We have not yet because it was only... Because the contracts of USaid are not yet out. We have not yet also quantified our very big chances of being sub contractors and workers being hired in the Iraq projects as well as the further fruits of the investment mission on business process outsourcing.

Also, we haven't started to avail of our privileges as a major non-NATO ally and the millennium challenge account will still be there for us in 2005. So, therefore, that's why I say, I'm still counting.

And I would like to thank the Filipino people both in the Philippines and in the United States without whose faith and support and without whose clout, the Filipino-Americans political clout today, without your clout I think my state visit would not have succeeded.... Including you, the valued constituents of Mayor Brown.

Thank you.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the ceremonial signing of the Anti-Trafficking of Persons Act of 2003 and State Visit Arrival Report

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the ceremonial signing of the Anti-Trafficking of Persons Act of 2003 and State Visit Arrival Report

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, May 26, 2003]

Senate President Franklin Drilon and the other members of the Senate; Speaker De Venecia, oh! he's not yet here; the members of Congress; Ambassador Ricciardone who was just my host together with President Bush in Washington; Excellencies of the Diplomatic Corps; Secretary Romulo and the other members of the Cabinet; the distinguished members of the Senate and the House of Representatives, principally the sponsors of this Republic Act 9208 led by in the Senate: Senator Estrada, Senator Flavio, Senator Legarda, Senator Villar, Francis Pangilinan, Senator Osmeña, Senator Oreta, Biazon, Pimentel and Lacson.

The members of Congress who passed this law especially the sponsors: Congresswoman Joson, Angara-Castillo, Joaquin, Luistro, Custodio, Masa and Eric Singson; officials of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao and other Mindanao local executives; officials of the Armed Forces and the Philippine National Police; leaders and representatives of the various NGOs representing the women and labor sectors; leaders and representatives of the business community; honored guests; ladies and gentlemen.

Una sa lahat, binabati ko at nagpapasalamat ako sa ating mga mambabatas para sa wakas dito sa batas na nagbibigay sa ating taumbayan ng proteksyon kontra sa pangangalakal ng mga kababaihan at mga bata. Nagpapasalamat ako sa ngalan ng lahat ng kababaihan, sa ngalan ng lahat ng ina, at sa ngalan din ng DSWD kung saan nagsimula itong panukalang ito. Itong batas ay nangangatawan ng desisyong moral, dahil ang pangangalakal ng kababaihan o ng bata ay imoral, siya ay pagsasamantala. Siya ay imoral at pagsasamantala kahit na kung ang babae o magulang ng bata ay binabayaran. Itong batas ay nagbibigay ng babala na ang pangkabuhayan ng ating mga kababaihan at mga bata ay bubuti hindi sa pagsasamantala sa kanila kundi sa pagbibigay ng karapatan sa kababaihan at edukasyon sa mga bata. Hindi sa pamamagitan ng pamamahagi sa kanila ng mga sukli ng isang makuwarta ngunit masamang kalakal.

Sa pamamagitan ng batas na ito ipinapakita natin sa mundo at sa sarili natin na ang Pilipino ay hindi nalilito sa pamamagitan ng komersyong nagsasamantala at komersyong malaya dahil alam natin ang kaibahan ng kriminal na hanapbuhay at lehitimong hanapbuhay. Pinapakita natin na marunong tayong maglikha ng isang makalingang kapaligiran para sa ating mga kababaihan at mga bata sa pamamagitan ng pagtanggol sa kanila mula sa mga sumisikap gawin silang kasangkapan.

Itong batas ay nagpapalakas sa ating Republika. Dahil ang malakas na Republika ay isang mabisang estado na tungkuling tumulong sa kanyang pinakamahirap at pinakamahihinang mamayan, nagbibigay sa kanila ng kapangyarihan, at binubuwag ang mga istrakturang nagpapahirap at nagpapahina sa kanila. Ang mabisang pamahalaan ay nakasandal sa pag-iral ng batas.

Itong batas ay affirmative action. Isang katangian ng batas na ito ay kinikilala na kahit na meron ng pangkalahatang mga batas na nagbabawal sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng aspeto ng trafficking, ito ay nagpapakita na ang kababaihan at mga bata ay may karapatang magkaroon ng tanging pagtatanggol na espesyal para sa kanila sa ibabaw ng mga heneral na probisyon ng batas kriminal.

Magpasalamat tayo dito sa pagsulong tungo sa isang higit na makatarungan at makataong lipunan.

Napag-usapan ko ang mabisang pamahalaan. Ang mabisang pamamahala ay nakasandal din sa paghatid ng batayang paglilinkgod sa taumbayan — gaya ng kaligtasan sa biyahe. Kaya ako ay nayayamot sa pangyayari sa bangga ng barko kahapon.

I deeply sympathize with the families of those who perished in yesterday's tragedy. I'd like to issue a warning to our maritime authorities about the strict enforcement of navigation rules and the fitness of pilots of commercial vessels. These perennial accidents can and must be stopped. I'm directing the maritime authorities to get at the bottom of this incident and submit a complete report within 15 days. We must pinpoint responsibility and mete out the necessary sanctions. Let's make sure there is just compensation for the victims. And we must take preemptive measures so that this won't happen again. This is another black eye in maritime safety and it's ironic because sea transport is a fundamental aspect of the economy.

Sa kabila nitong trahedya, mayroon rin tayong dapat ipagsalamat. Meron tayong mga bagay, mga biyaya na dapat ipagpasalamat. Let's give thanks for the blessings of God and the support of our people for a safe, productive, and satisfying visit to the United States of America.

Despite the tragedy that occurred yesterday, the Filipino people have much to celebrate. We've just strengthened the protection of our women and children with this law. Our country has just become the third country to be declared by the World Health Organization as having succeeded in preventing further local transmission of SARS. The punitive military actions against the terrorist attackers of Siocon, Zamboanga Del Norte and Maigo, Lanao Del Norte have been dislodged from their bases and dispersed into ragtag groups being run to the ground by the gallant troops of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. The investigation into the Davao and Koronadal bombings is bearing fruit with the arrest of the perpetrators of this and even previous terrorists attacks arrested by the capable operatives of the Philippine National Police. Despite the war in Iraq and the SARS outbreak, our economic growth in the first quarter of 2003 is turning out to be stronger than anyone expected.

The Philippines is demonstrating to the world our national traits of respect for women, care for children, strength of will, and intelligence to succeed against exploiters of women and children, and against viruses, terrorists, and economic malaise. These national traits of galang sa kababaihan, kalinga sa bata, tibay ng loob at galing sa buhay are the characteristics that the people of America honored during my state visit to that country.

Galang sa kababaihan, dahil ako ang kauna-unang babaeng lider na binigyan ng parangal ng isang bisita de estado ng administrasyong Bush. Kalinga sa bata dahil isa sa mga bunga ng aking biyahe sa Amerika ay tulong para makaraos ang ating mga bata sa Timog Mindanao — assistance for child survival in Southern Philippines — at ang halaga nitong tulong na ito ay 96 million U.S. dollars or five billion pesos.

At EDSA we proved that our people are capable of making moral choices. The success of my state visit is about recognizing that moral choices in moments of crisis must be backed up in day-to-day life by unified action, sustained vigor, and effective prosecution. We've shown to the world that the Filipino is not confused between terrorism and demand for justice because we can distinguish between naked hate and justified grievance. We've also shown that we know how to create and defend a secure peace on the basis of law and not allow ourselves to be lured into the illusion of peace through avoiding hostilities by ignoring threats. We will secure our peace and harmony as a nation through the strength of our will and our intelligence to succeed, not through concessions by our enemies or restraints of our attackers.

In my state visit, President Bush and I articulated a new partnership based on a range of mutual interests that now includes a vision for the strategic role the Philippines plays in Asia and on the global stage. the partnership between the Philippines and America is mirrored in the amity and cooperation between our two governments, which in turn reflect the historic and social bonds between the Filipino and American peoples. The high points of my visit were about honoring how many Filipinos have achieved so much in America which in some measure was reflected in how much America appreciates what Filipinos have done.

The honors and courtesies accorded to our Philippine delegation were extraordinary and special. But I believe the improvement in our official relationship with America is only the most recent, full and faithful reflection of the enduring bonds of friendship, alliance and common interests between our two sovereign nations.

I'm not the first nor will I be the last Philippine President to make a state visit to America. As in all past and likely in all future such visits, some of our people will ask about material gains, while others will seek expressions of respect and recognition of our dignity as a people. I'd like to report to our people that America has been generous with our political (practical) needs, and America has also been warm and wise in honoring the uniqueness and humanity of our nation.

Before critics devalue this achievement, before political contenders cast partisan doubts on the advancement of our nation, and before controversy confuses the high-minded purpose of this national enterprise, let us pause and join our people in congratulating themselves for a state visit that truly honors galang sa kababaihan, kalinga sa bata, tibay ng loob at galing sa buhay ng Pilipino.

America recognizes and appreciates a friend with such sterling qualities, but those qualities are primarily for our nation's benefit and are resources we can rely upon in facing the many challenges of the future.

Maraming salamat sa iyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 105th Founding Anniversary of the Philippine Navy

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 105th Founding Anniversary of the Philippine Navy

[Delivered at the Philippine Navy Headquarters Naval Air Group, Hangar II, Sangley Point, Cavite City, May 27, 2003]

Maraming Salamat.

Maraming salamat, Secretary Angelo Reyes.

AFP Chief of Staff General Narciso Abaya; officials of the Philippine Navy led by Vice Admiral Ernesto de Leon and Rear Admiral Ariston Delos Reyes; mga local chief executives ng Cavity City led by Mayor Bernardo Paredes; our major service commanders; Lieutenant General Camiling and Lieutenant General Santillan; members of the Diplomatic corps; iyung ating Cabinet officer for Regional Development ng Cavite, si Secretary Marita Jimenez; sailors; marines; ladies and gentlemen:

Nagpupugay ako at ang buong bansa sa inyo, mga kasapi ng Hukbong Pandagat ng Pilipinas sa inyong pagdiriwang ng 105th anniversary. Ang tunay na aniberaryo ninyo ay Mayo a-beinte sana, ngunit nandoon ako sa Amerika nga ipinaglalaban kayo gaya ng sabi ni Secretary Angelo Reyes.

Eh dahil sa gusto ninyong ibagay ang pagdiriwang sa aking libreng petsa ay ginawa nating sanang buaks. Kaya lang bukas pupunta ako sa Mindanao, kaya ginawa ngayon. Parang pinili ng Panginoon itong araw na ito – ika-beinte siente ng Mayo sa ating pagdiriwang, dahil palagay ko gusting maalala, gusto ng Panginoon na maalala natin itong araw na ito, two years ago, May 27, 2001, iyon ang araw na sinugod ng mga bandidong Abu Sayaff ang mga turista at empleyado sa Dos Palmas.

At bakit nga gusting maalala natin na itong mga Abu Sayaff ay nagbihag nang napakaraming turistaa at empleyado noong Mayo a-beinte siete. Kasi palagay ko gusto rin nyang maalala natin na pagkatapos ng isang taon nasugpo sa wakes si Abu Sabaya ng Naval Forces South at ang pinuno ng Naval Forces South, the man who brought down Abu Sabaya ay walang iba kung hindi iyung ating FOIC ngayon, si Vice Admiral Ernie de Leon. Kaya binigyan natin ng award iyung Naval Forces South. Actually, dapat si ernie ang tumanggap noon, pero na-promote na sya eh, kaya hindi na siya ang tumanggap noon. Pero yung ibang mga nakakuha ng mga awards naalala rin natin yung mga pinaghirap ninyo mga sailors at saka marines sa paglalaban sa Abu Sayaff. Iyung dalawa sa ating awardees, ay nangangatawan doon sa mga lumaban sa Abu Sayaff at saka sa Misuari breakaway group. Hinabol sa isang isla hanggang sa umaga, namatayan, naalala ko si Admiral Hingco noon, paiyak dahil namatayan tayo ng mga sailors at marines noong Nobyembreng ‘yon. At salamat na iyung mga unit na ‘yon ay nabigyan din ng parangal itong araw na ito sa pamamagitan ng kanilang mga namuno.

During my state visit to Washington, President Bush and I reaffirmed our commitment to destroy the ASG once and for all. Toward that end, we agreed to hold Balikatan 03-1. The budget for Balikatan 03-1 for the first 45 days has already been approved by the U.S. government in the amount of 47 million U.S. dollars.

I also welcomed the additional counter-terrorism security assistance of 30 million dollars in the U.S. supplemental budget for Foreign Military Assistance or FMA. This 30 million dollars will be allocated for the training and equipping of more light reaction companies, light infantry battalions, and navy seals.

This supplemental budget is in addition to 20 million dollars of FMF which will be allocated to the sustenance of key AFP mobility assets: HUEYs, C-130s, M-35 trucks and 78-foot patrol vessels.

For year 2004, there is an initial 17 million dollars in the proposed budget, which can still be increased. Thus, our total FMF is 67 million dollars, compare this to 1.9 million dollars during the year 2000.

President Bush emphasized that the United States will continue to provide significant security assistance, training, equipment, and law enforcement assistance to support the Philippines in the war on terror. The war training amounts to 10 million U.S. dollars, consisting of 5 million dollars of anti-terrorist training and education with 4 million coming from the Pacific Command and 1 million from State Department. Over 4 million dollars will be allocated for international military education and training, and an amount less than 1 million dollars for a special logistics education and training program.

The equipment being sent or already sent to the Philippines includes 500 armored vests already reaped under the MLSA with more significant benefits anticipated; and 15,000 M-16 rifles which arrived last April, in anticipation that I would go to America last March, but in addition – now that I've gone to America again, there's another 15,000. Now that I've gone to America at last, I mean, there's another 15,000 to come as soon as the first 15,000 to come are worth 10 million U.S. dollars.

There is also a law enforcement assistance amounting to 3 million dollars from the International Narcotics Control and Law Enforcement Fund. Thus, the training, equipment and law enforcement assistance in the war on terror is all of these amounts. That would be about....well, I leave you to add all of those amounts 67 plus 13, plus 10, and so on.

We also agreed on the need for alleviating poverty and other socio-economic grievances which can create breeding grounds for terrorism. To advance this agenda, President Bush informed me that the United States will train and equip a Philippine engineering unit capable of performing civic action and humanitarian projects in conflict zones. The training and equipping of this engineering company will amount to 25 million U.S. dollars. The Bush administration is also providing 20 million dollars for continuing assistance for the MNLF rebel returnees program, and 4 million dollars for civic action projects in Basilan, and 2 million dollars for Sulu rehabilitation. All these programs will help address the problem of the breeding grounds of terrorism and insurgency.

I appreciate also the economic assistance of 30 million dollars recently allocated by the U.S. Congress to support peace in Mindanao. The U.S. stands ready to provide diplomatic and financial support to a renewed peace process with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, provided that the MILF renounces terror. There is also.... at least another 20 million dollars that will be allocated for this peace process in next year's budget, for a total of at least 50 million dollars which can finance a mini-marshall plan for the areas devastated by the arm conflict.

President Bush and I agreed to launch a comprehensive review of Philippine security needs and how the U.S. can support my plans to modernize and reform the AFP. President Bush committed to help address the AFP's most pressing needs, particularly in the area of mobility, by providing 30 helicopters, in addition to three that will be arriving on July 15, and also spare parts. The 33 helicopters are worth 31 million dollars while the spare parts are worth 10 million dollars and they were financed by President Bush using 15 percent of his entire Presidential drawdown fund for all countries. The spare parts will be used for the cyclone-class patrol vessel which I obtained for the Navy during my 2001 visit to Washington and scheduled to arrive this year. Incidentally, we may exchange this 30 million dollars cyclone for two or three smaller patrol boats that may be more needed for the war on terror. This assistance for modernization sums up also to a good amount.

President Bush also submitted to Congress what is for the first time an administration measure to extend new benefits to commonwealth army veterans and guerrillas worth 76 million U.S. dollars. He also announced continuing efforts began during my 2001 visit to Washington to improve medical care for veterans in the Philippines by providing medical equipment to the Veterans Memorial Medical Center in Quezon City in the amount to 77 million dollars as discussed in my state visit.

Now, for those who had difficulty doing the adding up, in summary, the Philippines is receiving a minimum of 356 million dollars in defense and security assistance. Compare this to the U.S. bases period, when we had U.S. bases in the Philippines, we were getting 200 million dollars a year. We are getting this 356 million dollars without U.S. bases, simply because of the respect of the U.S. for our long and proud partnership, our fight against terror, and the greatness of the Filipino worker including the Filipino soldier, the Filipino pilot, the Filipino sailor, the Filipino marines. On top of this, the review of the AFP modernization, which we agreed to do together, will result in a 5-year commitment for further assistance. Furthermore, President Bush's intention to designate the Philippines as a major non-NATO ally will allow our countries to work together on military research and give the Philippines greater access to American defense equipment and supplies.

Kasama na rito sigurado ang ating magiging na navy.

To our sailors and our marines in the navy, I thank you, because you secured the shores of our country through your constant patrols of our outlying islands and shoals such as represented by your achievements in the Kalayaan against poaching which we awarded today. Including also coastal installations like the Malampaya Gas Project and the waters we share with our neighbors.

The navy has been a cutting edge of vigilance and a cradle of humanitarianism. You have shown versatility in shifting from negation patrols to sealift and search and rescue missions.

Just two days ago, including yesterday and up to today, you had the occasion to demonstrate again your readiness, and once again you delivered. I congratulate the navy for braving the seas to speedily respond to the M/V San Nicolas tragedy of last Sunday.

Yet, while I salute the navy and all other ships that responded quickly to the call for assistance in Sunday's tragedy, I deplore the occurrence of another sea accident that has claimed the lives of scores of Filipinos.

We will strictly enforce the law but we will also confront the long-term strategic issues. I'm certifying as urgent three bills filed by Senator Rodolfo Biazon, and ex-marine, seeking to create an Independent National Transportation and Safety Board to investigate all major and serious accidents on land, air and sea; another bill providing for the integration of government instrumentalities to provide coherent direction for marine development; and a third bill to upgrade maritime laws into Maritime Code of the Philippines. The strategic development, viability and safety of maritime transport is a key component of our national security and economic development.

I express, once more, my deepest sympathies to the families of all the victims. Also, I extend my condolences to the families of the victims in the sea accident in Miami, and we assure them that all possible assistance from the government is forthcoming. Filipino seamen constitute a great bulk in the global maritime fleets and are heroes in their own right. These tragedies reflect the steep risks that Filipino seamen take for the sake of their families and our country. Similar to the risks taken by our sailors and marines except that in the case of our sailors and marines, for the sake of our country, in addition to the regular risks of travelling at sea, our sailors and marines actually put yourselves in harm's way in combat for the sake of our country.

Thus, on your 105th anniversary, once again, I congratulate Vice Admiral Ernie De Leon, the officers, the sailors, the marines of the Philippine Fleet and the Philippine Marine Corps for the excellent service you have rendered in the past year.

Maraming salamat at mabuhay ang Hukbong Pandagat ng Pilipinas!

Speech of President Arroyo during the inauguration of the San Roque Multipurpose Project
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the inauguration of the San Roque Multipurpose Project

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, May 29, 2003]

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much, Secretary Vince Perez.

My fellow guest of honor, President Ramos who started this whole project; President Ramos' and my fellow Pangasinense, Speaker Joe De Venecia — this is not a hometown project; San Roque Power Corporation President, Pat Mc Allister; NPC President Roger Murga; P.A. Rene Diaz; Congressman Conrado Estrella, where the power plant is located; I'd like to also greet the mayors of the towns where the plant is located: Mayor of San Manuel, Salvador Perez; Mayor of San Nicolas, Christopher Rodrigo; and also I'd like to greet the barangay captains of Itogon, Benguet; I'd like to greet, of course, our members of the diplomatic corps: We have the Japanese Ambassador, Ambassador Takano and U.S. Ambassador, Ambassador Ricciardonne; I'd like to greet my Cabinet members who are here: aside from Vince, we have Bebet Gozun of Natural Resources and Cito Lorenzo of Agriculture; and of course, to thank and greet the chairman and members of the Energy Regulatory Commission: Chairman Manny Sanchez, Commissioners Oliver Butalid, Mary Ann Colayco, Letty Ibay, Charlie Alindada; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen.

I'm happy to inaugurate the San Roque multi-purpose dam started by President Fidel Ramos. It's a symbol of continuity between his policies and mine. It reminds us of the strategic long-term reforms of President Ramos that we are continuing to enjoy today. The little girl who said our prayers — the granddaughter of Admiral Marcelo, who is Vice President of San Roque — said in her prayer something about the perfect timing of the lord. And indeed, I can't help but feel that she's confirming something that I've been saying all afternoon. This affair was supposed to be held in San Roque, right there in San Manuel today. But the weather was bad, but to begin with, this project was supposed to have taken place... The inauguration a long time ago. But Vince was still renegotiating the IPP with San Roque. And so, we said, let Vince have the leverage by saying, "we'll inaugurate it when it's done." Anyway, that was part of what change the time of the inauguration.

And then, so it was finally going to be held today and then I got a notice from the host, San Roque, that we can't hold it in San Roque dam because of the bad weather going on there.

And I said, "well, why not change the date rather than change the place?" But, you know, we wanted to make sure that President Ramos would be here. We had a hard time looking for this common date when we're both available. Anyway, we changed that date then President Ramos might not be available. And then when I went... then today, because it was raining very hard, you know, as you know, and Dagupan City and Pangasinan has been hit hard by the typhoon. I had to go there just before coming here that's why I was fifteen minutes late. That's why Joe De Venecia and Cito Lorenzo were late because they had to change into their barongs before they could come here because we're all together.

We flew over San Roque Dam, so I told myself, we could have held it here. But anyway, Pat Mc Allister said, "no, because they had to prepare all these nice things." And they couldn't have done it during the times when it was flooding. But, if today is still the right time for the inauguration because today, Vince, Cito and I just came from the San Roque area and we have a message from the people of Pangasinan: Thank you, because they are not flooded this year.

Dagupan is flooded, Urdaneta is flooded because they are not on the Agno River which is what San Roque has helped to save from the devastating flood. We do have a new flood control project to take care of those areas but this time it will be easier to defend them because San Roque has already shown that it can take care of the people of Pangasinan, the people of its impact area.

And with the rural electrification that Pat Mc Allister today gave as his gift for the people of Itogon in Benguet. This is also a signal that Itogon, where it all comes from, will not be left behind in the benefits of San Roque Dam.

It is also a good day for us to inaugurate this project because today, we have good news about the Philippines continuing to make important economic progress, strengthening the environment for business and investments. This administration's economic stewardship continuing the reforms and benefiting from the reforms of President Ramos' time has shepherded a very stable macroeconomic environment, strong growth and continuing modernizing reforms that will increase our competitiveness in the rough world of the global marketplace today.

Today, we announce that better-than-expected first quarter GNP figures of 5.6 percent and GDP of 4.5 percent, a surge in domestic demand in this same period. These are the evidence of our strong macro economic performance. This better-than-expected growth, the strong domestic demand if you disaggregate the growth, and a sound fiscal performance in the first four months of the year are examples that we are committed to and succeeding in strengthening the business environment in the Philippines.

Domestic demand is what provides the linchpin for our economic growth. Private consumption for the first quarter rose at its fastest pace since 1998, abetted by low inflation. Investments also got its first double digit growth since the Asian crisis of 1997. And in particular, private construction accelerated to its most robust pace since the Asian crisis of 1997, boosted by policies easing housing finance. Private construction more than made up for the reduction in public construction which we had to do so we could follow our policy to arrest the further expansion of the fiscal deficit.

That growth of 5.6 percent GNP is broad-based, indicating the soundness of the administration's policies to lift as many sectors as possible. The agricultural sector withstood the cyclical drought, evidenced by the growth of seven of the nine agriculture sub-sectors during the first quarter. Industry continued to reap as well from programs supporting of mining, housing, and small and medium enterprises. Domestic-oriented firms provided much of the growth in manufacturing and made up for the slowing exports growth that all countries are now experiencing.

In services, growth has become more broad-based while communication is still the fastest growing service sector. Its growth is now being balanced by more upbeat growth in finance, mainly insurance; ownership of dwellings and real estate because of our housing program; and private services including tourism.

The growth performance in the first quarter bode well for the economy's outlook for the whole year. We will continue to pursue policies that have worked well for the economy, especially those that will raise productivity and reduce the cost of doing business.

We will minimize bottlenecks to productivity such as the high cost of power.

Isusulong natin ang pagsusuri at pagsasagawa ng reporma sa kuryente, upang masiguro ang sapat at maaasahang elektrisidad para sa mga pamayanan at industriya. The reform program in the power sector was initiated with the passage of the electric power industry reform act of 2001 mentioned by Pat Mc Allister. Studies from the Asian Development Bank and financial and technical advisers indicate that we will need an additional 6,000 megawatts of generating capacity over the next 10 years, if we are to avoid shortages. It takes three years lead time from planning to construction to operation in order to establish a power plant. Thus, we need to act now.

Studies also show that we will need 400 billion pesos in order to finance the needed power plants, as well as the supporting transmission and distribution facilities. Historically, the main companies providing these power-related assets have been the national power corporation or NAPOCOR for power generation, the transmission company for power transmission, and Meralco for power distribution. But these companies are all having financial problems, so how can they finance our future needs?

Take the case of NAPOCOR as a case study. In the past five years before last year, NAPOCOR incurred losses of 73 billion pesos and has seen its debts rising from 4.5 billion dollars in 1983 to 6.6 billion dollars in 2002. On top of these losses and borrowings, sad to say, NAPOCOR has even been accused of unreliable service, inefficiency, corruption.

Therefore, the answer to sourcing the huge capital requirements of our power sector is privatization.

Thus, this San Roque Power Corporation, this in completing this 1.2 billion-dollar San Roque multi-purpose project is indeed an example of the kind of investment we need in the power sector. This is a substantial achievement for the country and for the investors: namely, Sithe, Marubeni and Kansai, particularly because they assumed the full risks of financing, securing regulatory approvals, designing, building and operating the project. And with the help of financing from JVIC now has placed the power... The power portion and the flood control portion in commercial service well ahead of time.

San Roque, as mentioned earlier by Roger Murga, will operate primarily as a peaking plant during periods each day when the output of other plants cannot fulfill domestic demand. It will reduce our dependence on imported fuel; it will lower the variable expenses of other power plants. These savings will hopefully translate into lower power cost to our people and industries.

The San Roque project will take care of the supply requirement of Luzon, which will continue to experience capacity surplus until 2007. But let's not be fooled by that capacity surplus. People are under the impression that we have an oversupply of power because there's capacity surplus in Luzon, but this is only true in the main grid of Luzon and only true today. We need new capacities even in Luzon to avoid shortfalls by 2008.

Based on a conservative annual energy demand growth forecast for the period 2003 to 2006, Luzon will have an additional demand of 1,600 megawatts. The Visayas will have an additional demand of 240 megawatts. Mindanao will have an additional demand of 260 megawatts. And so, that is why we need to have privatization.

The first key to privatization is to create an investment climate that is attractive to both domestic and foreign investors. The second key to privatization is to create a privatization process that is transparent and free of corruption. And that is what we want to do.

The most pressing problem we have to address now is the looming crisis for the Visayas. Unless we take urgent and immediate action it will be lights off for the Visayas by December this year.

We must start giving particular attention to Panay, an island with no indigenous energy and farthest from the geothermal steam fields of Leyte. Power demand in Panay is projected to increase from the current demand of a 190 megawatts to 220 megawatts. But even today, the current dependable capacity for the island is only a 138 megawatts.

It still manages this imbalance because it imports power from Negros. But this is just a palliative measure. We need to have a firm solution to this problem. Our proposed projects for capacity addition in the Visayas are the Mambucal Geothermal, Palimpinon expansion, and Negros Geothermal projects to be commissioned starting 2004.

I, therefore, instruct the Department of Energy, Vince Perez, to prepare all the difficult groundwork now so that the country can bid out the power generating plants needed to avoid shortage. We also need to address the problems of transmission interconnection and upgrade.

And to address all these problems, I will repeat — the first key to privatization is an investment climate attractive to investors. The second key is a process that is transparent and free of corruption.

An attractive climate and a transparent process require the promulgation of viable and sustainable generation, transmission, and distribution rates that will make private sector participation in the electric power industry more attractive. And that was the other ceremony we had today.

I'd like to congratulate the chairman and commissioners of the energy regulatory commission for promulgating today a new rate making methodology for the transmission sector.

The signing of this important document is a milestone in the evolution of the Philippine electric power industry. This performance based rate making regime departs from the traditional return on rate base methodology, one that has been used in the Philippines for the past 80 years. It's time for our rate making to enter the 21st century.

In cost based regulation, the relationship between the attainment of performance standards and profitability is not well established. Regulated entities often focus on merely justifying their increasing costs to the regulators. Cost reduction initiatives and productivity improvement programs are not aptly rewarded.

On the other hand, performance based regulation is considered more responsive. It adopts a forward looking approach in providing the regulated entities with the ability to meet the growing needs of the customers through a well-planned capital investment program.

Performance based regulation is currently used in developed economies that have restructured their electric industry. It has proven to benefit both investors and customers. In this regulatory environment, investors will be motivated to attain clearly defined performance standards at least cost resulting to long-term benefits to consumers in terms of reliable electric service and lower electric prices.

This paradigm shift in rate making is well-timed, as we are currently focusing on the privatization of the transmission sector. This document clearly outlines the rate making principles and methodology in a clear and transparent manner. A stable regulatory environment will encourage more investments into this sector and accelerate the modernization of the transmission and distribution sectors.

I'm pleased to note and I'd like to congratulate again the ERC is taking these bold and decisive structural reforms, fulfilling its pivotal role of being a change agent in this fast evolving industry. I've been informed that in a few weeks, ERC will be issuing more policy documents such as the competition rules, business separation guidelines, the asset boundary guidelines for sub-transmission.

Indeed, there are many challenges ahead as we pursue the vision of having a world-class electric industry. All of us have a vital role to play — ERC, DOE, PSALM, TRANSCO, NEA, NAPOCOR, the IPPS, the distribution utilities, the electric coops — all need to work together with this sense of purpose.

And I want to assure our people that the government is doing all that it can to improve the business environment, create jobs, build needed infrastructure, deliver basic services more effectively and improve the lot of the Filipino people.

But, in order to succeed, we will need the cooperation of every Filipino.

Kaya't muli akong nananawagan para sa pagkakaisa ng lahat ng ating mga kababayan, kung nais nating wakasan ang kahirapan ng ating bansa at maitayo ang isang maunlad na lipunan sa ilalim ng isang matatag na Republika.

Ang lahat ng ating hangarin ay matatamo kung ating pagsasamahin ang ating mga talino at lakas. Walang imposible kung tayo ay magkaisa at magtulungan tungo sa ating magandang kinabukasan.

Maraming salamat at mabuhay ang Pilipinas!

Mabuhay ang San Roque! Mabuhay ang ERC!

Thank you.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the meeting with the Filipino community leaders in Korea [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa pagpupulong kasama ang mga lider ng komunidad ng mga Filipino sa Korea

[Ipinahayag sa Convention Hall, Lotte Hotel, Seoul, Korea, ika 2 ng Hunyo, 2003]

Maraming salamat Secretary, Pat Sto. Tomas. Alam n'yo si Secretary Pat Sto.Tomas simbolo ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino. Kasi hindi lamang siya Secretary of Labor ng ating bansa na nag-aalaga ng Pilipino sa ating bansasiya ang nag-aalaga ng manggagawa sa buong mundo kasi siya ang pangulong International Labor Organization.

Espesyal na espesyal kayong mga Pilipino dito napaka-highpowered ang ating Philippine delegation. Tignan n'yo nandito si Kabayan Noli de Castro; mula naman sa Negros Occidental si Charlie Cojuangco, Congressman; mula sa Marikina nandiyan si Del de Guzman, Congressman; meron tayong Bulacan Association, 'di ba? Tinuro namin lahat siya, si Secretary Blas Ople ng Foreign Affairs; 'yung tinawag ni President Bush na Great Heir to a Great Political Tradition, si Secretary Mar Roxas; ah eto, kailangan n'ya kayo kasi ang Korean market ang isa sa pinakamalaking umaangat na palengke ng ating turismo, si Secretary Dick Gordon. Tulungan n'yo siya; alam n'yo dito sa Korea maraming mga investors na nag-iinvest sa Pilipinas kasama na dito sa ating power sector, sa kuryente, sa enerhiya. Kaya kasama ko ngayon si Secretary Vince Perez ng Energy.

At dito sa aking biyahe hihingiin natin sa Korea na — alam n'yo naman yung mga saging dito galing sa atin, 'di ba? — hihingin ko sa kanila na ibaba pa nila yung buwis ng saging na pumapasok dito. Kaya nandito si Cito Lorenzo para ipaglaban iyon; at ang Korea isa sa pinaka-mapagbigay ng Official Development Assistance kaya nandito si ODA Secretary Mai Jimenez para ayusin 'yon; at malaki ang tinutulong nila dagidiay kakailyan tayo ti bangir nimamang ko nga Ilocano ken Cordillera. Issu nga addad toy met ti maysa nga anak ti Ilocandia ni Presidential Adviser Chavit Singson of the North Quad; adda paymaysa nga anak ti Cordillera, 'yung aking head ng Presidential Management Staff si Secretary Yongyong Afable; and of course, let me greet... Ay, let me greet Ambassador Jarasa and Mrs. Jarasa, our Ambassador to Korea but Korea's Ambassador to the Philippines is also here, Ambassador Son Sang-ha, Korean Ambassador to the Philippines.

At kayong mga oldtimer dito, meron kayong kilalang dala ko, inimbata ko siya kasi siya ang simbolo ng ating pagtulong sa Korea nung siya ay bago pang demokrasya, si Former Ambassador to Korea at saka isa sa mga kawal na Pilipino na lumaban para sa kalayaan ng Korea si General and Ambassador Ernesto Gidaya.

'Yung iba't-ibang mga organization na narito: binati ko na'yung Bulacan group, 'yung Ilocano, ti Cordillera; caring Cabalen kong Capampangan maayapagat panapon; narinig ko may... Ay, a bengin na pala. Okay; at narinig ko rin may mga Bicolano, dios marhay na bangi sa indo gabos; at 'yung iba't-ibang mga church groups natin. Nakikita ko ay'yung sumisigla pala ang Filipino community dito sa Korea dahil sa napakasigla ng ating iba't-ibang mga church organizations; our Korean friends; sa inyong lahat mga mahal na dakilang manggagawang Pilipino sa Korea, magandang gabi at salamat sa inyong pagkabayani.

Kasi dahil sa husay, sipag at galing ng ating OFW at mga manggagawa sa loob ng bansa pati, gusto kong ikwento sa inyo na 'yung ating GNP ay tumaas ng 5.6 percent at 'yung GDP ay 4.5 percent. Ano ang kaibahan nung dalawa?' yung 5.6 na GNP kasama ang OFW remittances, 'yung 4.5 wala. kaya ang diperensya ng dalawa, 'yon nga, 'yung GDP hindi kasama ang remittances ninyo, 'yung GNP ay kasama. Ibig sabihin, ang diperensya between 5.6 and 4.5 ay 'yung nanggagaling sa kontribusyon ng ating mga overseas Filipinos kagaya ninyo. Kaya maraming salamat sa inyong remittances.

Taun-taon nagpapadala kayo hindi bumababa sa anim nabilyong dollar. Kung minsan pa nga seven billion, kung minsan eight billion. at dahil sa pinapadala n'yong pera sa mga anak, magulang at kapatid, milyun-milyong kabataan tuloy ang nakakapag-aral o nakakatapos sa edukasyon. Dahil sa pinapadala n'yong pera o kaya iyung binibili n'yong bahay dito para sa kanila doon, libu-libong bagong bahay ang napapatayo. In fact, nung isang araw, nagkaroon ako ng meeting sa developers, housing developers, sabi nila majority sa middle-class housing ngayon ay OFW ang bumibili. Kaya kayo ang nagbibigay ng tahanan sa mga kamag-anak ninyo. Pero dahil 'yung housing ang pinakamalaking multiplier na nagbibigay ng trabaho at iba pang negosyo sa ating bansa pati 'yon nanggagaling sa inyong tulong. Kaya maraming salamat doon. Dahil sa... Ano, Dick? O sabi ni Dick nagpapadala kayo ng pera pang-aral, pang-bahay... Pambili ng bahay o kaya nagpapadala kayo ng bahay na binibili ninyo mula rito ang bayad, magpadala na rin kayo ng turista, sabi ni Dick. Sabi ko nga kay Kabayan Noli, 'yung turismo maging sa ating bansa o sa ibang bansa sa asia kapag umaangat nakinabang tayo. Kasi lahat ng mga lugar kung saan malakas ang turismo, Pilipino ang mga musicians. Kaya congratulations sa inyo. Pag napapadala kayo ng pera sa inyong mga kamag-anak na nagiging puhunan din nila sa negosyo nila ay nagpapalunsad kayo ng maraming negosyong small and medium enterprises. Ang dami pakinabang ng ating ekonomiya. At sa ibabaw pa nitong lahat, nagbibigay kayo ng magandang reputasyon sa ating bansa kung ganito kayo kagaling sabi nila siguro ganoon din sa Pilipinas. Ang Pilipinas nga siguro ay tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Itong ginagawa n'yo nagpapa-aral kayo ng kamag-anak, binibilhan n'yo ng bahay, binibigyan n'yo ng puhunan. Ang inyong kontribusyon sa ating ekonomiya ay tugmang-tugma sa hangaring ipinahayag ko para sa ating bansa mula pa noong aking unang ulat sa bayan bilang pangulo noong 2001. Sabi ko noon: trabaho, edukasyon, sariling tahanan, idagdag na rin: pagkain sa bawat mesa — ito ang mithiin ng masa. And I told the Congressmen and Senators then, and this in common sense and plain talk, is the core of my vision.

Pagkatapos ng isang taong sinisikap ko ito, namulatan ako na ito ay mga layunin. Pero 'yung vision dapat, the vision for our nation must be: to rebuild and strengthen the Philippine republic, gaya ng sabi ni Ambassador Jarasa. Dahil ang malakas na republika lamang ang makakasiguro ng trabaho, edukasyon, tahanan at pagkain sa bawat mesa ng ating mamamayan.

Itong malakas na republika na sinasabi kong aking vision, dalawa ang katangian na gumuguhit sa malakas na republika: una, ay kalayaan mula sa uri at sektor upang itong republika ay titindig para sa interes ng taumbayan, kaysa sa interest ng makapangyarihang minoridad; at pangalawa ay kapasidad, kinakatawan ng malakas na institusyon at malakas na burokrasya, para matupad ang mabuting patakaran at maghatid ng batayang serbisyo.

Dito sa Korea, isa sa sinasabi nilang malakas na republika. Itong taon, kasi 'yung ating 5 percent growth rate mas mataas kaysa sa kanila, kaya lamang mas malaki na, malayo ang ating hahabulin sa kanila. Malaki ang lamang nila sa atin kasi matagal na silang umuunlad. Hahabulin natin ang kaunlaran nila kasi ang kanilang per capita income ay 10,000 dollars, 'yung atin 1,000 dollars. Nung araw, nung panahon ng tatay ko, mas malaki 'yung ating per capita income kaysa sa kanila. Pero nung nagkaroon ng... Nung tayo nagkaroon ng Martial Law, sila naman ay nagkaroon ng export oriented industrialization. In the 1970's nag-iba, naghiwalay 'yung landas natin. Kaya nakamit nila itong 10,000 dollars per capita nila sa loob ng nakaraang tatlung taon. Sayang, 'no? 'Yung panahon nung tatay ko, tayo ay pangalawang pinaka maunlad na bansa sa Asya. Kaya ang Korea hindi pa kagaya natin noon. Kaya 'yung Korea, 'yung ginawa nila 'yung industrialization export oriented, 'yon ang nagpa-angat sa kanila. Eh hindi tayo nakagawa noon nung panahon ng Martial Law. Hindi tayo nakasabay sa mga bansang, you know, ibang mga ekonomiya kagaya ng Malaysia, 'yung ekonomiya ng Taiwan. Hindi tayo nakasabay sa kanila dahil nagkagulo 'yung ating bansa sa mga problema ng Martial Law. Kaya noon lampas na lampas ng Korea ang ating growth rate. Kung tayo ay maliit lang ang growth rate natin, 'yung Korea ay nagte ten percent, nine, eight, seven, ganun. Kaya kung tayo ay naging five ngayon at Korea ay three, eh mahaba pa ang hahabulin natin muli.

Kaya makikita natin, ang leksyon doon ay ang nangyari sa Korea ay hindi bunga ng isang milagro. Bunga ito ng walang humpay na pagsisikap ng bansa pati na rin ang mga ordinaryong mamamayan upang paunlarin ang kanilang mga buhay. At kayo nakatira kayo dito, saksi kayo sa bagay na ito. Nakikita naman ninyo araw-araw ang disiplina at sipag nila. At naalala natin nung nagkaron ng krisis, 'yung Korea nung 1998, '99 mismo 'yung mga mayayaman nila nagbigay ng alahas para mabayaran 'yung mga utang ng bansang Korea. So 'yung malakas ang diwa ng pag sakripisyo. Ngunit kung sa sipag hindi naman nagkukulang ang disiplina at sipag ng ating manggagawang Pilipino. Kaya naman kayo hinahanap saan mang sulok ng mundo.

Hinahalaga kayo ng ating bansa. Dahil dito, ating mga congressmen, ating mga senador, administrasyon, bilang administration urgent measure pinasa natin ang Overseas Absentee Voting Law. At sinusuportahan rin kayo ng lipunan at pamahalaang pilipino sa pamamagitan ng tax free 'yung inyong income dito sa korea. At kabilang rin ang Korea kung saan nagpadala ang pamahalaan ng doktor at social worker para gamutin at bigyan ng payo ang mga OFW. At tinaas ko na rin ang benepisyo ninyo mula sa OWW. Doble na ang death benefits, nung araw 50,000 ngayon 100,000. Eh lahat naman mamamatay, 'di ba? Nung araw walang disability benefits, ngayon binibigyan natin ng disability hanggang 50,000 pesos, depende kung ano 'yung inyong naging sakuna. At taun-taon may isang daang anak ng ofw na bibigyan ng scholarship.

At dito naman sa korea ipinaglalaban din natin na sana mapasa 'yung work permit bill. Hindi ito pangako, ha? Kasi hindi naman kapangyarihan ko 'yon ngunit trinatrabaho rin natin 'yon kasama ninyo.

At ngayon na nagbago ang mundo mula nang ang koalisyong pinuno ng Amerika ay kumilos kontra sa Iraq, at kailangan ng bagong pananaw ng Asya sa seguridad ng pulitika at kabuhayan, kailangan kasama ang mga Pilipino sa ibayong dagat sa konsiderasyon ng ating bagong pananaw.

Ano ba itong bagong pananaw na nanggaling sa nagkaroon ng giyera sa iraq mula sa koalisyong, Coalition of the Willing. Itong bagong pananaw ay dapat kinikilala natin na dito sa Asya higit na kailangan responsable tayo para sa ating sariling seguridad sa pulitika at pangkabuhayan. At kung sinasabi ko seguridad natin kasama na rito ang ating mga mamamayan hindi lamang sa Pilipinas kung hindi na rin ang ating Pilipino sa ibayong dagat.

Dito sa nagbagong mundo, mundong nagbago mula nung March 20, 2003 kinikilala natin na tuloy-tuloy pa rin ang banta ng terorismo, at dinadagdagan pa ng posibilidad na ang pangmundong kaguluhan ay umabot hanggang sa north korea. Kaya ito ang hamon ng ating rehiyon. At kinukwento ko ito sa inyo dahil nandito kayo sa Korea, sa South Korea, at dahil nga 'yung mga bantang umabot sa North Korea ang gulo ng ating mundo sa nagbagong mundong ito gusto kong sabihin sa inyo na gagawin nating lahat ang kailangan para ligtas ang Pilipino. Hindi lamang sa Pilipinas kundi na rin sa iba't ibang bahagi ng mundo, lalo na ngayon ang ating mga Filipino dito sa Korea. Kasi mula nang lumala ang problema ng pangmundong istabilidad, laging patakaran ng ating pamahalaan na ang ating pinaka-tungkulin ay ang kaligtasan at kapakanan ng mga Pilipino maging sa Pilipinas o sa ibayong dagat. Ang ating pangunahing pinag-aabala ay manatili kayong ligtas at wala sa panganib. Kailangan abala ako sa kapayapaan at seguridad ng walong milyong Pilipinong nakatira at nagtatrabaho sa higit sandaan at apatnapu't bansa sa buong mundo, kasama na 'yung tatlung-libong Pilipinong nakatira dito sa Korea.

Eto ang ating kailangan: kapayapaan, seguridad, trabaho, edukasyon, tahanan, pagkain sa bawat mesa. At ako'y nagpapasalamat sa inyo, dakilang manggagawang Pilipino dahil napakalaking kontribusyon ninyo dito sa ating hangarin ng ating bayan. Sana tuloy ang inyong tagumpay. At sana tuloy din ang inyong tulong para sa ganun maging malakas na rin ang ating republika gaya ng bansang pinagtatrabahuan ninyo.

Maraming salamat at mabuhay ang manggagawang Pilipino.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Luncheon co-hosted by the four major Korean Business Associations

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Luncheon co-hosted by the four major Korean Business Associations

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Seoul Hilton Hotel, June 3, 2003]

Thank you very much, Secretary Roxas.

Mr. Chairman, Keil Cheng Son, thank you for your kind words; Mr. President of the KCCI, Mr. Lee So Yong; Mr. Chairman and CEO of the Korea International Trading Association, Mr. Jil Chul Kim and Mr. Chairman of the Korean Federation of Small Industries Mr. Yung So Kim; Ambassador Sang-ha Son and Madame Son.

And may I also greet the leaders of the Philippine Business community, the heads of the Philippine business delegation: Mr. Sergio Ortiz Luis, Jr of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry; Mike Varela, President of the Philippines Incorporated; Mr. David Balangit, President of the Philippine-Korea Economic Council; distinguished leaders of the business community in Korea and the Philippines; honorable members of the Philippine delegation; ladies and gentlemen:

It's always an honor to be in Korea. And I am honored to be among you today — men and women of Korea's leading business organizations. The Koreans have individually and collectively shown the world how a nation can sustain its leadership in the developed world. In times of crisis, you have defined the true meaning of nationhood. We remember that in 1997, during the Asian crisis, Koreans lined up before the banks to donate to your government your precious gold and silver heirlooms to help the government. The people of the world congratulate the people of Korea. In particular, the warmth between Korea and the Philippine people is central to our relationship.

I've been to Korea many times before — I can't count how many times I'd been to Korea — but it's great to be back here to meet with your new president and the many friends I have here. Anytime the leaders of Korea and the Philippines meet, it's an important event. Our relations run deep and remain very strong. It's crucial to get to know President Roh given the importance he will play in Korea's future for the next five years as well as in the region. My trip underscores the deepening ties between Seoul and Manila.

As mentioned by Chairman Keil Cheng Son, the Philippines and Korea share a deep and abiding history. We've fought side by side on the Korean peninsula for freedom and liberty. In the 1950s as chairman said, the Philippines sent 7,000 soldiers to the Korean war. I'd like to reveal something to you that President Roxas is not very well-known here in Korea. The author of the law in Congress, in the Philippine Congress that sent Philippine soldiers to fight side by side with you was no other than my father when he was congressman, Congressman Diosdado Macapagal. But the older generation knows my father later became President of the Philippines. But when he retired from the presidency, your government invited him here to Korea to be an official visitor so that the government of Korea could give him a special award for authoring that law way back in 1951. One of the soldiers who fought by your side — and this is better known — also became President of the Philippines, Fidel Ramos. His son-in-law is in our business delegation — but I'm looking for him, I don't see him now — he'll be in the meeting tomorrow. Another of the soldiers became Philippine Ambassador to Korea, and I invited him to join us today, General and Ambassador Ernesto Gidaya. Ambassador Gidaya is an example of how the Philippines and Korea have worked side by side to defend freedom.

The Philippines and Korea have also worked side by side to build prosperous Asian economies. In fact, in our own development — again, as mentioned by his... The honorable Chairman of the Federation — we've seen Korean businesses increase their investments. In fact last year, we had... I inaugurated KEPCO's 1,000-megawatt power plant worth almost a billion U.S. dollars. We have seen Korean tourists to our shores grow. In 2002, Philippine exports to Korea grew by almost 28 percent and KEPCO's example shows that Korean investments went to such important areas — aside from the industries mentioned by the honorable chairman of the federation — important areas as electric power generation. We are particularly pleased that visitor arrivals from Korea in the first three months of this year increased by 22 percent, they represent 17 percent of all our tourist coming in. And that was after having grown by 39 percent for the entire year in 2002. That's as far as our temporary visitors are concerned. But as far as our permanent visitors are concerned, while there are 30,000 Filipinos living in Korea, there are 40,000 Koreans living in the Philippines.

Having said this though, I now have come to Seoul to say that we hope to see more of you outsourcing your imports from the Philippines, and more of you establishing production bases and regional headquarters in our country. Yes, our exports have grown by 28 percent. But the range of our exports to Korea consists of only about 20 product categories, 11 of them related to electronics and only two items, bananas and prawns, related to agriculture. Yes, trade has been fourfold to 4 billion dollars but our total imports from your country exceeds our exports by 1.2 billion dollars. What a big gap, and we hope therefore that you can help us address this gap. For instance, the Philippines is a world class exporter of fresh and processed tropical fruits like mango, Philippine lemon that we call calamansi, coconut; it exports world class processed food like ice cream, biscuits, noodles; it exports marine products, garments and furniture; it exports world class foundry materials like nickel slag, chromite sand, silica sand.

I also believe that a significant potential exists for expanding Korean investments in the Philippines. We seek investments, as I said earlier, in energy and power. We also seek investments in the field of animation, regional I.T.-serviced 24 hours a day, 7 days a week customer relations management call centers, global revenue accounting and other business process outsourcing, software development including online game development.

Our country's strengths are well-recognized: a 29 million strong labor force, made up of talented, skilled and design oriented Filipinos, with a literacy rate of 94 percent, with a fast learning curve and low attrition rate; our country is accessible by air within four hours from any Asian capital; 100 percent foreign equity is allowed; there is free and unrestricted repatriation of capital; there is a fully liberalized foreign exchange system; there is a range of financial and administrative incentives, including up to 8 years income tax holiday and duty-free importation of capital equipment in the economic zones; we have an expatriate-friendly environment, including value-for-money housing, modern recreational and golf facilities, and first rate educational institutions.

And of course, on top of all that, our friendship provides a firm foundation for the times in which we live. A firm foundation for doing business together. A firm foundation for keeping our region secure together.

In the new geopolitical environment post-Iraq war, there is a realignment of relations in Asia marked by several trends including greater national self-reliance and national sovereignty bolstered by strengthened regional cooperation and more strategic global engagement.

From our relations with China, the United States and North Korea, to regional issues like SARS, the nations of Asia are coming of age and dealing more transparently and pragmatically with one another.

The fact that President Roh and I met within days in Washington with President Bush is a testament to the growing geopolitical importance of our region to global power centers.

As Asian leaders, we owe it to our people to impart a new Asian perspective that demonstrates to the world that we are whole and equal partners in global affairs consistent with our mutual self-interest.

We are proud of our strong democratic tradition and the people of our country have made many sacrifices to protect these principles. First and foremost, however, the most basic human right anyone in any country should expect is a quality of life that provides access to education, health and opportunity. We believe that democracy, human rights and economic development go hand in hand.

Politically, the Philippines also represents the closest Asean border to Korea. We remain deeply concerned about peace on the Korean peninsula, particularly a nuclear-free peninsula. We are prepared to do our part to resolve this issue which has great importance not only for the region but also for the world. In my meeting with President Roh this morning, I assured him that the Philippine supports President Roh and the Republic of Korea in your efforts to find a peaceful solution to the North Korean crisis.

We owe it to our peoples to keep the torch of our principled friendship burning, and to show the world that we are fair and equal partners in the search for peace, security and prosperity. Let us continue that partnership. Korean businessmen, let's do more business with each other.

Kamsa hamida and Mabuhay!

Speech of President Arroyo during the 19th Joint Meeting of the Korea-Philippines Economic Council (KORPHILEC) and Philippines-Korea Economic Council (PHILKOREC) Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 19th Joint Meeting of the Korea-Philippines Economic Council (KORPHILEC) and Philippines-Korea Economic Council (PHILKOREC)

[Delivered at the Dynasty Ballroom, Shilla Hotel, June 4, 2003]

Thank you very much, Secretary Roxas.

Chairman Hi Yong Kiem, Chairman Balange, Vice Mminister Shil Dou Kiem, Jun Ortiz-Luis, Professor Teh, Ambassador Son Sang Ha and Ambassador Jarasa, friends both from the Philippines and Korea.

Thank you for inviting me to your 19th meeting. I'm glad that businessmen from both councils have been continuing your dialogue and interaction since 1976 when the protocol of cooperation between your mother chambers – the Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry — was signed in Manila. And by the way, though I am speaking with you for the first time as President of the Philippines, I'm not a stranger to the Korean-Philippine Economic Council and to PHILKOREC because when I was the equivalent of Vice Minister Chil Do Kim in the Philippine government as assistant secretary and then Undersecretary of Trade and Industry in the Aquino administration, I used to be in-charge of facilitating your dialogue, remember, Robert? And I even attended and organized one of those meetings in a state visit that Vice President Doy Laurel made here in Korea. So, I'm quite familiar with your work. I've done the background work in the latter part of the 1980's. I'm honored to be now at the center stage rather than in the background, and I hope our relationship is even better today.

I remember in that trip, it was the time when I negotiated for the opening of the Korean market to our Philippine bananas. Prior to that you are accepting our bananas on counter trade — we have to buy something so that you could buy bananas from us. And I remember when I was negotiating for better access not tied up to counter trade and better tariff terms I said, you know in the 1950's when my father was Congressman, he filed a law to send soldiers to the Korean war. And our soldiers came and gave their blood and their lives for the freedom and prosperity of the Republic of Korea.

Now, we are not asking for your blood and your lives. We're only asking for your market and your investments. In any case I'm glad that since then the Philippine bananas have been very, very welcome by the market of Korea. And I hope that with our continuing negotiations for more tariff reduction that will improve even more. But as Secretary Roxas said, that will only add 50 million more dollars to cover our trading balance of 1.2 billion dollars.

So, there are many other things that we feel could be sold by the Philippine businessmen to Korea. And because many of you were already here yesterday, I don't have to mention them again, except to say that it's not only agricultural products but world class manufactured product as well. Not to mention the world class tourism sites that have become a favorite also of the Korean citizens.

It's not only the strong institutional relations, but the close personal friendships that have infused your two organizations, that feeds the many opportunities like this event — opportunities for our businessmen to congregate, interact among yourselves, and look forward to a positive future.

My meeting with President Roh was very successful. We met twice yesterday — in the bilateral and also in the dinner. And we recognize that our relations run deep and remain very strong. The Philippines and Korea indeed share a deep and abiding history. We have been reminded meeting after meeting, and we should continue to be reminded how we fought side by side on the Korean peninsula for freedom and liberty, and how we worked side by side after that to build prosperous Asian economies.

I'd like to take a moment to touch on this latter point — building on prosperous Asian economies. I apologize for my delay in arriving here but that's because I wanted to add to the report I will give you today. Because in the economic development of the Philippines, we've seen Korean businesses increase their investments and we've seen Korean tourists on our shores grow. Last year, Korean tourism to the Philippines grew by 39 percent. This year, because of SARS, it grew by only 22 percent so far. But after only ten people with SARS — the Philippines has been declared SARS free — and we hope that that 39 percent growth will again be achieved or even surpassed.

Yesterday, I witnessed the signing of several agreements attesting to Korean participation. And I'm very happy among this participation in the Philippine economy are many of my strategic projects. Vice Minister today talked about KEPCO. And he talked about the power plant inaugurated last year — and also chairman talked about it — in Batangas City. I personally went to that inauguration. That was a 700 million dollar inauguration for a thousand megawatt power plant.

Last night, I was telling the president... The president knows about that and he said that the president of KEPCO is one of the most admired and respected businessman in Korea with a reputation very well-known for principled business practices. And I am very happy that yesterday he called on me to say that they're ready for their next power project and that is a 150 million dollar project in antique to cover the shortage in Panay island. Because in the Visayas, in Panay island, the demand for electricity today is 190 megawatts, the supply is only 135 megawatts. Panay imports the balance from Negros Oriental, which of course will soon be needing its own supply for its own expansion. So, the KEPCO investment will be 100 megawatts and therefore it will make up for the requirement, it will cover the shortage.

Yesterday also — not in front of me but in a separate event — there was the finalization of the Korean ODA which will fund a 100 million dollars worth of projects. That includes 49 million dollars for the Southrail commuter train from Manila to CALABARZON which will probably be implemented by Daewoo which is ready to put its own 49 million dollars counterpart as well for phase 2 of the project.

Part of the 100 million dollars was also committed to complete the 9 million dollars required for the Laguindingan Airport in Northern Mindanao. And this completes and complements the whole 107 million dollars required to put up the airport. It is the last 9 million of the total 107 million that we've been looking for. We could not access the previous funds already there because we lack the last 9 million. And now, it's there.

This last 9 million allows us to start the project with a 107 million. And I mention already that Daewoo will add its own 49 million dollars of B-O-T money for the second phase of that Southrail. But that's not the only project of Daewoo informed me about yesterday. They will also be spending 25 million dollars for an E-governance project, 20 million dollars to produce buses in the Philippines using compressed natural gas to comply with the Clean Air Act. And together with Andrew Tan — who is not here I think but who is a property magnate in the Philippines — they'll be putting up a 20 million-dollar housing joint venture in Cainta, Rizal. Also, 10 million dollars for a rice husk power co generation project. So, it was a very good day for me in my meeting with Daewoo and its various affiliates yesterday.

Still on energy, the Philippine National Oil Company-Energy Development Corporation together with PL global of Korea will develop hydropower again in Panay island at a cost of 70 million dollars. And also build transmission lines of 25 million dollars worth. In Clark — that's Donald's project. Is that your project, Clark? Donald? Yeah. Okay — together with Donald Dee, Tricom will put up a 20-million dollar golf course in Clark Economic Zone. And then last night, Dick Gordon just informed me of another golf course to be put up in the Zamboanga economic zone. The government of Korea is also donating 5 million dollars for a vocational training center and 5 million dollars for an I.T. training center.

The reason why I was delayed today was because I had a meeting with Hanjin in order to put together the package, the 107 million-dollar package that I told you about earlier. Not to mention other projects that they are involved in and will continue to be involved in. Specifically, one of my favorite projects that they're working on together with our Philippine government is the Metro Manila commuter train that will close a loop in Metro Manila. So that for that southern part of Metro Manila people can hop on any stop and get out of any other stop and therefore that will reduce the traffic and make life much easier for the businessmen who are doing business there.

We appreciate your contributions to our economy, we appreciate your participation in our economy. We look forward to continuing to welcome Korean businesses and people. This year, 2003 is the 50th anniversary of the end of the Korean war. And so therefore, as we celebrate half a century after freedom and peace was assured for the Republic of Korea, I hope that we continue our partnership and work towards continuing freedom, security and prosperity in our whole region. We have been friends now for more than 50 years, deep friends, blood brothers, not necessarily relatives but blood shed together for freedom and democracy.

May our blood ties now continue to work to bring about prosperity in our region, for the Korean business committee and the Philippine men and women who all need to have a job so that they can also build prosperity for our country.

Once again, leaders and members of the two associations, thank you for your enduring ties with each other that build for enduring ties between our two countries. Let's continue to do our work together.

Kamsa hamida and Mabuhay!

Speech of President Arroyo during the opening program of the Nikkei 9th International Conference

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the opening program of the Nikkei 9th International Conference on “The Future of Asia” with the theme: “Genesis of a New Asian Order”

[Delivered at the Fuji Room, Imperial Hotel Main Bldg., Tokyo, Japan, June 5, 2003]

Thank you very much.

Mr. Sugita, President and CEO of Nikkei; Prime Minister Mahathir; Prime Minister Shinawatra; Former Prime Minister Hashimoto; distinguished participants to Nikkei's 9th International Conference; honored guests; ladies and gentlemen.

I would like to thank Nikkei for inviting me once again to this prestigious conference on “The Future of Asia.”

I've always known it, but now I must perform the formidable task of having to speak next to my esteemed senior colleague, Prime Minister Mahathir and just before my dynamic peer, Prime Minister Shinawatra. Prime Minister Mahathir's insights are always profound, but on the topic we are now grappling with his views set a defining tone, not just today, not only in the present conference, but many, many years ago, when EAEG or EAEC were disjoint letters in search of a meaning and vision. He provided the meaning; he pursued the vision. He transformed ASEAN Plus Three from a mere intriguing idea and inaugurated it in Kuala Lumpur as the most viable working process for Pan-East Asian cooperation that it is today.

As for Prime Minister Thaksin, I would like to say that the model I follow in my economic policy is his model. Professional economists call it “domestic consumption based managed asset reflation” and it has helped accelerate Thailand's growth. I call it Thaksinomics.

The conference this year is especially meaningful, not only because of the company of my distinguished fellow heads of government, but also because it is the opportunity to address the profound reality that the world changed on March 20th when the U.S.-led coalition took action against Iraq. The September 11 tragedy was historic, but Iraq affected the global order in a more fundamental manner.

Like all citizens of the world, we've come to see since 9-11 that no place is safe from terrorism, from Washington and New York, to Bali and Riyadh. We have also come to see that we cannot be deterred by terrorists, wherever they strike. This means that we cannot retreat from the world but rather we must engage it.

In the new geopolitical environment post-Iraq war, there is a realignment of relations in Asia marked by several trends including greater national self-reliance and national sovereignty bolstered by strengthened regional cooperation and more strategic global engagement. From our relations with China, with the U.S. and North Korea to regional issues like SARS, we are coming of age and dealing more transparently and pragmatically with one another. We must also impart a new Asian perspective that demonstrates to the world that we are full and equal partners in global affairs, consistent with our mutual self-interest.

March 20 signified a major blow to the power of the United Nations. Critics have long described the current set-up of the U.N. security council as patently undemocratic, grossly outmoded or mostly impotent. That unless its security mandate is updated, the United Nations will continue to limp forward, tasked to do much tedious peacekeeping but too feeble or hand-tied to be effective at peace making. It was for this reason that during the cold war, states resorted to regional and bilateral arrangements, such as NATO, the Warsaw Pact, and networks of security alliances.

Nonetheless, the United Nations and the multilateralism that it represents will never become irrelevant. One country by sheer might win a war, but it will take a concert of countries to win the peace. This was the case in Kosovo, in which the U.S. intervened as the leader of a coalition of the willing, but post-conflict reconstruction was implemented under U.N. auspices. In 1999, the Security Council was skipped because the U.S. knew that Russia would veto any resolution authorizing the use of force in Kosovo. However, negotiations with Russia produced an agreement that made the U.N. the immediate source of humanitarian aid and civil authority after the war.

Moreover, even if the U.N. did not exist, the world would have to invent it. The world would have to invent an international body just like it. For many developing countries, the United Nations is a supremely vital forum in addressing global economic, social, and cultural concerns. After all, many transnational threats to our societies, such as global warming, the spread of new diseases, and drugs and arms trafficking are global in scope and cannot be managed individually or even regionally.

Perhaps the greatest collateral benefit of the Iraq war that should not be squandered is the opportunity to reform the United Nations and make it a more effective development agent and peacemaker.

In the wake of recent threats to global peace, an important fact stands out: security, like our economic endeavors is increasingly become regionalized. The contributions of each country in East Asia, whether large or small, are vital to regional peace. Being ready to respond nationally to security threats is to us a prerequisite for the ability to contribute positively to the maintenance of regional security. It is under this light that we are looking at the new emergency legislation being considered in the Japanese diet.

As you may know, we have pockets of terrorism in the Southern Philippines that we are wiping out, and it is in our national interest to welcome assistance. The supporters of this terrorism are not confined within our borders. Because of this, we must work with our friends from the region and around the world to achieve lasting peace. We continue to rely on Malaysia's leading support to our peace process in the Southern Philippines. We thank Thailand for helping us build up our air battle capacity.

And as for the United States, the Philippines and the United States have a mutual defense treaty which covers our military cooperation. It has been in effect for 50 years and guides our mutual involvement. We've had regular and joint military exercises throughout that relationship and continue to do so. But it is also important to understand that the Philippine Constitution forbids foreign troops, U.S. or otherwise, from engaging in combat in the Philippines. There will be no U.S. combat activity in the Philippines, only training and security assistance.

The majority of the people of the Philippines support U.S. troops in the Philippines as long as they are under our command, as long as they comply with our constitution, and as long as their efforts help us wipe out terrorism. We need to protect the Philippine people from wanton terrorists and I welcome international assistance to root out terrorists and more importantly, bring renewed economic prosperity to our most impoverished areas.

Substantial progress has been made in eliminating Al Qaeda networks. However, in Asia, in the world, we must continue to be on alert.

The war on terrorism has many battlefronts and it is in everyone's interest to support efforts to win this war wherever and whenever these battles break out. Terrorism has many faces, but we should recognize its one result: a step backwards from humanity and progress to fear. We owe it to ourselves to move forward together to eradicate terrorism and rebuild those regions of the world affected by terrorism on a foundation of peace, goodwill and prosperity.

Like the fear on which it feeds, terrorism can be contagious and it will not be contained unless we agree on a comprehensive approach for defeating it in Asia. The early implementation of the road map to peace in the Middle East would help improve the situation. And by deepening our interdependence in Asia, by facilitating all kinds of interaction, and by raising the cost of conflict, regional economic integration can help us preserve the peace in East Asia, just as it has done in the case of Europe.

I'm an advocate for broad-based economic engagement with the world, for the Philippines as well as our neighbors. I believe more trade makes for less conflict and more interdependence as long as the trade expansion genuinely lifts all partners equally. But as developed and developing countries alike know to be true, the benefits of globalization are not all apparent, and they are not all positive.

This poses a problem in a democracy like the Philippines. As Philippines comes down on the side of trade, we understand that at the same time, we must manage the transition well with our poor in order to gain their political support for additional political and economic reforms down the road. Short-term necessities can then be offset in the longer term by a strong economy able to dismantle its non-competitive sectors and fully join a fair global trading system.

Japan, China and ASEAN form an economic sphere to rival Europe and North America. It is the dawn of a new age in Asia as Japan, China and ASEAN nations come together seeking greater economic cooperation and integration. The Philippines welcomes this development, particularly as we have seen our exports to our regional neighbors growing by leaps and bounds. We are brimming with confidence at the role we can play to assert the economic might of the region.

But, we will only be planting aspirations for economic integration and security cooperation on barren soil if we do not also collectively cooperate on human security, on basic human needs like shelter, food, education and employment, or on sustainable development.

In this regard, we commend Japan's active role in the reconstruction of countries that have experienced conflict, such as Afghanistan, East Timor, and Sri Lanka, and regions such as the Philippines' southernmost island of Mindanao and the Indonesian province of Aceh.

In many ways, we are still recovering from the effects of the Asian financial crisis. It's crucial, therefore, for the Japanese economy to recover its dynamism, and to act as an engine of global growth.

The challenges that we face necessitate greater interaction and cooperation among the countries of East Asia. Some of these challenges are completely new, such as the SARS epidemic, which in a very short period has become a really serious scourge to Asian economies. Not so much the sickness itself but the fear it engendered.

But, as the 1997 Asian financial crisis made us realize, when we face a challenge together, we can overcome it. At that time, Thailand and Indonesia were financially assisted by Japan and China, while Korea received assistance from Japan. In the current SARS crisis, the first donors have once again been Japan and China.

In 1997, the ASEAN Plus Three process was born, almost to the day the financial storm began wreaking havoc in the region. That was a most fortuitous conjunction, indeed, as the first achievement of this process was as quick as "quick response" must be. The network of currency swap arrangements established in Chiang Mai set the stage for Pan-East Asian financial cooperation. The spirit of Chiang Mai should live on; a common East Asian currency should be an active goal of our region.

East Asian economic integration is not good only for East Asians. In this global village, growth and development are like waves that can animate all shores. For the global race against poverty, marginalization and underdevelopment is not fought nor won by competing teams. It is rather like a relay where every economy is free to join the sole team pitted against the sole opponent, the clock. And in this relay, the more sprinters there are in the team, the greater is the prize to be shared by everyone.

For achieving development, non-participation or isolation is a losing option. For achieving peace and security, isolation is another name for failure.

Thus, the Korean peninsula has traditionally been a source of uncertainty in East Asia. The isolationist North Korea fired 'No Dong' and 'Taepo Dong' missiles in Japan's direction last 1993 and 1998, respectively. After launching a rocket over Japan in 1998, North Korea promised a year later that it would suspend missile tests after Washington agreed to ease trade sanctions.

Unfortunately, last January, North Korea announced that it was unilaterally pulling out of the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, which the cornerstone of global efforts to stop the spread of nuclear weapons. North Korea subsequently expelled IAEA inspectors and resumed operations at the nuclear facilities of Yongbyon, which may be linked to nuclear weapons development.

The world is united in trying to bring North Korea to a disarmament position. Aside from its destabilizing effects, an arms race is wasteful of resources, especially at a time when East Asia should prioritize its capacity for sustained economic growth in the region.

Politically, the Philippines represents the closest ASEAN border to Korea and Japan, and remains deeply concerned about peace on the peninsula, particularly a nuclear-free peninsula. That's my position and I believe it can be resolved peacefully, but it will require regional as well as international cooperation.

The current Korean crisis is both a challenge and a great opportunity for multilateral diplomacy. I fervently hope that the nuclear genie can be contained, as has been done in Ukraine and Belarus, which were persuaded to give up their nuclear weapons programs. We hope that Japan, South Korea, the U.S., China, Russia, and the European union will be able to convince North Korea to do the same and to dismantle its weapons of mass destruction. We therefore welcome the talks among North Korea, the U.S. and China.

These talks, while still in the initial stages, are beginning to heal the strains in the relationship between U.S. and Korea, and has strengthened the alliance between Japan and the U.S. they've also allowed china to be a major constructive player in the region's security. China's efforts at the start of the trilateral meeting were truly commendable, and we hope that it will continue to play an important role commensurate to its growing economic importance in resolving security and political issues in East Asia.

Given the largely undefined security relations among China, Japan and the U.S., their interaction will result in a decentralized and Multipolar regional order. The ASEAN Regional Forum (ARF) is now the necessary linchpin for security and political dialogue in the region, because the major individual country players still have to resolve important differences among themselves. Progress in the ARF may not be as fast as some quarters may want it, but with the consent of its members, ARF can evolve from mainly a confidence-building body into an institution that can handle conflict resolution.

Full engagement by all stakeholders is the foundation of the new Asian order. We should work together to seize the moment, define the opportunity, and move forward as modern nations finding common ground with our global neighbors while fighting for our own national interests.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo on Filipino as Worker Here and Abroad

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On Filipino as Worker Here and Abroad

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, June 7, 2003]

PORTRAIT OF THE FILIPINO AS WORKER HERE AND ABROAD

Kakaiba itong ating pagbibigay ng award itong taong ito. Kasi nagpalit ang mundo noong a-beinte ng Marso nang ang Koalisyonang pinamunuan ng Amerika ay kumilos kontra sa Iraq. Bakit nagpalit ang mundo? Dahil dito nagbago ang mundo, kapaligiran na kailangan ng bagong pananaw ng Asya sa seguridad ng pulitika at kabuhayan. Kailangang tayo ngayon ay mas responsable sa kaligtasan ng ating mga bansa. At para sa Pilipinas, iyang pananaw na 'yan ay dapat kinokonsidera ang ating walong milyong mga mamamayan na nagbibigay ng kontribusyon sa kaunlaran, maging sa ating ekonomiya, maging sa ekonomiya ng buong mundo dahil isang daan at apatnapu ang mga bansa kung saan nagtatrabaho ang ating mga dakitang manggagawang Pilipino.

At kayo mga dakilang manggagawang Pilipino, tinatawag na mga bagong bayani dahil sa napakaraming binibigay ninyong paglilingkod at dangal sa ating bansa. Magandang reputasyon ang binibigay ng ating mga bayaning Filipino sa ating bansa, kasi sinasabi nila kung ganun kagaling yung mga Pilipino halimbawa, sa Saudi, eh, ganun din siguro 'yung mga Pilipinong nandoon sa Pilipinas. Kay a, napakagaling na kayo ay embahador para sa ating bansa.

At hindi lamang 'yon, iyung inyong mga ipinapadala dito, kung darating ang araw na makakapag-trabaho na kayo dito, yon din ay dahil puhunan ninyo ang nagpalaki ng ating ekonomiya. Nagpapadala kayo ng matrikula sa inyong mga anak at kapatid kaya milyun-milyong kabataan ang nakakapag-aral o nakakatapos ng edukasyon at nagbibigay ng bagong henerasyon ng magagaling ding manggagawa. Ito ay dahil sa tulong ng ating mga OFW.

Iyung mga pabahay na pinapadala ninyo, yung mga bahay na napapatayo ninyo para sa inyong mga kamag-anak, libu-libo 'yon. At 'yung mga minamahal ninyo sa buhay na nagkakaroon ng bagong bahay dahil sa inyo, 'yon din ay nagkakaroon ng bagong buhay.

At noong isang araw o noong isang linggo, pumunta ako sa isang miting kasama ng mga industriya ng pabahay. Ayon sa kanila, ang pinakamalaking merkado nila ngayon, pinakamalaking pinanggagalingan ng kanilang negosyo sa pabahay ay mga OFW na bumibili ng tahanan para sa inyong mga pamilya sa Pilipinas. At kung sinasabi nila, ang housing pinakamalaki ang multiplier effect, pati anghousing na 'yan, ay kontribusyon ng ating mga OFW. Nagpapadala kayo ng puhunan, kaya sabi ko, kung darating ang araw na makakatrabaho kayong muli dito ay dahil sa inyong puhunan. Dahil sa inyong puhunan na pinapadala ninyong remittance sa inyong mga kamag-anak ay nakakapaglunsad ng maraming mga negosyo, maging small business sa buong bansa. At ang small businessayon sa mga ekonomista, 'yon ang pinaka-efficient sa paggamit ng puhunan.

Ang matagumpay na negosyo na napapatayo sa ating bansa dahil sa inyong remittances ay isang malaking haligi ng ating ekonomiya. Sumigla ang maraming barangay, bayan, lungsod, probinsiya sa mga kontribusyon ng overseas Filipinos. At tugmang-tugma ito sa aking pangunahing programa sa ating pamahalaan para magkaroon ng trabaho ang ating taong-bayan. Sabi ko, ang unang pinaka-kailangan ay mga small and medium enterprises.

Kaya kung 'yung mga ibang bansa noong nagkaroon tayo ng Asian crisis o ng crisis pagkatapos ng Iraq at saka 9-11 na nagpahina ng negosyo sa buong mundo, buhay pa rin ang Pilipinas dahil hindi exports ang ating inaasahan kung hindi 'yung small and medium enterprises sa ating sariling bansa. At marami duong puhunan ay nanggaling din sa inyo. At gaya ng sabi ko, kung hindi tayo umasa sa exports, umasa tayo sa housing na malaki ang multiplier effect, galing din 'yon sa inyo.

Kaya, ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino na taun-taon ay nagpapadala ng hindi bumababa sa anim na bilyong dolyares, iyon ho, ang laki ng inyong kontribusyon. Hindi lamang ito direktong kontribusyon sa pamilya, kung hindi sa multiplier at sa pagbibigay ng trabaho sa nakararami.

I am very happy to report to you, our dear new heroes, that for the first quarter of this year, our economic report showed that our gross domestic product (GDP) grew by 4.5 percent while our gross national product (GNP) grew by 5.6 percent. Iyung mga binibisita kong ibang mga bansa, wala pa sa kanila ang ganito kalaking pag-angat. At ano ang diperensya ng 4.5 percent na GDP at 5.6 percent na GNP? Ang diperensya yung 5.6 percent na GNP sakop yung inyong mga remittances. Kaya ganun, nakikita natin ang halaga ng inyong kontribusyon sa ating bansa. Ibig sabihin, ang diperensya ay nangagaling sa kontribusyon ng mga overseas Filipinos. Kaya, maraming salamat sa inyong remittances, salamat sa inyong pagka-bayani.

At eto na nga, gaya ng sabi ko, ang inyong kontribusyon tugmang-tugma sa mga hangarin natin. Iyung mga pinahayag mula pa ng aking unang Ulat sa Bayan bilang Pangulo noong 2001. Sabi ko noon, ano ba ang hangarin ng karaniwang Pilipino – trabaho, edukasyon, tahanan, idagdag pa natin, pagkain sa bawat mesa — ito ang mithiin ng masa. At ito rin ang sabiko, this is the core of my vision. This is, in common sense and plain talk, is the core of my vision.

But one year of seeking to carry out that vision made me realize that these are goals for our people, while the vision of our nation must be to rebuild and strengthen the Philippine Republic. Dahil ang isang matatag na republika lamang ang makakasiguro ng trabaho, edukasyon, sariling tahanan at pagkain sa bawat mesa ng ating mamamayan.

Kung kayo ay kinakailangang pumunta pa sa ibang bansa para makahanap ng trabaho, 'yon ay dahil hindi pa malakas ang ating republika.

Two essential features mark out a strong republic: the first is independence from class and sectoral interests, so that the republic stands for the interests of the people rather than a powerful minority; the second is the capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to execute good policy and deliver essential services.

Ang batayang serbisyo ay dapat hinahatid ng malakas na republika sa taumbayan kahit nasaan man kayo, maging sa Pilipinas o sa ibayong dagat.

Iyon ang dahilan kung bakit sinabi ko na sa bagong pananaw na kailangan pagkatapos nagpalit ang mundo noong a-beinte ng Mar so, kailangan kasama ang mga Pilipino sa ibayong dagat sa konsiderasyon. Itong bagong pananaw ay dapat kilalanin na dito sa Asya, gaya ng sabi ko, higit na kailangan maging responsible tayo para sa ating sariling seguridad sa pulitika at pangkabuhayan. Kasama na rito ang ating mga mamamayan hindi lamang sa Pilipinas kung hindi ang mga Pilipino sa ibayong dagat. Gagawin natin ang lahat para ligtas ang Pilipino, hindi lamang sa Pilipinas kung hindi na rin sa iba't ibang bahagi ng mundo.

Mula nang lumala ang problemang pangmundong istabilidad, laging patakaran ng ating pamahalaan na ang ating pinaka-tungkulin ay ang kaligtasan ng mga Pilipino, maging sa Pilipinas o sa ibayong dagat. Ang ating pangunahing pinagkakaabalahan ay manatili kayong ligtas at wala sa panganib. I must be concerned about the peace and security of 8 million Filipinos who live and work in over 140 countries around the world.

Bilang pagkilala sa inyong kontribusyon sa ating ekonomiya, napasa na nga ang batas na nagbibigay sa inyo ng karapatang bumoto sa ibayong dagat.

Maging sa Amerika kung saan tatlong milyong Pilipino ay naroon – tatlo doon sa walong milyong Pilipino ay nasa Amerika – kinikilala ang inyong kontribusyon sa ekonomiya ng Pilipinas, maging sa buong mundo. Kaya si Pangulong Bush ay nag-ulat na ang Amerika, ay magsisimula ng proyektong padaliin ang padalang pera ng mga manggagawang Pilipino mula sa buong mundo, hindi lang noong nasa Amerika, papunta sa Pilipinas. At nagkasundo kami na itong proyekto ay magpapaibayo ng buhay ng milyun-milyong Pilipino, sa pamamagitan ng maging mas mababa ang gastos ng inyong remittance fees at mas madali tumagos ang pondo sa Pilipinas mula sa Amerika at saka sa buong mundo. Sana sa loob ng anim na buwan ay mararamdaman na ninyo itong mas mababang gastos.

At doon sa aming pinanggalingan ni Pat Sto. Tom as, doon sa Japan kung saan halos isang daang libong Pilipino rin ay nagtatrabaho. Kahapon, si Prime Minister Koizumi, ay nagsabi na pwede na nating simulan ang pormal na pagtalakay tungkol sa economic partnership agreement ng Pilipinas at saka ng Hapon. At para sa Pilipinas, ang pangunahing pinapasok natin na bahagi ay ang mabuksan ng Hapon ang kanyang pintuan sa ating mga nursing aides at saka ating mga I.T. workers. Ito ay kakaiba dahilhanggang ngayon saradung-sarado pa ang mga pintuan ng Hapon sa mga manggagawang galing sa ibang bansa.

Doon naman sa Korea – doon nanggaling kami ni Pat Sto. Tomas – ay marami ring mga Pilipinong naroon. Ang kanya lamang, doon sa mga tatlumpung libong Pilipino, higit kalahati walang dokumentong tama. Kaya hinihiling natin sa kanila na ipasa nila yung Work Permit Law, para sa ganun hindi lamang trainees, kunyari ‘yung mga manggagawa doon na mababa tuloy ang kanilang sweldo, at magiging pareho sa Koreano sa sweldo at saka sa security of tenure.

Sabi naman ng Pangulong bago, bagamat mabigat yaong panukalang batas na ‘yon, dahil syempre ang isang bansa ay natatakot na mawalan ng trabaho ang sariling mga mamamayan, ay bibigyan nila ng extension o ng grace period o ‘yung amnesty period ang ating mga manggagawang Pilipino, para hindi kinakailangang agad-agad pinapauwi dahil kinikilala nila na ang ating mga Pilipino ay magagaling at gustung-gusto nilang naroon sila.

At ngayon, kinikilala rin natin ang mga natatanging OFW itong araw na ito. Sa pagkilalang ito, hangad ng inyong pangulo at ng inyong pamahalaan ang pamamalagi ng katapangan at katibayan ng inyong loob sa anumang mga pagsubok na darating. Ito ay inyo nang napatunayan, sampu ng ating maraming kababayan sa labas ng ating bansa. Sabi nga, ang manggagawang Pilipino, subok na matibay, subok na matapang, maging giyera man ay ‘di uurungan.

Kaya, nagpapasalamat kami sa inyo, dakilang manggagawang Pilipino. Sana darating ang araw na kayo ay magtatrabaho na dito sa Pilipinas dahil sa tulong na rin ninyo, lumakas ang ating republika. Ngunit ang isang ikinalulungkot ko, lalo na ‘yung mga seamen, dumarating ang araw na lumalampas na kayo sa edad, bumabalik kayo rito kahit na hindi pa malakas ang ating republika at naghahanap kayo ng trabaho sa ating bansa. Kanya naman ako ay nagtayo ng isang bahagi ng DOLE, yung Undersecretary of Labor for Reintegration, si Undersecretary Lucy Lazo. At sabi ko, ang kanyang tanging trabaho ay tumulong doon sa mga OFW na bumalik na dahil wala ng trabahong handa para sa kanila sa ibang bansa. Sabi ko nga kay Pat, “Pat, bakit nawawalan ng trabaho, ang galing-galing nila?” Kasi sabi ni Pat, kung minsan meron silang age limit, at pagpasok naman nila dito, ang mga pabrika rin, meron ding age limit, o kaya masyadong mataas na ang sweldong natatanggap nila sa ibang bansa hindi rin kayang tapatan ‘yung suweldo nila.

Kaya kailangan ng ibang paraan. Kaya kailangan siguro, kung kayo ay nagpapadala ng puhunan noong araw pero kayo ang alam n’yo ay maging manggagawa o technician o professional, kailangan ngayon pa lang ay matulungan na kayo na magsimula ng inyong bagong sariling buhay. At ‘yon din ang isang bandog nitong pamahalaan sa inyo.

Sana, malaman ng marami na pag-uwi ninyo at kayo ay naghahanap ng susunod na hanapbuhay, ang susunod na chapter ng inyong buhay nand’yan pa rin si Pat, at ‘yung kanyang Undersecretary, si Lucy Lazo, na sinabi kong tulungan lahat ng ating dakilang manggagawang Pilipino, na magkaroon ng bagong buhay dito sa Pilipinas.

Kaya muli, mga kaibigan, salamat at pinupuhunan ninyo ang inyong pinakamagagandang taon ng inyong buhay para sa ating bansa. Sinisikap nating suklian kayo hindi lamang habang kayo ay nagbibigay ng tagumpay sa pamamagitan ng mga premyong binibigay sa inyo sa mga seremonyang ito, kung hindi na rin habang ang inyong buong buhay, sisikapin natin na hindi kayo nakalimutan ng ating bansa. At kung kayo ay nagkalinga sa ating bansa, kayo rin ay aalagaan ng ating bansang Pilipinas sa inyong buong buhay.

Maraming salamat at congratulations, dakilang manggagawang Pilipino!

Speech of President Arroyo during the program for the distribution of land titles to farmer beneficiaries of Jala-Jala, Rizal [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa programa para sa pamamahagi ng mga titulo ng lupa sa mga benepisyaryong magsasaka ng Jala-Jala, Rizal

[Ipinahayag sa Municipal Gymnasium, Brgy. Punta, Jala-Jala, Rizal, ika 9 ng Hunyo, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Obet Pagdanganan sa inyong pagpapakilala sa akin.

Binabati ko rin... Kasama ko rin ngayon si Secretary Joey Lina, ang ating Secretary ng DILG; parating na raw si Governor Ynares, tumawag siya. Pero gusto kong batiin ang kakarating na si Vice Governor Jovito Rodriguez; at salamat sa ating mga iba't-ibang mga punongbayan na narito ngayon. Siyempre 'yung ating host, si Mayor Delos Santos, maraming salamat; at nabanggit na rin niya 'yung mga kapwa mayor niya sa pamumuno ng pangulo ng Mayors League, si George Bernardo. Salamat Mmayor doon sa inyong, 'yon, sa inyong streamer "Welcome, Rizal Mayors League." at gusto ko ring batiin 'yung ating mga board member. Pati na rin 'yung ama nung isang board member, si Congressman Ding Tanjuatco; gusto ko rin batiin lahat ng mga officials dito sa bayan ng Jala-Jala.

Pinakamaliit at pinakamalayong bayan ng probinsya ng Rizal. Kaya kung pulitika lang iniisip ko hindi ako dito pupunta. Pupunta ako doon sa aking kumpadre sa Antipolo dahil ang laki-laki. Pero dito ako pumunta para ipakita na ito ay trabaho at hindi pulitika.

Gusto ko ring batiin 'yung ating mga nag-aalaga ng ating kapayapaan, ang Commander ng Southern Luzon Command, ay wala siya dito; ang Commander ng Second Division, si General Efren Abu. At saka ang namumuno ng police sa Region 4-A, si General Jimmy Karingal; at tinawag ko sa entablado ang Superintendent ng DepEd, si Edith Doblada.

Kasi ho tatlo ang aking dahilan kung ba't narito ako eh. Una, itong ginawa... Gagawin ni Obet mamaya. 'Yung pamamahagi ng titulo sa ating mga benepisyaryo ng reporma sa lupa dito sa Jala-Jala. Narinig na natin 'yung kwento ni Obet. Narinig natin 'yung kwento ni mayor. Narinig natin 'yung kwento ng kinatawan ng mga magsasaka, na ito ay bunga ng isang mahabang-mahaba at masalimuot na proseso. Sa wakas, mga magsasaka ng Jala-Jala, kayo na ang may-ari ng inyong sariling lupa. At ito ay isang napaka-importante para sa akin. Dahil ang aking tatay, si Diosdado Macapagal, siya nga ang sinasabi nilang ama ng reporma sa lupa.

Nung ako ay naging pangulo nakita ko na isang milyon pang hektarya ng sakahan ay kinakailangan pang i-reporma sa lupa. At kung gusto natin na makamit ang pagsugpo ng kahirapan sa loob ng isang dekada dapat lahat ng isang milyong hektarya na yan ay mapamahagi sa loob ng isang dekada. Kaya bawa't taon ang ating tuyo, ang ating pakay ay sana 100,000 hectares every year ang magagawa.

Nung Linggo pero ngayon pumapasok na for enrollment. At saka para doon sa mga teachers at saka mga supervisors, superintendents, principals para magsanay tungkol sa sars at iba pang mga sakit na nakakahawa kagaya ng dengue.

Congratulations sa ating mga health officials dahil tayo ang isa sa unang mga nag-graduate sa SARS sa buong mundo. At ayaw natin na babalik ang SARS. Doon sa Toronto nag-celebrate na sila tapos bumalik ang SARS. Doon sa Singapore nagse-celebrate sila ngayon pero sinasabi rin ni Prime Minister Goh pero mag-ingat tayo para hindi babalik. Pero kung ano 'yung nagawa... Pero sila bago sila nag-graduate daan-daan ang nagkaroon ng SARS. Sampu sa isang araw. Tayo sampu sa buo. Pagkatapos ng sampu napigil na natin. Sila sampu isang araw namamatay. Tayo dalawa ang namatay sa buong panahon. Pagkatapos ng sampu, na dalawa ang namatay, ay wala na tayong SARS. Pero isigurado natin talagang mawawala na yan.

At kung ano ang tagumpay natin sa sars magagawa rin natin 'yon sa dengue. Kaya 'yon ang kailangan kaya meron tayong one week na seminar ng mga guro. Pero ito rin ang paraan kung papano makapunta ako para makita kung ano ang mga pangangailangan. Kasi sinasabi nila kulang ang classroom. Pero ilan ang kula ng, yan ang hindi pa scientific na nagagawa. Kaya ang sinasabi ko kanina kay Secretary De Jesus lahat ng mga eskwelahan kung saan ang ratio ay 50 students to 1 at lampas ay dapat mandatory ang shifting. Two shifts morning and afternoon.

Ngayon, kung 'yung elementary school ay 100 students and above kahit na mag-shifting kulang pa rin ang classroom. At 'yung mga high school kung 200 and above ang ratio kahit na mag-shifting kulang pa rin ang classroom. Kaya sabi ko itong taong ito kukumpletuhin natin ang classroom gap. Pero ide-define natin. Ide-define natin ang classroom gap. Ang classroom gap, ibig sabihin noon lahat ng mga eskwela sa elementary na ang ratio ay higit sa 100 to 1, ibig sabihin may classroom gap. Lahat ng secondary na ang ratio ay 200 to 1, ibig sabihin noon may classroom gap.

Ngayon 'yung mga mayayaman na mga local governments inaalok ng DTI na humiram ng counterparting. Magkaka counterpart ang national government, magkaka-counterpart ang local government para magtayo ng mga classrooms. At ayon dito meron nang tatlong libong classrooms sa buong Pilipinas na local government and hihiram para maitayo yuon. Pero may counterpart din ang national government, maliit lang ang hihiramin ng local government. Pero itong mga marami ay mahihirap kaya yan ang tinitignan natin. Isisigurado natin na yang classroom gap na yan ay masasarado itong schoolyear na ito.

Kaya tinawag ko si Edith Doblada. "Edith, kukunin ko na itong records mo. Akin na lang ha?" at tinignan ko. At sa nakita ko na dito sa Rizal, meron tayong... Kung June ang ating definition ng classroom gap para mabuo 'yung classroom ngayon ay mangangailangan tayo ng additional na ten million pesos para sa classroom gap kung... Sorry, Director Agustin kung hindi DPWH ang gagawa. Kasi ang DPWH mahal. Sinasabi ko na sa inyo gumawa na kayo ng ano, ng design na 300,000 lamang. Kaya ang ginagawa ko... Kasi ang nakita kong... Ilan ba itong classroom dating nakita ko? Ah... Ay, saan yung papeles ko, 'yung ginagawa ko kanina? 'Yung papeles ko? Hindi, 'yung binibilang ko 'yung classroom gap, wala na rito. Kinuha ninyo. Ang nakita ko mga ano yata — 16 plus 11 is already 27 — mga 30 classrooms ang kulang sa buong Rizal. At 'yung 30 classrooms na yon eh kung gagamitin mo ang budget ng DPWH ay masyadong malaki ang... Hindi ba? Magkano ang isang classroom mo? Kaya ninyo ang 250,000? Kasi 'yung Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce ginagawa nila 350,000 for two classrooms, yata. Kaya ang gagawin ko, magdo-donate ako sa federation ng 10 million. Alam ko magdadagdag sila ng 5 million. Para sa ganun... Kasi 'yon ang nangyari sa Cavite eh. Sa Cavite siyam lang ang kulang. Kaya nagbigay ako sa kanila ng 3 million, yata. Sabi nila, sobra 'yan for one classroom, pero kulang for 2 classrooms for 9 schools. So sabi nila, sige kami na lang ang magbubuo para may 2 classrooms. Kaya ang binibigay ko sa kanila budget ng DPWH na one classroom tapos noon binubuo nila at nagiging two classrooms. Kaya ito ho ay bibigyan ko sila ng 10 million para magkakaroon ng two classrooms lahat itong mga eskwelahan na kulang. Pero ano... Talaga director agustin gumawa kayo ng plano na makakaya natin. So 500,000 per two classrooms kung ganoon ha. Kaya na ninyo ng 250,000 na ha? Bakit hindi... Ngayon doon sa headquarters hindi ba ganoon? Bagong plano na ba yan? Hindi, pero ang problema ninyo wala pang kisame, wala pang ano... Ha? Babarnisan na ba ito? Kasi kung bagong design baka sa inyo ko na ibigay ang pera. Basta mag-a-allocate ako ng 10 million for the province of rizal. Kasi 'yon ang magko-close ng classroom gap.

Pero over and above that 'yung mga congressmen, mga governor, mga mayors, 'yung NDC-DTI magkakaroon pa ng iba. Pero nakikita ko at the very minimum dapat itayo natin yuon. So 'yon ang aking isisigurado.

So 'yon ho ang pangalawang dahilan kung ba't ako'y napunta rito. Dahil nga matignan kung ano 'yung inyong classroom gap. 'Yung critical classroom gap.

Pangatlo, eh kasi matagal na akong hindi nakakapunta sa Jala Jala kahit na maliit at malayo. Eh, siguro dahil maliit at malayo halos walang nagpupunta rito. Kaya ako ang magbibisita sa inyo.

Wala na akong babasahin kaya aalis na ako sa podium. Hindi n'yo ako nakikita eh.

Alam n'yo, noong nagpunta ako sa Amerika, nilagyan nila ako ng tungtungan para makikita ako. Kasi noon daw 'yung Reyna ng Onglaterna nagpunta din siya sa Amerika at tumindig siya sa entablado nang ganun. Eh hindi nilagyan ng tungtungan, kaya siya mismo nagsabi, ang nakita lang ng tao 'yung sumbrero niya na nagsasalita. Anyway, nagbasa ako kaya kailangan nandito ako kanina. Pero ngayon wala na.

'Yung Jala-Jala... Alam ho n'yo, itong Jala-Jala, 'yon nga ang sinasabi ni Ding Tanjuatco noong Congressman siya noon, pinakamalayo at pinakamaliit na bayan. Pero ho itong jala-jala matagal ko nang kilala kahit na hindi pa n'yo ako kilala. Kasi nung ho ako'y undersecretary sa Department of Trade And Industry proyekto ko po 'yung integrated development program ng Jala-Jala. At alam ni Mayor Delos Santos 'yon. Tapos, nung naging senador ako, 'yung slaughterhouse. Pero sabi ni mayor hindi pa niya binubuksan 'yung slaughterhouse dahil hinihintay n'ya 'yung palengke na ngayon sa wakas ay na approve na nang logofind, 'yung programa ng dilg together with World Bank para sa mga palengke. At na-approve nung last week lamang. Kaya sabi ko, "baka mayor, ma-imbita mo ako sa groundbreaking?" kasi isasabay 'yung palengke at saka yuong aking slaughterhouse na magbubukas.

Kaya ho, tapos itong land reform na napakalapit sa puso ng aming pamilya. Kaya salamat sa pagkakataon nakabisita muli dito sa inyo. At ngayon si Obet at 'yung mga kasamahan niya ang magdi-distribute ng mga titulo habang ako ho ay pupunta doon sa loob para i-finalize ko po itong pangangailangan ng mga school building dito sa lalawigan ng Rizal.

Maraming salamat at congratulations sa mga bagong may-ari ng lupa.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Graduation of Barangay Tanod and presentation of “Mindanao Natin”

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Graduation of Barangay Tanod and presentation of “Mindanao Natin”

[Delivered at the Gen. Santos City Gymnasium, Brgy. Lagao, Gen. Santos City, South Cotabato, June 11, 2003]

Maraming salamat Kalihim, Joey Lina sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin. Lingkod Palihog.

Ang atong host City Mayor, Mayor Jun Acharon; ang aton nga Gobernador sa South Cotabato, Governor Daisy Fuentes; ang atong Congresswoman diri sa GenSan, Congresswoman Darlene Custodio. Wala pa? Kauban ko kanina. Paanhi na; ang atong Congressman Gikan sa Sarangani, Congressman Erwin Chiongbian; ang atong Governor Gikan sa Sultan Kudarat Pax Mangudadatu; ay, si Governor Escobar gikan sa Sarangani; tanan-tanan mga mayors sa South Cotabato.

Kauban ko karon ang akong mga members sa Cabinet, aside from Secretary Lina, si Secretary Rene de Villa; si Secretary Sim Datumanong — wala?; si Secretary Nani Braganza — wala na kasi; si Secretary Paul Dominguez; si Secretary Mai Jimenez; si P.A. for Mindanao Jess Dureza.

Gusto ko ipaabot ang akong pag-abe-abe sa mga laing-laing president sa ABC sa SOCSKSARGEN: Chair Delia Rabanez sa GenSan; Chair Jesus Desidegis sa Sarangani; Chair Roberto Sunga sa Koronadal; Chair Fernando Janoto sa South Cotabato; ug ang ilang mga boss, mga barangay chairmen sa SOCSKSARGEN.

Kay ang atong graduation karon alang sa atong peace and order, ang aton mga sundalo ug mga pulis si 601st General Alexander Yano; si Region XII Director General Rodolfo Tor; ang presidente sa atong Philippine Public Safety College na siya ang nagpapagawa nitong mga courses na ito, si General Ramsey Ocampo; kauban nato ang atong mga leaders sa atong business industry diri sa Gen. Santos, ang ilang presidente ang presidente of Federation of Fishing Association si Domingo Teng; kaninyong tanan mga kaiguonon, aton mga barangay tanod:

Una sa tanan, gi-abe-abe ko ang mga barangay tanod gikan sa South Cotabato, Sarangani, GenSan — uy, aniya sab ang boss ni General Yano, si General Gene Senga. Sorry, Gene. Okay — barangay tanod sa Koronadal, tanan-tanan mga probinsiya ug siyudad sa kining nga region nga nakahaman ining inyong tanod training course. Nagahalipay sab ako sa mga opisyaes sa PNP ug ang mga lokal nga pamunuan sa ilang paspas nga pagsunod sa akon sugo nga hatagan ug training ang tanang barangay tanod.

Alam ng lahat na ang ating mga barangay tanod ang frontliners sa pangangalaga sa katahimikan at mabuting kalagayan ng ating taungbayan dahil kayo ang nasa unahan o cutting edge sa pagpapatupad sa batas. Kasama kayo sa mga makikipag-ugnayan at makikipag-tulungan sa ating mga lider na lokal sa pagmamatyag ng lahat ng klase ng problemang sosyal o pang-ekonomiya na kaugnay sa anumang krisis. Kasama na rin dito ang problema tungkol sa terorismo.

Unya gabii, alas dose sa midnight, mahuman na ang unilateral ceasefire. We may face a fresh wave of terrorist threats. The police and the military must be prepared backed by the vigilance of alert communities and citizens. We shall sustain punitive actions. At the same time, we shall continue our search for a principled peace. We shall not be threatened or intimidated. The force of our collective vigilance, international cooperation and programs of meaningful social and economic uplift will continue to marginalize and eventually defeat terrorism. Enduring peace and security can be attained through people’s solidarity behind firm and caring leadership.

Mga barangay tanod, kuyog kamo sa ako to lead Mindanaoans regardless of creed, ethnic origin or social station from the clutches of fear to a heightened sense of security, from the morass of poverty to equitable enterprise, from conflict to peace. The promise of Mindanao must be redeemed or the future of our entire nation cannot be won.

Ingon ko gihapon, ang mga prinsipyo sa aton mga tibuok gitukuran sa pagpauswag sa Mindanao. Usa ka prinsipyo mao'y ang atong ultimo nga tuyo kinahanglan ang kalinaw ug kauswagan nga nagkauban. Ikaduha nga prinsipyo maoy ang atong pilisopiya kinahanglan nakabase sa konstitusyon, soberenidad ug atong nasud, ug integridad ug atong teritoryo.

Ikatulo nga prinsipyo mao'y ang atong sosyedad multi-ethnic nga kinahanglan nagabase sa social justice alang sa tanan ug ang institutionalized accommodation sa mga ethnic tradition. Kristiyano ug Muslim, Intsik ug tisoy, Tagalog, Ilonggo ug Cebuano muo kini ang gamay ra nga mangangalan nga gitubagan ug Pilipino. Sa usa kaguwapo nga testimonya sa akong dako ug laing-laing pamana isip nasud.

Sa nining tulo kadako nga prinsipyo madagdag ako ug ikaupat. Sa atong pangita ug kalinaw walay lugar ala sa terorismo o brutalidad. Kining mga akto kinahanglan kondenado ug tanan. Kauban na ang atong kondenasyon sa pag-hostage sa mga Pilipino dili lang diri sa Pilipinas kung hindi sa didto sa Liberia.

I have instructed the DFA to get the facts about the snatching of Filipinos in Lliberia, and maintain a direct link of communication with the Liberian authorities. OWWA must keep closely in touch with the concerned families with whom I deeply sympathize. We will do all we can to keep our nationals out of harm's way. I shall be personally monitoring this issue until it is resolved.

Ang pagpapanatili ng kapayapaan sa ibang bansa, sa ating bansa ay tungkulin ng lahat lalo na dito sa ating bansa. Ito ay tungkulin hindi lamang ng pulis o sundalo kungdi ang lahat lalo na ang mga barangay tanod. Ang pagmamatyag ng lahat ang nagpapabawas sa ating takot laban sa banta, sa katahimikan ug aron makadayon ang aton mga pumuluyo sa ilang pangkinabuhi.

Alang kaninyo mga taga-General Santos, tungod kay ang General Santos gi-ilaman sa iyang produkto sa tuna adunay ako maayong balita. Mi ingon si DTI Secretary Mar Roxas nga nisugot na ang European communities sa pagkakabusa ilang taripa alang sa philippine tuna sa ilalom sa ilang tariff rate quota sugod sa hulyo mahimo na nga kita mubaligya ug abot sa 25,000 metric tons sa tuna sa gisat pang nasud sa European communities, 12 percent lang ang taripa nini. Kaniadto 24 percent ang atong taripa karon hangtod sa 25,000 metric tons tunga na ang taripa. Kaniadto 24 percent busa mamahal kini ug... Busa gamay ra ang mopalit bisan pa ug maayong klaseng ang atong isda. Alang sa sab sa inyong kalinaw ug kauswagan karon makaabot na sa Europe ang tingali unta doble nga atong produkto sa tuna.

I have asked the Fishing Industry of GenSan headed by Mr. Dominador Teng to give a briefing later to the GenSan and national media what this means to the people of Socskargen. But I would like to let you know that this is the first successful conclusion of a complaint filed by the Philippine government under the WTO.

Naa sab laing-laing pang anunsiyo. Humanon ta ug proyekto nga imprastraktura aron makaabot gyud ang kauswagan sa mga lunsuranon. Aron mahimugsan na kining mga lunsuranon. Gusto ko nga masayod kamo nga 90 billion pesos gikan sa tibuok national budget para 2003 gigahen alang gyud sa Mindanao. Kini 26 porsyento sa suma total sa budget karong tuiga. Ang population sa Mindanao 20 percent sa population sa tibuok nasud. Apan ang budget alang sa Mindanao 25 percent sa budget sa tibuok nasud. Apil sa budget ang pagpahimo sa mga imprastraktura sama sa upper mainit bridge sa sarangani na akong inagurahan ganinang buntag. Mihatag na sab ako ug sugo aron sugdan na ang pagtrabaho sa maitum-palimbang road, aron muosog ang komersiyo ug kalinaw dinha. So asa ang atong mga taga-dpwh diri? Asa atong dpwh naa ako notice of cash allocation, 36 million pesos, aron mahuman na... Aron mahuman na sa paspas ang maitum-palimbang road. Okay.

Mihatag na sab ako ug sugo aron sugdan na ang pagtrabaho sa General Santos fishport aron makusog pa ang komersiyo diri ug naa ko sab nga notice of cash allocation sa additional 81 million pesos dagdag sa 60 million na nagawas na kay sakbay nga masugod ang trabaho ingon ug atong mga foreign founders nga China kinahanglan magawas ang kontribusyon ug government sa Pilipinas nga 140 million, kay kining proyekto bilyun-bilyon kining proyekto. One hundred million dollars kining proyekto — ay, no. Dili. 50 million dollars diay. Fifty million dollars kining proyekto kinahanglan ang 140 million pesos nga magikan sa national government aron masugdan kining proyekto. So karong adlaw naa na ang 140 million pesos.

Karon mangutana kamo kung unsay inyong mahimo bilang mgabarangay tanod aron makatabang sa atong mga inisyatiba sa Mindanao. Dako gyud ang inyomatabang sa paglambo sa atong mga programa sa mindanao tungod kay importante ang inyong katungdanan gilang sa mga tanod o magbalantay sa inyong mga barangay. Murag ingon ko ganina, kamo ang masugod aron magtinabangay mga opisyaes sa lungsod alang sa pagsulbad sa bisan unsay problema sa barangay. Mahimo kining problema alang sa terorismo ukon problema sa mga krimen, sa mga drugs o bisan unsang gubot. And also sa atong laing-laing programa sa atong kauswagan.

Unya, si Secretary Mai Jimenez maistorya kaninyo tungkol doon sa ating distance learning program. Kasi marami sa inyong mga barangay malayo lalo na sa glan, ‘di ba? Sa glan, layo layo. Sa Jose Abad Santos sa Sultan Kudarat, layo layo. Meron pang mga rebelde doon kung minsan natatakot ‘yung mga teacher magturo doon, wala tuloy teacher sa mga layuang barangay. kaya ang gusto natin magkaroon ng distance learning doon sa mga barangay. So, we will be having distance learning in these remote barangays where the teachers are scared to go. We will call this a strong republic school ug ang mga makatabang, makakatulong para sa enrollment para mag identify kung saan itong dapat maglagay tayo ng distance learning, kasama na ‘yung mga barangay captain at barangay tanod sa pagpili sa mga lugar.

Apil kamo sa aton mga crisis managers ug sa aton mga multipliers sa atong programa sa kauswagan. Apil kamo mga opisyal nga tawagon sa panahon sa krisis ang crisis manager. Agkayong nagtatapos kayo sa inyong pagsasanay lalong tumitibay ang aking pananalig na higit ninyong mapapangalagaan ang kapayapaan at seguridad ng bansa sa inyong serbisyo sa inyong mga barangay. Ang inyong patuloy na pakikiisa at pagsusuporta ang maghahatid sa atin dito sa Region XII maging sa buong pilipinas tungo sa ating pangarap na magkaroon ng malakas na Republika.

Daghan salamat. Damo gid salamat sa inyo nga tanan.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 105th Philippine Independence Day celebration

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 105th Philippine Independence Day celebration

[Delivered at the Zamboanga City Coliseum, Zamboanga City, Zamboanga del Sur, June 12, 2003]

Muchas gracias, Secretary Cito Lorenzo, Nieto de Zamboanga City.

Mayor Lobregat, muchas gracias por su bonito discurso and for the welcome to all of us; Congressman Celso Lobregat; members of the Cabinet who are here, and I would like to introduce them to you, ladies and gentlemen of Zamboanga City: Secretary Angelo Reyes; Secretary Dinky Soliman; Secretary Joey Lina; Secretary Ging Deles; Secretary Mai Jimenez; General Abaya and the other soldiers and officers; City Councils of Zamboanga headed by Vice Mayor Fabian; PNP Chief Ebdane and the other policemen and women; governor George Hofer of Sibugay, Zamboanga; and the other visiting officials from out of town; mga minamahal kong kababayan na nakikinig diyan sa Quirino Grandstand at sa Luneta; binabati ko si Vice President Guingona at saka si Secretary Richard Gordon, at lahat na nagpaparada sa Luneta.

And to all of you, to all of us, a Ustedes todos, buenas tardes, de todos personas nasyonal, iyi Zamboangueños quien campion de demokrasya de aton. Esta le prente en la giyera kontra terorismo.

Narito ako ngayon sa Mindanao sa paggunita natin ng araw ng kalayaan dahil kailangan dito natin bigyan ng lubos na katuparan ang pangako ng tunay na kalayaan.

Mindanao, the land of promise, is also our final frontier of freedom. Ang labanan para sa kalayaan ay wala na sa Cavite, Bataan o Corregidor kung hindi nandito na sa lupang pangako, ang Mindanao.

Our most important focus of human freedom is Mindanao. Freedom from fear, freedom from want, freedom from injustice. We shall continue the fight against terrorism and poverty until peace, security and prosperity take root in this part of the country. Freedom cannot wait. The people cannot wait.

Kabilang sa labanang ito ay ang pagsasagawa ng piling paghuli at pagpaparusa sa mga nagkakasala. Ang paglulunsad ng mga usapang pangkapayapaan. Ang pagbibigay ng tulong pang-ekonomiya at ang pakikipag-tulong sa ating mga kaibigang bansa at organisasyon.

We are wielding the strong hand of government authority, the compassionate hand of development, and the even hand of enlightened diplomacy to win the peace for our people. Ang mga ito ay patuloy nating ginagawa.

There is a Tagalog proverb: “Habang ang tao ay nasusugatan ito ay tumatapang.” it means hardship makes people stronger. I’m gratified to show the world how mindanao and therefore the Philippines has become stronger.

Noong isang taon, inahon ko ang bandilang Pilipino sa Poblacion ng Lamitan sa Basilan. Bago noon, halos walang naaahon sa Basilan. Maging pag-asa, maging tanim hindi makaahon kahit na kataba-taba ang lupa dahil sa bandido at terorista. Walang naiwan kung saan ang mga ito ay nagkalat ng lagim at nagdarambong maliban sa desperasyon, kasakitan at pagdusa.

Now, Basilan is in peaceful reawakening. As the people have started to take hold of their future using their own hands and resources aided by well-meaning allies for peace and development. Ang relasyon ng Pilipinas at ng mundo ngayon ay higit na malakas sa kailanman. Ang kooperasyon ay likas na batas ng kaunlaran at narito ako sa

Mindanao upang bigyang diin ang bagong panahon ng kooperasyon para ipasulong ang kapayapaan, seguridad at kaunlarang pangkabuhayan ng Pilipinas.

Stability and predictability are essential for creating jobs. That is why I have labored to rebuild key strategic alliances for the Philippines in Asia, Europe, North America including the United States. Kailangan ng Pilipinas itong mga alyansa para ipasulong ang pangangalakal. Maingganyo ang mga namumuhunan at makakuha ng tulong para labanan ang mga elementong gustong magdestabilisa sa Pilipinas. Alam natin ang puhunang kailangan para dito. Alam natin ang lakas ng loob na kailangan para dito.

Strength and security and foreign policy is one facet to the jewel that's the Philippines. Another is the great Filipino worker. Bilib ako sa Pinoy and my focus is clear — jobs for the great Filipino worker. Trabaho para sa Pinoy.

Hindi lamang ako pinunong responsable sa bansang walongpung milyong tao. Ako rin ay pinuno ng isang pangmundong samahan ng walong milyong Pilipinong nakatira at nagtatrabaho sa ibayong dagat. At naglilikha ng bilyung-bilyong dolyar na kita bawat taon.

We all share a desire to improve the economy and make things work to the advantage of the Filipino. The great comparative advantage of the Philippines is our rich human resources. Highly-skilled, well-educated and English-speaking. This includes the millions of Filipinos working in over a hundred forty countries of the world and the millions more employed in the Philippines.

Ang batayan nitong tagumpay ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino ay simple— edukasyon. Ito ay asal na nakabaon sa ating taumbayan. Pinagmamalaki ng bawat pamilya kung saan ang bukas na libro ngayon ay mangangahulugang bukas na pintuan bukas para sa trabaho at oportunidad.

When I became president two years and four months ago, I took a hard look at education, and I asked myself — is it preparing the youth for the jobs of the new economy? Or is it just keeping them off the streets until they're thrown there jobless after graduation, if they finish school at all.

Sa aking unang Ulat sa Bayan noong 2001 sinabi ko, to prepare our youth to be the next generation of the great Filipino worker, the knowledge workers, we will upgrade math and science teaching in basic education. We have done that with the new curriculum that we implemented this past school year. Now, we will upgrade English teaching so that our great Filipino worker will continue his or her advantage in this increasingly competitive world.

Upang mapalawak ang tsansang magtapos, ang ating mga bata sa paaralan sinisigurado natin na may paaralan bawat barangay. Ngunit higit dito sa lahat ng mga paaralang higit limampung bata sa bawat silid aralan, inaatasan ko na magdalawang halili ang mga klase para hindi masikip at mahirap mag-aral.

Sa mga paaralan namang elementaryong higit sandaang bata bawat silid aralan at sa mga high school kung saan higit dalawang daang mag-aaral bawa't silid aralan, itong taong aralan magtatayo tayo ng dagdag na silid aralan. Sa ganitong paraan, minsanang sasagutin natin ang matinding pagkakulang ng silid aralan na matagal nang nagbibigay ng perwisyo sa ating mga mag-aaral.

In addition, I am mainstreaming distance learning in the school system. This is education by television. In barangays where there are still no classrooms, chapels, barangay halls, multi-purpose centers or even shades of mango trees can be the venue. This distance learning module which I call the "strong republic school" will provide basic courses in English, math and science. It will be mainstreamed into the country's formal education system. Because the students who will take this up will be promoted to the next level as long as they pass a qualifying examination.

Supervision will be the responsibility of the nearest formal school. Para-teachers will be tapped from among retired school teachers, teacher soldiers, college level members of the community and socio-civic organization members. They will be trained to shepherd the students through the different modules. Dahil hindi pa umaabot ang sistema ng komunikasyon sa lahat ng malalayong lugar gagamitin ang mga technovan ng technology and livelihood resource center para maghatid ng distance learning.

Gagamitin rin ang sistema ng komunikasyon ng Philippine Information Agency. At nag-alok ang channel two at lahat ng istasyon ng pamahalaang telebisyon na palalabasin itong mga programa sa edukasyon sa mga angkop na oras para ang mga magulang at mga anak ay kapuwa matutong magbasa, magsulat at magbilang. Ang layunin ko ay magkaroon ng sistemang... Buong sistemang satellite para sa programa itong taong aralan.

In our country, the student-teacher ratio is 34 to 1. That's not bad. Therefore, our problem is not the total number of teachers. It is the distribution of the teachers. There are many barangays all over the country where teachers refuse to be assigned. Largely, because they are wartorn barangays. The distance learning system will address this problem as well.

Ako ay bilib sa Pinoy. Salamat sa inyong sipag para sa inyong mga mahal sa buhay at para sa bansang Pilipinas. And I have tried to return the loyalty and dedication of our great Filipino workers, ang ating mga dakilang Pinoy, by working to reform the Philippines, to shake it from its lethargy and outmoded ways of doing things so that we can all prosper. Yet, like every year, this past year has seen its shares of ups and downs. But overall, the march of progress is clear and irreversible.

Tuloy nating tatanggalin ang katiwalian sa gobyerno. Hahabulin ang mga nagdadaya sa buwis. At magtrabaho para higit to make sure the people finally get the fair deal they deserve.

Gamitin natin ang batas para pigilin ang mga terorista at pandaraya sa gobyerno habang pinapa-ibayo ang sistema pinansyal ng Pilipinas.

We've moved forward on BIR reform and customs reform. Revenues are up. The key reform area now is the electric power sector, because we don't want 2006 to begin a period of darkness.

We have passed legislation to direct greater liquidity into the banking system so that our banks can provide more funds for small and medium enterprises and for housing.

Ngunit hindi lamang batas kung hindi pondo ang dapat ilagay sa tamang bagay kung kukuha tayo ng mabuting dibidendo para sa bansa para sa mga darating na taon. Kaya tayo ay namumuhunan sa imprastraktura para tumulong sa pagbiyahe ng tao at produkto at pag-ibayuhin ang kalidad ng buhay.

We're making new investments in small and medium enterprise. Remember, if we are to build a big middle-class, we must empower the people who will populate it. My small and medium enterprise program is a long-term investment in the future of our people. I know the talent is there. This small and medium enterprise program starting with ten billion pesos of funds available through the small banking system is the financial encouragement that they need and they deserve.

At tuloy tayong naghahanap ng puhunan sa kalusugan, sa pangsasaka, sa teknolohiya. Siyempre sa pagmodernisa kailangan rin nating harapin ang mga pamana ng nakaraan. Ito ay isang hamon na maalagaan ang ating pamana at palakihin ang ating mga pagkakataon habang minamantine ang disiplina sa pondo. Ang hamon ay napapalala dahil sa paghina ng pangmundong ekonomiya.

Our challenges remain: many economic, many social, many political. But you have my word that I wake up everyday determine to make progress for our country. And I believe we have made progress.

Este de espiritu de el independencia de nueva dia y necesita kita promotir y asi mas fuerza para se una futuro progresibo para sa aton mundo. Tiene kita fuerza y independencia para y asi este.

Bilib ako sa Pinoy.

Maraming salamat. At mabuhay ang dakilang Pilipino!

Speech of President Arroyo during the Vin d' Honneur in celebration of the 105th anniversary of Philippine Independence

Speech
of

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines

During the Vin d' Honneur in celebration of the 105th anniversary of Philippine Independence

[Delivered on board BRP 'Ang Pangulo' docked at Majini Port, Southern Command area, Zamboanga City, Zamboanga del Sur, June 12, 2003]

In behalf of all our people, particularly the people of Mindanao, I welcome you.

I'm glad that you could be with us today as we celebrate our freedom even as we boldly face freedom's deadliest enemies here in Mindanao. We have expanded the frontiers of freedom by building on opportunities; by meeting challenges head on; by engaging our people of various creeds, ethnic origin and social station; and by engaging the world.

Our most important focus of human freedom is in Mindanao. Freedom from fear, freedom from want, freedom from injustice. We shall continue the fight against terrorism and poverty until peace, security and prosperity take root in this part of the country. Freedom cannot wait, the people cannot wait.

We welcome any unilateral gesture to further silence the guns. But we would rather have a permanent ceasefire leading to substantive negotiations, rather than a ceasefire by installment designed only to gain tactical advantage. I cannot blame the people for being wary because they have not seen a concrete demonstration of sincerity other than this transitory peace overtures.

The national interest demands cautious vigilance even as our hopes for peace are undiminished. That is why we have reconstituted the government peace panel to prepare for a serious peace opportunity once it arises even as we sustain punitive actions against terrorist formations.

My decisions on this issue will depend on national security considerations, the permanent safety of our communities and a concrete show of sincerity on the other side. We will never allow terrorism to take the upper hand.

We thank the Malaysian government for its newest efforts to help us bring peace to Mindanao. We thank the organization of the Islamic conference for their full political cooperation to help move peace negotiations forward. We thank the developed countries particularly Japan, the U.S., Australia, the European countries, Canada, New Zealand, China, Korea for their engagement in Mindanao. Singly or through international organizations such as the World Bank, the Asian development bank and the U.N. system in worthy and effective programs directly striking at the recruiting grounds of conflict and rebellion. We thank the united states for his abundant pledges of material support to ensure the peace through post-conflict re-integration programs some of which are already on stream.

We thank our immediate neighbors and friends from Asean for their commitments to jointly fight terrorism.

The inexplicable link between what's happening in our country and what's going on in the world has never been clearer, and the inevitable integration between security and economic issues into a strategic whole has never been more apparent.

I'm instructing the DFA to send a team to get the facts and maintain a direct link of communication with the Liberian authorities with regard to the Philippine hostages. OWWA must keep closely in touch with the concerned families with whom I deeply sympathize. We will do all we can to keep our nationals out of harm's way. I shall be personally monitoring this issue until it's resolved.

I'm not only the leader of a nation of 80 million people but the leader of a Philippine global enterprise made up of over 8 million Filipinos living and working in over a hundred forty countries. These Filipinos arguably make up the most sophisticated global workforce ever deployed. This fact introduces a high level of complexity to Philippine foreign policy and underscores our vision to actively engage all nations and peoples to protect the interest of Filipinos the world over.

Here at freedom's frontiers we need most of all to bring government back to the center of the lives of the people. We are determined to make the people of Mindanao feel that we belong to one nation. That they are in the mainstream of our nation's future.

Last year, I raised the Philippine flag in a Poblacion of Lamitan in Basilan. Before that hardly anything was raised in Basilan. Neither hope nor crops could grow even in such fertile land because of brigandage and terrorism. Nothing was left where there's pillaged and plundered except sorrow, despair, pain and suffering.

Now, Basilan is in peaceful reawakening as the people have started to take hold of their future using their own hands and resources aided as well by well-meaning allies for peace and development.

Now, we have expanded the boundaries of our resolve to bring peace and progress to all of Mindanao. Peace where there's conflict. Progress where there is poverty. Hope where there is despair.

On this note, may I mark the commemoration of Philippine Independence Day by proposing a toast to all the nations and peoples of the world as I implore the almighty to bless our efforts to work together and harder than ever to attain our dreams of world peace and prosperity.

Mabuhay!

Speech of President Arroyo during the launching ceremony of the “Sanctuaries of Peace” Program by the ‘Tabang Mindanaw’

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the launching ceremony of the “SANCTUARIES OF PEACE” Program by the ‘Tabang Mindanaw’

[Delivered in Brgy. Inug-ug, Pagalungan, Maguindanao, June 13, 2003]

To recognize the members of the diplomatic corps from the organization of the Islamic conference who have been so supportive of our peace and development efforts for Muslim Mindanao. I think we should know each one of them. Plus they have come here personally to know us better here. We have somebody who has been in the Philippines for such a long time that he’s practically a Filipino, the Ambassador of Libya, Ambassador Salem Adam. We also have of the organization of the Islamic conference has been so supportive of the Philippine position, Ambassador of Bangladesh, Ambassador Munir Uz-Zaman. Kasama pa nga niya si Madame Munir Uz-Zaman, the Lady of the Bangladesh Ambassador; Philippines in the OIC, the Chair of the Committee of the eight is Indonesia and we have here the Charge d’ Affaires of Indonesia, Alexander Laturiuw; and the Chairman of the BIMP-EAGA that we hope will be part of the fruits of peace and development, the Ambassador from Brunei, Ambassador Hajah Maimunah Dato Paduka Haji Elias. The region of Muslim Mindanao, the World Bank Representative in the Philippines Mr. Vance Pulley.

Dito po sa ating lugar. Si Mayor Montawal, ang Mayor ng Pagalungan. Salamat na kayo ay narito sa kabila pagagawan, Mayor Annie Montawal; Mayor din ng karatig bayan sa kabila ng ilog pero kaya itong tatlong ito isang ekonomiya lang dapat ito, ang Mayor ng Pikit si Mayor at at saka nagmamahal din sa ating lahat at narito ang barangay captain dito sa Inug-Ug si Captain Ibrahim Malabana; at ‘yung Pangulo ng ABC, salamat sa inyong welcome remarks. At gusto ko ring batiin ang mga officials ng “Tabang Mindanaw” na napakalaki ang tulong kaya narito tayong ngayon lahat.

Nalaman na ninyo si President Aquino ay ang honorary chair ng “Tabang Mindanaw.” ang moving spirit din ng “Tabang Mindanaw” ay si Ambassador Howard Dee. Siya po ay ginawa ko pong Presidential Adviser for the Indigenous peoples at siya ang tumulong sa akin na matayo muli at mabuo muli ‘yung National Commission on Indigenous Peoples. Kaya po mahal na mahal po niya kayong lahat at tayong lahat.

At isang moving spirit din po lalo na dito sa lugar na ito, ang obispo po ng Kidapawan, most reverend Bishop Valle. Tumawag po siya sa akin kagabi, kasi dapat daw magsalita ako. Sabi ko, napakalaking karangalan na kasama natin si President Aquino dapat siya ang ating guest of honor and main speaker. Pero sabi ni Bishop Valle, “gusto ring marinig ng mga taga-pagalungan kung anu-ano ang mga patakaran ng pamahalaan, kaya mabuti rin na magsalita ka.” eh, nagsabi po ang obispo mahirap hindi sumunod.

At gusto ko rin po batiin si namumuno sa buong member of the board ng Public Estate Authority, at siya po kanina ay inatasan na magbigay ng sagot ng Datu Paglas town, si Datu na nga, si Toto Paglas; Angie Reyes ang Chairman ng dito sa kambal kasi ang pag-iisip nila kaya parating pinagkakamalian sa isa’t-isa. At marami pong mga tulong Secretary ng Official Development Assistance si Mai Jimenez; gusto kong batiin ang Mothers for Peace. At meron tayong mga taga-maynilang Mothers for Peace na narito.

Talaga ito ay napakagandang kayo ay isang sangtuwaryo ng kapayapaan. Gaya ng sabi ni Bishop Valle kanina ang mga sangtuwaryo ng kapayapaan ang ay, naku! Hindi mo sinulat, ang aking Presidential Adviser sa Strategic concerns. Siya na ang tumutulong sa aking buong Mindanao campaign ngayon para buo, hindi lang sundalo, hindi lang... Kungdi lahat ng military, diplomatic, cultural, political, religious information — lahat ng adjective — siya ang aking adviser, si Secretary Rene De Villa. Ay, naku! Bakit naman hindi sinulat. Sa dami ng Cabinet members na narito, hindi ko pwedeng tignan sila isa’t-isa eh; ‘yung ating bagong chairman ng Peace Panel, si Secretary Ed Rrmita. At yung dating chairman ng Peace Panel..

... Sabihin mo lang sa akin, it is not an imposition, it is coming from the decision of the people in the community. At 'yon ho ay isang aking malaking pagbati sa inyo.

Ng "Tabang Mindanaw" na magkaroon ng hugis para maka-abot sa pamahalaan, sa sundalo maging mismo doon sa mga rebelde. At napakaganda ang ginagawa ng "Tabang Mindanaw," kasi 'yung ginagawa nila ay isang sagot doon sa matagal ko nang paniniwala.

Ako po ay naniniwala na hanggang tayo bilang sambayanan ng buong Pilipinas ay magkasundo sa Mindanao kahit kailan hindi natin makakamit ang ating pangako bilang isang dakilang bansa.

Kaya kailangan umabot tayo sa pambansang pagkaintindihan sa mga prinsipyong gagabay sa ating paghanap ng kapayapaan. At gagamitin ko itong pagkakataon na ipahayag muli itong ating mga prinsipyo.

Isang prinsipyo ay dapat ating pinakalayunin ay dapat kapwa magkasama kapayapaan at kaunlaran. Kaya po 'yung binanggit ni Mayor Montawal na sinusuportahan 'yang deklarasyon ko sabi ko, bakit ceasefire by installment. Dapat permanent ceasefire, dapat final peace agreement.

At itong sinasabi na dapat final peace agreement 'yan ay tugon sa ating pangalawang prinsipyo. Itong pangalawang prinsipyo natin ay ang ating framework ay dapat nakabase sa ating konstitusyon, sa pambansang kasarinlan na buong bansa, isang bansa, at integridad ng ating pambansang teritoryo.

Pangatlong prinsipyo ay ang ating lipunan ay multi-ethnic. We are a multi-ethnic society. We must recognize that we are a multi-ethnic society. Ibig sabihin nito magkaroon tayo dapat ng panlipunang katarungan para sa lahat and we must have institutionalized accommodation of the various ethnic traditions. Kristiyano at Muslim, Intsik at Tisoy, Tagalog at Cebuano, ang mga ito isa lamang sa mga pangalan na sinasagutan ng Pilipino sa isang napaka halagang testigo ng pamana bilang bansa. Kaya doon sa sang-ayon sa ating institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions kung meron mang moskeng nasira, maging dito sa pagalungan, maging doon sa buliok, saan man nangyari o may nagka aksidenteng nasira ang moske sa labanan tungkulin na itatayo muli 'yon ng ating sandatahan... Ng ating mga sundalo. Sila mismo ang magtatayo muli nitong mga moskeng ito. At magiging isang kasalimuutang isyu ang gagawin doon na gusto kong mangyari maging sundalo, maging milf wala doon. Ihandog natin sa isang ngo na muslim na rekomendado ng Office of Muslim Affairs, 'yon po ang ating gagawin.

At gusto ko pong sabihin din, kahapon kasi hindi ba pagdiriwang ng ating Araw ng Kalayaan. Ako po ay nagdiskurso para sa buong bansa mula po doon sa Zamboanga City. Bahagi ng aking ikinuwento ay para sa malalayong lugar lalo na kung saan nasisira 'yung mga eskwelahan o natatakot pumunta ang mga guro dahil sa labanan maglalagay tayo ng distance learning. Maglalagay tayo ng eskwela na dumadaan sa telebisyon. Pagtuturo sa telebisyon. At bahagi ng gagamitin natin ay 'yung mga technovan ng Technology and Livelihood Resource Center. Umiikot-ikot po ito sa mga lugar para nagtuturo po ng mga sanayan sa pangkabuhayan upang kapuwa magulang at anak ay matututong magbasa, magbilang, magsulat. At maglalagay po tayo ng isang TLRC technovan para sa distance learning para sa eskwela sa telebisyon dito po sa complex ng pagalungan, pagagawan at saka Pikit.

Kailangang pa ninyo ng gamot, bigas, mga de lata, mga pangangailangan dahil ang daming nawawalaan dahil doon po sa giyera. Meron ho akong dalang tseke mula sa Sweepstakes ng 100,000 pesos para po sa pagalungan at saka pagagawan.

Kahapon din po, doon sa aking Independence Day message, sinabi ko po sa pagdiriwang natin sa Araw ng Kalayaan ang ating pinaka-importanteng tukoy ng kalayaan pangtao ay Mindanao — kalayaan mula sa katakutan; kalayaan mula sa kakulangan; kalayaan mula sa walang katarungan. Ating hangarin po dito sa santuwaryo ng kapayapaan dito po sa barangay inug-ug, ating hangarin na isigurado na ang mamamayan ng barangay inug-ug ay maging — 'yon na nga – sila ay makamit nila itong mga kalayaan na hinahangad ng ating buong bansang Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat.

Speech of President Arroyo during a meeting with ARMM officials and employees Speech
of

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a meeting with ARMM officials and employees

[Delivered at the Shariff Kabunsuran Cultural Center, Cotabato City, June 13, 2003]

May I exercise my prerogative as President of the Philippines to preside over this meeting.

Governor Parouk Hussin and the other officials of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao; our friends, the ambassadors of the various countries who loved Muslim Mindanao, and let me acknowledge them — we have the Ambassador from Libya, Ambassador Salem Adam; we have the Ambassador from Malaysia, Ambassador Taufik Mohd Noor; we have the Ambassador from the U.S., Ambassador Frank Ricciardone; we have the Ambassador from Bangladesh, Munir Uz-zaman; we have the Ambassador from Brunei, Ambassador Paduka Haji Elias; and we have the Charge d' Affaires of Indonesia, Mr. Alexander Laturiuw; Mayor Muslimin Sema and the other officials of Cotabato City; Mr. Vance Pulley, Country Representative of the World Bank; aking mga Cabinet members na narito; mga kababayan:

I'm very happy that we have the OIC Ambassadors here today. They've been with us since yesterday. They went with us to two remote towns of Maguindanao this morning. They went with us to a remote Barangay of Cotabato City this afternoon, but we specifically invited them for this particular part of our day. This afternoon, we would like to complete the compliance of the Philippine government with the Tripoli agreement way back in 1976.

One of the requirements of the Tripoli agreement is providing for the ARMM unified command. And this is the first promulgation I would like to make. I would like to read before you — kasi ang dahilan kung bakit inuuna sana 'yung adjutant kasi magdiskurso pa ako mamaya sana. Hindi na, eto na ang pinaka-importante... Eto na ang pinaka-diskurso ko. Huwag na kayo maghintay mamaya.

I would like to read Executive Order 212 which I myself signed. The title is "Providing for the Organization of the ARMM Unified Command, Southern Command, Armed Forces of the Philippines for the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao." may I now read the contents: whereas, section 21, article 10 of the 1987 Constitution provides that the defense and security of the autonomous region shall be the responsibility of the national government;

Whereas, under section 4 Republic Act 6734 as amended by R.A. 9054, the defense and security of the ARMM shall be the responsibility of the national government towards this end, a regional command of the AFP shall be organized in accordance with national laws;

Whereas, to ensure the well-being and security of the inhabitants of Muslim Mindanao, it may be necessary to station and deploy therein such elements of the armed forces as may be necessary in the area of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao.

Now, therefore, I, Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, President of the Philippines, by virtue of the powers vested in me by law, do hereby order Section 1. Declaration of Policy. It is hereby declared policy of the state that the defense and security of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao shall be the responsibility of the national government.

Section 2. ARMM unified command. There is hereby created and organized an ARMM unified command under the southern command, Armed Forces of the Philippines which shall be organized, maintained and utilized in accordance with national laws. Now, let me read a sentence to comply with the spirit and letter of the 1976 Tripoli agreement. Qualified inhabitants from the ARMM shall be given preference for assignment in the said unified command.

Section 3. Command relationship. The ARMM unified command shall be under the direct supervision and control of the commander, Southcom-AFP. The Department of National Defense and the Armed Forces of the Philippines shall determine the command relationship between Southern command-AFP, the ARMM unified command, and AFP-wide support units of the major services operating in Southern Philippines. This has not been done but with my instructions today, this is the one that will trigger that process.

Section 4. Calling upon the armed forces notwithstanding the provisions of the preceding sections, the regional governor of the ARMM may request the president to call upon the armed forces of the Philippines: a) to prevent or suppress lawless violence, invasion or rebellion where the public safety so requires in the autonomous region in accordance with the provisions of the constitution; b) to suppress the danger to or breach of peace in the autonomous region or the regional police force is not able to do so; or c) to avert any imminent danger to public order and security in the autonomous region. The president may on his/her own accord send the Armed Forces of the Philippines to the autonomous region to attain the above stated objectives if the regional governor does not act within 15 days up to the occurrence of the threats mentioned above.

Section 5. Regional emergency. In times of regional emergency all elements of the regional police force — which has already been established in a previous Executive Order, by the way. So, this is the twin, this is the military twin of the police regional force — the Regional Bureau of Fire Protection and the Bureau of Jail Management and Penology shall upon direction of the President or the Regional Governor assist the Armed Forces of the Philippines in meeting the emergency. As you can see in this provision, the President of the Philippines shares part of her work as Commander-in-Chief with the regional governor of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

Number 6. Implementing rules. The DND in coordination with the Autonomous Regional government particularly the ARMM-DILG shall formulate the rules and regulations implementing this order. The Secretary of National Defense and all concerned AFP officials and officers are hereby directed to extend their fullest assistance and cooperation to the autonomous regional government of the ARMM to ensure the implementation of this order.

Section 7 is the separability clause, which is the usual.

Section 8 is the repealing clause.

And Section 9 is the effectivity.

So this is one of the actions to complete an agreement that was forged almost 40 years ago but somehow we were afraid to trust the regional government of Muslim Mindanao. Now, we are not afraid to trust the regional government of Muslim Mindanao. Another expectation from the Tripoli agreement is the establishment of the Shariah court. I think is only one. Correct, one justice for its courts, but they are not filled up. They are not occupied.

So, I am hereby constituting a search committee to look for the appropriate justice and judges to head the Shariah courts. The search committee will be headed by the governor of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao, Governor Parouk Hussin and the Secretary of Justice who also comes from Muslim Mindanao, Secretary Sim Datumanong.

The third expectation of the Tripoli agreement that we want to comply with is that the ARMM Governor should have Cabinet rank. Now, of course, that was in another Constitution at that time, 1976. Right now, if you're an elected official, you cannot sit in the cabinet because those are made up of appointive officials. However, I have signed an executive order that provides for the Governor of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao to regularly sit with the Cabinet at all Cabinet meetings as an adviser.

I hope with these three provisions, the political aspects that are part of the expectation of the... The political and security aspects that form the most difficult parts of the expectations from the 1997 Tripoli agreement will be considered as fully implemented.

Now, I would like to call the adjutant to do the next step in implementing the executive order that I gave and that is the promulgation.

Thank you very much. That is my speech.

(The adjutant speaking)

PGMA: “pwede bang makialam na naman?”

Adjutant: “ah, okay.”

PGMA: our next event... Because what we did now is with regard to peace; it's with regard to the military; with regard to the justices; with regard to the authority of the Autonomous Region Governor in the Cabinet. The next thing we will do is with regard to development, and that is the funding of the development of ARMM through the ARMM social fund. So, our next event is a board meeting of the ARMM social fund. Well, in this particular meeting, I will myself chair it personally.

So, thank you very much for coming and now we will all proceed... I mean, we will proceed to the board meeting.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during a new town visit in Gen. S.K. Pendatun [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa pagbisita sa bagong bayan sa Gen. S. K. Pendatun

[Ipinahayag sa Evacuation Center (malapit sa Bulwagan ng Munisipyo), Gen. S.K. Pendatun, Maguindanao, ika 13 ng Hunyo, 2003]

Ito para bang kahapon lamang ito. Gusto ko lamang batiin kayong lahat at... kayong lahat na nandidito. Ang Governor nung lahat na maliban kay... ‘Yon nga ang gusto ko ikuwento. Alam po n’yo itong S.K. Pendatun . Diosdado Macapagal ay Pangulo ng Pilipinas, si Salipada Pendatun po ang unang Deputy Speaker na Muslim sa ating kasaysayan nung panahon po niya. In fact, I remember nung ako ay sa Iligan, noong kami’y bata pa ‘yung tatay namin tapos kami magkasama sa eskwelahan panay ang turo naman nila sa akin tumakbo bilang senador. Pumunta ako dito sa paiyak-iyak. Hindi ko alam kung umiiyak siya dahil sa wakas nakapunta ako dito na hindi niya akalain talagang pupunta ako o dahil nung araw ang population niya ay 30,000 ngayon 45,000 na. At ‘yung report na binibigay ni DSWD Secretary ng ARMM, si Secretary Karon na dito sa buong ARMM... O sa... Hindi, sa Maguindanao... Ah, sa ARMM, sa ARMM, ang number one na pinakamaraming evacuees ay sa pagalungan. Ang number two na may pinakamaraming evacuees ay dito na nga, sa Salipada Pendatun.

‘Yung Pikit hindi kasama dahil ang Pikit ay hindi ARMM. Pikit ay bahagi ng Region XII. Kaya ‘yung tatlong ‘yon ay napakaraming evacuees. Kaya sabi ko pupunta tayo sa S.K. Pendatu, at sabi ko si Dinky Soliman at ang kanyang counterpart sa DSWD sa ARMM ay magpapahayag ng ating relief and rehabilitation program para sa ating mga evacuees dito. Kaya dito natin ginagawa itong programa sa evacuation center mismo para ipahayag sa inyong mga evacuees, ‘yung mga gustong umuwi pwede nang umuwi sa inyong lugar. Ang nag-evacuate dito merong mga nagsabi na mananatili — liwat, 300 families? — 700 families ang nagdesisyon na dito na matitira sa S.K. Pendatun. Ibig sabihin, kalahati nung nag-evacuate ay nagustuhan ang hospitality ng taumbayan ng S.K. Pendatun kaya dito na raw sila matitira kasama ninyo.

Kay ang 30,000 population, ‘yung iba kaya tutulungan kayong lahat ng rehabilitation whether dito na kayo matitira o doon at babalik sa inyong mga lugar. ‘Yan po ang aking mensaheng binibigay ni Dinky. Ngayon po isa ang pinag-aralan ko po dito sa armm na napakaraming walang trabaho. Siguro sa buong Pilipinas kapag kailangan ninyo maraming walang trabaho ‘yung Metro Manila at saka Calabarzon. Kasi sa Metro Manila at saka Calabarzon maraming pumupunta doon kasi mataas ang income kaya akala maraming trabaho. Pagpunta doon wala nang trabaho. ‘Di na umuuwi, nandoon na sa squatter area kaya mataas ang unemployment. Doon ang pinakamataas ang unemployment pero kapantay na halos dito sa ARMM.

Kaya ‘yung kanina sabi ko doon sa DOLE magpasalamat din kayo sa akin dahil policy decision ko ‘yan. Etong nag-oathtaking, gusto ko ring i-launch dito. ‘Yang nag-oathtaking na ‘yan, ‘yan ang isang tulong mula sa Amerika, usaid. ‘Yon ang tulong para sa child labor. In other words, imbes na ‘yung mga bata magtatrabaho mga kapatid nila o mga magulang nila ang dapat magtrabaho, maligtas sila sa child labor. At ang talagang tukoy niyan ay ‘yon sana ay para sa Calabarzon dahil maraming child laborers sa Calabarzon. Ako’y nagsabikay pat Sto. Tomas, ilipat muna ang pera doon sa Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao. Ay ito ay emergency employment. Ngayon ‘yung emergency employment na ginagawa ko noon, nakikita ko pag tinatanong natin sa DSWD, kahirap-hirap, maghahanap ng magha-house, maghahanap ng mag-training, maghahanap ng magtuturo ng livelihood eh mga out-of-school-youth nga ito eh.

Eh, kaya tatapusin ko na ho ang aking pananalita total hindi naman talaga kasama ito sa ating programa.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Moral Recovery Training Program Culmination Ceremony
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Moral Recovery Training Program Culmination Ceremony

[Delivered at the Jamiatu Muslim Mindanao Quadrangle, Marawi City, Lanao del Sur, June 14, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Bert Gonzales sa iyung pagpakilala sa akin.

Gusto ko ring batiin ang isang pangunahing gumanap ng papel dito sa ating programang ito, ang Secretary of Education ng Republic of the Philippines, si Secretary DJ De Jesus. At siyempre gusto kong batiin ang ating mga official ng Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao sa pamumuno ni ARMM Governor Parouk Hussin.

At dito sa ating palatuntunang ginaganap napakalaki rin ang papel ng ating ARMM Vice Governor at Secretary ng Education ng Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao, si Vice Governor and Secretary Mahid Mutilan.

Batiin ko ang ating Host Mayor, City Mayor, Mayor Omar Ali; batiin ko ang Gobernador ng Lanao Del Sur, si Mike Adiong; si Vice Governor Ramos; ating mga Congressmen, si Faysah Dumarpa at si Ben Macarambon; iyung ibang Secretary ng Cabinet na narito ay si Secretary Mai Jimenez, Secretary Ging Deles, Secretary Dinky Soliman, Secretary Cito Lorenzo, Secretary Renato de Villa; at dalawang P.A. na narito, si Jess Dureza at saka si Mona Valisno.

Binabati ko ang lahat ng Mayor ng Lanao Del Sur na narito, maging ang Vice Mayor at ang buong konseho ng Marawi City, at si Assemblyman Usman Sarangani; iyung ating mga superintendent: si Salma Bagul, si Zenaida Ampatuan at saka si Ilindang Dimaampao; si Ali Mohamad Anwar Bashir, Presidente ng Jamiah, at 'yung ating mga opisyal ng ating kapayapaan, ang South Commander ng Armed Forces of the Philippines, si General Roy Kyamko at saka ang Deputy Director General ng Police, Virtus Gil; narito rin ang namumuno ng OMA, si Sam Ampatuan; sa inyong lahat mga guro, Assalamu Alaikum Warahmatullah Warrabakato. Sumainyo nawa ang kapayapaan.

Sinadya kong dalawin ang mga lugar ng Muslim Mindanao matapos ang Araw ng Kalayaan para maalala nating lahat na ang Muslim Mindanao ay parte pa rin ng Pilipinas at ito ay hindi dapat kalimutan. Ako, hindi ko makakalimutan ang Muslim Mindanao lalo na ang Lanao dahil ako, ang aking kabataan ay ginanap mahabang panahon doon sa Iligan. And I know that for too long, the people of Mindanao have been feeling economic exclusion. Ito ang isang dahilan ng rebelyon dito.

Kahapon, nagpunta ako sa Barangay Inug-ug ng pagalungan doon sa Maguindanao, na ginagawang santuwaryo ng kapayapaan mismo ng mga taga-barangay sa tulong ng Tabang Mindanaw, pamahalaang lokal ng pagalungan at Diocese ng Kidapawan. Nakumbinsi nila ang mga rebeldeng grupo at ang militar na huwag isangkot ang komunidad sa kanilang laban at hayaang manumbalik ang normal na pamumuhay ng tatlong daang pamilyang nasa santuwaryo. Si dating pangulong Cory Aquino, isang haligi ng kapayapaan, ang ating panauhin sa nasabing okasyon. Kanina naman, nanggaling kami sa sultan gumander sa barangay ubanoban, at sabi rin nila, "Welcome to barangay Ubanoban, a zone of peace."

Bilang isang patunay na ang pinakamahigpit na magkakaaway man ay makatao rin, sana ay mabigyan-daan ang mga gawaing ito sa mas malawak na kapayapaan at pagkakaisa sa Mindanao.

Sa aking pagtigil dito sa Mindanao, inaasahan kong maisulong ang prosesong pangkapayapaan at itaguyod ang rehabilitasyon ng mga lugar ng kaguluhan. Gusto ko ring matiyak na ang programang mindanao national initiative o 'Mindanao Natin' na sinadya kong binuo para sa kaunlaran ng Mindanao, ay ipapatupad sa paraang makakapagdulot ng rehabilitasyon at kaunlaran sa mahihirap nating kababayan.

Gusto kong mapabilis ang implementasyon ng 'mindanao natin' na may pondong 5.5 billion pesos para sa limang libong barangay sa Autonomous Region ng Muslim Mindanao, sa Lanao del Norte, sa Bukidnon at sa Zamboanga Peninsula. Ang programang ito ay suportado rin ng Official Development Assistance ng halagang 1.3 billion dollars.

Ang Mindanao ay nasa gitna ngayon ng paglaban sa terorismo at kahirapan, gamit ang iba't-ibang kakayahan galing sa loob at sa labas ng ating bansa. Mula sa aking pagdalaw, halimbawa, sa amerika noong isang buwan, nakapag-uwi ako ng mahahalagang economic assistance: 96 million dollars para sa tulong sa kaunlaran at kaligtasan ng mga bata sa pinakamahirap na bahagi ng bansa, at two-thirds nito ay gagastusin dito sa mindanao. Bukod pa ito sa 74 million dollars para sa iba't-ibang proyekto ng usaid para sa mindanao. Kabilang dito ang 33 million dollars bilang tuloy na development grants sa mga dating rebeldeng MNLF. at 50 million dollars bilang tulong sa ating prosesong pangkapayapaan sa milf kung tatalikurin nila ang terorismo. Ng pangkalahatang halaga nitong mga tulong galing sa amerika sa aking huling biyahe ay higit pa sa natatanggap ng pilipinas nung may base militar, kasi noong panahong 'yon, 200 million dollars a year ang binibigay ng amerika sa Pilipinas taun-taon.

Aking biyahe naman sa Korea ay naghatid ng 100 million dollars halaga ng Official Development Assistance, na ang 9 million dollars dito ay pupunta sa pagbuo ng kailangang pondo para sa Laguindingan Airport ng Misamis Oriental, na magiging mas malaki at mas malapit sa Lanao del Sur kaysa ang Cagayan de Oro airport. Ang aking pagbisita sa japan ay nakakuha ng dagdag na pondo para sa mga proyekto ng armm na nagkakahalaga ng 20 million dollars.

Nagsimula na rin ang 33 million dollars galing sa USAID para sa ARMM social fund na noon pang unang pagbisita ko sa washington ng 2001ay pinagkasundo na namin ni President Bush. Nagmiting kami kahapon sa board ng ARMM social fund para pag-usapan kung saan pupunta itong pondo. Pinagkasundo na bahaging itong armm social fund ay pupunta sa pagtayo ng bahay ng mga nasunugan dahil sa giyera. Sinabi ko rin na dapat gastusan ng ARMM social fund ang distance learning o eskwelahang telebisyon na magdadala ng reading, writing at arithmetic sa mga malalayong lugar kung saan kulang ang silid-aralan o kaya kulang ang guro.

To prepare the youth to be the next generation of knowledge workers, we have upgraded math and science teaching in basic education last schoolyear. Now, we will upgrade English teaching, pati sa mga madrasah so that our great Filipino worker will continue to have the advantage in this increasingly competitive world.

Upang mapalawak ang tsansang magtapos ang ating mga bata sa paaralan, sinisigurado natin na may paaralan bawat barangay. Ngunit higit dito, sa lahat ng mga paaralang higit limampung bata sa bawat silid-aralan, inaatasan ko si Secretary De Jesus na gumawa ng dalawang halili ang mga klase para hindi masikip at mahirap ang mag-aral. Sa mga paaralan namang elementaryong higit sandaang bata bawat silid-aralan, itong taong-aralan, inaatasan ko rin ang DepEd na magtayo ng dagdag na silid-aralan.

Dito sa armm, kagabi nagpuyat ako kasi binilang ko ang mga eskwelang higit sandaang bata bawat silid-aralan. At nabilang ko sa ARMM, isang daan at tatlumpu't pitong eskuwela. Kaya maglalaan ako ng 40 million pesos para magtayo ng bagong silid-aralan sa mga eskwelang iyon. Sa ganitong paraan, minsanan aasikasuhin natin ang matinding pagkulang ng silid-aralan na matagal nang nagbibigay ng perwisyo sa ating mga mag-aaral.

Sinabi ko rin na dapat gastusin ng ARMM social fund ang dokumentasyon ng mga mahihirap para sa pagpapatitulo ng lupang tinitirikan nila. Tinutugunan nito ang matagal nang problema ng mga komunidad na muslim hinggil sa titulo ng lupa. Kaugnay nito, magtatayo tayo ng mga one-stop shop for land titling and registration sa ARMM sa ilalim ng Office of Muslim Affairs at DENR. Ang unang ganitong one-stop shop ay tinayo kahapon mismo sa ARMM compound sa Cotabato City. May mga teams din na ipapadala sa mga komunidad ng Lanao Del Sur at ibang lugar ng armm para tumanggap at mag proseso ng land patents na hahantong sa titulo ng lupa para sa inyo.

Kanina gaya nang sabi ko, pumunta ako sa Sultan Gumander dito sa Lanao Del Sur upang simulan ang kalsada na pinopondohan ng Kuwait fund for Arab Economic Development. Ang Kuwait ay pinopondohan ang apat na road projects dito sa Lanao Del Sur hanggang Lanao Del Norte na umaabot sa halagang 20 million dollars. At iyung pinuntahan namin sa Sultan Gumander kanina magiging two-and-a-half hours na lang pagpunta niya doon sa Cagayan de Oro para ang produkto nila ay madaling makaabot sa iba't ibang palengke ng ating bansa.

Kahapon rin ay binuo ko ang ARMM Unified Command ng Armed Forces of the Philippines na nakasaad sa aking Executive Order 212. Ang ARMM Unified Command ang mangangalaga sa kapakanan at seguridad ng mga nakatira sa Muslim Mindanao. Itong ARMM Unified Command ay ilalagay sa supervision at control ng Southern Command ng AFP, si General Roy Kyamko. Magkakaroon siya ng Deputy South Commander para sa Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao, iyan ang unang hakbang ng unified command. At ang mga tagarito sa ARMM na may angkop na kakayahan ay bibigyan ng prayoridad na mapabilang sa nasabing unified command ng Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao. Sinabi ko rin sa DOLE na magbigay ng emergency employment sa mga out-of-school youth ng ARMM. Kaya kanina pagdating ko doon sa helicopter site ay in-induct ko itong ating mga out-of-school youth emergency employment beneficiaries. Isang libo mula sa Lanao del Sur at isang libo mula sa Maguindanao. Sa ilalim ng proyektong ito, ang mga kabataan ay sasanayin bilang bagong grupo ng Sala'am peace corps. Ang mga ito ay sasanayin upang makalahok sa socio-civic activities, relief operations, police work assistance at medical missions. Bawat batang sasali dito ay tatanggap ng 1,000 pesos allowance kada buwan. Maari silang sumali nang mula tatlong buwan hanggang isang taon.

Lumikha na rin tayo ng isang search committee para sa mga maaaring hirangin sa Shariah courts. Hinahanap natin ang mga pinaka-mahuhusay at pinaka-magagaling na legal luminaries mula sa Muslim community. Ang komite ay pamumunuan ni Justice Secretary Datumanong dahil siya ay abogado at siya ay Muslim. Siyempre nandiyan si Governor Parouk Hussin at saka si Vice Governor Mutilan pati na rin ang mga batikang abogado ng ARMM ay ilalagay natin dito sa search committee. Hinihingi ko ang kanilang mga rekomendasyon sa loob ng anim na buwan para magtayo na tayo sa wakas ng hinihintay n'yong Shariah courts. Mamaya, pupunta ako diyan sa gusali na 'yan dahil pag-uusapan kung papano maipabuhay muli iyung irrigation project na ginawa nung aking tatay, the late president Diosdado Macapagal.

Hayaan ninyong ulitin ko dito ang mga prinsipyong gumagabay para matupad ang ating pangarap sa Mindanao:

Una, ang kapayapaan at kaunlaran ay laging magkasama;

Pangalawa, ang pag-unlad ng ating bansa ay dapat naka-base sa constitutionality, national sovereignty at territorial integrity;

Pangatlo, ang ating lipunan ay binubuo ng iba't-ibang tradisyon na nakabatay sa social justice para sa lahat at paggalang sa ating pagkakaiba-iba.

Idadagdag ko sa tatlong batayang prinsipyo ang isang pang apat, na ang terorismo at ibang kasamaan ay dapat kondenahin.

Inaasahan ko na ang 'mindanao natin' ay tatangkilikin ng lahat sa ating bansa, hindi lamang ang mga taga-Mindanao at mga Muslim, kundi ng lahat maging taga-Luzon at taga-Visayas bilang mahalagang hakbang patungo sa katuparan ng pangako ng Mindanao. Ang pagkakaisa ng ating bansa ang isang kahulugan ng ating ginawang pagdiriwang noong makalawa ng araw ng kalayaan, ginawa natin iyan dito sa Mindanao.

Ako at ang iba pa nating mga kababayan ay nakikiisa nang buong giting sa mga taga-mindanao sa mga adhikain ng hangganang ito ng ating kasarinlan.

Bilang nagkakaisang sambayanan sa ilalim ng isang bandila, makakamit natin ang makabuluhang autonomiya sa muslim mindanao at matutupad ang pangako ng rehiyong ito nang sa gayon ay mapalapit tayosa ating adhikaing matatag at maunlad na republika ng Pilipinas.

Mabuhay ang guro ng Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao!

Okay. Thank you, thank you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo at the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference

[Delivered at the NBC Tent, Fort Bonifacio Global City, Taguig, July 8, 2003]

THE CHURCH AND BUSINESS IN HUMAN DEVELOPMENT

Thank you once again for inviting me to be with you. We have been together for many, many years now. The Bishops-Businessmen's Conference has been here for many years now and whenever I have a chance to attend, even before I became president, I always joined you because I believe this Conference is a representative of the conscience of our people.

During Martial Law, you were the voice of temperance and peaceful resistance. Since then, you have come a long way. You have become staunch advocates of many causes, including and especially the cause of Mindanao and also in many other ways, the promotion of social justice and the promotion of the equitable distribution of the nation's wealth.

I like to join your annual assembly because for me it is a time like an annual retreat, or an annual day of recollection for reflecting on the main components of our battle against poverty, and of the main components of our quest for good governance, that is the improvement of moral standards in government and society.

To improve moral standards, there are many things that we must do. One of them is to help honest people get elected through electoral reform. I say this because the leaders of the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference has also been the staunchest advocate for electoral reform. I want to go back to that compass. I want to go back to what we were saying together "high-tech na boto, ito ang susing pagbabago" and that came from many of the leaders of the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference.

This year, in the midst of deficit problems last year, in the midst of threats to peace and order, in the midst of the terrorist threat and the SARS threat, I took the giant leap of making available the financing needed, to fully computerize the quick and accurate counting and tabulation of votes in the 2004 and subsequent elections.

I say this because hardly anybody seems to be talking about it anymore. There's a lot that needs to be done to make sure that this money so difficultly put together, will really result in the modernization of our electoral system.

I want to take this opportunity, speaking before you, bishops and the businessmen, who are leaders also in the religious community, to ask for your support in making the system work. After all you work long and hard for it, and I was only your instrument as a faithful daughter of the church to make sure the facilities are made available. The money is there but many milestones must be met, many advocacies must be advanced, much education must be made on the many elements of electoral modernization, if we want to see the elections of May 2004 as a time when we cross a bold new threshold in democracy by cleaning up the voting process.

Just to give you an update, we have seen in the newspapers that the COMELEC was able to bid out the Computerization Systems on time, just in the nick of time. I don't think we should do the rest of the steps just in the nick of time. I have assigned our Secretary of Science and Technology, Nina Alabastro, to work closely with the COMELEC to make sure that the specific system for counting votes is technically above board, responsive to our needs and adherent to the high standards of integrity, we want to preserve. But beyond assigning Nina Alabastro to help the COMELEC technically, I cannot do much beyond that because COMELEC is constitutionally independent of the executive. That is also why monitoring the milestones, doing the advocacies and the alertness, providing the education and information are more properly done by civil society, including the church, rather than by the administration. I propose that in the middle of the great work that you are doing for our society and for Mindanao. Please do not forget that these activities related to the modernization of elections should be a major task of the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference this year and next year.

Again, to give you a report, the first batch of automated counting machines will arrive on August 5th this year. The Commission on Elections is setting up a testing site for the machines and will put these through a gruelling set of tests, to make sure that they are hardy and worthy. And I believe it would be proper for the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference to do the advocacies rather than the administration to make sure that all parties, including NAMFREL, are represented in these tests, to do the advocacies and exercise the alertness to make sure that we obviate any misunderstanding or misperceptions about how the counting machines work.

I look forward to that historic day in May next year when these automated counting machines will be first touched by Filipino hands. This will be one of our great legacies to suffrage. And I want to acknowledge once again that it was the leaders of the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference from a long time ago that began the journey.

You will work for these electoral reforms in the same way that you have been working for other reforms, to improve governance and to improve moral standards in government and society. In all these, you also imposed upon yourselves; because you're working to improve not only moral standards in government but moral standards in society and in the business community. As your consensus statement says, the new business of business is to build an enterprise on the total development of man. The total development of man — that is what we must all look for, and that is what we must reflect on, as we go about meeting the many challenges of today.

The encyclical on the development of people states that peace cannot be limited to a mere absence of war. Peace is something that is built up day after day in pursuit of an order intended by God, which implies a more perfect form of justice among men. And it is on reflecting on the meaning of peace, in the context of the total development of man, that I reflect on the policies that we must follow regarding the different threats to peace.

On the NPA, the Government will move on two priority areas:

First, we will conduct a political, social and economic audit on the 500 or so 'influenced' barangays identified by the intelligence community and determine a specific set of military or developmental countermeasures, to extricate these poverty-stricken barangays from the grip of dissidents;

Second, we will identify and expose the growing number of front organizations of the CPP-NPA-NDF and cut their links from domestic and foreign funding sources. We will mount a full court press on the security and developmental components of these threats, even as we leave the door open to peace talks based on constitutional, democratic participation.

We condemn the series of assassination attempts on municipal executives, especially, as they have happened already for the fourth time in the last several weeks. The DILG Secretary is instructed to conduct a full investigation of these incidents.

On the MILF, we are open to the suspension of the court warrants, if this is necessary to move the peace talks forward. But the MILF must not tarry on the procedural issues involved, especially so, that it has several lawyers and legal advisers among its ranks. We will continue to build confidence in the peace process and we're preparing for the opening of talks, and we must avoid being bogged down by these matters.

On the drug war, the intelligence community maintains a list of the most notorious drug lords and their coddlers. That list will be disclosed in due time as information is gathered on these personalities. I want the people to know the face of the enemy, who should not be allowed to move around freely under a cloak of legitimacy. Drug lords must be exposed for what they are — destroyers of our future. Our crusade must be relentless and encompassing.

These are the challenges to our peace and the order of our society that we must face, even as we try to move forward to bring about fundamental reforms in the electoral process and in the affirmative action for Mindanao. As we try to achieve these positive reforms in the midst of many threats to our society, we must work harder now amidst the complexity of challenges and the ever changing face of crisis. But I am grateful that there are bishops and there are businessmen who look to God for guidance, in the way they run their businesses and lead their communities.

May God guide you and may God guide us through the fields of change and give us a good harvest of opportunities, to make the people of God closer to the heaven that He wants us to enjoy.

Thank you and congratulations!

Speech of President Arroyo during the awarding ceremonies in celebration of the Far Eastern University (FEU) Centennial Anniversary [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa seremonya ng paggagawad ng parangal sa pagdiriwang ng Ika-100 taong anibersaryo ng Far Eastern University (FEU)

[Ipinahayag sa Auditorium, Far Eastern University, Morayta St., Manila, ika 8 ng Agosto, 2003]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat, Secretary Lina sa iyong pagpakilala.

Gusto ko ring batiin ang iba't-ibang mga importanteng panauhin maging na rin 'yung mga taga-FEU itong araw na ito.

Una sa lahat, si Chairperson Montinola at lahat ng opisyal, guro, estudyante, empleyado ng Far Eastern University. Palagay ko patuloy pa rin ang inyong pagdiriwang ng isang siglo ng unibersidad. At ako'y nasisiyahan na kasama ninyo ako noong araw na 'yon mismo. Gusto ko ring batiin ang punong lungsod ng Maynila at lahat ng mga opisyal ng Maynila, si Mayor Lito Atienza. Kasama naman ni Secretary Lina dito ang iba't-ibang mga kasapi ng Dangerous Drugs Board, kasama na 'yung nakaupo dito sa kanan, 'yung Executive Director ng Dangerous Drugs Board na si Undersecretary Efren Fernandez at saka isang kasapi rin ng Dangerous Drugs Board bilang pangulo ng National Youth Commission, si Bambam Aquino.

Itong araw na ito ay importante para sa ating laban kontra sa droga, dahil itong araw na ito ang unang anibersaryo ng Dangerous Drugs Board at saka 'yung Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency. Sinabi ko, ipagdiriwang natin ang unang anibersaryo, hindi sa opisina ng Dangerous Drugs Board o ng Drug Enforcement Agency, gawin natin 'yung pagdiriwang sa University Belt. Kaya narito kami ngayon. Dahil gusto kong bigyang diin na isa sa mga importanteng detalyeng utos na binigay ko sa Dangerous Drugs Board at saka sa Drug Enforcement Agency ay kailangan nilang gawing Drug-Free ang University Belt. Kasama ito sa tinatawag kong aking apat na pangunahing layunin dito sa ating laban kontro sa droga.

Una, gusto natin na maputol ang supply ng droga. Kaya tuloy-tuloy ang raid maging sa mga laboratoryo, maging sa kalsada at inutos ko na na linggo-linggo dapat ginagawa ang pagsunog ng kinumpiskang droga pagkatapos bigyan ng permiso ng hukuman.

Kaya para sa kaalaman ninyo at kung may mga NGO na gustong manood tuwing martes ang araw ng pagsusunog ng kumpiskadong droga. Ang unang martes at ang pangatlong martes ng buwan ay ginaganap dito sa Metro Manila at saka sa Region IV. Sa pangalawang martes at pang-apat na Martes ng isang buwan ay ginaganap naman 'yung pagsusunog sa mga malalayong rehiyon. Noong nakaraang Martes, nagkaroon ng sunugan dito sa Metro Manila. Kaya ang susunod na pagsusunog dito sa malapit ay gaganapin sa a-disenuebe ng Agosto. Kaya 'yung mga ngo dito, maging mga student organization, kung gusto n'yong subaybayan ang ating laban kontra sa droga imbitado kayo roon. Para sigurado na shabu ang sinusunog at hindi tawas.

Pangalawang prayoridad, sinabi ko na dapat tukuyin natin 'yung mga lugar kung saan malakas ang bentahan ng droga. At kasama na nga sa mga lugar kung saan malakas ang bentahan ng droga ay 'yung mga kapaligiran ng mga eskuwelahan. Kaya, 'yon nga ang isang sinabi kong layunin natin. Gawin nating drug-free ang University Belt. Tulungan n'yo kami, mga estudyante at guro ng Far Eastern University.

Pangatlo, sabi ko, tukuyin natin ang malalaking isda, malalaking hari, panginoon ng droga. At siguro nababasa naman ninyo sa nakaraang mga anim na Linggo napakarami ng mga malalaking panginoon ng droga ang nahuli, napakarami ng mga laboratoryo ng droga ay nabuwag. Magkano na ba? Six billion pesos na ba, Efren? Six billion pesos worth sa nakaraan na linggo. Maging ang Kongreso mismo, masaya sila dito sa trabaho noog nakaraang anim na Linggo. Kaya pinanood ko sa telebisyon, sabi nila, handa na silang magbigay ng one billion a year sa drug enforcement dahil nakikita nila may resulta.

Kasi nga kung ako ay naglaan ng one billion itong taong ito mula sa Lotto earnings ng PCSO, sulit na sulit na 'yon. Sa one billion hindi pa nga ginagastos, mga one hundred million pa lang ang ginagastos, 'di ba Joey? Sa one hundred million na ginagastos ng one billion allotment, six billion na ang nakumpiska pati 'yung kanilang mga panginoon kaya sulit na sulit 'yung binibigay nating pondo. At ito ay hindi lumalampas sa paningin ng kahit ng mga mahilig magbatikos na mga Congressmen at Senador.

At pang-apat, bago pa man gumamit ng droga ang kabataan, iwasan na natin. Bigyan na natin ng babala para umiwas na nga sila na magsimula ng kustumbre ng droga. Kaya napaka-importante ang papel ng kabataan. Napaka-importante ang papel ng ating mga estudyante.

Kaya itong ating gustong gawin at gaya ng sabi ko dito sa ating pagdiriwang ng unang anibersaryo ng Dangerous Drugs Board at Drug Enforcement Agency, ako ay narito sa puso ng University Belt, sa aking suking pamantasan, ang Far Eastern University. Siguro alam naman ninyo mayroon akong minamahal sa buhay na nag-aaral dito sa law school, ano? Hindi nila alam, ang aking anak na si Dato.

Kaya ako ay narito — uy, hindi lang dahil doon — ngunit para sa ganun nga ay magkakaroon tayo ng command conference kaya maikli lang ang ating palatuntunan kung saan ako nakikibahagi dahil lilipat kami ngayon sa isang silid kung saan magkakaroon ng command conference kasama ang mga kinatawan ng pamantasan para sa ganun sama-sama tayong magpapalano kung papano natin gagawin drug-free ang university belt.

Happy Anniversary DDB. Happy Anniversary PDEA. At Happy Centennial uli sa Far Eastern University.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo towards Agricultural Stability Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
Towards Agricultural Stability

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, August 8, 2003]

MOVING TOWARDS AGRICULTURAL STABILITY

Gusto kong batiin yaong mga tumanggap ng mga parangal ngayon. I would like to greet yaong mga nagsimula ng pagpapatupad ng Republic Act 3844 otherwise known as the Agricultural Land Reform Code, na nagpunta dito kanina. At saka, I would like to greet and thank our foreign partners, who had been funding agrarian reform all these years.

Siyempre 'yung ating mga Gawad Saka awardees, congratulations sa inyo. Itong Lama Cooperatives, senador pa ako nagbibigay na ako ng premyo at awards ninyo bilang guest of honor. Sa lahat ng ibat-ibang mga gawain hindi lamang sa Gawad Pitak, lahat ng awards, lahat ng awarding institutions na nagbibigay ng award, may award parati ang Lama Cooperative o Lamac kaya, karapat-dapat na nasa Hall of Fame na kayo.

Alam ninyo, ako'y nagpapasalamat na kayo ay narito, kasi itong araw na ito ay araw ng Gawad Saka awards. Ito ay anibersaryo, Rubypa naman, ng DAR at ng Land Bank. Pero hiniling ko na sa halip na sa inyo't-inyong mga kagawaran gawin itong pagdiriwang hiniling ko gawin naman natin sa Malacañang. I ask you to have this Jubilee Celebration here in Malacañang, dahil gusto kong i-alay itong espesyal na anibersaryo na ito, 40th Anniversary, sa aking ama, si Diosdado Macapagal. Ang aking ama ang tanging anak ng mga tenant-farmer na naging pangulo. Siya rin ang Ama ng Batas ng Reporma sa Lupa o R.A. 3844, na noong panahong iyon, apatnapung taon na ang nakararaan ay — alam ni Peping Cojuangco ang istorya dahil congressman siya — para sa tatay ko, iyon ang kanyang political suicide sapagkat pinilit niyang ipasa 'yung batas na iyon.

It was an exercise of political will, but that's the same political will that I inherited. It's the same political will that guides me in fighting poverty and terrorism, and in upholding the Constitution.

I've taken an oath to protect the Republic and the Constitution from harm. I shall carry out this oath with the full force of conscience and authority. I shall carry out this oath bearing in mind the supreme interest of the people. Any of my actions may be challenged before the Supreme Court, to which I commit obedience, but I shall not argue about these matters in the media.

There should be no doubt as to the willingness of the Executive Branch to help the Senate and the House of Representatives in their inquiries. Closer consultations are needed to ensure the safety and security of the officers who are scheduled to give their testimony. There is no need to stretch this into another propaganda charade. This is a matter of safeguarding lives and national security.

The Government guarantees due process to everyone. This will be observed in all institutional hearings and investigations. While all these judicial and legislative processes ensue, it now behooves all our people to close ranks behind the pursuit of normalcy in our national life, and the pursuit of continuity in our socio-economic directions.

We must now dispel the Oakwood syndrome and apply our full attention to the ever-constant threat of terrorism. Once more, I must stress that our best defense lies in the vigilance of each and every citizen. We've stepped up intelligence gathering and sharing of information with our neighboring countries. The hunt for terrorists must involve all communities and territories across borders.

I commend the Armed Forces of the Philippines Southern Command for accounting another notorious terrorist. The long hand of justice will catch up with these characters one way or another. The AFP is directed to inform the public of the full circumstances of the slaying of Edris, to obviate any reports questioning the rules of engagement.

We cannot forever be distracted by spectator politics. We have to willfully turn our attention to the priorities of vigilance against terrorism and against poverty.

Sabi nila, sa loob ng nakaraang siglo, ang pinakamahalaga at pinakamalawak na paraang nagawa upang mabahagian ang mga mahihirap sa yaman ng bayan ay ang reporma ng lupa, na siyang ipinagdiriwang natin ngayon.

Bagamat ito ay isang problema ng tatay ko noon dahil sa matinding pagtutol ng mga kinatawan ng lupa sa Senado, hindi pinondohan ng Kongreso ang kaniyang batas. Salamat na lamang at meron tayong mga Official Development Assistance (ODA). Pero meron pa akong kuwento tungkol sa ODA. Panahon ng tatay ko, palabas na siya, last year of his administration. Nakakuha siya ng pondo sa World Bank, education fund para sa extension program ng mga magsasakang bagong laya. Noong wala na siya sa pwesto, yung education fund ay inilagay sa Cultural Center of the Philippines. Kaya tuloy tinitingnan ko yung Cultural Center — kahapon nanood ako doon — masaya din po dahil may kultura, pero nalulungkot ako pag naalaala ko yaong nagawang reporma sa lupa sana noon pa kung iyon ay nailagay talaga sa unang pakay, yon na nga sana sa land reform program. Ganunpaman, magmula nang pinirmahan ng tatay ko ang Batas Reporma sa Lupa, may halos anim na milyong hektarya na ang naipamudmod sa halos tatlong milyong magsasaka.

Ngayon, higit na mabibili ang nalalabing isang milyong hektaryang ipamamahagi sa mga magsasaka, o di kaya matulungan maging leasehold na, dahil ito ay mas magaan sa ilan sa ating magsasaka. Bakit natin nasasabing magagawa na natin siguro ito sa mga nalalabing lupa, dahil palagay ko bilang regalo ng Panginoon sa Ruby Anniversary ng land reform, dahil, hinatulan na ng Korte Suprema ang kaso ng nakaw na yaman. Kaya ngayon, ang pinakaimportanteng hamon ni Obet Pagdanganan ay pabilisin ang paglabas nitong pondong ito. Maraming legal red tape diyan, iyan ang pinakahamon ni Obet Pagdanganan.

We will turn the misdeeds of the past into the seeds of hope for the future. The money that we have recovered will be applied to the continuing quest for social justice. I will return to the people what belongs to them. We must never again allow plunder to stalk our nation.

The greater part of the 38 billion freed by the Supreme Court will be allocated for DAR's current programs budgeted at 8 billion, with 22 billion more set aside for other obligations and proposals of the Land Reform Program.

Ang Land Bank ay nilikha 40 years ago ng Batas Reporma sa Lupa ng tatay ko para pondohan na nga itong reporma sa lupa. Kaya lang hindi nga nilagyan ng pondo ang Land Bank. Inaasahan ko na ngayon magagamit din ng Land Bank ang bahagi nitong pondo na nilibre ng Korte Suprema para sa layuning pondohan na nga ang reporma sa lupa. At ito ay dagdag sa kanilang magandang trabaho na humiram diyan sa ibang mga ODA at iba pang pinanggagalingan na ipinapahiram na puhunan sa mga magsasaka.

Malaki ang papel ng Land Bank sa programa ng aking administrasyon na gumastos ng 20 bilyon bawat taon para sa modernisasyon ng agrikultura. Mayroon akong nakita sa telebisyon, bumabatikos, bakit ko raw sinabing 20 bilyon ang ginagastos natin taun-taon. Hindi naman daw, kasi 12 bilyon — ewan ko kung ilan — ang lumabas daw sa budget. Itong 20 bilyon ay hindi lamang iyung binibilang ng mga nanggagaling sa national budget dahil malaki sa 20 bilyon ay credit. Ang credit ay hindi nanggagaling sa budget, ito ay nanggagaling sa mga pautang, at ang number one na pinanggagalingan ng pautang sa ating magsasaka ay ang Land Bank of the Philippines. At nasisiyahan akong malaman na so far, for the first half of the year, mga 7 bilyon na ang naipautang ng Land Bank sa ating magsasaka. Lalo akong nasiyahan nang malaman na ang kabuuang pakay ng Land Bank ay makapagpahiram ng 17 bilyon pesos para sa modernisasyon ng agrikultura. Kaya, salamat, Gary at mga taga-Land Bank.

Marami rin tayong Agrarian Reform Communities (ARCs) — iyon nga ang sabi ko, iyon ang batas ni Peping Cojuangco na hindi pa napopondohan. Ang ilang guerilla base na nabisita ko na, pag bumibisita ako doon, ay malalaman ko ARC pala sila. Pero ang ARC walang pondo, mga pangakong nakapako, kaya sinasabi ko rin kay Obet na gamitin din itong nakaw na yaman para pondohan itong mga ARCs na ito, lalung-lalo na yung farm-to-market roads.

At isa rin, irigasyon. Irrigation is the single most vital component of agricultural modernization. In fact, it's suppose to fund — what? 20 percent of our agricultural modernization budget. It is also the single most important source of increase in farmers' income.

I did a study of land reform beneficiaries. Kung bakit 'yung iba mayaman, bakit yaong iba mahirap. Ang diperensiya, yaong mga yumaman may irigasyon, at yaong nanatiling mahirap, walang irigasyon. Kaya, irigasyon ang number one na nagbibigay ng pagkakaiba. That is why I congratulate Cito Lorenzo, who during my presidency, the NIA completed the Angat Afterbay Regulatory Dam, the Kabulnan Irrigation and Area Development Project, the Pampanga Delta Development Project, 52 smaller-sized communal irrigation projects or systems, all of which cover almost 63,000 hectares of farmland, more than the total hectareage covered in all the previous years combined in the history of the Philippines. Tama, diba?

The Mal-Mar Irrigation Project is also now operating after Salamat was ailing in the very same town. Cito Lorenzo was in Butig, at the gate of Camp Bushra, to groundbreak this Lanao del Sur project. The death of Salamat is the end of an era, but that groundbreaking of the irrigation is the beginning of another era for the people of Muslim Mindanao.

I also instructed Cito Lorenzo to build a dam system for the tobacco farmers of Ilocos using part of the funds of Republic Act 7171. Last year, they got very low prices for their tobacco because the rain flows straight from the mountains to the sea rather than irrigating their plant. What they use to irrigate is water they draw from the ground, but it's salty water. So, for two years now, two harvests now, the harvest has not been good and the buyers have to select the good pieces, and they do not get the price they would have wanted. So, therefore, the solution is to leave that water on land and use it to irrigate. And, this is what Cito will do next as far as irrigation projects are concerned.

I'm also instructing Obet to use part of the expected proceeds of the coco levy funds to finance a leasehold program for the coconut farmers. Dahil marami sa mga magniniyog, nagsasabi sa akin, keysa bibilhin nila ang lupa na malaki ang puhunan, uupa na lang sila sa lupa para magamit nila yaong kanilang puhunan sa kanilang ikalawang produkto, dahil hindi sapat ang kanilang kita sa isang produkto ng niyog.

I also welcome the partnership forged by DAR with the state universities and colleges to extend modern technologies to the agrarian reform beneficiaries, and also grant scholarships to their dependents. This is part of what I instructed since 2001. I said that we must spend 2 billion pesos a year on agricultural research, and part of that should be resources coming from the state universities and colleges. So this is in fulfillment of that. The other big part of the research money has gone to the development and propagation of the hybrid rice, which has doubled the income of many of our farmers. So the research and development component of our agricultural modernization program should be funded in great part by the state universities and colleges. I also commend the plan to set up agro-forestry resource centers, because reforestation is one of the programs that we must do in the holistic approach to fighting insurgency in the mountains.

When my father signed the Land Reform Code, R.A. 3844 — you know, I could never remember what the number was. I would say, is it R.A. 3488? Now, I will remember because the 38 is the 38 billion for the poor. Parang yung Republic Act 7171 noon na hindi rin nai-release noong araw, ang tawag nila Republic Act 7-awan-7-awan, but now Republic Act 7-adda-7-adda especially for irrigation. In any case my father said at that time, as Obet quoted: "The time has come to abolish tenancy in our farms. We must give the tenants liberty from economic peonage, in which they have long languished, so that they will become free men who will share with dignity in the task of building the nation."

Ngayon, pagkatapos ng apatnapung taon, dahil sa hatol ng Korte Suprema, sigurong itong kanyang sinabing “It is the time,” will really be the time. Kaya pagtulungan nating itaguyod ang mga repormang magdadala sa atin sa isang maaliwalas na kinabukasan.

Happy Ruby Anniversary at congratulations sa inyong lahat!

Speech of President Arroyo during the conferment ceremonies of MetroBank Foundations, Inc. Search for the Outstanding Philippine Soldiers (TOPS) 2003

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the conferment ceremonies of MetroBank Foundations, Inc. Search for the Outstanding Philippine Soldiers (TOPS) 2003

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, August 11, 2003]

Thank you, Congressman Acosta, thank you.

Mr. Abacan, Mr. Sans, members of the board of judges, General Abaya and other officers of the Armed Forces, our awardees, honored guests, ladies and gentlemen:

Una sa lahat, nagpapasalamat ako sa Metrobank Foundation at saka sa Rotary Club of Makati Metro. I thank them for joining together to cite our outstanding Filipino soldiers. Awardees, I thank you, too, because you reinforce the people's faith and confidence in our soldiery, especially after the failed Oakwood mutiny.

In this light, I would like to reiterate my instructions to the Chief of Staff that, henceforth, all privileges granted to the men and women of the Armed Forces, such as housing or educational opportunities shall be prioritized for those who exemplify excellence and valor in combat operations.

If a soldier gets a medal for gallantry in action, he or she will automatically be placed on the priority list to avail of housing, educational opportunities, and other privileges regardless of unit, rank or connections. The Outstanding Filipino Soldier awardees of Metrobank and Makati metro are lucky because their award brings with it a hundred thousand pesos. Outside of this kind of award other medals go with nothing except the medal itself. Yes, we have Medals of Valor. Only ten of them have gotten a Medal of Valor so far in the history of our Armed Forces and that's the only one that brings with it a financial reward because of a bill passed into law by the present Congress — the present or the last Congress? — the last Congress but under the administration of Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. The privates, the enlisted personnel can get a financial reward in the sense that they can be promoted, but the officer corps cannot be promoted automatically because the law circumscribes the number of officers within the Armed Forces. Therefore, the only way by which we can tie up something material with the honor of the medal is to give this kind of priority to them.

I gave this instruction to General Abaya because I cannot bear to see those who bear the brunt of the fighting being left behind when it comes to the benefits of the command. And it is our policy to reward the best and the bravest of our fighters with whatever our resources can offer.

The greater the valor, the more the rewards.

Having said this, I salute you once again, awardees for your loyalty to the flag.

Now, we must set aside the Oakwood syndrome and get on with matters that require earnest vigilance, especially the ever-constant threat of terrorism. I call on the public to erase and stop spreading rumors and speculations contained in text messages about false troop movements and armor deployments. Let's keep our eyes and ears focused on terrorist threats, for these are ever present.

Hindi dapat pagdudahan sa pagkakabukas-loob ng ehekutibo na tulungan ang Kongreso sa kanilang pagtatanong ukol sa oakwood. Kanya lamang kailangan ang higit na konsultasyon para masigurado ang kaligtasan at seguridad ng mga opisyal na nakatakda magbigay ng testigo. Hindi na kailangan ipahaba pa ito sa isa pang laro ng propaganda. Ito ay bagay ng pagbabantay sa mga buhay at pambansang seguridad.

The State of Rebellion is not a political sword of Damocles. No political party or group operating within the ambit of the Constitution has been threatened or prejudiced by it. Court processes prevail, the media has free rein. Any of my actions may be challenged before the Supreme Court, to which I commit obedience. Nonetheless, the threat has abated, and though I was not scheduled to speak in this program, I decided to speak in order to announce that I'm hereby lifting the State of Rebellion.

And now that the State of Rebellion has been lifted, even as we speak, in camp Aguinaldo, General Rodolfo Garcia, our Vice Chief of Staff, is ready upon this signal to declassify the Coup Plot Andres except for the proper names of those who have not yet been arrested.

The peace talks with the MILF will continue under our policy of pursuing a just, comprehensive and durable settlement of the Mindanao conflict, consonant with constitutional standards.

The recapture of Al-Ghozi is vital to the cause of fighting transnational terrorism. He's been identified with foreign terrorist cells training in Mindanao that must be neutralized at all costs to preempt their movement across borders. We issue a strong warning to any armed groups in the area that are aiding or coddling Al-Ghozi that they will definitely suffer the direst consequences. We look forward to the cooperation of the MILF in the manhunt under its commitments to the peace process. We have launched highly focused operations yesterday in Sultan Naga Dimaporo, Lanao Del Norte and today in Kabuntalan, Maguindanao solely targeted at Al-Ghozi and his group and have no desire to widen the arena of engagement beyond what is necessary. Forces within the purview of the peace talks must stand aside and allow legitimate enforcement and pursuit operations to proceed unhampered.

Dito, sa kalagitnaan ng lahat na ito, sa mga nagkamit nitong parangal ngayong hapon, mabuhay kayo. Ipinagpuri kayo ng Sandatahang Lakas at ng buong sambayanan. Nawa'y manatili kayong mga huwaran ng kagitingan, katatagan at katapatan ng mga sundalong Pilipino.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 40th Foundation Day Anniversary of the National Defense College of the Philippines (NDCP)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 40th Foundation Day Anniversary of the National Defense College of the Philippines (NDCP)

[Delivered at the NDCP Auditorium, Diosdado Macapagal Hall, Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City, August 12, 2003]

Thank you so much, Secretary Reyes.

Commodore Chuck Agustin, Secretary Joey Lina, Congressman Plaza, other officers of the National Defense College, General Abaya, General Razon, other officers of the Armed Forces and the Philippine National Police, trustees and other alumni of National Defense College, faculty members of National Defense College, awardees, ladies and gentlemen:

As I guess, you have learned by now, today, is a special day for me. Forty years ago today, NDCP was founded by my father, President Diosdado Macapagal. As Chuck Agustin says that makes my father the father of NDCP, that makes me the sister of NDCP. Happy Ruby Anniversary then brothers and sisters of this Institution. This anniversary is also auspicious because our national security has just successfully withstood a great challenge.

The mutiny was squelched in the first day — thanks to many of you — followed by a State of Rebellion lasting 15 days. There is no longer a need for extraordinary measures to deal with the direct threat although strategic causes must be uprooted.

In this task of uprooting the strategic causes, I know I will find good allies in my brother institution, the National Defense College.

For the past forty years, you have gathered a wealth of knowledge in many things including rebellions, insurgencies and coups. And rightly so, as Chuck Agustin said, therefore, you have an important role to play.

I'm instructing Secretary Reyes to institutionalize a course on coup d' etat, conspiracies, operations and consequences in all our military schools. I expect the NDCP to take the lead in drafting the course plan for this.

We are consolidating rapidly within the Armed Forces. We now have a good idea of who were the leaders and co-conspirators, who were the simple followers and the innocents, mainly the deceived and misled. We will deal with these groups under a range of actions commensurate to their depth and scope of involvement under strict standards of justice and due process.

The respective commanders of the coup participants should be made to feel accountability for the actions of the participants under their command. Victor Corpus was not the only fall out of the coup. The head of SWAG has resigned his command, because he had committed to me, the day before the coup, that if even one of his men would join, he would resign. I commend him for his sense of accountability. likewise, I commend the likes of Danny Lim who were able to persuade a large number of their men originally part of the plot not to proceed with their plans. The government has to institutionalize this sense of accountability. This will help deter future coup attempts. But, of course, this has to be done with a sense of fairness and sensitivity to the military culture. And that is part of how the NDCP must contribute to what Secretary Reyes calls the learning and the wisdom to face these challenges of society.

All detainees have access to lawyers and medical attention. There is transparency in all military and civil investigations and processes. Charges of human rights violations are a figment of propaganda.

While several leaders continue to be at large, they shall be accounted for by the normal run of law intelligence, law enforcement, investigative and judicial processes. This shows the shallowness of the conspiracy as well as the unremitting capacity of our democratic system to mete out justice and due process.

Let justice take its course blindly and inexorably. The court will take charge of these matters. For the rest of Philippine society, let's now banish any residual fears and get on with the normal course of work and business.

All allegations of corruption in the Armed Forces shall be investigated expeditiously and thoroughly. I ask any junior officers with knowledge of such activities or who claim knowledge of such activities to bring evidence before the department of justice. You shall be protected in your fight for the truth. There will be no whitewash or looking the other way. If there's evidence, there will be prosecution. If guilt is proven, people will go to jail, whatever the rank or command.

On grievances, a common theme I've been hearing about since I was a senator is the conversion and retention of funds at headquarters or senior level, so what trickles down they say, to the juniors at field level, where the actual combat takes place, is a fraction of the true budget. This naturally gives rise to opportunities for corruption at the senior or headquarters level.

The heart of this structural problem seems to be the power that AFP comptrollers have accumulated over the years such that comptrollers actually themselves disburse converted cash to field officers. To the extent, it is operationally necessary to maintain cash reserves for disbursement to the field as contingencies arise. Rather than comptrollers, I am directing that the Chief of Staff have sole authority to disburse cash reserves from now on.

I am also directing the chief of staff to computerize the financial records and systems of the AFP.

These are quick remedial measures. But we also need reforms, deep reforms in the AFP, and we need an anti-corruption drive in the organization.

Two task forces shall be organized within the DND, each to be headed by undersecretaries. One of them shall be headed by the new one, handpicked by me, NDCP graduate Batch 30, Connie de Guzman. These two task forces shall be funded directly by the Office of the President.

Connie's task force shall focus on studying quickly and reforming the AFP's procurement process and fund disbursement. The task force must contract as consultants, advisers or members management organization experts like Vic Limlingan of the Asian Institute of Management and personalities known for their integrity like Renato De Villa. This task force should include representatives from the COA and the DBM familiar on how corruption works in government procurement and disbursement practices — who, in fact, have already formed a task force at the DBM level to study this. They should be conjoined. I expect the task force to complete a management audit in a month's time. I also choose Connie because she is a certificate course holder on internal audit. I expect this task force, after that month's time, to discuss the findings with the major services, and implement the reform in another month's time. This task force shall later on be institutionalized, through a presidential executive order, as a permanent office in the DND tasked solely to review continuously AFP procurement and funds disbursement.

The second task force should an anti-corruption unit that would work with the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission. Other than acting and investigating complaints of corruption, and making sure that the Deputy Ombudsman for Military Affairs does its job and acts swiftly on such cases, this task force would undertake comprehensive lifestyle checks, in the manner we've been doing for customs, BIR and DPWH. I commend Secretary Angelo Reyes for being the first to set the example in submitting himself to the investigation of this task force. One work of this task force obviously would be to make firm recommendations for evicting officers occupying AFP residences past the regulations. This task force later on shall be institutionalized as an internal affairs-type of office in the DND or AFP.

A similar approach shall be simultaneously undertaken for cleaning up the PNP. An already announced this in the state of the nation address that this shall be done under the PNP reform commission which shall be the new nature of the independent Al-Ghozi fact-finding committee after it submits its findings to me on Al-Ghozi on the 15th of this month.

We have seen a misadventure in counter-reform. We shall answer it with more reform. We have seen an exercise in political illegitimacy. We shall answer it with the greater force of the Constitution and the law.

Let us get back to our most basic priorities and strive harder to attain our basic goals of jobs, food on every table, homes, education and, of course, peace and security.

The hunt for Al-Ghozi will continue without letup. This is vital to the cause of fighting transnational terrorism. He has gone to roost with foreign terrorist cells training in Mindanao that must be neutralized at all costs to preempt their movement across borders. Nagsimula na tayo ng napaka nakatukoy na mga operasyon na tanging pakay ay si Al-Ghozi at kaniyang grupo. We have no desire to widen the area of engagement beyond what's necessary. Umaasa tayo sa kooperasyon ng MILF sa ilalim ng kanilang mga pangako sa proseso ng kapayapaan. Ang mga pwersang nasa loob ng mga salitang kapayaan ay dapat tumabi at hayaan ang mga lehitimong pagpapatupad or law enforcers. Forces within the purview of the peace talks must allow pursuit operations to proceed unhampered.

The government is relying mainly on the Philippine National Police in cooperation with our local executives to prevent possible terrorist attacks. Because of the bombings in Jakarta, we've raised our level of alert. The use of marines for law enforcement would be a last resort in the event there is a need for greater deterrence and visibility of law enforcers in the metropolitan area. We've done this in the past. In fact, we've done this at the recent past and national television showed Choly Teodosio giving his pep talk to his marines, and they were all their high morale ready to defend the constitution. But thanks to many people in this room, including Chuck Agustin, we did not need to use the force. Needless to say that episode, that role of the marines that they were ready to play on full television coverage has been played by the marines in the past in the urban areas. It contributed much to the sense of security of our people. But at this moment, we are not going to mobilize them for urban peace and order. We will do everything under the law to ease public fears and anxieties and promote the normal run of commerce and livelihood.

I've mentioned a few individuals, but there are too many individuals to mention if I want to be exhaustive in acknowledging those who helped keep that crisis to a 20-hour period. Therefore, to make a more general acknowledgement, allow me to preside over a brief ceremony.

I would like to ask AFP Chief of Staff General Abaya and to represent Jun Ebdane, who's still there in Mindanao running after Al-Ghozi, I would like to ask Sonny Razon, who is the partner of Chuck Agustin in heading the PMAAA, to join me in the stage for a moment.

Today, I'm awarding a Presidential citation to the PNP and the AFP.

The Philippine National Police is cited as follows:

In recognition of its courageous and faithful performance of duties and responsibilities, which effectively maintained peace and order, and contained the area of public disturbance on 27th July 2003;

For its steadfast dedication to promoting peace and order and ensuring public safety;

For reinforcing the strong sense of professionalism among the civilian police force of the Republic of the Philippines;

In appreciation of its integrity, devotion to duty and commitment to professional competence and moral excellence, qualities worth emulating by all civil servants and deserving of the respect and admiration of the Filipino people.

I give this award to the Philippine National Police.

The Armed Forces of the Philippines is cited as follows:

In recognition of steadfast loyalty to the Philippine Constitution, as exemplified by the unwavering commitment to defend it against forces that dared threaten it on 27 July 2003;

For courageous and faithful performance of their duties and responsibilities, which prevented possible losses to lives and property;

For reinforcing the strong sense of professionalism among the soldiery and remaining true to the chain of command;

In appreciation of their integrity, devotion to duty and commitment to professional competence and moral excellence, qualities deserving of the respect and admiration of the Filipino people.

I give this citation to the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

And to all of you, brothers and sisters in the National Defense College, to the National Defense College which produced many of the heroes of July 27, many of the heroes of many other moments in Philippine history, Happy Ruby Anniversary and thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Reception for the Diplomatic Corps

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Reception for the Diplomatic Corps

[Delivered at the Premier Guest House, Malacañang, August 13, 2003]

His Excellency Archbishop Franco, Excellencies of the Diplomatic corps, Secretary Ople and the other cabinet members, Ambassador Bautista and the other fellow workers in government, ladies and gentlemen, good evening:

I invited you tonight, ladies and gentlemen of the diplomatic community, to thank you for your support last July 27.

We successfully thwarted the attempts of a misguided few to challenge the constitutional order of our country. We continue to move to prevent further misadventures both by understanding the legitimate grievances of our soldiers and by investigating and prosecuting those who exploit these grievances for clearly self-serving and political reasons.

Much of our success can be credited to the clear expressions of support that you and your governments gave during our hour of need and which you continue to give. Thank you very much for that.

Your expressions of support sustained us, as we faced difficult situations and made hard decisions. Your confidence in our ability to deal with this crisis and in our leadership and governance sent strong signals to the mutineers and to their supporters that they could expect nothing from the international community, except perhaps your condemnation.

For your actions, Excellencies, and those of your leaders, you have my deep appreciation and the thanks of a grateful nation.

You have renewed our faith in the community of nations. You have confirmed that today, more than ever before, the lines that distinguish foreign and domestic affairs have become blurred. But that the links between what is happening in one country and what's going on in the world have never been clearer, and the inextricable link between security and economic issues have never been more apparent.

After fifteen days, we lifted the State of Rebellion. There's no longer a need for extraordinary measures to deal with the direct threat although its strategic causes must be uprooted. While several leaders continue to be at large, they shall be accounted for by the normal run of law intelligence, enforcement, investigative and judicial processes.

The truth will surface in these various fronts. On the one hand, we are unmasking the larger conspiracy to destroy our nation in the light of clear and cold evidence. On the other hand, through the commissions and task forces I have created, we're leaving no stone unturned in unearthing the lapses of integrity, diligence and professionalism in the armed forces the only way we can attack the roots of instability is through a relentless pursuit of impartial justice through the courts, and a cleansing process within the uniformed service. I shall be undaunted on both counts.

The truth shall set us free. Let all allegations of graft and corruption come to light and be brought responsibly and openly before the bar of justice. I'm referring to both the military and civilian sectors. This is the time to put an end to coddling, looking the other way, or whitewashing investigations. It's a time for all Filipinos to prove that we are not mired in a culture of corruption and that we can decisively shake off the stigma of being called a corrupt society. We live in a mature democratic system. We live in a mature democratic system that can repair its infirmities through the institutions of duly-constituted governance. We live in a mature democratic system that can confront the challenge without resorting to the use of force or coercion. We retain our faith in the restorative powers of democracy.

I would prefer seeing the military and civilian leaders of the Oakwood conspiracy taking the brunt of full retribution under the law, rather than the ordinary soldiers whom they misled and deceived. We will put an end to this spectacle of having the small fry being held to account for the sins of the rich and powerful. The worst evil comes from those who have no compunction to destroy our democratic way of life by deploying pawns from their political fortresses. We shall expose and punish the leaders who planted this conspiracy and sought to reap its unjust rewards. This will show the shallowness of the conspiracy and the unremitting capacity of our democratic system to mete out justice and due process. We can now banish residual fears and get on with the normal work, with the normal course of work and business.

It's the business of peace that I am determined to carry out with your support. Our peace process with the MILF is on track, thanks to the central role being played by Malaysia and the role being played by other countries in the OIC. The United States Institute of Peace Will — as the parties might allow — also help out, primarily, by ensuring that there will be resources for economic development once a peace agreement is concluded.

With the help of Norway, we will have talks soon with the communist rebels. Exploratory talks will ensue with the representatives of the national democratic front in Oslo not too far from today.

With the help of the OIC, particularly the members of the Committee of the Eight, led by Indonesia, we have been successfully implementing our 1996 peace agreement with the MILF.

With the help of our international partners, we continue to fight terror on every front.

The hunt against Al-Ghozi will go on until he is recaptured. A wider net has been spread and local officials and the communities have been alerted. We have the initiative and we will not stop.

Our common values and visions bind us and renew our faith and belief in each other as members of a community of nations. The challenges that face our nation are many. And no nation should face these challenges alone.

Our continuing partnership in all fronts is vital and indispensable.

Once again, your Excellencies, thank you. And please convey my thanks to your governments.

Mabuhay!

Speech of President Arroyo during the groundbreaking ceremony of Candahon Bridge

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the groundbreaking ceremony of Candahon Bridge

[Delivered in Mogpog, Marinduque, August 15, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Marita Jimenez, na siya ang Cabinet officer for Regional Development ng Region MIMAROPA. Alam po n'yo, si Mai Jimenez ang dating regional Director ng Region IV noong ako ay Undersecretary ng Trade and Industry, at ako naman ang cord noon — ay, hindi — ng isang lalawigan ng Cavite. Pero dahil siya ay Regional Director ng Region IV, ginawa ko nga siyang cord ng MIMAROPA. At dahil siya ang humahawak ng maraming foreign-assisted project, kaya naman ang dami-daming proyektong dumadating sa MIMAROPA, kasama na nga 'yung iba't-ibang mga pinag-usapan ni Governor Reyes.

Nagpapasalamat ako kay Governor Reyes sa kaniyang mga napakagandang sinabi ukol sa nagawa natin dito sa nakaraang isang taon. Binabati ko rin si Congressman Edmund Reyes. Binabati ko rin si Board Member Nepomuceno at 'yung iba't-ibang punongbayan na narito. Pero siyempre binabati ko si Mayor Jonathan Garcia, ang Mayor ng Mogpog.

Kinuwento nga ni Mayor Jonathan Garcia, na 'yung tatay ko, si President Diosdado Macapagal, ay nagpunta rito noong 1965, dahil tinayo niya 'yung inyong munisipyo, ang bayan ng Mogpog. Kasama ko rito ngayon si Secretary Cito Lorenzo ng agriculture. Dahil gaya nga ng sabi ni Governor Reyes, si Cito Lorenzo ang namamahala sa pagpabigay dito nung inyong mga seedlings ng mangga. At tama si gobernadora, nagdagdag pa kami. Kulang ito ha, sample lamang ito. Sana dinala natin iyung limang libong seedling para kayo ay maigaya sa lalawigan ng Guimaras, na ganun ding size. Iyung guimaras ay small but sweet, kasi ang mangga nila ay napakatamis. At kanilang mangga lamang ang nakakapasok nang magaan sa Amerika, sa Australia at iba pang lugar. Itong mga seedling na ito na sample lamang ito, ay sana makatulong sa inyo dito sa napakagandang lalawigan ng Marinduque.

Tama rin si gobernadora na nagdadala tayo, at si Cito ang nag-implement nitong ating mga pumps para sa irigasyon dahil talagang number one na kakaiba ng mga magsasakang maykitang maganda at walang kitang maganda ay iyung may irigasyon, iyung magsasakang may magagandang kita. At dito sa lugar na ito, itong inyong barangay, napaka-productive pero mahirap magdala ng produkto kung ganito lamang ang inyong tulay. Kaya ito, gumagawa tayo ng multimillion bridge para mapadali ang inyong produkto.

Narito rin kasama natin ngayon ang ating Kalihim ng Environment, si Bebet Gozun. Siya ang namamahala sa project study na binanggit ni gobernadora na magbibigay ng paraan kung papano mabawi ng mamamayan ng Marinduque 'yung problemang naganap doon sa aksidente doon sa Marinduque mining sa Sta. Cruz. Isa ring gingawa ni Bebet dito ay meron siyang... Ang DENR ay merong Memorandum of Agreement sa labindalawang obispo sa pag-aalaga ng bundok. At dito sa Marinduque, isa nga doon sa labindalawang obispo, kaya nasisiyahan ako na narito ang inyong obispong si Bishop Jose Oliveros.

Alam n'yo, si Bishop Oliveros, mas kilala ko 'yung kapatid niya, si Roy Oliveros. O mas kilala naming lahat dahil si Roy Oliveros ay nandoon sa kilusang manggagawa at kasama natin doon sa kompil na nakatulong para maganap ang EDSA 2. Siya nga pala, naalala n'yo 'yung panahon ng EDSA 2? Naalala n'yo iyung spokesman ng impeachment trial? Hindi ba, walang iba kungdi si Edmund Reyes? Kasama namin, nila Edmund si Roy Oliveros, at tinutuloy niya ang kaniyang trabaho ngayon sa ilalim ng aking administrasyon bilang kasapi ng board ng Development Bank of the Philippines.

Kaya kung gusto natin na magkaroon ng mga dagdag na barko sa roll-on/roll-off ferry para sa lalong lumapit ang Marinduque sa iba't-ibang lugar ng Pilipinas, lalo na sa panahon ng Moriones, ay maghanap tayo ng investor na hihiram sa DBP para sa roll-on/roll-off ferry. At si Roy Oliveros sigurado ako ay tutulong para iyon ay dumating sa lalawigan ng Marinduque.

Mga punong barangay na narito, binabati ko kayong lahat. At mga kababayan, ako ay nasisiyahan na mabalik muli dito kasi galing na ako dito noong ako'y senador pa. Sa katunayan, lahat ng bayan ng Marinduque ay napuntahan ko na. Ngunit, narito na naman ako muli kasi gusto ko kung puwede, sana kausapin ko lahat ng mamamayan ng Marinduque, kung kaya ko lang sana. Kasi gusto kong malaman ninyo na alam ko ang damdamin ng mga maliliit na probinsya at pulo dahil ako ay maliit din. Alam ko na mahirap ang lugar ng malayo, kagaya nito, malayo dati magiging malapit. Pero alam ko rin na masaya kung minsan kasi ilang beses na akong naki-piyesta sa inyo dito sa Marinduque.

Kung isang may natutunan ako sa aking pagbisita dito ay: “kahit na ikaw ay maliit, meron kang mahalagang nako contribute sa kasaysayan ng ating bansa.” Nung nagpunta nga ako noong isang taon dito, nagpunta ako sa Torrijos at doon ipinagdiriwang natin nga ang kontribusyon ng battle of Pulang Lupa sa ating kasaysayan. Sa katunayan nga, dahil napunta ako roon, nalagay pa ako sa front page, pinuputong ninyo ako. Hindi ba yon ang inyong kostumbre dito? Sinabi nung mga peryodiko, “look at her, may problema sa negosyo ang Pilipinas, bakit siya namimiyesta doon; bakit siya nagpapaputong ng korona?” eh inatake pa ako dahil doon. Hindi nila naiintindihan siguro — ‘yung mga ‘yon, ‘yung mga estamberong ‘yon — na pagpupunta ka rito, doon ko nalaman ‘yung halaga ng butterfly industry sa inyo. Doon ko nalaman ang pangangailangan ng inyong ospital. Kaya tuloy nagbigay ng 10 million, at narito ang 2.5 million na installment ng 10 million. Sa madaling salita, ‘yang mga bagay na ‘yan na pawang maliliit, kung nandoon ka sa Malacañang ay malalaking bagay sa mga karaniwang mamamayan. At ‘yon ang dapat binibigyan ng pansin. Sa katunayan din, dahil na-iretrato ako noon, ay nalaman tuloy ng maraming mamamayan sa buong pilipinas “ano pala itong giyera ng pulang lupa; ano pala itong kagitingan sa ating kasaysayan ng mga taga-Marinduque.” paano ko alam na nalaman ng buong bayan, buong bansa. Kasi pagkatapos noon, lahat ng nagdidiriwang ng kanilang great battle of history gusto nang pumunta ako sa kanilang pagdiriwang. Ngunit, hindi ko naman mapuntahan lahat dahil nga marami rin tayong kailangang asikasuhin sa kabisera ng ating bansa.

Si Joey Lina nga eh, itong proyektong ito — kaya kinatawan ng dilg ang nagbigay sa atin ng project description — ay nasa ilalim ng dilg ang implementasyon nito na binibigay ‘yung national counterpart sa local government. At ‘yung local government naglalagay ng counterpart niya, at local government ang nag-i-implement. Pero hindi makapunta si Joey Lina dito dahil meron din siyang mahalagang inaasikaso. Ang inaasikaso niya ‘yung imbestigasyon ng mutiny doon sa Oakwood. Mabuti nga napatawa kayo kasi kung meron kayong nanood doon sa telebisyon kahapon, nakakatawa nga ang pangyayari kung hindi lamang naatraso ang ating ekonomiya dahil doon sa mga ‘yon.

Ngayon lamang ako nakakita ng mga taong sumumpa sa magiging matapat, marangal at matapang, na buo ang lakas ng loob na magsinungaling at pa lalong insultuhin ang talino ng kanilang mga kababayang pilipino. Ang mga aroganteng tampalasang ito ay malaking kahihyan sa kanilang uniporme. Dapat silang magpasalamat na meron nilang sistemang demokratiko para magpahayag ng kanilang paniniwala, isang sistemang demokratiko na hinangad nilang ibagsak. Isipin na lamang natin kung paano ang isang gobyernong pamumunuan nila at ng kanilang mga padrino, kung saan sila tatayong taga-usig, taga-hatol, taga-pagpatupad ng sabay sabay. Kaya, nandito ba si General Ledesma? Wala na? Saan si General Ledesma? O, Generel Ledesma, bagong kaka-ano ko lang, kaka promote ko lang na bagong division commander ninyo.

Kaya General Ledesma, ang aking unang instruction sa iyo bilang bagong second division commander, ang Sandatahang Lakas ng Pilipinas ay dapat magsumikap na puksain ang sakit na ito ng pakikipagsapalaran, diktadura at totalitarianismo na unti-unting lumalason sa isipan ng ilang mga sundalo. Gayundin, sa inyong mamamayan, sa lahat ng ating mamamayan, what I ask of you, I am calling upon all our people to condemn and resist these attempts to destroy our democratic way of life.

Hindi natin dapat hayaang ang kagustuhan ng iilan ay mangibabaw sa ating mga institusyong konstitusyunal. Kaya dinadala ko na lamang ang pahayag ni Secretary Joey lina, na hindi siya makakapunta rito dahil marami akong mga instructions sa kanila tungkol sa kanilang mga imbestigasyon, kasama na rin ang mga imbestigasyon tungkol sa pagdawit ng mga ilang malalaking pangalan dito sa mutining naganap. I’m directing the military and the PNP – na itong sinusupervise ni Joey, ang PNP — to bring up all pieces of evidence to the media and to the public. We must show the people the cold and unvarnished truth. We're not engaged in a witch hunt against any family or kinship group. This is not a personal matter. All charges will be backed up by hard evidence. The aim is justice and due process, not vengeance against anyone.

Salamat na lamang na dito sa Marinduque Mapayapa. Wala tayong nakikitang mga mutiny, ni wala tayong halos nakikitang mga NPA sa lalawigan ng Marinduque. Congratulations sa inyong lahat.

In fact, sa aking pag-aaral, sa mga dato ng mga barangay kung saan naglalagay ang NPA ng kanilang mga shadow organization o revolutionary committee, dito sa buong Marinduque iisa lang barangay ang nakasama sa listahan, ang guisian ng Mogpog. Sino ang mga taga-Guisian dito? Pero ayon kay gobernadora, umalis na 'yung NPA doon, kaya lang isigurado natin na huwag silang babalik. Isigurado natin na hindi sila nalalason ng mga masasamang mga idelohiya.

Kaya kagabi, sinabi ko sa inyong Regional Director ng Region 4b, si Paraluman Giron — na wala ngayon dahil iniwan ko siya sa Romblon — na dapat maglagay ng distance learning doon sa barangay Guisian sa Mogpog para sa ganun ay hindi na babalik ang masasamang idelohiya. Ay, nandito 'yung inyong superintendent, puwede bang asikasuhin ninyo 'yon, Ginoong Saet? Okay. Ngayon nga, at gaya nang sabi ni gobernadora, meron na kayong sariling superintendent, mula noong isang taon, ay maasikaso na niya ito. At tatal narito na rin siya, gusto ko ring ipaalam sa kaniya na nagre-release ako ng salapi para maglagay ng eskuwela dito sa mga barangay na nakita ko na wala pa palang paaralan. Tatlong barangay sa Buenavista: Binunga, Bangkuro at Baat. Isang barangay sa Torrijos, ang Bangcuangan. At isang barangay sa — ay, sa Sta. Cruz pala 'yon — at isang barangay sa Torrijos, ang sinambahan. At dito, babalik tayo sa Mogpog, gusto ko rin ipaalam na meron tayong ibibigay na credit line sa Mogpog Traders Multi-Purpose Cooperative sa barangay market site para sa credit line ng tatlong milyong piso mula sa Land Bank of the Philippines. Ayun ito 'yon. Saan kayo? Ms. Lucy Malabanan.

Etong mga ito ay mga iba't-ibang mga bahagi ng ating mga programa upang sa ganun nga ay makaabot ang higit pang kaunlaran sa lalawigan ng Marinduque. Actually, noong ako ay pumunta dito noong isang taon sa Torrijos, noon lang Nalaman ng maraming taga-Pilipinas ang ibig sabihin ng giyera ng pulang lupa. Ngunit lahat ng Pilipino kilala nila ang Moriones. At dahil maraming turismo ang nagaganap sa ating bansa, eh gusto natin na ang Moriones ay tuluy-tuloy pa na ma-appreciate ng ating mga mamamayang Pilipino. Kaya kagabi, tinanong ko kay governor, papano tayo makakatulong para mas gumanda pa or mas marami pang maaliw at pumunta dito sa panahon ng Moriones. Sabi niya, marami pa ring pumupunta pero dahil sa kahirapan ng buhay ay binebenta 'yung mga maskara pagkatapos. Kaya nagkukulang ng maskara baka lumiit nang lumiit ang selebrasyon. Eh kung lumiit nang lumiit, hindi na dadalawin.

Kaya sabi ko, sige doon sa ating one town, one product, bagamat nagbigay na ako ng one town, one product, one million noong isang taon para sa bawat bayan na mag-gagawa ng ating butterfly industry, magpahanda tayo sa dti ng tulong din para magkaroon din ng one million loan sa mga sme na mag-gagawa nitong mga maskara, para tuluy-tuloy ang inyong magandang kostumbre at tradisyon sa Marinduque.

Kaya ako ay nasisiyahan na narito, napakaganda ng panahon para mag-luncheon tayo dito sa Marinduque. Salamat sa inyong lahat na naghintay sa akin. At magandang tanghali sa inyong lahat at nawa'y dahil meron ng mimaropang sariling rehiyon, dahil meron na kayong sariling superintendent, dahil na meron na kayong iba't-ibang mga sariling regional director at naglalagay din ako ng sarili ninyong regional director ng DTI para lahat ng inyong mga project study ay magawa para sa inyo, nawa'y tuluy-tuloy umangat ang buhay ng mga masasaya at mababait na Marinduqueño.

Speech of President Arroyo during the launching ceremony of the Strong Republic School (SRS)

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the launching ceremony of the Strong Republic School (SRS)

[Delivered at the Purnaga Elementary School, Brgy. Purnaga, Magsaysay, Occidental Mindoro, August 16, 2003]

Thank you. Maraming salamat sa banda.

Maraming salamat Secretary Mai Jimenez, ang Cabinet officer for Regional Development ng gabinete dahil siya ay anak ng Mindoro island; binabati ko si Congresswoman Josephine Sato; binabati ko si Governor Jo Villarosa; binabati ko si Mayor Barrera pati 'yung Sangguniang Bayan ng Magsaysay sa pamumuno ni Vice-Mayor Abesamis. Gusto kong malaman ni Mayor Barrera at lahat ng mga taga-Magsaysay na naibigay ko na 'yung pondong 20 milyon pesos para sa kalsada na magdadala. Jose. 'Yang kalsada hong 'yan ay galing sa gobyerno, hindi galing sa NPA.

Gusto kong batiin si Barangay Captain Loreto Nicolas; gusto ko ring batiin ang ating mga opisyal ng Department of Education. Nariyan si Superintendent Romualda Dayan, saan siya? Dayan? Ka titser ko sa Assumption dati. Regards sa kanya ha. Okay; nandito rin si Dr. Magdalena Juan ang district supervisor ng Magsaysay; gusto ko ring magpasalamat kay Ginoong Zosimo Panahon, ang Principal ng Purnaga National High School; at saka kay Mr. Gallano, ang Head Teacher ng Purnaga Elementary School.

At ako ay narito sa inyong paaralan sa Purnaga dahil nga gusto kong ipaalam sa inyo, sa kanila, magbigay ng instruksyon na ang telebisyon na dala-dala natin ngayon na may mga tape — 'yan ay para lumawak ang edukasyon sa barangay Purnaga. Dahil malayo, kailangan n'yo ng mga dagdag na teacher, ang dagdag na teacher ninyo ay 'yung telebisyon. Kaya yan ang education by television. At once a week — ayun, sinabi ko na sa kanila, 'yan everyday 'yung subject na makabayan o kaya 'yung subject ng english depende na sa kanila sa superintendent kung papano niya ilalagay, anong subject ang ilalagay, 'yon ay ituturo sa ating mga bata dito sa paaralan araw-araw, Monday to Friday. Sa Sabado dadalhin ang ating para guro doon sa sitio ng mga Mangyan na nag-enrol dito sa tinatawag nating Strong Republic School. Gusto kong ulit, 'yang telebisyon na 'yan ay galing sa gobyerno hindi galing sa NPA.

Gusto kong batiin ang mag-aalaga ng ating kapayapaan dito, ang namumuno ng mga sundalo ng buong Southern Luzon, ang ating three-star general, si Lt. General Alfonso Dagudag. Alam n'yo si al Dagudag meron 'yang kasaysayan eh, kasama ko. Noong araw na nagkita kami ni Angie Reyes, noong January 19, 2001 sa isang safehouse — safehouse noon pero kilalang-kilala na ngayon, 'yung bahay ni Eddie San Jose — dalawang heneral ang aking kausap: si General Angelo Reyes at saka si General Alfonso Dagudag. Siya ang dating Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations noong panahong 'yon. Pagkatapos ginawa ko siyang division commander doon sa Mindanao sa Northeastern Mindanao. At pagkatapos ginawa kong Commander ng Southern Luzon. Taga-saan ka, Al? Dumaguete, Visayan.

Ngem, naamuan ko nga nagado ti ilocano idtoy. Agpayso garud nga sisenta porsyento Ilocano idtoy? Siak met Ilocana ti bangir ni mamang ko, ta ni mamang ko naggapo ti Binalonan, Pangasinan. Iso ti kadua ti ilocano nga parte ti probinsya ti Pangasinan. Iso nga kakailyan tayo.

Gusto kong batiin 'yung nag-aalaga rin ng ating kapayaan, namumuno ng mga pulis ng buong MIMAROPA, si Police Superintendent Alejandro Lapinid. Ngayon, si General Dagudag, gawa nang siya ang kanyang inaasikaso ay buong Southern Luzon, kasama na doon ang Calabarzon, kasama na doon ang MIMAROPA, kasama na doon ang Bicol, hindi naman siya araw-araw narito sa Mindoro. Siya ay naka-base doon sa Camp General Nakar sa Lucena. Kaya ang nag-aalaga ng kapayaan dito sa MIMAROPA, dito sa brigada, kasama na rin ng Romblon, ay si Colonel Fernando Mesa, ang Commander ng 204 brigade. Kahapon, pinakita n'ya sa akin 'yung kanyang plano kung papaano mabalik ang kapayapaan dito sa Mindoro. Sabi ko, napakaganda ng plano dahil sabi n'ya hindi natin malalabanan ang rebelyon sa armas lamang. Kailangan kanang kamay at kaliwang kamay. 'Yung kanang kamay ay 'yung puwersa ng ating sandatahang panlakas pati na rin 'yung ating mga pulis. 'Yon ang inaasikaso nila, lalo na nila General Dagudag at saka si Lapinid at saka si Mesa. Ngunit pati sila ay kinokoordina nila 'yung left hand, 'yon ang nag-aasikaso ng mga despair o ugat ng disappointment, ugat ng rebelyon ang kahirapan. At isang malaking bahagi ng pagsagot natin nga sa kahirapan ng Magsaysay ay 'yung 20 milyon road na magpapalapit sa inyo sa San Jose.

Isa rin itong tataas ang antas ng pag-aaral ng mga bata rito dahil 'yung mga material galing sa Maynila, 'yung mga education by television ay madadala na rito dahil maglalagay tayo ng television dito. At itong television by the way, principal pwede ring magamit hindi lamang doon sa... Hindi lamang doon sa lesson, pwede ring magamit ninyo manood ng... Manood ng ano... ng telenobela kung gusto n'yo. so, ha, klarong-klaro 'yan ha, hindi exclusive lang para sa mga subject, pwedeng gamitin ng ating community para manood ng telenobela at kung ano pang gusto n'yong panoorin. Basta hindi 'yung subversive material, ha? Okay.

Ngayon — so, sinabi ko na 'yung kalsada, sinabi ko na ang edukasyon — eh, 'yung hanapbuhay. Nasisiyahan akong makita itong mga berde n'yong palay. Ang nagdala niyan dito, galing sa akin noong isang taon pa, ay si Secretary Cito Lorenzo ng Department of Agriculture. Ang binhi nyan ay nanggaling sa akin, hindi nanggaling sa NPA. Kaya kung magbabayad kayo ng buwis, huwag kayong magbayad sa NPA. In fact, 'yung mga mahihirap exempted na magbayad ng buwis sa gobyerno. So, kung kayo mahihirap, huwag kayong magbayad ng buwis. Kung kayo ay may kita, magbayad ka ng buwis sa gobyerno. Dahil gobyerno ang nagdadala ng edukasyon, gobyerno ang nagdadala ng income. Alam n'yo, doble ang income makikita ninyo dahil dito sa bagong binhi. Magdodoble ang income ng ating mga magsasaka. Gobyerno ang nagdadala sa inyo ng kalsada. Gobyerno ang nagdadala sa inyo ng kaunlaran at ang kaunlaran at kapayapaan magkakambal 'yan. Kapag walang kaunlaran, naintindihan natin, mahirap ang kapayapaan dahil may mga naeenganyong mag-alma. Ngunit, pag wala naman ang kapayapaan at tinutulungan n'yo ang NPA ay wala ring kaunlaran, dahil encounter ng encounter ang parati na lamang mangyayari. Dahil tungkulin naman ng republika ipagtanggol ang kanyang sarili.

Eh noon nga, ng magkaroon ng Oakwood mutiny, sinabi ko may State of Rebellion kaya pinapunta ko 'yung mga sundalo doon sa Makati para sugpuin 'yung mga nag rebelyon, at 'yung mga pinanggalingan nila sa iba-ibang mga kampo, 'yung mga naiwan, 'yon din ay kinuha rin sila sa custody ng kanilang commanding officers. Sinabi nung ibang mga nagbabatikos, "eh hindi ba may rebelyon sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng Pilipinas, bakit doon hindi n'yo dini-declare?" Hindi na kailangang ideklara, dahil ang ibig sabihin na ng rebellion ay may rebellion dito, military pumunta ka sugpuin mo 'yon. Ngayon, sinasabi ko sa military dito, may rebelyon dito sa Purnaga, pumunta kayo rito at labanan n'yo ang NPA. Sugpuin natin ang npa, dalhin natin ang kaunlaran. At hindi madadala ang kaunlaran habang ang npa ay nag-iistorbo sa inyong buhay dito. Kaya mga kaibigan, 'yan ang aking mensahe rin sa inyo.

At aking mensahe naman doon sa mga nasa sitio ng mga NPA, kung gusto n'yo ng kaunlaran, kung talagang sinsero kayo sa kaunlaran, bumaba na kayo, sumama kayo sa magandang palayan na nagdodoble ng income ng ating mga magsasaka. Sumama kayo na magturo o matuto dito sa ating television by education. Sumama kayo sa pangangalakad na magiging mas madali dahil makakadala ng produkto ninyo sa San Jose. 'Yon ang tunay na kaunlaran at kapayapaan na ating gustong dalhin dito sa barangay purnaga.

Kaya ako ay narito para ipaalam sa inyo na sa kabila, sa kabaligtaran ng siguro may itinuturo sa inyo na hindi kayo mahal ng pamahalaan, 'yang palay na 'yan ang pruwera ng pagmamahal ng pamahalaan sa inyo sa purnaga. Alam n'yo, kung kaya ko lang puntahan lahat ng barangay ng Mindoro, gagawin ko 'yon. Kaya lang kulang ang panahon. Eh kanya naman nandito ang ating mga officials — si Congresswoman, si Governor, si Mayor — sila na ang nagdadala ng ating mensahe. At gusto kong sabihin na ito na ngang kalsada mula ng Magsaysay hanggang San Jose, 'yon nga ay binigay ko 'yung saro kay Congresswoman noong last week, Monday, noong tinawag ko siya sa Malacañang.

Ako ay nasisiyahan sa inyong maiinit na pagtanggap sa inyong lingkod bagamat last minute lamang ang pagpaalam sa inyo na ako ay paparito.

Salamat, mag-kaisa tayo, kasi 'yon ang panggagalingan ng kaunlaran ng inyong barangay, ng inyong bayan, ng inyong probinsya, ng inyong rehiyon, ng ating buong bansa.

Dios ti agngina kadakayo amin kakailyan.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 21st Bishops-Ulama Conference and General Assembly and Asian Gathering of Muslim Ulama and Christian Bishops

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 21st Bishops-Ulama Conference and General Assembly and Asian Gathering of Muslim Ulama and Christian Bishops

[Delivered at the Luzon Ballroom, Westin Philippine Plaza, Pasay City, August 18, 2003]

Thank you, Secretary Gonzales.

Archbishop Capalla, Dr. Mutilan, Bishop Gomez, Dr. Shariff, Archbishop Fitzgerald, Cardinal Darmatmajah, fellow workers in government, excellencies of the diplomatic corps, ladies and gentlemen.

Assalamu Alaikum Warahmatullahi Barakatu! Welcome to all of you! Welcome to the Philippines!

Many countries in Asia experience internal conflicts among ethnic communities. But this is something that we should always resist and resolve, for our respective creeds — Islam and Christianity — are both founded on the love of God and the search for peace.

The task of rebuilding our nation is made more clear and hopeful with the presence of godly men and women like yourselves. I, too, strive to promote godliness in our nation and in my family. The first family welcomes a lifestyle check and other lawful checks on our godliness. We have led a life of dignity and simplicity. This is part of leading by example and I consider it a natural part of being president. This also accords me the moral armor to act decisively on corruption and extravagance among public servants. I invite the media and the people to join me in the crusade for good governance.

In his opening address at the World Day of Prayer for peace in Assisi in 1986, Pope John Paul II pointed out the significance of gathering so many religious leaders, including those of Islam and Christianity, in the following words:

He said and I quote: “Our meeting attests that in the great battle for peace, humanity, in its diversity, must draw from its deepest and most vivifying sources where its conscience is formed and upon which is founded the moral action of all people.”

For the first time in Asia, the Muslim Ulama, Ustadz and Imams, protestant bishops and pastors, as well as Catholic bishops, priests and lay leaders are convening to discuss common challenges affecting them and their relationships as Christians and Muslims in Asia; and how to address these problems and concerns from the standpoint of their faith.

As reflected in your theme: “Seeking peace and development through an authentic Christian and Muslim dialogue of life in Asia,” this conference also aims to formulate a firm consensus against extremists and fanatical groups from using religion as a justification for acts of terrorism. This reminds me that I must greet Speaker de Venecia because he has been among the earliest exponents and proponents of this dialogue of civilizations.

In this light, allow me to share with you the principles that govern our search for peace and development in Mindanao.

The first principle is that peace and development are the twins that always go together.

Second, all our actions for peace and development are founded on the imperatives of sovereignty, national integrity and constitutionality.

Third, we are a multi-ethnic society with a variety of religious and ethnic traits and traditions. Our multi-cultural and multi-ethnic society can thrive only through social justice for all and institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions.

To these three fundamental principles, we add a fourth for this day and age: we unconditionally reject terrorism.

In our search for peace, I've authorized the holding of the peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front to be hosted by Malaysia.

The United States is also committed to provide diplomatic and financial assistance to the peace process, especially the rehabilitation of conflict-affected areas in the Philippines, and thereby increase the dividends of peace.

The support of the Islamic world for the Philippine peace process goes back a long way. And through all the efforts, up to today, the organization of the Islamic conference has stood by the Filipino people.

Today, we aim for a holistic resolution of conflict. We want a peace that is just and honorable and allows our people more space to develop their human potentials and values.

Indeed, peace cannot be limited to a mere absence of war. Some months ago, I visited barangay Inug-ug in Pagalungan, Maguindanao, where Christians and Muslims, along with several non-government organizations and religious leaders, took the initiative to ask both the military and the MILF to leave their community. As this experience shows, the will of the people and god is always ascendant in the search for peace.

I know that each one of you in this conference pursues peace and development in your respective communities and societies. And together with you, I call on all armed groups in the region to join us in a quest for peace that is just, honorable and enduring.

Through your conference, let us collectively strive to finally dismantle the culture of divisiveness and self-centeredness threatening humankind.

May god's peace be upon us all in this room and through your work. And with God's grace on all the peoples of Asia and the world.

Mabuhay! And welcome once again.

Speech of President Arroyo at the Philippine Military Academy

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines At the Philippine Military Academy

[Delivered at the PMA, Baguio City, August 22, 2003]

PRESIDENTIAL Adviser, Governor Chavit Singson, Sec. Afable, Sec. Alingod, Undersecretary Purugganan, men and women of the Cadet Corps. Ladies and Gentlemen. I have come here, first of all, to affirm to you that I will not abolish the Philippine Military Academy.

After July 27... that I heard and the country heard many negative things said about the PMA. Those in the extreme said that the PMA should be abolished. There are those who say the cadets are spoiled and live in an idyllic world so detached from reality, and that is why they become lost dreamers when they are shocked by the realities in the field. Some say Mistah culture has bred corruption and cover-ups as well as blind loyalties to the wrong complex. Many blame the cadet for displaced idealism and for breeding the messianic complex within the officer corps.

As President of the Philippines, I listened intently to these opinions. But I would like to assure you that I did not come here to blame you for anything or to give you a long lecture on your values and principles. I don't believe that our cadets or young officers are spoiled. I don't believe that you are empty dreamers or wayward idealists. I respect you as soldiers of the people.

I came here to have a heart to heart talk with you. I appreciate it very much, and we would appreciate it very much, if you could dispel any preconceived thought that I am an arrogant President. I know I can be contentious and, perhaps, even overbearing sometimes, but we all have our strengths and weaknesses, our failings and frailties, anxieties and fears. But I do not harbor notions of superiority over my fellow human beings including subordinates in the civilian and military service.

God gave us a great gift – the power to communicate and understand each other. And as long as we are earnest and sincere and geared towards a common mission, as long as we agree to listen to each other and to respect each other's diverse beliefs and opinions, there is nothing in this world that can destroy those great ideas we hold so dear – the nation and the flag.

It is high time for our nation to break away from the excessive preoccupation with politics and even with... We must now consolidate and solve energies towards the indispensable task of public order and development, especially the fight against poverty, terrorism, crime and corruption to which the government is devoting its undivided attention.

There is an insidious attempt to sideswipe the presidency. Because nobody has so far dug up anything that can put my office in bad light.

I am drawing a clear line between the purely private matters that are being imputed against my husband. And the issues of governance being attended to by the presidency. That controversy has nothing to do with my work as Chief Executive. I do not interfere with my husband's private business and I do not allow him to interfere with the affairs in the state.

My husband is not a ward of the palace. And if charges are filed against him, which we hope will be done, he will mount his legal defenses independently. Neither he nor any other member of the first family enjoys a mantle of political protection. I am not going to intervene. The palace is not a legal refuge of the first family.

I am married to our country.

As your Commander-in-Chief, I would like to be accorded respect, but not subservience. I would like my lawful orders to be carried out, but I demand honestly, frankness and candor. No officer of the Armed Forces should ever flinch in telling the truth to the Commander-in-Chief, whether he or she is a man or woman. I do not seek to be shielded from the horrors of soldiery or the dirt under the carpet. War is neither pleasant for me nor for you for our families and loved ones and for all our people for that matter.

I know the soldiers in the field are waiting upon the leadership of the Commander in-Chief. I shall not be betray their yearnings and expectations, nor yours.

I am with you in your desire for equity and reform in the Armed Forces.

The big AFP cleanup has to be done. I have set up a task force for procurement reform. We are selecting officers for the task force known for their integrity and incorruptibility. We are setting up a fastidious selection and screening process to box out unscrupulous contractors. We will modernize the system so that discretion can be scaled down and accountability increased.

This week, pending financial review, I ordered a suspension of all military infrastructure projects except the building of barangay roads and schoolhouses, core shelter projects in the war-torn areas, detention centers and hospital improvement. I also instructed the task force to take a closer look at the operation of military financial institutions and institute more effective controls in the use of petroleum products and munitions, with the end in view of moving more logistics to the field.

We are putting a stop to the practice of conversion. We shall set up a system by which critical requirements needed at a moment's notice will be supported under effective controls. Henceforth all contingency funds of the major services will be subject to full audit.

We will move forward in areas that need immediate attention. The task cannot be done overnight but we are breaking ground.

That effort to rebuild Armed Forces starts here, right in these halls where you, the hope of the uniform, are reared and nurtured. I expect you to uphold the highest standards of integrity, courage and loyalty. Not loyalty to peers, classmate or PMAers, but loyalty to what is noble and worthy, what is right and good for nation and people.

Do not listen to the self-serving leaders who exploit your ideals, then later desert you in the aftermath of controversy or conflict.

Stick to the code of honor and the chain of command.

I know that many of those in the Oakwood incident have the sympathy of many of you. I understand your position. It takes great courage for any young officer to stand up and speak aloud about his frustration, maybe even greater courage than what is needed to face the enemy in combat. But, we need to ask ourselves. Is this the way we really want to change our nation? Are we aware of the consequences of doing away with the Constitution establishing a revolutionary regime backed by force rather than law? Are we prepared to undertake reforms by dictatorship rather than democratic rule?

I did not come here to demonize the officers and soldiers who went to Oakwood, but they did wrong, and they must pay for it. Every soldier must take justifiable punishment as part of his duty. But whatever you think about the rightness of their cause, I ask you once more to re-examine your oath, to dig deep into your conscience and to recall the values and principles our forbears fought for... right? The dominant PMA value, duty honor, country – guided those who detected, disrupted, prevented and dismantled the power grab. The perversion of these values drove the power grabbers. The government's success was due to the PMA ethic of professional military service. The PMA did not fail the mutineers, the mutineers were the ones who failed the PMA's tradition.

I ask you once more to recall the values and principles our forebears so bravely gave their lives for in past wars – from the revolution of the turn of the century, the Second World War, the Huk surgery, the Korean and Vietnam War and up to the EDSA Revolution of 1986. What did they fight and die for, was it not freedom and democracy?

The officers and soldiers in Oakwood did wrong to the flag even though many of their grievances were valid. I will never surrender the flag under pain of death. But let me assure you that I will continue to reform the Armed Forces.

We shall move forward with will and determination and I hope you will join us every step along the way.

With political will and the support of the people, as well as the leadership of men and women of honor like you, we shall prevail and win. Together, we can make a difference in reforming the Armed Forces.

Thank you.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the presentation ceremonies of Living Medal of Valor Awardees

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the presentation ceremonies of Living Medal of Valor Awardees

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, August 25, 2003]

Thank you, Secretary Romulo.

Members of the Cabinet; Secretary Reyes; Secretary Alingod; Secretary Gonzales; General Abaya; the major service commanders; the J staff; the Medal of Balor awardees, and I will give their names again: Colonel Arturo Ortiz; Colonel Ariel Querubin; Major Estrella; Major Parcon; Major Sobejana; Major Bacarro; Captain Fajimolin; Lieutenant Dilag; Master Sergeant Granfil; Master Sergeant Cuenca; Master Sergeant Curig; Technical Sergeant Rubi; Colonel Escano of the Meralco Foundation; Tony Abaya who put this together; Francis Colayco of the hero foundation; Mr. Garcia; friends and supporters of the AFP; honored guests; ladies and gentlemen:

As Mr. Colayco said, this is a month of heroes — Quezon, Ninoy, the Pugad Lawin heroes — and now, today, we recognize the living heroes, the 13 living recipients of the medal of valor, the highest award that may be given to a Filipino soldier.

It is the heroism and sacrifices of the soldiers epitomized by our medalists of valor that drives our will to give the best we can to the protectors of the people, the will to reform the Armed Forces, the will to bring the benefits of the command down to the fighters in the field.

It is their bravery that inspires the government to be ready to act on the legitimate grievances of our soldiers, and to serve their rightful needs without being asked. And it is in recognition of their heroism that I must remind the rest not to be misled or deceived by wanton adventurism.

In this light, the truth is finally coming out that many of the officers and soldiers implicated in the Oakwood incident were, indeed, misled and deceived, intimidated or threatened by their superior officers to join the plot, or were implicated but did not commit any overt acts contrary to law.

I want these officers and soldiers to be speedily exculpated and released.

As a start, I am ordering the immediate release of officers of the Philippine Navy and the Philippine Army who have submitted evidence and counter-affidavits proving that they were not involved in, and in fact refused to join the power grab. Upon recommendation of the judge advocate general, the chief of staff approved the dropping of charges against these specific officers an hour ago. They may immediately report for duty.

For the rest, I have ordered the authorities to file the case in court forthwith so that the accused will have the opportunity to face the witnesses and the evidence. We will not engage in character assassination in the media. We will not speculate on evidence but we will deliver this at once at the doorstep of judicial scrutiny. Charges will be filed automatically and immediately when there is a suspected violation of the law. The court is the only proper forum to deal with these matters.

The senate is waiting for Senator Honasan. He has been elected by his supporters for greater responsibilities other than to play hide and seek. The work on his desk is piling up. His claim to innocence will not be helped by infantile games and excuses.

We will sift through the evidence judiciously. Due process and justice will be served. The innocent, as those that I referred to earlier, shall be spared and the truth will triumph. I ask the soldiers, I ask the officers of the AFP for their continuing forbearance and faith in the fairness of the commander in chief.

It is my administration's policy, not only to punish the guilty, but especially to reward the best and the bravest to the limits that our resources can offer.

Thus, two years ago, two months after I became president, on March 22nd 2001, I signed a law increasing the financial benefits of the country's Medal of Valor awardees or their dependents from 200 pesos to 20,000 pesos a month. The law also provided for other benefits.

And accordingly, I am directing all departments and agencies to ensure that the awardees or their dependents are given priority in jobs they apply for in any government agency provided they are qualified and meet the job requirements.

I'm asking Secretary Reyes, secretary of national defense, to transmit this instruction to all the departments.

I'm also asking him to transmit to the land bank and to the GSIS my instructions to ensure that if our medal of valor awardees should apply for loans up to half a million pesos, their papers should be processed immediately.

I am also asking Secretary Reyes to convey to the Commission on Higher Education that it should instruct the state colleges and universities that the Medal of Valor awardees and their dependents need not pay tuition fees should they decide to enroll in any of our state universities and colleges. I am also asking Secretary Reyes to convey to the department of education that it should likewise inform all public schools about school fee free privileges for our Medal of Valor awardees or their dependents.

And as Commander in Chief of all the Armed Forces, I am instructing the board of generals that the Medal of Valor accord the medalists the first priority in promotions.

I ask Secretary Reyes also to convey to the Health Secretary that he should inform all government hospitals that our 13 awardees and their dependents must be extended free medical and dental services. I thank Mr. Garcia for what he has said that the private sector is willing to do. And in particular, I also appreciate the initiative of the private sector to negotiate discounts for medicines for our awardees as well as the other initiatives that he mentioned to extend assistance to them.

Speaking of hospitals, I have also asked Secretary Reyes, and now I am also conveying this to the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, General Abaya, that in areas where there is armed conflict, the Armed Forces of the Philippines must assign a medical doctor to the regional hospital in those areas so that our soldiers need not wait for that absent helicopter to bring them to the nearest military hospital.

And to direct the DND and the DOH that there should be a Memorandum of Agreement that when our soldiers who are wounded in battle are treated in these hospitals or even the dependents of our medalists of valor, it will be the Armed Forces who will pay for the medicines that will be used by the Department of Health.

I am moved by the plight of our heroes — and I am sure all of us are moved by them — our heroes who bear the brunt of battle to defend, in the words of major Sobejana, "our people's peace."

These 13 medalists of valor and the soldiers they epitomize are our inspiration for increasing the basic pay of our military men under republic act 9166 which I signed last year, making the soldier's salary equal to that of the policeman and the teacher.

These medalists of valor and the soldiers they epitomize are our inspiration for instituting reforms in the procurement processes of the Armed Forces.

These medalists and the soldiers they represent are our inspiration for proclaiming lands where some 75,000 soldiers may avail of affordable homes. Related to this, I am instructing the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces and the flag officer in command of the navy to convert the navy golf course into a housing project for navy officers and enlisted personnel.

Nations are known by the heroes they choose and celebrate. And this month, we celebrate several of them: August 19, Manuel Quezon, who led the diplomatic fight for our independence from the United States; August 21, the 20th Death Anniversary of Ninoy Aquino, whose martyrdom sparked a peaceful revolution that dismantled a dictatorship; August 23rd, Pugad Lawin reminding us of the other heroes of our revolution; and today, the living heroes — the 13 living awardees of the Medal of Valor.

All these show and remind the world that we are a nation of heroes. From our revolutionary forebears to those who fought the diplomatic struggles for our independence, to the modern day martyr who proclaimed to the world that the Filipino is worth dying for, that the 13 living heroes who demonstrated with their actions that they consider the Filipino worth dying for. These are the heroes that we celebrate this month of heroes. And today, we honor the living 13. And as we honor the living 13, we praise the Lord that we have great Filipino heroes.

Maraming salamat sa ating Medal of Valor awardees.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 1st Conference of Royal Sultanates on Unified and Effective Governance

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 1st Conference of Royal Sultanates on Unified and Effective Governance

[Delivered at the Centennial Ballroom, Manila Hotel, Manila, August 27, 2003]

TURNING THE LAST LEAF TOWARDS A LASTING PEACE IN MINDANAO

There is nothing greater that I wish for than a complete and lasting peace for Mindanao. A peace that is just and honorable and allows our people more space to develop their human potentials and values; a peace that is sincere and principled; a peace that upholds the law and respects the rights and traditions of our diverse ethnic communities in our multi-ethnic society.

There is nothing greater that I wish for than complete and lasting peace both in our countryside and in our corporate boardrooms, so that we can create jobs and fight poverty.

Through the National Government representative in the Monetary Board, I have asked the Central Bank to crack the whip on speculators and to use feasible monetary tools to stabilize the currency exchange market. The Government has the means to even the tide and alleviate the effects of the peso slide on the overall state of the economy. Meanwhile, we must also realize that the unfortunate brew of destabilization, black propaganda, and character assassination as political tools has affected the performance of our peso. But, we are consolidating rapidly and we hope that the distraction of poisonous political controversies will die down soon. We have to shake off the fixation on these day-to-day controversies and devote ourselves to the essential tasks of development and reform; to the essential tasks of seeking peace and prosperity for the peoples of the Philippines.

We're in the final stages of preparation for peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front. It reminds me of 1996 when the GRP and the MNLF peace agreement was signed in Manila, paving the way for the complete integration of the MNLF into the mainstream of governance. That complete integration is symbolized and represented in the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao where the chairman of foreign relations of the MNLF is now the governor of the region of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

Now, we take the second and final leg of the journey, and I have great confidence that after years of bitter conflict, the GRP-MNLF peace talks in Kuala Lumpur will be our last hurdle before we achieve a truly comprehensive and durable settlement of the conflict that has raged for more than three decades. Three decades that means since 1973 or thereabouts.

I point this out because I am happy to say that during the administration of my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, there was no conflict between the Muslims and the Christians in our country.

The ceasefire mechanism has already been installed on the ground and will soon be completed in all affected communities. I'm glad General Garcia is here because he represents the Government of the Philippines and the armed forces in this ceasefire mechanism.

The peace talks will give us a stronger moral armor to fight terrorism, for as we consolidate our communities for peace and development, we will also mop up the poverty and inequity that is the spawning ground for terrorist recruits. I have asked Tingting Cojuangco, my Presidential Assistant, to help Mai Jimenez in overseeing the “Mindanao Natin” which is our program. Our Mindanao national initiative which the National Government aside from the devolved LGUs and departments, is working for the development of Mindanao.

The Muslims, Christians and “lumads” of Mindanao, and the Filipino people all wait upon our efforts to forge a lasting peace. I shall not disappoint you.

And once again, I would like to acknowledge the noble assistance extended by the Prime Minister of Malaysia, Dr. Mahathir Mohammad, to the peace talks. I would like the royalties from Malaysia to please extend to him once again my unending gratitude for helping us move these peace talks so far forward.

I would like to acknowledge as well, the firm commitment of the United States to support the peace talks especially in the post-conflict rehabilitation effort, but also in many other ways by which the MILF welcomes their participation. The role of Malaysia, the role of the United States, these are important roles. And we can also talk about the role played by Libya, the role played by Indonesia and the other members of the OIC in the historical milestones of the Mindanao peace process.

The mandates of our Constitution, the Rule of Law and the principles of national sovereignty and territorial integrity are primordial principles of our nationhood, which must never be torn asunder.

In accordance with the principle of institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions, we shall uphold the Bangsamoro identity. We shall uphold the Bangsamoro cultural rights and way of life, as well as the rights to socio-economic development and ancestral domain.

The Philippine sultanates are cherished historical institutions that must be upheld and celebrated as part of our historical realm.

The Sultanate of Sulu, for instance, was recognized by our neighboring countries with which it maintained vibrant trade and social relations.

You, the sultans, are our temporal and spiritual leaders. Although the Philippine Constitution has replaced the Sultanate System with the republican form of government, our Muslim brothers continue to identify themselves with the sultans as a matter of tradition. Afterall, even in Europe where many kingdoms have been replaced by a republic, the aristocracy, the nobility is still recognized not necessarily constitutionally or officially but culturally and traditionally.

For instance, Italy is a republic but we still call many of its aristocrats “Count so and so” and so on, because we continue in our different cultures to respect our ancient traditions. But we must remember not to go to the extreme, because at the extreme some of our Muslim brothers have such strong loyalties to their families, their clans, their ethnic communities or even their sultanates, if you will, that they sometimes forget that they are Filipinos too, and, that they must belong to one nation and one sovereignty.

I am very happy that in the earlier remarks I heard in this hall, the sultans all recognized that the sultanates are a wonderful tradition and your aristocratic place in our society is still there — you are all part of one Philippine Republic.

Today, our sultanates must be at the vanguard of peace and development in Mindanao.

I ask you, the sultans, to add your own fine stone to the building of a strong republic.

Sometimes I hear my critics say, “Oh, she is doing this, she is doing that. It’s like this, it’s like that. But, why is she bragging that we have a strong republic.” I have never bragged that we have a strong republic. What I have said is that, we must recognize the need to build a strong republic. And by your being here, I take it to mean that you are willing to contribute the fine stone of the sultanates to that edifice that is the strong republic for the Philippines for the 21st century.

I have said it time and again that unless we, as a people, come to terms with Mindanao, we will never attain our full promise as a nation.

Muslim Mindanao for so many years suffered economic exclusion and this has led to severe deprivation and conflict. It is time for us to share common goals and aspirations.

As a final note, therefore, if we are to share common goals and aspirations, let me reiterate the principles that define my Mindanao policy:

The first principle is that our ultimate objective should be both peace and development;

Second, our framework for peace and development must be based on constitutionality, national sovereignty and territorial integrity;

Third, our society is a multi-ethnic society, and we must recognize that, one which should be founded on social justice for all and the institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions.

To these three fundamental principles of peace and development going together, of constitutional integrity, and of multi-ethnicity of our society, we add a fourth that is so relevant to the challenges of our times. And this fourth principle is that — we unconditionally reject terrorism as a universal scourge of all nations and creeds.

You and I are part of this mandate to build a strong republic. And I am very happy that you're all here noblemen and noblewomen of our noble race, our noble multi-ethnic race. May your presence, may your coming together bring about a stronger partnership between the great civilizations that are all part of one great Philippine nation.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Visayan Region Conference of the League of Municipalities of the Philippines

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Visayan Region Conference of the League of Municipalities of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Pacific Ballroom, Pan Pacific Hotel, Adriatico St., Malate, Manila, August 29, 2003]

Thank you very much, Secretary Joey Lina.

Distinguished officers and members of the league of municipalities of the Philippines headed by your national president, Monching Guico; Mayor Martinez; Mayor Nacario; Mayor Sanchez — wala dito? — Mayor Adame and Mayor Mayor.

Mike Defensor, thank you, for once again surpassing your target with this Memorandum of Understanding. Congratulations also to the rest of the HUDCC family. And Jolly Benitez, the president of the Manila Building and Loan Association, thank you for this MOU. To all of you, mayors of the Visayas, tanang mga Cebuano, maayong buntag kaninyong tanan. Mga Ilonggo, maayo nga — ay, dili na pud buntag, hapon na diay, hapon na diay — maayong hapon kaninyong tanan. Sa aton mga Ilonggo, tanang mga Ilonggo, maayong hapon sa inyo nga tanan. And maupay nga kulo ha mga Waray-Waray. And to everybody else, good afternoon.

This is our second major island conference — tapos na ‘yung Mindanao, ‘di ba Monching? Nalipay ko nga ani kamo dinhi. Nalipay gid ako nga nag-kaari kamo diri sa mga Ilonggo.

And you are here and I’m glad that you are here. Let there be no doubt about our commitment to good governance. Because of your good work in the countryside, our domestic demand has been resilient and that is why the economy has fared relatively well. Thank you for your work. The economy has fared relatively well comparing ourselves to our neighboring economies and trading partners considering the external shocks we have had to impose to keep the deficit at acceptable levels. The cabinet is meeting today to look at areas where productivity can be further increased and where more spending could be applied to fuel growth. At this point, we are concerned about destabilization and excessive partisanship which are prejudicing investments and jobs. I call upon you, especially the members of the opposition who are still loyal to the democratic system, to correct their colleagues who are obviously out of line. Yes, we need an opposition, but we need a principled, constructive opposition that can effectively fiscalize government — not a bunch of destabilizers and demagogues. We need unity in democracy despite a diversity of platforms.

But I’m glad that all the rattle and roll of controversy has not affected our solidarity as leaders of the people, especially among you, the mayors of the Visayas.

With mayors like you, the destabilizers will never succeed because the people are behind the Constitution and their leaders; the governors and the mayors are behind the Constitution and the rule of law. I thank you therefore not only for keeping our economy afloat in this difficult times for the world environment but also for keeping our democracy safe.

Let us move on to the more pressing duties of governance and leave to the proper judicial authorities the task of dealing with these barnacles on the ship of state.

We are not engaged in a family witch hunt. Evidence has been introduced in the Department of Justice, transparently and without malice. There is a process defined by law for determining the veracity of facts. Let us submit ourselves to the system of justice and not cry oppression at every turn.

Let's not be distracted by the greater war, the war against poverty.

Though our economy has been faring relatively well, compared to our neighbors and trading partners. The one that only did very clearly better than us was china. Our GNP growth rate is comparable to Malaysia and Indonesia. We've fared better than strong economies like Singapore, South Korea, Taiwan. Nonetheless, I must sound the alarm on threats to our economic life represented by the deterioration of the exchange rates, the recent increases in gasoline prices, the slowdown in tourism and investments due to the Makati disturbance, and the continued difficulties of our major partners.

By the way let me say that though there is a slowdown in tourism, this slowdown has been to a large part mitigated by our strong domestic demand, in this hotel, and I thank you for that.

Those who went to the Puerto Princesa BIMP-EAGA games — that's not the Visayas — told me that the hotels there are fully booked. The other day, I was with the baseball and softball team of Paglaum National High School in Bacolod, and they tell me that Bacolod hotels are fully booked. In Boracay because of our national highway, our nautical highway, it's so full, it's over... The carrying capacity is so stretched that I was suggesting San Jose in Romblon, which is only a half-hour banca ride from Boracay, should be a spillover for the Boracay tourism. Nonetheless, it could have been much better if we did not have that Oakwood mutiny. If we did not have these destabilizers.

There are only three issues occupying here at this time. These are: first, the economy; second, the economy; third, the economy. Other controversies are not helping our people secure their livelihood and income in a difficult economic environment. And I as president will not be distracted by circus acts, as it is more important to help people get jobs, earn income, buy affordable goods, and meet the needs of their families. These are what people expect of their government; these are what people expect of their president; these are what people expect of their mayors. That's why, let's pool our ideas and our energies, or one thing, get rid of the turf mentality because only through our seamless coordination and unified action can we conquer the social menace of poverty.

Well, I'm glad and I thank Joey for calling me the most LGU-friendly president. I have supported the noble initiatives of our local governments to the best that our resources can provide. I've kept my promise to you to keep your internal revenue allotments intact, including the LGSEF that I inherited of 2001. Last night, I instructed DBM to release the last 3 billion pesos from that fund. I will not hold back on my support for you because you are the frontlines of governance.

In turn, I expect your loyalty — not to me but to your oath — to serve the people, to uphold our constitution and the rule of law, to spurn anarchists and destabilizers.

Good governance rests upon political will, action, integrity. I hope that the resolutions you've drawn up in the past two days will be founded on these imperatives.

So, I thank you once again, mayors of the Visayas for your contribution to our economy, to our Constitution. Mabuhí ang ating mga mayor sa Visayas! Hina-ot pa unta nga labaw nga maayo ang inyong pagpamuno aron dali naton madangtan ang atong damgo nga makusog nga republikang Pilipino.

Damo gid nga salamat sa inyo nga tanan.

Speech of President Arroyo during the ceremonial signing into law of the Act Rationalizing the Excise Tax on Automobiles and the Philippine Citizenship Retention and Reacquisition Act of 2003

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the ceremonial signing into law of the Act Rationalizing the Excise Tax on Automobiles and the Philippine Citizenship Retention and Reacquisition Act of 2003

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, August 29, 2003]

Thank you, Secretary Claudio.

Senate President Drilon, Principal author and pusher of the Dual Citizenship Law; Speaker De Venecia, main pusher of the Overseas Voting Law; Senator Recto; Senator Pimentel; Senator Sotto; members of the House of Representatives: Congressman Ledesma, Congressman Libanan, Congressman Escudero, Congressman Lozada, Congressman Rodriguez, Congressman Locsin, Congressman Defensor, Congressman Bueser, Congressman Garcia, Congressman Umali, Congressman Villareal, Congressman Uy, Congressman Syjuco, Congressman Javier, Congressman Puentevella, Congresswoman Rosales, Congressman Espina, Congressman Pilando, Congressman Ablan; Solicitor General Benipayo; Immigration Commissioner Domingo; Secretary Camacho; Secretary Bunye; Secretary Alvarez; Congresswoman Castillo — ay, sorry. You are in the middle of the second row. Sorry about that — distinguished guests; Overseas Filipinos; members of the automotive industry; ladies and gentlemen:

I thank both the leaders and members of Congress, especially Senate President Drilon and Speaker de Venecia, for your excellent work in passing two landmark legislation pieces.

These two laws are a silver lining in the horizon, coming after the solid although subdued growth figures announced yesterday. Figures that were better than many of our neighboring countries and trading partners figures. I think that with the figures announced yesterday and the laws signed today, we are ready for that good road to normalcy after weeks of controversy.

The call for a Snap Election is desperate and absurd. The people are tired of poison politics. We put a halt to the Oakwood mutiny in one day and consolidated the armed forces in less than a month. The economy is humming comparatively well when compared to other countries in the region, other economies in the region and our trading partners. The government's satisfaction ratings are good and steady. We have firm political stability driven by working criminal justice despite the machinations of a few disgruntled leaders who have become increasingly disloyal to democracy. What the people want is a stop to politicking, especially poison politicking and destabilization, not a snap election.

What the people want from the executive is the enforcement of law; what the people want from Congress is legislation. And I am thankful therefore to congress for producing these two vital pieces of legislation.

The Dual Citizenship Act is the twin of the Absentee Voting Law — that's why I mentioned Joe as the pusher of the Absentee Voting Law. It is also a lynchpin, therefore, as a twin act of our electoral reforms. We will also work on these electoral reforms domestically by pushing the gains we have made in the computerization of the 2004 elections, which is already pressing forward in good pace.

The passage of the bill is also a response to globalization as much as it is a response to the strong homing instinct of every Filipino after a long sojourn in a foreign land.

This law will foster unity among Filipinos here and abroad.

The international trend is clearly towards increasing the number of dual citizens. And we know that the majority of the Filipinos who migrated abroad did so for better opportunities, but they continue their allegiance to the Philippines. This continued allegiance is demonstrated by their maintaining contacts and interests in their homeland, and by their intention to retire, own properties and invest their hard-earned money in the country.

Our overseas workers have become a powerful force, not only in the economies in which they work and live, but in our economy. In fact, it is to them once again that we call on. We call on the families of our overseas workers to exchange their dollars in the banks so that we can all help to strengthen the peso.

Strengthening the peso is part of strengthening the economy. So is the Automobile Excise Tax. The Automobile Excise Tax Reform measure symbolizes our political will in making the tax system work. Now, there will be no more circumvention of rules as in the past.

We have a law that is a disincentive to tax evasion and smuggling. This will improve the prospects of global automotive manufacturers to invest and set up operations in the country.

Earlier, I failed to recognize the presence of Tony Bernardo – because his boss is already here — but I think he is here because he is a most happy man because of the excise tax law.

On the part of the government, therefore, we see a revenue increase.

These two pieces of legislation — the excise tax on motor vehicles and the Dual Citizenship Law — are consistent with our national goals of creating a more favorable environment for business and accelerating our country's development.

I would like the prophets of gloom and doom to take notice of this day, as Congress joins us in a testament to our bright future.

This is a day to celebrate. Not only to celebrate two new laws, it is a day to celebrate the unity and hope of Filipinos all over the world. It is a day to celebrate the unity and hope of Filipinos also right here in the Philippines.

Thank you and congratulations!

Speech of President Arroyo during the Clark Field Centennial Celebration

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Clark Field Centennial Celebration

[Delivered at the Departure Area, Diosdado Macapagal International Airport, Clark Field, Angeles City, Pampanga, September 1, 2003]

Thank you, Secretary Romulo. Executive Secretary and Son of Tarlac, where part of Clark is located.

Clark Development Corporation Chairman Navarro; Clark Development Corporation President, Manny Angeles; Ambassador Ricciardone, representing our partner in Clark since 1903; Ambassador Takano, representing the government that has assisted so much in the development of Central Luzon and continues to assist. Quekatang Governor Queti Queng Pampanga, Governor Manuel Lapid. I have the name of Governor Yap here but I don't see him. I think we should invite him to the front if he's here. What happen to our protocol officers?

I'd like to greet also our congressmen. The congressmen I see here are Rimpay Bondoc, who's been with me since this morning, and Oca Rodriguez. We have the mayor of Angeles City, where Clark is located, Mayor Tarzan Lazatin. We have several members of the Cabinet. And I'll not mention all of them because they are all interspersed here. Except or aside from Secretary Romulo, Secretary of Transportation and Communication, Larry Mendoza. I mention him here because I am putting the airport under the policy supervision of the Department of Transportation and Communication.

I'd like to greet all of the officers and rank and file, both of Clark Development Corporation and the Clark Airport Corporation, and whatever is that new entity that is now the result of the combination and the merger of NAIA and Clark Airport Corporation so that we can move this project forward; distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen.

We have heard the story of Clark from two points of view: Manny Angeles from the Philippine point of view; Ambassador Ricciardone from the American point of view.

Indeed, over a century, Clark has been a symbol of historical ideals. It was the largest American base outside of the United States. Larger than port of the then Pearl Harbor, at a time when our mutual security was defined by the challenges of the Cold War. Now, it has become a bastion of enterprise and development, a base for poverty alleviation, a hub of national progress.

On both counts — security and development — Clark stands for democracy and human liberation.

Today is a good time to remind our people to cast away their nagging fears and refocus their energies upon our primary goal — economic progress and the eradication of poverty — and not allow these to be sidetracked by the posturings and sinister attempts to grab power by the few and desperate.

I urge every citizen to remain calm but vigilant and thwart any attempts to further destabilize our nation by the desperate, again, and the few.

The palace is out of the issue on political exposes. The senate hearing is coming up and the evidence will speak for itself. Let the truth prevail and let the axe fall where it may.

The call for unity against terrorism with our Asian counterparts is but timely and pressing. To forge a strategic link-up to stop the spread of terrorist cells linked to Al-Qaeda and Jemaah Islamiyah is crucial and pushing for a common peace and development agenda in the region. The branching of these terrorist groups in South Asia and Southeast Asia must be dealt with on a sustained, collective basis. Nations and peoples must form a solid front to track down terrorists across frontiers.

The economy is doing relatively well — 4.5 percent GNP growth rate for the second quarter. As far as I have seen in official statistics has only been surpassed by China and Malaysia. They're the only ones I have seen on official statistics that have a better second quarter GNP growth rate than ours. The so-called instability is only noise on the surface. Underneath, our nation is secure in its moorings, upheld by constitutional order and driven by a strong spirit of enterprise that we see here in Clark economic zone. With calm vigilance, the few and desperate destabilizers cannot beat our political and economic fundamentals. With calm and vigilance from you, our leaders and citizens, we shall weather the storm and bring back the good weather to the excellence and resilience of the Filipino.

This area is a great example of Philippine competitiveness. The area's competitive advantage is the 2,500 hectares spread serviced by a world-class airport with 23.2 kilometer parallel runways.

Over a year ago, I declared the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport as the alternate international airport to NAIA to decongest air traffic in Metro Manila.

I was disappointed that after a year the planes are not yet coming here. That is why I have decided that on the 100th anniversary of Clark, we will use this occasion to reinforce that declaration with money following where we have declared.

That is why I forced through the signing of a Memorandum of Agreement between the Clark Development Corporation and the Manila Airport Authority for the Development, operation and management of this airport. Otherwise, there will be no incentive to send planes going to Manila to Clark instead. This agreement means we can start mobilizing more funds for the development of Clark International Airport.

I thank the Clark Development Authority because, so far, since I made my declaration last year, they have spent 250 million pesos to fix the runway so that it will comply with the world-class standards of U.P.S. I thank them, too because they have laid aside 11 million dollars to upgrade the radar system. But that is to meet the cargo requirements. And I think, Queng Capampangan... You know, when Manny Angeles said, I'm the President that has visited Clark most often, siyempre kapampangan ako eh. Siyempre it's my home province and all. Anyway, but because I am Kapampangan I know that as long as it is only cargo planes coming here, it's not yet an international airport. We've got to see the passenger planes coming here from other countries and going to other countries.

And that's why I talked to Larry Mendoza. I said, "Larry, how can we make the passenger planes go there?" And he said, "well, you got to give me some policy control over that area so I can make it happen." And that is what we're making happen. With this memorandum of agreement, therefore, we can allocate part of the income of NAIA to the development requirements of Clark International Airport or the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport.

And as a start, they are setting aside 100 million pesos for the upgrading of this airport. Where will they spend the 100 million pesos? They will spend for infrastructure development like the apron construction. They will spend for the widening of the taxi way. They will spend for the procurement of the ramp bus. They will spend for the procurement of additional x-ray machines to handle bigger luggages, because what airline will come here if their passengers will wait while we're having a manual inspection of their luggage.

We have to make this terminal world-class in services as well. And we have to do that. And that is what NAIA will do to the DMIA. Also, we are making arrangements for passenger airline to start coming here. On my dad's birthday, September 28, Asiana airlines will be coming here. And during this month, too, we are arranging that the airlines bringing OFWs from the Middle East where the passengers are coming from north of the Philippines will be landing in Clark rather than in NAIA.

You see NAIA can direct them there now as part of the control because it has now one entity. And therefore, we hope that these airlines will begin to see and get used to this beautiful runway, and what should be a beautiful but also very convenient international terminal.

As another special gift to the people of Clark field and Pampanga, the reason why I was with Rimpay Bondoc this morning is that we were in his district where we inaugurated earlier today the new Candaba-San Simon segment of the North Luzon Expressway.

This brings Clark closer to metro Manila because it will cut traffic by 30 minutes going from Quezon City to Clark. Travel time from Balintawak to Clark and even up to Sta. Ines will become considerably reduced and made more comfortable with this improved road and the addition of 132 kilometers of additional lanes along the north expressway. The comfort and convenience provided by these road improvements especially when the electronic toll system shall be completed will soon be seen.

The sustained development of Clark field and the North Expressway, the development of the airport are all a plan to make our province of Pampanga truly an important hub of development that it deserves to be.

Earlier, Rene Diaz, presidential assistant for North Luzon, pointed out to me that in this trip we are launching the three ways — the three modes of transport to make Clark closer to Metro Manila.

This morning was the road. The road that cuts by 30 minutes travel time from Metro Manila to Clark. Now, we are launching the takeover by a new entity, an entity combining NAIA and CIAC into a pool that will improve and manage this airport that will launch the air transport to Clark. And tomorrow, I will be going home from Central Luzon via a new roll on/roll-off ferry from Bataan to North Harbor or South Harbor in Metro Manila. That way, you will have a choice of how to come to our beautiful province by land, by air, by sea.

And, of course, within our province, I hope we've also seen how we have decongested travel along the Olongapo-Gapan road we have built in record time, instant, an overpass. And we are... And then on the side road in a... On the ultimate road that Olongapo-Gapan road, the old highway, the Gugu bridge has already been built. And Rimpay tells me that the improvement of McArthur highway, that I ordered the last time I was here, along San Simon, is now making the traffic also in McArthur highway much, much lighter.

All of these are part of what we are doing, not only because of the good of Pampanga but also because we want to decongest metro Manila. This is one of the primary programs that I announced way back in 2001. I said that we must decongest Metro Manila not only by improving traffic within Metro Manila through a system of the rapid transit that will go all around Metro Manila in an uninterrupted circle, but also by making Metro Manila Mega Manila instead. Moving up north to Clark-Subic and moving down South to CALABARZON and Batangas Port.

This way we have Mega Manila because development naturally is coming to Pampanga, to CALABARZON, we have to make that development convenient and we have to make it easy for people to live in Metro Manila, in Pampanga, in Bulacan, in Laguna, in Batangas. They must be able to live anywhere there and work anywhere there because that is the way we can make this corridor, this heartland of the Philippines one economic whole. That is what we are celebrating today.

And I am very glad to see all of these so many years after the devastation of our province from the eruption of Mount Pinatubo. At that time, for a moment, we were in despair but not for long. We soon recovered, and while notwithstanding Pinatubo, Pampanga has always remained, never left being top, one of the top 10 provinces in the country.

Today, more than a decade later, we continue to be up there. We continue to support business but also we continue to take care of those who, of course, still are victimized by the problems of Pinatubo. One of the problems that prevents people from returning to their own home barangays even though that they are safe is that the landscape has changed. There are rivers where there were none and there are no more rivers where there used to be. So not everybody knows where his land really is located. One of the things that we are doing is to spend on the Cadastral survey so that everyone can know where he can go back home to.

I hope that if all of these things that we are doing, Pampanga will continue to be a leader in our economic development. After all, Pampanga has been one of the original eight provinces that fought for our independence.

Pampanga has been the home of two presidents. Pampanga has been and Central Luzon have been the home of the most important bases in our country. They have been the symbol of friendship between the United States and the Philippines. And Pampanga has been a favorite for our official development assistance partners to put their money in because it is well worth spending.

I am very grateful that 100 years after Clark was established, we are poised for greater development in Pampanga, Central Luzon, Mega Manila, the whole Philippines in the 21st century.

Happy centennial to all of us here in Clark.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 107th Commemoration of “Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija” and Graduation Ceremonies of Barangay Tanods

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 107th Commemoration of “Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija” and Graduation Ceremonies of Barangay Tanods

[Delivered at the Provincial Capitol Grounds, Palayan City, Nueva Ecija, September 2, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Kalihim Joey Lina. Anak ng Licab, Nueva Ecija. Hanggang ngayon ang tatay n’ya ay nakalibing sa Licab. Salamat sa iyong magandang tula at salamat sa iyong pagpaalala sa akin ayon doon sa sinabi ni Governor Tommy Joson na mas maraming magagawa kung mas maraming maitutulong. Sabi ni Joey Lina sa akin, ipaalala n’yo na ‘yung kanilang IRA ay buong-buong binibigay sa buong ating administrasyon. Hindi lamang ‘yung IRA ninyo, pati ‘yung irang utang ng nakaraang administrasyon ay binabayad pa rin sa inyo. Kasama na ‘yung winidhold sa inyo na tinatawag na LGSEF. ‘Yung tatlong bilyong naiwan na LGSEF ay inatasan ko nang i-release ng Department of Budget and Management.

Nagpapasalamat ako kay Governor Tommy Joson sa pag-imbita n’ya muli sa akin dito sa “Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija.” Ako ay nagpapasalamat na parati n’yang iniimbita ako dito sa Nueva Ecija. Isang senyal ng pagsusuporta ng pamumuno at taong bayan ng Nueva Ecija sa administrasyon ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Gusto kong batiin — kahit kasama ko sila — so, binabati ko yung kasama ko, si Secretary Richard Gordon. Siya ho ay narito hindi lamang bilang kalihim ng turismo kung hindi na rin dahil siya ang Cabinet Officer for Regional Development ng Nueva Ecija. Ibig sabihin noon, bukod sa mga kalihim ng mga kagawarang may kinalaman sa mga problema ninyo, pwede pa rin kayong kumuha ng tulong, doble, kay Secretary Richard Gordon.

Ako ay binabati ko rin kayong lahat mga taga-palayan, bagong kapitolyo ng Nueva Ecija sa pamumuno ng aking pamangkin, ang mayor ng Palayan City, si Lorelie Fajardo. At ang kanyang tatay, ang Member of the Board ng San Miguel Corporation, si Rico Fajardo. Alam naman ng maraming taga-Nueva Ecija na napakarami akong mga kamag-anak sa Nueva Ecija. May mga Macapagal na babae, walong magkapatid, babae sila lahat, isa lang ang lalaki. Nang lumipat sa Nueva Ecija mula sa Lubao, kaya maraming Macapagal dito bagamat hindi Macapagal ang family name nila dahil babae ang mga lola nila. Kaya ako ay maituturing bilang isang pinsan ng Nueva Ecija.

Gusto kong batiin si Secretary Obet Pagdanganan ng DAR. I mean binabati kayo, kasama ko. Si obet ay narito dahil siya naman ay pinsan ni Tommy Joson. Pinsan din namin, sabi ni Rico Fajardo. At hindi lang ‘yon dahil napakaraming proyekto ng DAR, foreign assisted project, ay linalagay dito sa lalawigan ng Nueva Ecija.

Gusto kong batiin... Ah, o ipakilala sa inyo si Secretary Milt Alingod. Siya ay tiga-Isabela naman. At narito dala-dala ko rin si Secretary Cito Lorenzo ng Agrikultura. Ang mensahe n’ya sa inyo ay ito: “sa lahat ng probinsiya ng pilipinas ang pinakamalaking tulong na nakuha sa agricultural technology ay walang iba kung hindi ang lalawigan ng Nueva Ecija.”

Binabati ko rin, anak ng Nueva Ecija, taga-Talavera, ang aking Presidential Assistant for North Luzon, si Secretary Rene Diaz; anak rin ng Nueva Ecija, taga-Cabyao, ang ating magaling na magaling na director ng NBI, ang kamandag ng mga pyramid scammers, si Director Reynaldo Wycoco; binabati ko ang Congressman from Maguindanao, si Congressman Digs Dilangalen. Bagamat siya ay taga-oposisyon, inaasahan ko na siya ay nabibilang sa mga oposisyong maka-demokrasya at sa hindi siya kabilang sa mga oposisyong maka-distabilisasyon.

Isa pang pinsan ng aking pinsan. Pinag-uusapan na rin natin na napakarami ang aking mga appointees, sabi ni Tommy Joson ay taga-Nueva Ecija. Ito pinsan ng aking pinsan, taga-General Tinio, ‘yung aking Senior Military Assistant or Senior Aide, si Commodore Abesamis. Siya 'yung kapalit ni General Boysie Braganza na dating senior aide ko, Senior Military Assistant, na ngayon naman ay namumuno ng 7th division. At alam naman natin na ang bahay ng 7th division ay dito sa Palayan, sa Nueva Ecija. At nagpapasalamat ako kay General Braganza na noong panahon noong July 27, kahit na isa na kawal o opisyal ay walang sumama sa coup d' etat mula sa 7th division. Siguro bahagi noon liderato ni General Braganza, bahagi rin dahil siguro marami sa mga taga-7th division ay taga-Nueva Ecija. Kaya salamat sa inyong pagtangkilik.

Gusto ko ring batiin ang — nabanggit ko nga si Congressman Dilangalen — meron din tayong Congresswoman mula sa Nueva Ecija na narito. Siya ay ang ating bagong Congresswoman. Siya ay member ng isang board ko bago siya naging congresswoman. Nagresign isang araw dahil nanalo 'yung kanyang kaso sa COMELEC, si Congresswoman Leonila Chavez.

Kayong mga punong lungsod at punong bayan ng Nueva Ecija, na marami sa inyo ay kakilala ko na at nabisita ko na kayo, mga kasapi ng Sangguniang Panlalawigan sa pamumuno ni Vice Governor Eduardo Joson IV, at mga barangay tanod na nagtapos ng pagsasanay. At binabati ko rin iyung kabalikat ni General Braganza sa kapayapaan ng Central Luzon, ang Regional Director ng Region III, si Regional Director BG — ang tawag sa kanya — Quirol. At narito ang aking kababayan naman — baka may dugong Nueva Ecija rin, pero alam ko kababayan ko siya sa Candaba — si Police Director Ramsey Ocampo.

Mga kaibigan, mga pinsan dito sa Nueva Ecija, una sa lahat, gusto ko magpasalamat sa inyo muli mga taga-Nueva Ecija sa pamumuno ni Governor Tommy Joson, sa parati kayong nag-iimbita sa aking dumalo sa pagdiriwang ng “Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija” o “Araw ng Nueva Ecija.”

Ilang beses na ako nagdalo sa araw ng Nueva Ecija. Naalala ko minsan mayron pa tayong reenactment noong sigaw ng Nueva Ecija. At mabuti naman, sabi ko nga sa mga ko, na pinagdiriwang natin ito dahil talagang maipagmamalaki ng Nueva Ecija na isa ito sa walong lalawigan na unang nag-aklas laban sa mga kastila. Kaya sa ating bandila walo 'yung rayas ng ating araw. Kinakatawan nito, sinasagisag 'yung walong unang probinsyang gumawa ng himagsikan na nagtagumpay kontra sa mga kastila. 'Yang walong 'yan kung minsan tinatanong ko sa mga tao, alam ba ninyo kung ano 'yung eight first provinces? Halos hindi na nila maalala kung ano 'yung walong 'yon. Ngunit dahil dito sa Nueva Ecija parati nating pinagdiriwang hindi natin nakakalimutan na ang Nueva Ecija ay isa sa mga dakilang walong probinsyang sumigaw.

At dito rin sa Nueva Ecija, alam ko, na talagang pinagmamalaki natin ang papel ng Nueva Ecijano sa kasaysayan ng paglaban para magkaroon tayo ng ating sariling republika. Hindi ba napakaraming bayan ng nueva ecija ay pinangalan sa mga heneral na gumawang matagumpay na himagsik.

Sa panahong ito, importante muli ang Nueva Ecija sa pagtatangol ng ating republika, mula sa ama ng lungsod na si Tommy Joson hanggang sa mga barangay tanod na palaging nagbabantay sa ating pamayanan, kailangan kayo sa pagtanggol ng ating Republika.

Si Tommy maraming nagagawa kontra sa... Lalo na kontra sa npa. Kasama pa nga si Tommy sa hit list ng mga NPA, 'di ba Tommy? Dahil matatag ang kanyang laban kontra sa mga gustong magbagsak sa ating Republika.

Kailangan talaga na tayo ay magsama-sama lalo na ang isang malaking probinsiya kagaya ng Nueva Ecija dahil kung may nanggugulo sa ating Republika apektado tayo lahat. Kaya kailangan, mga kababayan, lalung-lalo na ang mga tanod, nagtapos ng pagsasanay, ipagbigay alam ninyo sa mga awtoridad ang anumang impormasyon na inyong makakalap sa mga may balak mang-gulo lalo na tungkol doon sa mga may armas. Dahil sa gayon ay mahuli agad ang mga masasamang loob bago pa man nila maisagawa ang kanilang buktot na hangarin.

Sa mga barangay tanod na nagtatapos ngayon ng pagsasanay, binabati ko kayong lahat. Binabati ko ang palayan dahil sila ang unang nagkaroon ng pagsasanay. Ngayon, ay buong Nueva Ecija nagtatapos sa pagsasanay ng mga barangay tanod. Kung patuloy tayo magiging mapagmatyag sa mga salot na ito ng ating lipunan, magiging matahimik ang ating bayan.

I'm hopeful that the three weeks of hearings on the failed coup have shed light on its root causes and provocations. The findings of the Feliciano Commission will surely reinforce our consolidation measures in the armed forces, which are moving forward under combined force of justice and reforms. We must lend greater momentum to the speedy return of confidence in our political and economic stability. Enough of destabilization and strife. The energies of the nation must be refocused on the fundamental challenges of poverty, crime and terrorism.

I've called upon the officials and employees of the Defense Department to share obligations and responsibilities, implement important changes and be proactive. I aim to create an irreversible momentum of reforms to promote snappy performance, move logistics to the field, and reward courage and sacrifice. We shall push forward the institutional initiatives of Secretary Angelo Reyes. My priorities are: to reform the armed forces, push forward the peace process, and drive the anti poverty campaign. We must multiply our gains.

Mayroon tayong mahahalagang mga nagagawa dito sa Nueva Ecija para nga mamulaklak ang ating mga biyayang naibibigay sa taumbayan hindi lamang ng nueva ecija kundi sa pamamagitan ng Nueva Ecija sa buong Pilipinas.

Alam naman natin ang Nueva Ecija ang nagpapakain sa buong Pilipinas dahil sa malaking ani ng palay. Maraming mga pasilidad para sa pagpapa-unlad ng pagsasaka gaya ng agricultural center na isang pinuntahan ko dito para ma-inaugurate na nanggaling sa kagandahang loob ng China.

Sa okasyong ito, gusto ko ring ipahayag na nagsimula na ang bidding process, kaya malapit ng masimulan natin ang Cabanatuan bypass road. Itong bypass road ay bahagi ng Philippine-Japan Friendship Highway. Noong araw, walang budget cover ito. Hinanapan ko ng budget cover. Ito ay magmumula sa Plaridel, Bulacan hanggang Cabanatuan City. Kulang-kulang 20 kilometers ang haba nito at magkakaroon ng siyam na tulay. Hinanap ko ang budget para dito. Alam ninyo ba kung magkano ang budget na hinanap ko para sa inyo? Dalawang billion ang budget na nakalaan para dito.

At nalaman ko rin sa banda rito may mga nagtatanim ng sibuyas – nandito ba kayo, red onions? — nalaman ko na mayroon kayong daing tungkol sa pagdagsa ng red onions mula sa ibayong dagat. Bago pa man ako pumunta dito inimbestiga ko na ito. At ayon sa agahang imbestigasyon, ng mga taga-Malakanyang mismo imbestigador ko, konektado ito sa katiwalian sa sang kagawaran doon sa Department of Agriculture. Patunay na mayroon talagang problema. Sa likod ng problemang ito, 'yung isang kinatawan ng D.A., ng kagawarang agrikultura na tumutulong na maituwid itong problemang ito ay noong Sabado nakatanggap ng banta sa kanyang buhay noong nakaraang Sabado. Kaya malalim itong problemang ito. Hinaharap natin ito kaya sa bukod ng... Nandito si Cito Lorenzo para ipaalala na sa ating administrasyon pinakamalaking agrikulturang teknolohiyang tulong ang pumunta sa Nueva Ecija. Si Cito Lorenzo ang titiyak na siya mismo ang mag-aayos ng problema ng magsasaka ng red onions.

Umasa kayo na ang inyong pangulo kasama 'yung aking mga Cabinet members dito na either sila ay taga- Nueva Ecija o sila ay may malalaking tulong na ginagawa sa Nueva Ecija, laging nasa inyong tabi para suportahan kayo tungo sa lalong ikakatagumpay ng ating mga layunin para sa dakilang probinsyang Nueva Ecija, para sa ating importanteng rehiyon, para sa buong bansa.

Tuwing ako'y nagpupunta rito parati kong naalala 'yung pagmamahal ng aking tatay, ni President Diosdado Macapagal, at 'yung tatay ni Governor Tommy Josen. Sila ay parang magkapatid. At ako ay excited ako pumasok sa museum para makita 'yung mga retrato noong aming tatay na nagmamahal sa isa't-isa.

Si Governor Josen, tatay, ay una naging gobernador noong ang aking tatay ay kinuha siya noong 1959 para maging kandidato niya bilang gobernador. Oposisyon sila noon ngunit nagwagi at pagkatapos naging pangulo ang aking ama. Kaya naman kahit na sa... Mula noong 1989, maraming naabutan mga iba't-ibang lansangan ng pulitika ang mga Josen at saka ako. Eto magkasama tayo itong araw na ito, kasi hindi pa naman halalan. Dapat talaga ang iniisip natin pagkakaiisa, kaunlaran. Isa lang ang ating Republika. Kahit na marami tayong partido sa ating bansa isa lang ang ating Republika. Ang banta ngayon ay hindi banta ng pulitika, banta sa ating Republika. Magkaisa tayo sa kapayaapan at kaunlaran ng ating bansa.

Mithiin natin na maging matatag ang Republika. Mithiin natin na maunlad ang bayan. Mithiin natin na masaya at malaya ang ating mamamayan. Sama-sama tayo, magtulong-tulong para sa lubos na kaganapan ng mga mithiing ito.

Kaya mga pinsan, mga ka rehiyon, ka probinsiya, kababayan, binabati ko kayong lahat. Alalahanin natin ‘yung ipinaglaban ng mga ninuno natin sa unang sigaw ng Nueva Ecija. Tuloy tayong magtrabaho para matatag ang ating Republika alang-alang sa mga bayani ng unang sigaw ng Nueva Ecija.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 103rd anniversary celebration of the Philippine Civil Service

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 103rd anniversary celebration of the Philippine Civil Service

[Delivered at the 250th Fixed Wing Hangar, Villamor Airbase, Pasay City, September 3, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Chairperson Karina David.

Mga kalihim ng iba't-ibang kagawaran ng pamahalaan na pinangungunahan ng Kalihim Pangkalahatang Alberto Romulo.

Si General Abaya at lahat ng mga major service commanders at mga field commanders na narito, nakikiisa sa Serbisyo Sibil ng Pilipinas. Mga kawani ng ating pamahalaan, mga piling panauhin, Ambassador Maimunah Dato Elias of Brunei, mga minamahal kong kababayan.

Mga kawani ng Serbisyo Sibil, Happy Civil Service Month sa ating lahat. Ang laki-laki ng ating party. Maraming salamat at dumalo kayo at masaya kayo dito sa ating party. Naalala ko noong ako ay vice-president pa, ginawa n'yo akong guest of honor sa 100 Anniversary ng Civil Service. Ako 'yung pumunta doon sa inyo. Ngunit 100 anniversary 'yon pero ngayon 103rd lamang, mas masaya tayo itong araw na ito kesa noong 100 anniversary. Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat sa inyong sinsero at makabuluhang panunumpa kanina. Ngayon, at 'yung mga sinasabi kanina, makabuluhang panunumpa 'di lamang sa panguluhan kundi sa ating bansa at taongbayan.

Talagang kayo ang ating kabalikat, kayo ang ating pinaninindigan, kayo ang tumitindig, kayo ang burukrasya para sa demokrasya. Napakaganda — “burukrasya para sa demokrasya.” Kayo ang inaasahan ng ating taong-bayan.

Kakalapag ko lamang mula sa Brunei kaya pasensiya dito tayo, dito natin ginawa ang ating serbisyo sibil dahil kakalapag ko mula sa Brunei kung saan dumalo ako sa pulong ng Pacific Economic Cooperation Council, kasama ng aking mga kapwa pinuno ng mga Asean at iba pang karatig bansa.

My brief trip to Brunei was important to signal our firm commitment to regional integration and fair trade that are vital to jobs, investments and continuity of reform. Trabaho, pamumuhunan, pagpapanatili ng mga reporma ito ang ating prayoridad, tayong mga kawani ng serbisyo sibil. These are our priorities and we shall pursue them as we ward off destabilization attempts. We will ward off destabilization attempts through the unswerving pursuit of justice and political consolidation.

At nangunguna na nga sa ating political consolidation and serbisyo sibil. Alam n'yo, isangdaang libo mahigit ang ating mga sundalo. Ngunit ang ating serbisyo sibil, nasyonal at lokal ay dalawang milyon, kaya kayo ang pinakakailangan sa political consolidation para sa ating demokrasya. Kayo ay naglilingkod hindi lamang sa national government, naglilingkod ang mga serbisyo sibil sa mga local government. Kayo ay tumutulong hindi lamang sa mga patakarang pambansa, kayo ay tumutulong sa kaunlaran sa kanayunan.

I made a trip to Central Luzon yesterday. I saw the relentless spirit of enterprise and optimism among the people. 'Yung binabasa ko sa peryodiko lahat raw pessimistic. Eh pagpunta ko sa probinsya kahapon makalawa, optimistic ang tao, may inisyatibo. And their optimism and enterprise continues to push our nation forward, lalung-lalo na dahil naaasahan nila ang paglilingkod ng ating serbisyo sibil.

Dahil sa inyo, mga kawani ng ating serbisyo sibil, domestic and international confidence in our government is undiminished. There is no doubt that certain personalities are engaged in a continuous effort at destabilization obviously to escape the long hand of justice.

Ako'y nagpapasalamat na narito ang pamunuan ng Sandatahang Lakas ng Pilipinas dahil sila ay matatag. Attempts to buy loyalty within the armed forces have been monitored, combined with efforts to manipulate the media and project instability. But with our two million strong bureaucracy supporting democracy, destabilization plans are futile and these will fail as they have failed in the past dahil sa inyo.

Moreover, these attempts will fail because they will be rejected by the soldiers as well as by the people.

The major service and field commanders are here to express to us, to express to you that we — the government, the administration, the civil government— have the support of the Filipino soldier and we have the support of the Filipino people. The entire chain of command is behind us and there is no turning back from the tide of positive change whether in the military organization, in the civilian bureaucracy, and in the entire nation.

Nagpapasalamat ako na bahagi doon sa mga nagprisinta kanina ay 'yung kinatawan ng civilian employees ng Armed Forces of the Philippines, lalo na ngayon ako ay kasalukuyang Secretary of National Defense.

Upholding civilian supremacy and moving logistics to the field — these will be the principles of our rapid consolidation of the armed forces as we reinforce morale, discipline and professional loyalty in the command. I want to make it very clear during his term of two and a half years Secretary Angelo Reyes promoted these principles, and we shall continue and expand the excellent work that Angie Reyes did for the peace and security of our country. The march for reform will be decisive and irreversible.

Kayo ay narito, magkasama tayo, kinatawan ng serbisyo sibil, kinatawan ng Sandatahang Lakas ng Pilipinas, kinatawan ng taongbayan. Papano magwawagi ang distabilisasyon kung tayo ay magkasama, kung ang burukrasya ay para sa demokrasya.

The only revolution taking place in our country is the revolution in the promulgation of justice and in the upliftment of the poor. The revolution is not led by any military adventurists or any urban insurrectionists, the revolution is being led by the government, and we have no intention of stopping or turning back. The revolution is being implemented by our foot soldiers in the civil service. Mga kawani ng serbisyo sibil, salamat sa inyong tulong sa ating rebolusyon para sa katarungan at kaginhawahan ng mga mahihirap.

Katarungan at kaginhawahan ng mga mahihirap, ito ang tunay na pagtitiwala sa Pilipino. At kayo, mga kawani ng serbisyo sibil, ang nasa harap ng pambansang katatagan at kaunlaran.

Sa pagdiriwang natin ngayong setyembre ng buwan ng serbisyo sibil ng Pilipinas, binabati ko kayo, pinapasalamatan ko kayo, mga kawani ng pamahalaan, dahil pinili ninyo na maglingkod sa taongbayan, dahil sinusupporta ninyo ang aking administrasyon, dahil tinatangkilik ninyo ang konstitusyon, dahil pinagtatanggol ninyo ang pinakamataas na interes ng ating bansa. Maraming salamat sa inyo.

'Yung mga awards para sa Outstanding Civil Servant ay hindi natin gagawin ngayon. Part one pa lamang ito ng ating selebrasyon. Ang susunod ay September 19 kung saan maaanunsyo ang Outstanding Civil Servants for 2003. Hanggang sa araw na 'yon, mga kawani ng Serbisyo Sibil, maraming salamat dahil kayo ay burukrasya para sa demokrasya.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 15th General Meeting of the Pacific Economic Cooperation Council (PECC)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 15th General Meeting of the Pacific Economic Cooperation Council (PECC)

[Delivered at the International Convention Center (ICC) Negara Brunei Darussalam, September 3, 2003]

Thank you, Professor.

Pehin Dato Lim Jock Seng, Chairman of the PECC 15th General Meeting, Excellencies, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen.

I am grateful to His Majesty, the Sultan of Brunei for his hospitality and his invitation to be here today. And I congratulate Pehin Dato Lim Jock Seng on his leadership of the PECC.

I am glad that this meeting is being convened in Brunei Darussalam, the abode of peace.

Peace is the anti-thesis of terrorism. Terrorism is a very real threat for all nations. And our sympathies are with the Indonesian people and the families of those that suffered losses from the Marriot tragedy.

In our own nation in the Philippines and capital city of Manila, we want to be prudent. The police and armed forces remain on high alert and vigilant about security. At the same time, we continue to work with our Pacific and ASEAN allies to find terrorists and bring them to justice. Only by aggressively going after terrorists can the world feel safe from the heartache and tragedy they leave in their wake.

If peace is the antithesis of terrorism, peace is the twin of development. More than ever before, the building of peace and the pursuit of development require the close cooperation of government, business, and the academe. The PECC is a pioneer and exemplar of this approach.

A nation's security is determined by peace and order and a strong economy. Because of this, over the past two years, my administration has been aggressively putting in place economic reforms that are significantly improving the long-term prospects for the Philippines. We spent the first two years of my administration strengthening our macroeconomic fundamentals and it has paid off with consistent economic growth and low inflation. The deficit presented a challenge due to revenue collection deficiencies, but I am happy to say that reforms in that area and improved collection procedures have led to seven consecutive months of higher tax revenues.

Our focus on increasing revenues is centered around improving transparency, something that is taking place throughout our government. The passage of the Anti-Money Laundering Bill has gone a long way to increasing the transparency in the banking system. And in addition to making the tax system more transparent, we are making progress in other areas.

Continued growth, macroeconomic stability, revenue collection achievements and the passage of important legislative reforms as recently announced during the mid-year economic briefing are evidence that commitment to the economic roadmap is the right course to move the nation forward.

We are a nation rich in potential. Much of that potential is based on some of the best human resources to be found anywhere in the world. This is why international companies are investing in the Philippines in such areas as manufacturing, particularly in the electronics sector, and business process outsourcing.

Our path to competitive growth is focused on constantly rebuilding our economy. In that regard, the course of change for our nation is underway, and we have turned the corner.

The result: strong economic growth, lower inflation, fiscal restraint, increased tax revenues, and better governance, as evidenced by the fact that corrupt officials are being rooted out of our civil service and charged in our courts.

Intermingled with honest-to-goodness prosecution for graft are various allegations designed to be a distraction from addressing the real issues of real people like peace and the economy. However, let me be clear on all allegations justice will take its course.

I believe in appropriately pursuing all allegations in a responsible court of law and not manipulated by political opportunists in the court of public opinion. As for my priorities, I will not be distracted from the work of the people and will continue to focus on the job at hand and that is the economy and the peace.

There are those who want us to look back but we must forge ahead. It took hard work, reform and sacrifice to get us to the crossroads. Our economic fundamentals and our strong international standing as a nation speak volumes about the progress that we have made. Expect to see even more. The biggest frustration is always the pace but permanent change is within our grasp.

Our nation cannot afford to look back so the right thing for me to do is to be the force for change and make progress on both the peace and economic fronts as we have over the past two years — one step at a time. Our Armed Forces will be an important part of that process as they ensure our security.

I want to be a positive force for change to heal the deep divisions in my country. I get up every day and work hard to that end, just as I pray to God every day for a better, more progressive Philippines. I am working for even more progress going forward and I do not want to get drawn into political debates that divide our country rather than promote the unity that is so important for peace.

Democracy as we have seen around the world can get noisy at times but healthy debate should be the norm and Philippine democracy is no exception. That's why I am a champion of electoral reform. I want to ensure that every vote counts, that every election is honest, and every citizen feels empowered.

The building blocks for business and investment are in place and I am confident that our competitive position will be maintained. At the same time, nations throughout the world, nations throughout our region are creating the conditions for peace. I'm working with other heads of state to ensure continued cooperation in our battle to rid Southeast Asia of the threat of terrorism.

With the efforts of many, and goodwill on all sides in the conflict, I am confident that the lasting peace can be achieved for the good of everyone in Southern Philippines.

We are creating the conditions for peace on several fronts. Firstly, I have been tough as nails in fighting the MILF and any other group that dares engage in violence against the Philippine people.

The recent mutiny of some junior military officers was short lived and had no popular support. It involved a small number of young soldiers and it ended without one bullet being fired. Without any property being destroyed, and all within some eighteen hours. These facts indicate our continuing search for peace and stability in our country.

The signal this ill-fated adventure sent is simple: there is unmistakable strength in the rule of law, respect for our democratic form of government and protection for the rights of the people. The more light that is shed on this incident the better off the nation will be. That's why I formed an independent commission to provide a thorough, unbiased and non-political examination of the situation. Any grievance by the officers involved if proven legitimate and if proven true will be subject to appropriate action by the military and civilian courts.

I consider mutiny of any kind by soldiers for any reason unacceptable but I also recognize that there are those in our society who choose to foster their own misguided agenda and lead soldiers astray, away from their service of keeping the peace. Those responsible for promoting mutiny will be held accountable for their illegal actions in a court of law.

As President, I am proud of our achievements on both the peace and economic fronts. The nature of my job means that there will always be detractors and critics of my performance. The right thing for me to do is to continue to focus on the job at hand and be a positive force for change. And that is ensuring that we remain on the path of progress.

Our efforts to address the challenges in Southern Philippines are not confined to the battlefield. They are directed at pushing for peace and promoting the economic development that will make peace sustainable. I am working vigorously both in public diplomacy and behind the scenes for a proper peace with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front.

I believe that some kind of federal system for the Philippines could help to solve the problem of Islamic separatism in the south.

However, my main plan for Mindanao has been to create the conditions for peace. To show the people that they have an economic future, that their government will stand not for violence of any kind. That it is time for all sides to reach an equitable solution so that lives can be rebuilt.

Agriculture and fishing are important industries in Mindanao. In our efforts to find markets for exports from that region are yielding results. Food exports, for example, are among our strongest product gainers posting a 40% growth in the first quarter of this year. Our bilateral and multilateral trade discussions are centered around ensuring that exports from Mindanao and other parts of the country have ease of entry and a level competitive playing field in markets around the world.

An important part of Mindanao's development is its linkage with contiguous areas of neighboring countries — Brunei Darussalam, Eastern Indonesia and East Malaysia. We're therefore pursuing with renewed vigor the promotion of the Brunei Darussalam-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East ASEAN growth area.

As developed and developing countries alike are aware, the benefits of globalization and trade are not all apparent. They're not even all positive. This poses a problem in a democracy like the Philippines. As the Philippines comes down on the side of liberalized trade, we understand that at the same time, we must manage the transition well with our poor in order to gain their political support for additional political and economic reforms down the road. And that means a pragmatic, circumspect approach to liberalization.

We are committed to lifting our people out of poverty. We must put food on the table today, not promises. Our economic plan will get us there and our trade policy is an integral part of our growth plan. But our price in achieving this vision must be sustainable. Let there be no misunderstanding.

We are committed to being an active participant in the global economy but we are also committed to ensuring that we achieve this in a manner consistent with our own development priorities. I believe this is no different than the approach taken by many other developing and developed countries actively engaged in international trade.

For us and other developing countries, a major test for the success of the WTO negotiations is how they will fulfill the promise to open global markets for the products in which the developing countries have an advantage. This means breaking down and dissolving barriers to those products. Barriers like quotas, health and sanitary regulations, technical obstacles, and other clever tricks that developed countries use to beat down the competition from developing countries. Not least among these clever tricks are the massive subsidies given to developed-country agriculture with which, as a result, poor countries cannot hope to compete.

APEC is supposed to be the vanguard in the liberalization and facilitation of global trade and investment and in capacity-building for developing countries. PECC has always been a major pillar of APEC. PECC ought to exert its weight to ensure that globalization does not mean only opening the markets of the poor to the products of the rich.

After all, we stand the threshold of rapidly growing hopes and expectations. We are winning the peace in a larger scale among nations. We have a declaration on the conduct of parties in the South China Sea. We commend China for organizing the meeting of six states aimed at the peaceful resolution of the situation in the Korean peninsula.

The SARS is behind us, and Iraq is gearing for broader multilateral engagement under the auspices of the U.N. we have to move forward.

All nations teaming up for peace and development must be our abiding vision. It must be the vision of PECC for the 21st century.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo on Championing the Cause of Peace in Asia

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On Championing the Cause of Peace in Asia

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, September 3, 2003]

CHAMPIONING THE CAUSE OF PEACE IN ASIA

Many events over the past year have put our shared dream of lasting peace under threat. This makes us realize how truly important our tasks are, and how much remains to be done.

I've just returned from attending the Pacific Economic Cooperation Council Meeting in Brunei this morning. I was there only for a few hours so that I could be back here to be able to host this dinner for you tonight.

Just the other day, I attended the Ramon Magsaysay Awards Ceremonies that conferred recognition to aspiring Asians in various fields of human endeavor.

These twin events converge with this gathering as a celebration of the excellence and the spirit of Asia, and of the great progress of which we are capable — in waging peace, in gaining prosperity for our peoples.

This year you have gathered with the dream of making the 21st century — as Speaker de Venecia said, “a century of peace” — and armed with the determination to make that dream a reality. Peace is something that no nation can achieve alone. Thinking of peace, without thinking globally, is like refusing to help pull the oars to push the ship forward. The quest of peace must be undivided by territory, sovereignty or creed. Each one's struggle is everyone's own.

The most formidable challenges to peace are in Asia, Iraq and the Middle East, Afghanistan, the Korean Peninsula, South Asia and Southeast Asia. But the key to global peace also lies in our region, and in its governments, in parliaments, and peoples. History waits upon how we rise to these challenges.

The Philippines has worked hard for peace. We've sent a peacekeeping and humanitarian mission to Iraq to help hold the line of peace and order and engage in humanitarian endeavors.

We support the road map to peace in the Middle East. Propelled by the initiative of Speaker de Venecia, the Philippines is proposing the creation of an interfaith council as a regular organ of the United Nations, to mediate the dialogue of civilizations, the dialogue of cultures, the dialogue of religions. This was the offshoot of the first Asian gathering of Muslim ulamas and Christian bishops that the Philippines hosted last month.

Our government has initiated, with Indonesia and Malaysia, a tripartite agreement committed to practical measures against terrorism, an agreement to which other countries in Southeast Asia have since acceded in the name of regional peace. It is our responsibility to share in the work to put down the threat of terrorism once and for all because we realize that our national security is impossible without international security and vice versa.

In the same vein, our government continues to work for Peace in Mindanao, and I thank you, honorable leaders of the Asian parliaments, for your support. We work for this peace not solely through ceasefires and political accords, but hand in hand with economic and social development.

Peace in Mindanao and the welfare of our Muslim brethren are essential to the welfare of all Filipinos. Negotiations will soon start in Kuala Lumpur, towards a final peace agreement with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, and I thank once again Prime Minister Mahathir for his gracious support.

The United States has also committed to play a role, a leading role in post-conflict rehabilitation in Mindanao. We await the visit of President Bush next month as a milestone for peace in the region.

Across the world, as Speaker de Venecia said, the Government of Norway is also helping facilitate exploratory talks between the Philippines and the National Democratic Front.

My administration works for “positive peace,” a peace that emanates from addressing not just the obvious immediate causes of conflict, but by striking boldly at its roots — inequity, injustice, economic exclusion.

Three principles guide our peace process:

First, the peace process must reflect the sentiments, values and principles important to all Filipinos. Not the dictates of the government or of different minority interests, but the mandate of all Filipinos as one national community — under one Constitution, one flag, one sovereignty, one territorial integrity.

Second, a peaceful society is one that is just, equitable and pluralistic, where its citizens are free to express their beliefs through the exercise of constitutional rights and liberties in a multi-ethnic society.

And third, the peace process must aim for the principled and peaceful resolution of armed conflict, with neither blame nor surrender, but with dignity for all concerned.

Our principled peace is built upon reform, consensus-building, empowerment, just reconciliation, and preferential attention to the poor, because peace and development are twins of each other.

Our culture of peace incorporates the totality of environmental care and ecological sustainability; and the perspectives, expertise and rights of women and indigenous people.

The culture of peace extends to the infusion of ethical, moral and spiritual values in all levels of human interaction; the full accountability of governments; and the solidarity of all peoples, ethnic communities, states and international organizations.

Let me cite a little village called Barangay Inug-ug in the town of Pagalungan, in Maguindanao, in the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao. In that village, both Christians and Muslims, along with several non-governmental organizations and religious leaders, took the initiative to ask both the military and the rebels of the MILF to leave their community. The community is now a “sanctuary of peace,” by the will of the people and the Almighty.

We are all aware that peace is a long, complicated process that entails much more than just the laying down of arms and the silencing of guns. True and lasting peace — the peace that will last a hundred years that this assembly hopes for, and more — means that we have to create the space and the conditions for it to grow and to take root.

It is important to strike down terrorism, and it’s important to have those who would threaten our peace feel the full force of the law. But to decisively staunch bloodshed and defeat all kinds of violence, we must provide the people with the dignity that all human beings are entitled to. We must address the seeds of the hatred that spawns the recruits of evil.

We must fight poverty as relentlessly as we fight terrorism. “Peace is not the absence of war,” the philosopher Spinoza wrote, “it’s a virtue, a state of mind, a disposition for benevolence, confidence and justice.” He said that over four hundred years ago.

On that note, I thank you for being part of this assembly, for agreeing to work together with the Philippines and all the countries represented here today, and those others that may not be here but nevertheless share our grand vision.

There are many who would say that global peace is impossible to achieve within our lifetime. But even if we don't live to see that dream come true, then let that be our legacy to our children, who may yet within the century see the full blossom of our labors. Let our children and the rising generations know that we created for them the foundation for a true and lasting peace, the peace of a century and farther beyond.

"We must be the change we want to see in the world." That was said by a great Asian who also knew what it was to undertake the arduous work for peace, Mahatma Gandhi.

In this light, let's forge along the road towards a hundred years of peace.

Mabuhay kayong lahat!

Speech of President Arroyo during the awarding of the Certificates of Eligibility for Lot Allocation (CELA) to beneficiaries of Parola, Tondo

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the awarding of the Certificates of Eligibility for Lot Allocation (CELA) to beneficiaries of Parola, Tondo

[Delivered at Barangay 20, Zone 2, District I, Parola, Tondo, Manila, September 5, 2003]

Salamat. Salamat sa inyong pagbati.

At maraming salamat, Secretary Dinky Soliman sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin. Salamat rin Mayor Lito Atienza sa inyong pag fast-track nitong ating unang isang daang benepisyaryo ng ating papeles para sa katiyakan ng lupang tinitirikan sa Parola.

Congressman Bansai Nieva, salamat sa inyong panalangin. Kasama ko ang iba't-ibang mga opisyal ng gabinete na tumutulong sa akin sa pag-aalaga ng ating mga maralitang taga-lungsod, 'yung namumuno ng ating Komisyon Kontra sa Kahirapan, si Secretary Ging Dele;. 'Yung Kalihim ng mga Pahayagan, si Secretary Milton Alingod; si Secretary ng mga pangunahing programa ng pamahalaan at ang pag-aayos ng mga papeles ng tulong galing sa ibayong dagat, si Secretary Mai Jimenez; at 'yung inyong parating kabalik sa pang araw-araw na mga pangangailangan ng mga maralitang taga-lungsod, si Percy Chavez; narito rin, anak ng Maynila, tumutulong sa akin, Presidential Assistant sa mga Pabahay, si P.A. Nestor Ponce, dating Congressman; at 'yung nagpaliwanag sa atin kanina nitong kasaysayan na hangarin ninyong mahigit isang dekada na magkaroon ng katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan, ang director ng Natural Resources dito sa NCR, si Corazon Davis.

Salamat Barangay Captain Eli Salud sa maganda at mainit na pagtatanggap sa akin ng mga inyong kasamahan sa Barangay Parola. Ay, 'di pala Barangay Parola dahil de numero ang mga barangay ninyo, basta mga taga-Parola.

At ako naman, nagalak akong muling makasama kayo mga taga-Parola sa araw na ito dahil itong araw na ito hatid na naman natin mga benepisyo at serbisyo tutugon sa inyong pangunahing pangangailangan. Kasi naalala ko — ewan ko kung ilan sa inyo naalala pa ninyo — isang araw, bagong pangulo ako, biglang dumating ako, walang advanced notice, pumunta ako doon sa isang bahay doon, umupo — oo, naalala n'yo? O yeah, ikaw! Birthday mo noon, 'di ba? Birthday mo noon. Tapos sabi ko, “ano ba ang pangunahing pangangailangan ninyo dito? Sabi n'yo, “katiyakan ng lupang tinitirikan.” kaya 'yon ang ating hinahatid itong araw na ito. O Lucy, 'di ba? Ikaw, noon? Thank you, thank you. Birthday mo noon. Okey, o 'di meron nakang belated birthday present. Kasama ka pala sa isang daan. Very good.

Kaya naman sa tulong ninyo sana matigil na ang mga banta sa katiwasayan ng ating pamumuhay upang mabuhos natin ang ating oras sa atensiyon sa mga mabibigat na problemang apektado ang sambayanan, lalung-lalo na ang kahirapan, krimen, terorismo.

'Yung umanong kumplot ng destabilisasyon, o kung anong nalalabi d'yan, ay ampaw na kahon ng tsismis, malisyosong mensahe sa text, at maingay na propaganda.

Sa ingles, dahil meron tayong nasa audience nakikinig dito, the so-called destabilization plot, or what remains of it, is an empty shell of rumors, mischievous text messages and noisy propaganda. The conspiracy is still there. Nandoon pa rin 'yung conspirators, driven by raw ambitions of power of persons who want to evade justice. 'Yang mga nagkukumplot nandiyan pa rin. Dahil gusto nila na makaagaw ng kapangyarihan para makaiwas ng katarungan. But, lalo na sa inyong pakikiisa, the threat is being beaten and no amount of media play and intrigue can make it rise again.

Kahapon, nagkaroon ako ng aking unang command conference bilang Secretary ng National Defense. At 'yon ay isang makabuluhang pangyayari. 'Yung Chief of Staff nag ulat ng mga kasalukuyang pagtutupad sa lahat ng aking mga direktiba tungkol sa reporma at consolidation ng armed forces. Pitumpo at pitong officers ay nakalaya na mula sa kanilang preso. At 'yung mga sinampa sa kanilang kaso ay binawi na dahil napatunayan na sila ay inosente doon sa pangyayari sa Oakwood. Kaya tayo ay nagbibigay ng katarungan sa mga inosente. Ngunit pinakamatinding parusa ang naghihintay sa mga may sala. 'Yung pulis sa kanyang bahagi naman — ito, nandito si Colonel Jamias, 'yung isang binisita ko noon na hindi retrato ko ang nasa kanyang desk, pero ngayon andoon na. Ah 'yung boss niya, si Pete Bulaong, sinasagot siya.

'Yung PNP, si Pete, si Colonel Jamias, kahapon doon sa aking command conference ay nag-ulat ng napakamatinding mga tagumpay sa kampanya kontra sa droga, sa kalahati — no, sa ilan ba? — sa nakaraang dalawang buwan at kalahati. Alam n'yo, sa Philippine National Police, sa aking one billion na tinabi ko mula sa PCSO Lotto para sa paglaban sa droga, 100 million ang binigay sa pnp para sa gagamitin sa tatlong buwan. Dalawang buwan at kalahati, ang nagastos pa lamang nila tatlong milyon, meron pa silang nalalabing 70 million. Ngunit resulta ng kanilang gawain, dumoble na ang presyo ng shabu dahil ang supply ay hirap na hirap na. Kaya congratulations sa PNP sa magandang trabaho. Magandang trabaho, nakakaimpok pa ng pondo. Hindi ba 'yon ang huwarang naglilingkod sa ating bayan?

We're moving forward in the security and law enforcement fronts. And this is clearing the ground for sustained reforms. Kasi pag mapayapa ay mas lalong nagagawa natin, naasikaso natin ang pangmatagalang reporma. Sa kasalukuyan, ako ay direktang nag-aasikaso na may seguridad na ang inyong pasahe ay hindi tumataas. At inyong presyo ng pangunahing bilihin ninyo ay hindi tumataas kahit na tumataas ang presyo ng gasolina sa buong mundo. Kaya gusto ko lang ipahayag kay Secretary Lito Atienza na sa makalawa ako ay tatawag ng miting — ano ang sinabi ko, Secretary? — Mayor Lito Atienza, na sa makalawa ay tatawag ako ng miting ng Metro Manila Council kasama ng NEDA Executive Committee doon sa Metro Manila Development Authority para pag-usapan natin kung ano ang magagawa ng mga local government units para ma-isegurado na hindi tataas ang pasahe ng bus at jeepney na ginagamit ng ating mga mahihirap.

At dinadalas ko rin muli ang aking pagbibisita sa mga pamayanang maralitang taga-lungsod. Siyempre, babalik ako muli sa mga probinsiya to broaden our people's support for the big push forward. At hinihiling ko rin sa inyo na manatili sanang lubos ang inyong tiwala sa pamahalaan. Biro mo, sabi ni Corazon Davis, dekada mahigit ang inyong hangarin. Sabi ni Lito Atienza, ilang proklamasyon pero ngayon lang individual na papeles sa katiyakan ng lupang tinitirikan.

Ang patuloy na panggugulo ng mga grupong gustong siraan at ipabagsak ang pamahalaan ay malaking hadlang sa ating pagsisikap na matulungan ang mga kababayan nating mahihirap. Pero itong araw na ito, ganunpaman, dahil nasusugpo naman natin sa tulong ninyo 'yung mga gustong magdestabilize. Papano ninyo natutulungan na sugpuin 'yung gustong magdedestabilize, hindi ba kayo ang hinihingi nilang mag-people power kontra sa pamahalaan at hindi kayo pumapayag, maraming salamat. Dahil hindi kayo pumapayag na magamit ng mga ambisyoso sa kanilang hangaring umagaw ng kapangyarihan, naasikaso tuloy natin ang inyong mga pangangailangan. Kaya itong araw na ito, ano ang ating okasyon?

Ito meron tayong 100 na may tatak, sila ang unang makikinabang sa pagkakaloob natin ng certificate of eligibility for lot allocation itong araw na ito. Simula pa lamang ito, kasi itong 100 na ito sila ang unang natapos sa proseso, na ang laki ng tulong ni mayor atienza. Dahil itong unang 100 ay natapos na ang papeles pwede nang ibigay ang certificate, pwede nang ipamahagi ngayon. 'Yung iba, meron pang dalawang libo, na palagay ko sa mga gagawin natin simula ngayon ay matutupad sa loob ng tatlong buwan.

Ito ay bahagi ng pagtupad sa hangarin ng aking administrasyong magbigay ng seguridad sa lupa at ating layunin ay 150,000 families per year. Kaya sa dalawang taon ngayon ay nakakaabot na tayo ng ating nasabing bilang at halos tatlong daang libong pamilyang maralitang taga lungsod ang nabigyan na nang katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan.

Itong unang isang daan, 'yan ang huling hakbang para sa inyo ng prosesong nasimulaan noong gumawa ako ng proklamasyon sa Parola. At 'yung proklamasyon kong 'yon ay bahagi sa mahigit limampung mga proklamasyon na ang ilang lupaing pag-aari ng gobyerno na gamitin sa socialized housing ng mga pamilyang maralitang taga-lungsod.

Ngayon, bakit hindi lumalampas sa 300,000? O bakit ‘yung dalawang libo na mga kasama ninyo ay hindi pa natatapos ang papeles? Kasi dahil sa mga iba’t-ibang batas, ‘yung papeles sa iba’t-ibang ahensya ay kailangan kung tayo ay susulong mula sa proklamasyon hanggang sa titulo. Kaya mahirap, maraming papeles. Kaya gaya ng sabi ni Corazon Davis, ipinag-utos ko ang pagtatayo ng “One-Stop Shop Processing Center” sa higit dalawampung lugar ng maralitang taga-lungsod para mabilis ang asikaso ng papeles n’yo tungkol dito sa inyong pagpapatitulo.

Alam n’yo, ‘yung mga investor noong ako’y nasa DTI, naglagay ako ng one-stop shop center para sa mga investor, para hindi sila mainip pumunta sa napakaraming ahensya para sa papeles nila. ‘Yung mga maraming mga local government units kagaya ng Maynila, sa mga negosyanteng maraming lisensyang kailangan, naglalagay din ng one-stop shop center para hindi din sila maiinip pumunta sa iba’t-ibang ahensya. Eh kung ang serbisyo sa mayamang investor merong one-stop shop, dapat meron din para sa mga mahihirap. Kaya ngayon, meron na tayong one-stop shop center for the poor sa ganun sa inyong pagtititulo, sa inyong pagkuha ng sertipikado, sa inyong pagkuha ng papeles para tiyak kayo sa inyong lupang tinitirikan, hindi na kayo kailangan pumunta ahensya... Magpupunta sa ibat-ibang ahensya pa

Nag-eksperimento tayo nitong one-stop shop for the poor sa Barangay Escopa sa Cubao, sa Barangay Pineda sa Pasig, sa Barangay Sto. Niño sa Parañaque, sa Grace Park sa Caloocan. Itong araw na ito, malugod kong ibalita sa inyo ngayon na itatayo natin ang inyong one-stop shop center sa mahihirap sa tabi ng Delpan sports complex dito sa Binondo.

Kaya pagkatapos magbigay ng mga certificate dito sa 100, iniimbita ko ‘yung ibang 2,000 — hindi naman masyadong malayo — sumama kayo, punta kayo doon para makita n’yo kung papaano maayos ‘yung mga papeles ninyo na isang gusali na lang ang inyong pinupuntahan. At sa ganun, magkakaroon kayo ng mas maraming pagkakataon na gawin ‘yung inyong ibang trabaho at inyong hanapbuhay, kagaya ng emergency employment na pinahayag ni Mayor Lito Atienza.

Alam n’yo doon sa ibang lugar kung saan nakabigay na ako ng certificate of lot entitlement, nakakagulat. Sa sunod na pagbisita ko doon, gumaganda ang kanilang tahanan. Kasi kapag meron na kayong katiyakan at may papeles na kayo, mismong papeles ninyo ay nagagamit na ninyo, ‘di ba? Para humiram para sa negosyo, humiram para gumanda... Pagandahin ang bahay ninyo. ‘Yan ang tinatawag nating De Soto principle. Ako bilang ekonomista natuto ko ito sa mga karanasan sa ibang lugar lalo na sa South America kung saan marami ring mga squatter dati. Ngunit dahil doon sa De Soto principle ay kumonti na, halos wala ng squatter doon sa sariling bayan at ‘yan ang ating hangarin sa maralitang taga-lungsod.

Sana itong ating sinimula itong araw na ito sa Parola ay tuloy-tuloy at darating ang araw sana sa loob ng ating kabuhayan na masasabi n’yo na kayo ay hindi na squatter sa sariling bayan.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the awarding ceremonies for Outstanding Electric Cooperatives (ECs) and MOA signing on the merger of three Cebu Ecs

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the awarding ceremonies for Outstanding Electric Cooperatives (ECs) and MOA signing on the merger of three Cebu ECs

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, September 11, 2003]

Thank you very much, Secretary Vince Perez.

Congressman Kintanar, who is here to witness the merger of the three outstanding cooperatives in Cebu; Secretary Bunye; Father Silva; Sotero Gan, member of the NEA board; Mr. Villera, the awarded President of PHILRECA; APEC Party List Congressman Sonny Madamba; awardees of the outstanding cooperatives; friends from the rural electrification sector; DOE family, especially the 14,000 workers in the electric cooperatives who are listening to us all over the country at this very moment.

A year ago in this very hall, I promulgated Executive Order 119. It was a smaller group then. Now, I'm glad we have a big group representing the 119 electric cooperatives of the one-one that were affected by E.O. 119. Coincidence? No, I think it's providence. E.O. 119 condoned the 119 power cooperatives electrification loans amounting to some 18 billion pesos.

But that condonation was not unconditional. That condonation was conditional. I granted it but I return, I demanded better services, bold reforms and a permanent commitment to integrity.

Today, I was glad to hear the report of Father Silva that of the 119 subject of E.O. 119, 72 electric cooperatives have complied with my conditions. Congratulations then to these law abiding 72.

Another 23 partially complied with my list of required reforms, and to them, good luck! Congratulations and good luck on your continuing reforms.

Only 21 continued to show dismal performance, and you will have the special attention of Father Silva again.

Consistent with my earlier pronouncement last year therefore, let me make these announcements.

For the 72 cooperatives that showed substantial compliance. The reward is the following.

First, greater autonomy and empowerment. Which means less government regulations. At the same time, conducting and or support for access to private sector funds and assistance.

For the 23 that are on the borderline, a second assessment shall be done to determine whether or not given more assistance to improve their efficiency and reliability they can survive in an environment of domestic and global competition.

Now, as regards the cooperatives that miserably failed to achieve their targets, It would be the height of injustice to the others – the 78 and the 23 – to allow these 21 to continue subjecting their members to difficulty or distress. And that's why I said Father Silva will handle those in a very special way.

If we want to strengthen our Republic – and let me stress, I am not claiming we have a strong Republic. I'm saying we must strengthen our Republic – and if we are to strengthen our Republic, we must strengthen the institutions that provide basic services to our people. Now is the time for these 21 who have not complied. Now is the time to allow other players imbued with responsiveness and capability to step in and implement the needed reforms – bold and unprecedented no matter how unpleasant some of them may be.

I am therefore reiterating my directive to the NEA board of administrators, particularly Father Silva, to take the most viable on the options or alternatives in accordance with our regulatory framework, and within the bounds of law, rules and regulations to pursue viable solutions such as – though not limited to – merger or consolidation, joint ventures, investment management contracts or management takeovers.

After all, look at three outstanding cooperatives – Cebu. They're already very good and yet they have decided to go under joint management to become even better. What more those who continue to be inefficient.

We will not stop there. I'm also instruction the NEA to do the following:

Organization and promotion of watchdog committees composed of influential sectors in the local communities; institutionalization of its program on that compact of cooperation where good performing coops help the poorly-performing ones in all areas of operations. We did that – SAMSURECO helping Basilan, Cebu helping Aklan. And we have seen the results because some of them were those who received the awards today.

I'm also instructing NEA to undertake the brokering of financing from private lending agencies.

Public sector welfare if the ultimate measure of our performance, we will continue to aim for reliable power supply and affordable electric rates. Of course, to have reliable power supply and affordable electric rates, we must have a reduction of systems losses.

I am glad that the reforms in just one year alone have brought down the average systems loss from about 16 to 15, but 14 is the statutory cap. And therefore, I urge everyone including the "A" performing ones to improve even more to bring down the average on the systems losses.

These constitute bottom line reliable power supply, affordable cost and systems losses of no more than 14 percent. They make up the bottom line. And we must maintain this bottom line through excellence and performance.

That's why I congratulate the awardees of this year as well as the previous years especially who've gotten their hall of fame awards. For many of them especially the turnaround ones we have been involved or I've been aware of what has happened to them.

For instance, Boracay – the AKELCO. It was a painful decision for me because my political allies were at the shorter end of my instruction. But we had to have a management takeover and now they've received an award as one of the turnaround cooperatives.

When I was in Bohol, I witnessed the MOU for joint management. And now, they are again with their Hall of Fame Awards for Outstanding Management.

I mentioned Basilan complaining about fluctuations so frequent that in the squatter areas they had to have candles. And these candles – one of them fell from a table and caused a whole fire in a whole squatter area. And it was at that moment that I decided somebody must take over that electric cooperative.

SAMSURECO did and SAMSURECO is an outstanding cooperative, one of the awardees today.

I remember the phone calls about the crisis in Camarines Norte, and we had to make a decision. I called Father Silva. "take over," and now Camarines Norte is one of the turnaround awardees today.

Therefore, the political will that Vince talked about works. They were painful decisions, politically painful decisions sometimes, to do the take over or force merger. But they have worked. And as I said, even the best ones are merging management. May their example lead other electric cooperatives also to consider the greater efficiency that comes with merger and economies of scale.

You are immensely contributing to the arduous task of galvanizing rural communities and igniting enterprise in the countryside. You cannot have irrigation without electrification in the countryside. You cannot even have the modernization of elections without electrification in the countryside.

I am therefore instructing Secretary Vince Perez to meet with the officials of COMELEC to ask them what infrastructure support they would need from DOE, NEA and PHILRECA to make sure that computerization and modernization will be a reality in our rural polling places.

Jointly, indeed, the NEA and the electric cooperatives are among our dependable pillars of building a strong Republic. Together we have done so much in one year of E.O. 119.

Let us carry on and strengthen the institution of rural electrification.

Congratulations to all of you.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the MIAA sites Socialized Housing Project MOA signing and awarding of Certificates of Lot Occupancy to beneficiaries of Presidential Proclamation No. 391

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the MIAA sites Socialized Housing Project MOA signing and awarding of Certificates of Lot
Occupancy to beneficiaries of Presidential Proclamation No. 391

[Delivered at the Cuneta Astrodome, Pasay City, September 12, 2003]

Maraming salamat, kumareng Congresswoman Connie Dy sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin. At salamat dahil parati mo akong kinukulit para sa mga proklamasyon at para ‘yung mga proklamasyon ay mag-graduate hanggang sa pagbibigay mismo ng dokumento sa bawat pamilya.

Maraming salamat, Mayor Pewee Trinidad sa inyong suporta sa ginagawa ng ating administrasyon. Maraming salamat din Mike Defensor, at saka GM Ed Manda, at saka GM Pamintuan. Maraming salamat, USEC. Gerochi. At sana lahat ng mga papeles doon sa DENR, Dick sa iyo na lang namin ipa-follow-up. Siyempre, salamat kay Chairman Percy Chavez na parating tinatawag ko pag may problema ng demolition. Gusto kong ipakilala si Secretary Milt Alingod na irereport n’ya itong ating pangyayari ngayon. Saan si Milt? Ayun!!! Alam mo, si Milt very low profile kaya pinapakilala ko parati. Binabati ko rin si Vice Mayor Calixto at ang buong konseho ng Pasay City. At kanina nga nabanggit ‘yung aking Presidential Assistant sa housing, si Nestor Ponce na dating Congressman. Sa inyong lahat, mga tatanggap ng titulo, mga nakabiyaya ng proklamasyon pero wala pa ‘yung individual na titulo, mga ipoproklama pa, ako ay nagagalak at sa wakas ay nagsimula na nating bigyang-katuparan ang matagal nang minimithi ng mga pamilyang nakatira sa lupang sakop ng NAIA. Sa mga minumudmod na papeles ngayon, mapapasainyo na ang lupang tinitirikan.

Sa may limandaang benepisyaryo — limandaan ngayon, ano? ‘Yung first step — mula sa Balabag area, Don Carlos Village, Barrio Pilipino Putol, Maricaban 3, ngayon, meron na kayong inyu-inyong hiwa-hiwalay na Certificate of lot Occupancy. Ngayon, hindi na kayo squatter sa sariling bayan. Kaya, congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Para sa inyo, kasi unang hakbang, gaya ng sabi ni Mike Defensor, ‘yung E.O. 114, ‘yung proklamasyon. Ngayon, alam ninyo sa sariling lupa, sunod na hakbang naman ‘yon. ‘Yung kaninang binigay na MOU sa akin, ‘yon naman ang sunod na hakbang. Kaya, panimula pa lamang ito at ang sunod na hakbang ay ‘yon na ngang “MIAA Sites Socialized Housing Project.”

Nung E.O. 144, ang tiniyak ay hindi na kayo papaalisin. Ngayon, bawat isa sa inyo nakatiyak ang nakatukoy na lupang tinitirikan. Ang kasunod, pabahay.

At lahat nito ay bahagi sa magandang trabahong ginagawa ng ating mga local political leaders gaya ni Connie at saka ni Pewee. Nang ating mga taga-ahensya ng pabahay at maralitang taga-lungsod gaya nila Mike at Percy. At sa magandang gawain din sa ating pinag-uusapan ngayon na mga opisyal ng ating mga airport hindi lamang si GM Manda. Gusto kong ipaalam at bigyang kilala na malaking tulong sa mga paperwork na ginagawa ni Ed Manda para dito ay ‘yung paperwork na itinuro sa kanya ng pinaslang na si Lilia Diaz. Kaya habang nakaburol si Lilia, magdasal tayo para sa kaniya dahil malaki ang ginanap n’yang paperwork para dito sa pangyayari ngayon.

I’ve already instructed the PNP to do their job. Let us allow the authorities to do their part in unraveling the motives and suspects behind this heinous crime. Magdasal tayo para sa katarungan para kay Lilia Diaz.

Kahapon, dinalaw ko siya. Dinalaw ko rin ang ilan sa mga benepisyaryo ng mga gawain natin kagaya nito. Kahapon, dinalaw ko ang smokey mountain kung saan mahigit dalawang libo limangdaang condominium units ay tapos na. Hinihintay na lamang matapos ang septic tank para handa nang maokupahan ng mga mahihirap nating kababayan.

Kahapon din ginanap sa Baseco ang turnover ng semento bilang tugon ng cement manufacturers association of the Philippines sa aking panawagan sa pribadong sektor. Nagbigay sila ng sampung libong sako ng semento para sa konstruksiyon ng drainage system at septic tank.

Noon namang Biyernes ng nakaraang linggo, nasa parola naman ako kung saan namahagi rin, kagaya dito 'yung ginagawa natin dito, doon ginagawa na rin 'yung partikular nito komento sa bawat tinitirikang lupa. Nagbigay ako ng sertipiko para sa katiyakan ng lupang tinitirikan ng mga taga-roon.

Hindi lingid sa aking kaalaman ang inyong mga suliranin. Hindi lang 'yung problema ng katiyakan sa tinitirikang lupa kungdi na rin 'yung pagkabahala ninyo sa baka magtaas ang presyo ng — ay, nagtataas na nga — ang presyo ng langis. Kaya nga dahil sa aking pakiusap, pumayag na ang mahigit apatnapung gasolinahan sa kalakhang maynila na magbigay ng diskuwento sa presyo ng krudo sa mga dyipni. At ang mga operators naman ng mga pampublikong sasakyang ay isinantabi muna ang kanilang balak na humiling ng pagtaas ng pasahe. Ito ay para sa inyo, para hindi na madadagdagan ang inyong gastos sang pasahe pag kayo ay pumapasok sa trabaho at 'yung mga anak ninyo pag pumapasok sa kanilang paaralan.

At gusto kong samantalain itong araw na ito, itong panahong ito na gamitin ang pagkakataon upang umapela sa inyo. Nakita na naman ninyo ang ating ginagawa, proklamasyon pero hindi naiwan sa proclamation lamang. Hanggang sa katiyakan ng lupa sa bawat pamilya, hanggang inaasahan na hindi tumataas ang presyo ng pasahe sa ating mga patakarán. Siguro naman, nakikita ninyo na mahal kayo ng inyong kasalukuyang pamahalaan. Kaya umaapela ako sa inyo, huwag kayong basta padadala sa paghihimok ng iba na mag-alsa kontra sa pamahalaan. Huwag na huwag kayong pumayag na magamit ng mga sobrang ambisyoso sa kanilang hangaring umagaw ng kapangyarihan.

Ang inyong mga pangangailangan, tulad ng pabahay na pinagsisikapan ng pamahalaan tulad ng lupa na kayod ng kayod sa paperwork dahil alam n'yo ang prinoklama nating lupa sa ating dalawang taon at kalahati ay umaabot na ng anim na daang libong pamilya ang binibigyan na ng lupang katiyakan tinitirikan kagaya ng ating mga papeles. Ngayon naman ay tatlongdaang libo na. Kaya ito ay kung maihahambing ninyo sa ibang nagawa, ito ay record high sa buong kasaysayan. Ito ang ginagawa natin sa pang-araw-araw ng ating trabaho para mabigay lalung-lalo na sa mga mahihirap ang dapat nating asikasuhin. Ito ang aking inaasikaso at hindi ang pamumulitika.

Kaya muli, ang aking taos-pusong pagbati sa inyo at ang ating mga bagong nag-graduate mula sa pagka-squatter, congratulations! At doon sa iba, habang wala pa kayong... May mga na-proclaim na wala pang titulo. May mga hindi pa napo-proclaim. 'Yon ho ay tinitiyak ko ho sa inyo, tuloy-tuloy ang ating paperwork.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Gridiron Night of the National Press Club

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Gridiron Night of the National Press Club

[Delivered at the Manila Pavilion, Manila Hotel, September 13, 2003]

Thank you very much, Press Secretary Milt Alingod.

National Press Club President Tony Antonio, welcome to your party; Vice President Alice Reyes, thank you for giving the welcoming remarks; Roman Floresca; Sonny Galvez; Jimmy Ching; I'd like to greet few Cabinet members who are here — Secretary Romulo, Secretary Ople, Bobi Tiglao, Toting Bunye — they're the only ones who were obliged to come. The others have better things to do; friends and supporters of the National Press Club, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen:

First of all, I would like to ask you to... Well, I'd like to ask you to see my family who are all here with me tonight. Okay. Well, stand up, stand up.

I am very glad to have my family with me tonight.

Matinik talaga ang aking media group, sabi nila, dalhin ko ang aking buong pamilya. Kasi ang unang plano nila, gagawa sana kami ng eksena na maghihiwalay kami si Mike para sa mga tabloids. Pero sorry, nahihirapan yung aking media group for me to change my image from taray to martyr. So, sorry na lang. Yung sob story saka na because I still have to comply with my annual new year's resolution not to be mataray.

I really try very hard not to be mataray. Remember, that was the subject matter of my Gridiron last year, my katarayan? Every year, it's my resolution, my new year's resolution, and I really try so hard not to be mataray even if there is so much dirty laundry, so much filth, so much disorder, so much noise to deal with, and that's just my granddaughter Mikaela. Plus, I have a government to run, too.

Being married to our country in such a difficult time as this is patience-consuming, energy-consuming, time-consuming. Which frankly makes me wonder what I'm doing here. Just like those who did not even bother to come tonight, they bought tables like that one but they didn't bother to come because they have better things to do.

You notice only my Cabinet members related to the press, and Bert Romulo and Ka Blas are here tonight. The others, all have better things to do. But I am, just the same.

In this yearly ritual where the president has to grin and bear it while the press pokes fun of our mistakes and our problems. Yes I'm here, even as for somebody who is mataray — the matarays usually don't like to be made fun of. But still I'm here because behind the light moments of this annual ritual, as said by Alice in the welcome remarks of Tony is the message: those in power must respect the freedom of the press. Yes, I will always uphold your right as journalists for as long as you report the good news.

Kung bad kayo sa akin, ipapa-lifestyle check ko kayo. Kasi matinik ang aking mga espiya, matinik ang aking security team. Alam ko kung sino ang naughty, alam ko kung sino ang nice sa akin.

Matinik talaga ang aking security team. I asked an aide why Vic Corpus spends so much time in the war room. Yung aide na tinanungan ko, wala siya dito, not on duty tonight. Si ano yon, yung aking Class 95 salutatorian aide, si Chris Magdangal. Alam n'yo, salutatorian yon sa Class 95. Yung pagkaiba nila ni Gambala, maliit na maliit na punto lamang, pero si Gambala, sabi sa script kanina, gambala sa ating bansa; si Magdangal, nagdadangal sa ating bansa.

Anyway, sa kanya ko tinanong: ba't parating nandiyan si Vic Corpus sa ating war room? Sabi niya: ma'am, because he likes playing the game of the generals. So I went to the war room because I wanted to see the games that victor plays. And he submitted to me the following report: Madam President, according to ISAFP, A1 report, you and Gringo have something in common, you both like dancing. Gringo likes the folk dance, the coup-racha, while you according to the A1 reports really want the cha-cha. At last, Victor Corpus' intelligence is accurate. He's really travelled the learning curve from his Mawanay days. Noon, namamawanay siya, ngayon, mahusay na.

Matinik talaga itong aking security team. Si Roy Golez naman — pinakita ninyo, walang utak — may utak yan. He even pre-figured your script, because one day he made the assessment for me, yung kanyang national security briefing that the problem of finding the bilyones necessary for the national budget is nothing compared to the trillions involved in our national security concerns. Di ba matinik si Roy Golez? Ginawa n'yo sa script ninyo pero nauna siya.

Matinik din yung aking mga palace aides. Nabanggit ko na nga kanina, si Magdangal. 'yung isang kilalang-kilala ninyo, si Ermie. Pero yung kasama ko ngayon, si Vivian. When I was about to change for my exercise the other day, tinanong ni Vivian sa akin, ma'am, will you be wearing your pidal pushers? Kasi si Vivian, Visayan.

By the way, yung exercise na yon, I'd like to invite again the female reporters, the palace reporters, you can join me if you like exercise — and you lack exercise because you're following me all over the place — you can join me and the other female staff members in our twice-weekly exercise session. Totoo yon. Basta walang ano ha, walang ambush interview, para ilalagay off-the-record remarks. But it's nice to have you there in a setting na walang mga ambush-ambush interview. Sabi kasi ng aking matinik na media group or groups, kulang tayo sa bonding.

Talagang matinik ang ating media groups, sabi nga nila: sa kulang ng bonding, nagkakaroon tuloy ng... Eh, kasalanan nila yon. My media group is very good in bonding, but very poor ni plumbing. Kasi pag may leak, hindi nila nahuhuli ang source. Bakit kaya?

Pero matinik sila talaga. When they felt I had been too harsh with Tina Panganiban Perez, they decided that we should send her roses. Actually, pangatlo na yung delivery eh. The first orders went astray. Because first, when Milt Alingod gave his assistant the message to send flowers: padala nga si Perez ng bulaklak. Naku! Si Vince Perez nag-blush, kasi siya ang nakakuha. Di nalaman ko si Vince Perez nakakuha ng flowers dahil nag-blush nga siya sa meeting namin. Sabi ko: mali naman yon. You send flowers to the wrong Perez. So they sent the flowers to Nani, ako tuloy ang nag-blush.

Matinik talaga yung aking mga aide. When I look for Vince Perez, they call Nani Perez. When I look for Nani Perez, they call Nani Braganza. When I look for Nani Braganza, they call my senior aide, General Braganza. When I look for Bebot Alvarez, they call Sonny Alvarez. When I look for Sonny Alvarez, they call Sonny Belmonte. I had to remove all that confusion. Mabuti na lang si Sonny Belmonte elected. Pero tignan ninyo yung iba: Sonny Alvarez is no longer in DENR, Bebot is no longer in DOTC, General Braganza is no longer my senior aide, Nani Braganza is no longer in DAR, and Nani Perez is no longer in justice. Watch out, Vince Perez. The flowers were not for you, they were for Tina.

Apologizing is not a problem for me. My father, many, many of the older people would tell me stories of my father apologizing even as president. He had no problem apologizing even as president especially if the mistake he made was at the expense of someone else. I think he learned that a president should be gracious enough to apologize when he was a Malacañang lawyer during the time of President Quezon. The story was that an aide went to President Quezon one time, he was having siesta, and told him, Mr. President, the press is here. Quezon said, tell the press to go to hell! So the aide went out and told the parish priest to go to hell. Quezon had to apologize. Press — priest, pidal pusher — pedal pusher, times never really changed among the aides, kasi multi-ethnic society tayo.

In Malacañang, the order of the day is always two things: feed the beast, and try to influence the agenda. But I think for the editors, the order of the day is: bite the hand that feeds the beast, and kill the good news. Kaya sabi ni Tony, mabait kayo sa akin ngayong gabi, kasi sa peryodiko hindi kayo mabait sa akin.

Nonetheless, the freedom of the press is important to us as a democratic country.

We know from our martial law experience that without press freedom our democratic institutions die. During martial law the people were kept in the dark on what was actually happening to our country, because the dictatorship made it appear that everything was going well and it was done with the help of the controlled press, the controlled media.

At present, it's the opposite. The media always makes it appear that our country is in deep trouble. This is because as Alice says, when she, in behalf of Tony Antonio, that the press can write anything under the sun in the Philippines. But the truth of the matter is that we are progressing economically and compared with other Asian countries, except maybe China and Malaysia, we're doing comparatively well.

Kaya pakiusap. Ayusin n'yo sana ang inyong reports even if you and I know that good news do not always make — in fact seldom make — for good copy. I wish it did. And I wish you could make it so. Sabi nga noong iba, no, we have to have bad news, otherwise, our paper won't sell. Well, I don't know about you but my statistics say that the bulletin sells very well even if it is a very, very fair and sober newspaper. Maraming salamat, Don Emilio.

I also share your grief about the latest death of Jun Pala. The Jun Pala was a hard hitting radio broadcaster, he was one of the few who used to saying nice things about me, and that makes me doubly sorry indeed. And I would like to accept the suggestion, Tony, to form a task force that will join your task force to especially run after these killers, or if there are already those accused and undergoing to trial, to speed up the trial. Oh, there's Obet Pagdanganan of DAR. I didn't see him earlier. I saw Obet because I was looking at who is the enforcer who bothered not to only to buy tickets but to attend as well. Nakikita ko dito, si Jun Ebdane ang nagpapasensiya sa inyo. Kaya si Jun Ebdane ang magiging... Ang maghahanap ng mga killer ni Jun Pala at iba pa. Susmaryosep! sana at the same time, he stumbles on Al-Ghozi as well.

One of the universal sources of humor about the press is the question: what would be the headlines if tomorrow were the end of the world? And my matinik media team played the game. Palagay raw nila, if tomorrow were the end of the world, ganito ang mga headline.

For the Daily Tribune: Last day for Arroyo, Erap takes over.

For Malaya: Oreta demands snap elections tomorrow.

For the Philippine Star: Star publisher invited to U.N. Summit on the end of the world.

Inquirer Analysis: Political conspiracies put an end to the world.

People's Journal: Malacañang creates crisis committee for the end of the world.

People's Tonight: Gringo: ako yung nasa letrato.

Star Ngayon: Huling Ro-Ro, biyahe na!

Abante Tonite: Bagsak na ang gobyerno ni GMA.

TV Patrol: MERALCO pays full refund to the customers.

Inquirer: Mike A.: I won't last a day without you; GMA: I will survive.

Balita: Noli: Paalam na, bayan.

Paalam na po sa inyong lahat ngayong gabi. Hanggang bukas, we will survive! The Republic will survive with the help of a fair and free media.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the gathering of Retired Generals and Colonels

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the gathering of Retired Generals and Colonels

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, September 18, 2003]

Thank you very much, retired Navy Captain Roilo Golez, my National Security Adviser.

Secretary Romulo; retired General Ed Ermita, my Presidential Adviser on the peace process; General Gidaya and the other officers and members of AGFO who are here today. And I'm very happy to be with all of you again.

I remember when I was a guest speaker in AGFO, I had said that — I was a senator then — I had said that my father having been commander-in-chief of the Armed Forces maybe could be a member of AGFO. And you were looking for a way to change the bylaws so that ex-commanders-in-chief could be a member, but then my father passed away. So, it became moot and academic. But I thank you for your gesture.

General Abuan and the other officers and members of the Association of Brigadier Generals, chief superintendents, commodore pensioners of the Philippines, thank you also for your expression of support.

General Ocol and the other officers and members of forces, and I do remember forces playing a very important role in EDSA 2, thank you for your continuing support.

Colonel Buenaventura and other officers and members of the last watering hole, let me thank you for being here. In a way it's my return invitation to you, because when I was a senator, you also invited me to be your guest speaker in the last watering hole.

General Victor Mayo, retired General Victor Mayo, thank you for helping to organize this meeting. Indeed, this meeting is providential. It was a meeting decided on, as Roy Golez said, quite sometime ago. But the Lord timed it for today so that after the rumors and headlines that may somehow imply a rift between the retired generals and the Philippine government.

The Lord timed it for today so that the country could hear your strong expressions of support. Thank you very much for this providential meeting. Indeed, I thank you, and I salute you for your unwavering stand for constitutional authority and the chain of command.

You, because you have been there — been there, done that — you know the meaning of service and sacrifice. And even now in your retirement, you continue to be a moral force behind our soldiery. In line with the dictum of AGFO, the Association of Generals and Flag Officers, which I put to work for and defend the preservation of the republic so that justice, liberty and democracy will always prevail.

That's why despite the intrigues in the media, I never believed that any retired general worth his salt would ever support an extra-constitutional bid for power.

And as I said earlier, I've met many of you many times before I became president. I've met many of you individually. I've met many of you as my being guest speaker in some of your organization events. And I have been with you individually, organizationally for many, many years now because I have always respected the leadership of the retired generals.

Informally, you continue to be a part of the chain of command. You are valued for your experience and counsel. You show the way of service and sacrifice to the younger officers. You show a long line of loyalty to the flag and the Constitution. And I recognize that we must continually bridge the generations in the officer corps. That's why I continue to count on you. The Armed Forces must learn to live in the longevity of ideals, not quick fix solutions founded on fleeting adventurism. You, the retired generals provide the example of daring in war and constructive unification in peace. You are indispensable allies in the reform, transformation and modernization of the Armed Forces.

Even before Oakwood, my administration had already been moving with undeniable will to increase the premium for military service.

And today, we are moving more logistics, funds and financial autonomy to the field at the same time enforcing policy control, sound management of resources and untrammelled command efficiency. For our retirees, the protection and continued viability of the AFP-RSBS is among the important concerns that we are addressing with renewed vigor.

I would like you to help me address the most vital concerns of the Armed Forces. Your experience is indispensable in the service of our flag and people.

In the Philippine National Police, I have organized or I'm organizing a PNP reform commission based on the core which was made up of the Ordoñez Commission that investigated and gave appropriate recommendations regarding the Al-Ghozi incident. They have now — because they have already sent me their recommendations which we are carrying out — they are now transforming themselves into a larger PNP reform commission. And of course, I must enlarge that with members who come from the PNP community, because the three members — Ordoñez, Varela and Datumanong — while men of probity and good reputation are not from the PNP. I needed somebody from the PNP to help in the insights on the reform commission.

We have already included one incumbent Senior PNP General, General Cataluña who is head of plans. And the PNP hierarchy will nominate a young officer coming from the PNP academy. But I also need a former PNP officer to join in this reform commission, and I hope that from your organizations will come a nominee for this reform commission. That's one way by which the retired generals can help to promote reform in the Philippine government.

With regard to the AFP. We are also looking at systems, reforms, immediate- term, short-term, medium-term, long-term. And one of your members, Chuck Agustin, in his capacity as the president of the National Defense College of the Philippines is mandated to conduct some of the studies that will lead to those reforms.

Because of your strong support for my government, destabilization plots are now consigned to the rumor mill. And as mentioned by General Gidaya, fueled by partisan quarters that either wish to usurp constitutional power, or to escape the rule of law and justice. Indeed, I thank you for pointing out that it is now time to realign our sights upon the crucial tasks of pushing our country forward, creating more jobs, getting investments on track, fighting crime and terrorism, and consolidating all our efforts along the vision of one nation and one people. The domestic and global landscape is rife with opportunities inspite of the difficulties that the whole world is facing today. Next week, I will leave to address the United Nations, following a trail of strategic gains in our fight against terrorism, and yet, yes, in our long-term fight against poverty even if at the moment the challenges are still daunting.

The seventh ASEAN Summit comes in October, followed by the OIC Summit in Kuala Lumpur, then the visit of President Bush that will bridge on to the APEC Summit in Thailand.

We have forged a genuinely mutual relationship with the United States that transcends the colonial ties of the past. The United States has been a faithful ally in the modernization of our Armed Forces.

And so, with all of these things that we can look forward to, I ask you once again, or rather I accept your offer to help us in bringing forth a bandwagon of renewed optimism and enterprise. It's time to shake off lethargy and division and look to a new day.

Kaya sana maging mas madalas ang ating ugnayan. You are the bridge with an experience and youth. And I hope to count on your wisdom and add to it the energy of the youth. So that the combination of wisdom and boundless energy can move forward and indeed help our country to build that strong republic that while it is not yet there is something that we all aspire for.

Maraming salamat sa inyong suporta.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 2003 Global Cooperation Society (GCS) International Convention and Peace Conference Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 2003 Global Cooperation Society (GCS) International Convention and Peace Conference in commemoration of the 22nd anniversary of the International Day of Peace

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Century Park Plaza Hotel, Manila, September 19, 2003]

Thank you very much Dr. Punzal.

Dr. Young Seek Choue and Madam Choue, Dr. Mohapatra, Dr. Ponchai, Congressman Hizon, Ambassador Son Sang-Ha, Dr. Jae Shik Sohn, Dr. Jen You Chang, delegates of the Global Cooperation Society, national and international chapters, our 200 friends from Korea, our 100 friends from all over the world, and our 50 friends from the Philippines, ladies and gentlemen.

There are many conferences for peace especially in this contemporary times, this trying times. And therefore, I cannot attend all of these conferences. But I made it a point to attend this one because this particular conference for peace was organized by someone that both my father and I consider as one of the greatest prophets of peace in our contemporary history, Dr. Young Seek Choue.

When the year 2000 was proclaimed as the “International Year of the Culture of Peace,” we were bouyed up by unprecedented hope.

For a short time that year 2000, it appeared the world was heading towards that future — a future of peace. But only a year later, on September 11, 2001, our hopes were shattered by a senseless and shameless act of terrorism.

From then on, the world was put on dangerous alert.

But we cannot forever be held hostage to terror. We must hunt down terrorists, hold down the threat, and never capitulate even as we strive to win the peace at all costs by dint of our durable unity and resolve.

Here in the Philippines, we are not pegging a date for the capture of Al-Ghozi, the Indonesian international terrorist, who is believed to be hiding in the jungles of Mindanao in Southern Philippines. But the hunt will be focused, intense and relentless. The dragnet is closing in on him and we are severely limiting his chances of getting through it. I am paying a short visit to Mindanao next week but not only to check on this matter but rather to check on the entire run of peace and development activities that have a bearing on our fight against terrorism and poverty. Al-Ghozi’s capture is a key event but it is not the whole pie of peace and security. Many other pieces have to be put in place.

And here in this conference on peace, we declare that even in a time of strife, a culture of peace shall prosper for so long as we remain steadfast in addressing not only the immediate causes of conflict but by boldly striking at its roots — inequity, injustice, economic exclusion.

Our work for peace in Mindanao brings together valiant allies. Malaysia has agreed to host the resumption of the peace talks with the MILF. The United States has committed to play a role, a leading role, in post-conflict rehabilitation. The member-states of the organization of the Islamic conference provide a broad backdrop of support and assistance.

Our government has initiated, with Indonesia and Malaysia, an agreement committed to practical measures against terrorism. It is an accord to which other countries in Southeast Asia have since acceded in the name of regional peace.

Peace is something that no nation can achieve alone.

In 1975, seventy eight former presidents and heads of state, university presidents, scholars, scientists and Nobel laureates gathered in the defense of peace and founded the Global Cooperation Society.

One of those 75 was my late father, President Diosdado Macapagal. And he was there upon the invitation of and because of his great admiration for Dr. Young Seek Choue, the society's founder and president.

Again, twenty-two years ago, I joined my father when he travelled to the 6th triennial conference of the International Association of University Presidents in Costa Rica. It was there that an international day of peace was proposed, and in that same year, the U.N. established the international day of peace. Another achievement of Chancellor Young Seek Choue.

The UNESCO made a powerful statement during the commemoration of the 19th Anniversary of the International Day of Peace in the year 2000 and I quote, "as war begins in the minds of men, it is also there that the defense of peace is made." that is why it is important to promote a culture of peace because culture is in the minds of men.

And your presence here proves that no amount of senseless and shameless violence can shatter our dreams. Peace is ours to hold and we shall not let go as long as there are men and women who promote a culture of peace like the men and women in these halls.

Mabuhay! To all of you and thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Sulong Batayang Sektor Koalisyon program “Pagtataya ng Batayang Sektor para sa Reporma at Demokrasya” [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa programa ng Sulong Batayang Sektor Koalisyon “Pagtataya ng Batayang Sektor para sa Reporma at Demokrasya”

[Ipinahayag sa Risen Garden, Quezon City Hall, Lungsod ng Quezon, ika 21 ng Setyembre, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Kalihim Dinky Soliman, ang ating namamahala sa kagawaran na tumutulong sa mga local government mag-alaga sa mga pinakakapus palad sa ating mga kapatid.

Nagpapasalamat din ako sa ating host city mayor itong hapon ito, si Mayor Sonny Belmonte. At sa lahat ng mga narito ngayon galing sa iba’t-ibang bahagi ng metro manila at buong bansa, pero lalo na iyung mga taga-Quezon City, kaya ako ay nagpapasalamat kay Sonny.

Salamat din sa ating namumuno ng komisyon na nagtatalakay at nagiging tulay ng mga patakarang kailangan ng mga mahihirap sa ating bansa, si Secretary Ging Deles. At ‘yung walang sawang naghahanap kung saan pa makakakuha, maging sa budget, maging sa mga dayuhang tumutulong, maging sa mga korporasyon ng gobyerno kung papano natin popondohan ang napakaraming pangangailangan para bigyan ng ginhawa ang mahihirap, si Secretary Mai Jimenez.

Gusto ko ring batiin ang ating napaka-importante at pinakikinggan at nakikinig na chairman ng urban poor, si Percy Chavez. Tingnan mo nga, tama ‘yung sinabi kong napakapinakikinggan. At ‘yung ating namumuno mula sa mga batayang sektor ng National Anti-Poverty Commission, si Oca Francisco.

Salamat naman sa kanyang napakakomprehensibong pahayag tungkol sa kung ano na ang nagawa natin sa maikling dalawang taon sa kapakanan ng mga mahihirap. Salamat sa iyung komprehensibong ulat, Ed Rancho, ang kinatawan ng mga maralitang taga-lungsod.

Batiin ko rin ‘yung iba’t-ibang mga pinili ninyong kinatawan ng iba’t-ibang mga batayang sektor, si Andy Bukirin ng katandaan; si Langli Segundo ng katutubo; si Richard Arsenio ng may kapansanan; si Vic Fabie ng mga magsasaka; si Milan Ramos ng mangingisda; si Noel Joson ng mga manggagawa sa pormal na sektor, at si Mary Buangbog ng mga impormal na manggagawa. At kayong lahat, iba’t-ibang mga kinatawan ng mga batayang sektor, mga kaibigan:

Itong araw na ito ginugunita natin, gaya nang sabi ng mga nagsalita na, ang hindi dapat mangyari uli sa ating bansa ang deklarasyon ng batas militar sa buong Pilipinas. Marami sa inyo, marami nandito sa entablado naranasan personal ang mga kahirapan at abuso na ginawa sa kanila at sa bansa ng batas militar. Marami sa inyo ang testigo na hindi natin maitatangi na ang paghari ng batas militar sa ating bansa ay isang masamang bangungot.

Batay sa mga survey, mga malaking porsiyento ng mamamayan ay hindi sang-ayon sa pagpataw ng martial law bilang paraan sa paglutas ng mga problema ng bansa.

Kaya binabati ko kayong mga narito upang makiisa sa pagtataya ng batayang sektor na kinikilala nating kailangan ng reporma pero kinikilala natin na ang reporma ay hindi nagawa sa panahon ng batas militar. At palagay ko dito sa dalawa at kalahating taon ng ating demokrasya mas maraming repormang nagawa kaysa sa labing-apat na taon ng batas militar.

Bagamat masasabi natin na itong mga gustong bumalik sa batas militar, itong mga gustong maglagay muli ng diktadurya o junta, mga plano ng destabilisasyon, bagamat masasabi natin na humina na, isang batayan kung bakit masasabi nating humina na, 'di ba hindi sila nakapagbuo ng kanilang kilos itong araw na ito. Ngunit meron pa rin tayong mga naririnig na balita balita tungkol sa mga grupong humihimok sa ating mga sundalo, maging sa ating mga batayang sektor na samahan silang agawin ang lehitimong kapangyarihan ng gobyerno.

Ngunit kayo narito at inuulit ninyo, gaya nang sinabi ni Ed Rancho, na ang ipaglalaban nating reporma ay sa pamamagitan ng demokrasya at hindi sa pamamagitan ng destabilisasyon para bumalik sa batas militar. Salamat sa pahayag at ulat mula sa batayang sektor.

Maging ang ating mga sundalo ay nagpahayag na ng suporta sa chain of command at sa konstitusyon. Ang mga bulong-bulong ng coup 'yon ang mga nalalabing gustong magmaliit sa ating pamahalaan, iyan ay mga mamamatay, iyang mga bulong na 'yan kapag ang mga reporma at katarungan ay tunay na umugat, at 'yon ang ating trabaho — kayo at ako.

Totoo, kailangan natin — kung gusto natin ang reporma, kung gusto natin ang trabaho — kailangan nating totoo ang katiwasayan. Pero ang katiwasayan ay hindi nanggagaling sa batas militar. Nanggagaling sa reporma laban sa kahirapan at nanggagaling sa karaniwang pang araw-araw na trabaho ng mga alagad ng batas, mga sundalo, mga pulis.

Kaya ipinag-utos ko na sa liderato ng AFP na paratingin ang mensahe ng mga reporma hanggang sa pinakamababang ranggo upang ang bawat sundalo ay tumibay ang pananalig, ang kanilang organisasyon. Tapos na ang Oakwood kalimutan na natin ito.

Ang ganitong damdamin ng mamamayan ay dalawang beses nang napatunayan sa nakalipas na panahon — sa EDSA People Power revolution noong 1986 at sa EDSA Dos noong 2001. 'Di ba magkasama tayo sa EDSA Dos noong 2001 kayong narito. At 'yung mga medyo may edad na ngayon nandoon din sila sa EDSA 1 nung 1986. Hindi ko naman masasabing may edad na sila Dinky at saka sila Ging pero batang-bata pa sila noon. Oo.

Sa harap ng maraming hamon sa ating katatagan, panatiliin sana nating buhay ang diwa ng edsa para matabunan ang diwa ng Setyembre 21. At itaguyod ang pangangibabaw ng awtoridad ng sibilyan sa ating bansa.

Hinihingi ng kasalukuyang panahon na tayo ay magpamalas ng pagka-makabayan at manindigan para sa demokrasya at pagbabago.

Ituloy natin ang ating pagkakaisa upang manatili ang demokrasya at magtagumpay ang reporma sa ating bansa hindi lamang para sa atin kung hindi para sa kinabukasan ng ating mga anak at mga susunod pang henerasyon.

Alam n'yo, ang daming gustong magsabi na walang nagagawa. Eh 'yung sinabi ni Ed Rancho iyung napakaimportanteng nagawa tungkol sa coco levy, tungkol sa nakaw na yaman ng diktadurya, 'yung tinatawag na Marcos wealth at marami pang ibang mga nagawa tungkol sa pagbibigay o pamamahagi ng lupang pwedeng bilhin ng maralitang taga-lungsod. Marami pa siyang ibang sinabi hindi ko na iuulit napaka-komprehensibo ang sinabi niya. Ang sabi ko dapat yan ay ipahayag natin sa iba't-ibang mga batayang sektor.

Ngunit hindi lamang si Ed Rancho ang nagsasabi noon maging ibang nagsusubaybay sa ating bansa. Alam n'yo, sinabi sa akin sa isang sulat ni Maria Ressa sa akin ng CNN, hindi tumagal sabi niya, pag pinapanood niya ang mga pahayag galing sa Pilipinas, parang gustong-gusto nating magsiraan sa isat-isa. Parang gustong-gusto ng ilang mga pilipino na bumagsak ang ating bansa. Pero kung titignan naman n'yo iyung report galing sa ibang lugar, report doon sa tinatawag na 'The Economist,' sinasabi ang pilipinas ay kasama sa mga bansa na matatag dito sa kahirapan ng mundo, dito sa lumalagong... Isa sa mga ekonomiyang lumalago sa buong mundo.

Merong nagbibintang sa ating katiwalian sa ating gobyerno pero marami nga tayong ginagawang repormang ipinatutupad upang sugpuin ang katiwalian sa pamahalaan na mapapatindi ang paghihirap ng mga mamamayan — itong mga katiwalian.

Sabi nila mahina raw tayo sa kapayapaan. Eh banggit nga ni Ed Rancho ‘yung mga peace talks natin — we want peace, we want reconciliation with justice. Kaya ipinaglaban ng ating mga abogado ng pamahalaan ang katarungan sa Korte Suprema, sa Sandigan, at ‘yon ay nakakamit ng ating mamamayan.

Iyung trabaho ng kapayapaan hindi ‘yon dinadaan sa martial law. Dinadaan sa trabaho ng pulis. Halimbawa, ang ating pulis napabagsak na ang maraming mga malalaking sindikato sa kidnapping, sa droga.

Kaya kaya ng mga demokratikong institusyon ang kapayapaan basta tayo ay magsama-sama. At kayo naman mga kasama ko na rin, dalawang taon at kalahati, salamat ipagpatuloy natin ating samahan para sa ganun talagang hindi na, hindi na babalik ang mga gustong magdala muli ng bangungot ng batas militar.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 613th Foundation Anniversary of Sulu Governance and Public Administration

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 613th Foundation Anniversary of Sulu Governance and Public Administration

[Delivered at the Provincial Multi-purpose Center, Jolo, Sulu, September 22, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Governor Parouk Hussin.

Maraming salamat, Governor Yusop Jikiri; His Highness Sultan Ajimodin Abidin; Vice Governor Hadji Abdel Anni; Mayor Hadji Soud Tan at ibat-ibang mga mayor na panauhin ngayon.

Kasama ko ngayon ang ibat-ibang mga Cabinet member na tumutulong sa aking mag-alaga ng probinsya ng Sulu. Narito si DSWD Secretary Dinky Soliman; narito si Chairman ng HUDCC Mike Defensor; narito si Secretary ng Anti-Poverty Commission, si Ging Deles; narito rin ‘yung tumutulong sa atin mag-alaga ng ating kapayapaan sa ilalim ng pamumuno ng AFP Chief-of-Staff General Narciso Abaya.

Gusto kong batiin ang ibat-iba rin na mga kasama ni Governor Hussin, opisyal ng autonomous region, lalo na ang speaker ng Autonomous Region Legislative Assembly, si Speaker Ishmael Abubakar. Sa inyong lahat mga kaibigan, assalaamu alaikum mangapagariya.

Alam n’yo noong isang taon, nandoon ako sa Maynila sa Malakanyang, kasama ko ‘yung mga heredero ng Sultan of Sulu. Nagla-luncheon kami roon. Tapos meron akong gustong tanungin kay Governor Jikiri, tinawagan ko siya ng long distance dito sa Sulu. At sabi ni Governor Jikiri, “oh, kumusta, Mrs. President? Alam n’yo narito kami ngayon at ipinagdidiriwang namin ‘yung foundation ng sultanate of Sulu.” ang gandang pagkakataon.

Ngayon na naman muli, bago ako pumunta kung saan kasi sa miyerkules ng gabi pupunta ako sa United Nations. Kakausapin ko si Prime Minister Mahathir tungkol sa ating peace process. At kakausapin ko ‘yung mga Ambassador ng OIC para pag-usapan ‘yung application ng Pilipinas sa observer status sa OIC. Kaya sabi ko bago ako pumunta doon, bago ako makipag usap kay Prime Minister Mahathir at sa mga Ambassador ng OIC sa United Nations dapat puntahan ko muna ang sulu para tingnan at maka-report ako sa ating mga programa sa kaunlaran ng Sulu. Eh ang ganda na nagkakataon na naman na anibersaryo na naman ng sultanate of Sulu.

Kahapon dapat pumunta dahil ‘yon ang mas araw ng sultanate of Sulu. Pero kahapon sinikap ni regional Governor Hussin na pumunta rito mas maaga, hindi siya nakalipad dahil masama ang panahon. Pero ngayon sa aking pagdating maganda ang panahon, basbas ni Allah ang ating pagsama-sama ngayon.

Kaya ako’y narito para nga tingnan ang mga proyekto. At nagpapasalamat ako allah na binabasbasan niya itong ating pagsama-sama rito. Nagkakataon na anibersaryo na naman ng Sultanate of Sulu at ako ay nagpapasalamat sa ating magandang pagkakataon. At palagay ko ang dahilan kung bakit tinayming ni Allah na anibersaryo ninyo ang aking pagbisita bago pumunta sa United Nations at kung bakit tinayming niya na maganda ang panahon bagamat umuulan ng malakas kahapon ay binabasbasan niya ang ating pagsisikap para sa kapayapaan at kaunlaran sa Sulu at sa Mindanao.

We shall not take the bait of martial law just to look for peace and order because our democratic institutions are strong enough to withstand the onslaught of destabilization and we have adequate constitutional powers to pursue justice and reforms. Peace and order can be attained through the instruments of democratic vigilance, criminal justice and good governance. And not necessarily through military rule.

Martial Law is an anachronism that goes against the world wide trend of openness and liberalism. Martial Law is only a weapon of last resort that we don't need and we don't seek to wield. Sa paghanap natin ng kapayapaan hindi Martial Law ang kailangan. Ang kailangan ang ilang mga prinsipyo: una, kambal ang kapayapaan at kaunlaran; pangalawa, ang paghanap sa kapayapaan ay dapat sa loob ng konstitusyon, kasarinlan at integridad ng lupang Pilipinas; pangatlo, kilalanin natin na tayo ay isang lipunang maraming lahi — a multi-ethnic society.

Ako, noong ako ay bata, matagal ako ilang taon nakatira doon sa Iligan City sa Mindanao. At doon kung saan malaking bahagi ng aking pagkabata ang naganap noong 1950s, naramdaman ko ang ibig sabihin ng multi-ethnic society. Ang lola ko taga-Pangasinan, ang asawa niya, lolo kong hindi ko na naabot pero maraming pinsan sumama sa kanya sa Mindanao noong 1920s pa kaya marami akong pinsan sa Iligan, mga Ilocano naman. 'Yung mga kalaro ko naman sa labas ng bahay, mga bisayas. 'Yung mga suki namin sa palengke at 'yung pinuno ng Philippine Constabulary ay Muslim, at anak nila kalaro ko rin. 'Yung bumibili ng aming mga kopra Intsik. 'Yung nagbebenta ng aming kuryente mestiso. Kristiyano, Muslim, Bisaya, Ilocano, Pangasinan, Intsik, Kastilang mestiso, ibat-ibang kultura ngunit kami doon sa Iligan isang pamayanan lamang, nagkakaisa kami. 'Yan ang Mindanao ng aking kabataan. 'Yan ang Mindanao na gusto kong bumalik muli dito sa ating panahon.

Ang tawag ng lupain ng aking lola sa Iligan ay Timoga. Baka may ilan sa inyo naka-swimming na doon. At ako bata doon, kagaya ng lahat ng bata sa buong mundo, mga bata may mga idolo. 'Yung mga young girls, naalala ko noong 1960s ang idol nung young girls si Jackie Kennedy, kasi maganda, matalino, pusturyosa. Noong 1980s naman ang idol nung young girls si Princess Diana, kasi maganda, edukada, pusturyosa. Noong ako batang maliit sa Iligan, sa timoga ang idol ko maganda, edukada, pusturyosa ay si Prinsesa Tarhata Kiram ng Sulu. Ang tawag tuloy ng lola ko sa akin Prinsesa Tarhata ng Timoga. At naalala ko 'yon dahil nga si Prinsesa Tarhata ang kanyang ninuno si Saed Abubakar ang siya ang nagsimula ng Sultanate of Sulu, 613 years ago. At noong panahong 'yon naging sentro ang Sulu ng Islam sa buong Pilipinas at ito ay importante rin sa ating pagnenegosyo sa ibang bansa, Kilalang-kilala ang Sultan of Sulu sa ibang bansa. Doon sa China noong ako'y nagpunta, napag-alaman ko sa kasaysayan ng China noong panahon ng Ming dynasty many, many centuries ago, inimbata ng emperador ng Tsina ang Sultan ng Sulu para magbisita sa kanya sa guangdong bilang isang state visitor. Ganoon kaimportante ang Sultan of Sulu sa kasaysayan ng Asia.

And so today, what we want to do, we would like to bring back the glory of Sulu. But we must begin by working together for peace and development in Sulu. Kaya ipaumanhin ho ninyong mag-aksaya ako ng konting panahon para maikwento sa inyo ang ibat-ibang mga bahagi o halimbawa ng mga ginagawa natin dito sa kaunlaran ng Sulu.

'Yung Sulu, noong araw nga gaya ang sabi ko, napaka edukado, pumupunta pa hanggang sa guangdong, kapantay ng emperor ng Tsina. Pero ngayon, sa haba ng panahon na may labanan sa Sulu at natakot 'yung mga teachers na pumunta sa mga liblib na lugar para magturo ng fulltime, ang literacy rate ng Sulu ay 82 percent na lamang. Napakababa kaya kailangan isa sa ating ginagawa ay ipag-ibayo ang edukasyon, sistema ng edukasyon dito sa Sulu. Kaya mamaya pag-aaralan ko ang student-classroom ratio ng sSulu at lahat ng bayan — ah, hindi — lahat ng eskwelahan kung saan mahigit isang daan ang estudyante sa bawat paaralan o bawat classroom mag dadagdag tayo ng classroom sa ibat-bang bayan ng Sulu. At sa mga liblib na lugar kung saan natatakot magturo fulltime ang mga teacher maglalagay tayo ng distance learning o education by television. 'Yan ang gagawin natin para tumaas ang literacy rate muli sa lalawigan ng Sulu.

Marami ring lugar sa Sulu ay hindi maganda ang patubig, sa deep well lang kumukuha ng tubig, kung minsan marumi. Kaya isa sa mga proyekto ni ging deles ay patubig para sa mga 100 or more 200 waterless municipalities isasama ni Ging Deles 'yung mga bayan ng sulu kung saan walang maayos na patubig para dagdagan ng patubig.

At kanina kinekwento ni Governor Parouk hussin na inaayos na ang Sulu hospital at pati ang pangutaran district hospital, ito ang mga kailangan ayusin. At ewan ko, pinatutupad na yata ng ARMM at saka ng local government ang pag-ayos nitong napakaimportanteng mga hospital na ito. At puspusan din ang kampanya ng ARMM-DOH para masugpo ang sakit ng tb at saka malaria. At saka diyaan sa Patikul, kung saan ang daming naging biktima ng giyera — kaya nandito si Mike Defensor at saka si Dinky Soliman— ay tuloy ang pag-papagawa ng core shelter project dahil lahat ng mga nawalaan ng bahay dahil sa giyera ay tungkulin ng gobyernong itayo muli ang kanilang tahanan.

Livelihood assistance din ay binibigay natin sa ating mga kapatid. Ang talagang pinakakailangan ay livelihood. Kaya sabi ko kay Dinky Soliman, lahat ng mga social welfare offices ay magiging conduit ng ating microfinance para makaabot sa ating mahihirap dito sa Sulu.

At importante rin ‘yung inyong mga produksyon. Kanina — ay, hindi mamaya — pupunta kami ni Governor Hussin at ni Hovernor Jikiri para tingnan ‘yung ilang mga proyekto ng USAID. At isa sa pinakamalaking mga proyekto ay ‘yung proyekto ng Carrageenan o Agar Agar. ‘Yan ang susi ng kinabukasan ng Sulu sa ating kaunlaran dahil ang Pilipinas ngayon ay favorite supplier ng Carrageenan sa buong mundo. Kaya lahat kayong mga nasa coastal areas magsimula tayo ng pagtanim ng Carrageenan.

Marami ring iba pang produkto ng dagat dito. Kanina nga nandoon kami sa Luuk dahil nagbigay ako ng mga proyekto doon bilang pagpasalamat sa Luuk dahil mula pa noong sagip si Jeffrey Schilling ang Luuk ay parating hinuhuli ‘yung mga Abu Sayyaf na naliligaw doon. Kaya nagbigay tayo ng proyekto doon sa kanila. Pinakain nila kami, ‘yung mga lobster, ‘yung mga crabs kasinlaki ng plato. Kaya kailangan ang mangyari sa inyo ay meron kayong mga cold storage para maganda parati ang presyo ng inyong mga prutas or yaman ng dagat.

Hayan ang ating sisikapin na ipagawa sa Department of Agriculture. Ang Department of Agriculture din ay meron na ring ibat-ibang mga nagawa dito hindi lamang ‘yung pinapalawak ‘yung carrageenan kundi na rin ‘yung kape at saka ‘yung cassava. ‘Yung kape doon sa bandang parang, halimbawa, ay binibili ng nestle ‘yung planta sa Cagayan de Oro dahil ‘yung planta ng Nestle sa Pilipinas ang siya ang nagpapakain ng breakfast sa buong asia. Kaya ‘yung kape na ginagawa ng Nestle ay pwedeng nanggagaling sa ibang bahagi ng Mindanao kagaya na nga ng Sulu.

At saka ‘yung cassava, ayon sa San Miguel, kahit na isang milyong hektaryang produkto ng cassava pwede nilang bilhin. Kaya mga kapatid, lahat ng naghahanap kung anong tatanimin ninyo, magtanim kayo ng cassava dahil merong bibili ng inyong produkto. Itong ibat-ibang masasabi natin na magandang mga susi sa kinabukasan ng Sulu.

At hindi lamang ‘yon. Hindi lamang USAID ang tumutulong para sa ating kaunlaran at kapayapaan maging ang Asian Development Bank din ay tumutulong rito sa mga agrarian reform community kagaya halimbawa doon sa patikul. At ang ADB ay tumutulong para maglagay ng Halal slaughter house at culture ng Abalone at mga sea horses na produktong pang-export. At naglalagay din nang mga — ‘yung USAID — naglalagay din mga solar drier hindi lamang sa panglima, kung saan pupunta kami mamaya, kundi na rin sa indanan at ibat-iba pang mga bayan.

Kaya ito ang ilan sa ating mga ginagawa. Ang adb rin ay tumutulong sa paggawa ng farm-to-market roads at pagsemento doon sa Ppatikul, sa Siasi at sa pagsemento ng Jolo at Jolo trunkline roads na malapit nang matapos, at mga access road. At malapit na ring isemento ang sampung kilometro ng Jolo circumferential road. Hindi ba ‘yon ang huling-huli na? Bago matapos na ang national highway dito sa Jolo.

Kaya ito mga kaibigan ang ating mga ginagawa. At sisimulan na rin ng pag-aaral ng feasibility study para lumaki ‘yung maimbung seaport nang sa ganun ay pwedeng mangalakal hindi lamang sa Zamboanga kundi na rin sa ibang mga bansa ng BIMP-EAGA. Kaya mga kaibigan, ‘yan ang ilan sa ating mga ginagawa para sa kaunlaran ng sulu ngunit magagawa natin lahat nito kung meron tayong kapayapaan. Gaya ng sabi ko kambal ang kaunlaran at kapayapaan. Kung walang kaunlaran, parating may giyera; kung parating may giyera, walang kaunlaran.

Kaya narito tayo ngayon. Kailangan sabay-sabay nating labanan ang kalaban. Kailangan sabay-sabay nating labanan ang kahirapan. Kailangan buo ang ating approach — may left hand, may right hand. ‘Yung right hand ‘yung matigas na kamay ng batas, ‘yung left hand ‘yung bukas na kamay ng ating kaunlaran. Sa right hand, gusto kong batiin ‘yung ating mga sundalo dahil sa malaking nagawa nilang nabuwag nila muli ang isa pang kampo ng Abu Sayyaf kahapon. Congratulations sa inyo, ating mga kawal. At sa left hand naman, salamat dahil nagkakaisa tayo sa ibat-ibang mga proyekto mula sa malalaking mga kalsada hanggang sa maliliit na mga pautang sa mga Carrageenan at pabahay sa mga biktima ng giyera.

Kailangan talaga huwag nating kalilimutan: isa lamang ang Pilipinas kahit na maraming kultura. Isa lamang ang hangarin natin — sabay-sabay kaunlaran at kapayapaan. Isa lamang ang ating bansa. Isa ang ating watawat — ang Republika ng Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat.

Happy anniversary sa Sultanate of Sulu!

Speech of President Arroyo during the departure ceremonies for a 5-day visit to the U.S.A and Europe

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the departure ceremonies for a 5-day visit to the U.S.A and Europe

[Delivered at the Centennial Terminal II, NAIA, Pasay City, September 24, 2003]

General Abaya and the other major service commanders, fellow workers in government, minamahal kong kababayan:

Paalis ako ngayon patungong Estados Unidos, Italya at pransya kaugnay ng ating hangaring polisyang panlabas foreign policy nababatay sa kapayapaan, kaunlaran at paglaban sa terorismo.

Ang nangyari sa Oakwood ay bahagi na ng nakaraan. Ang pagkakaisa ng bansa ay nabuo na muli.

Ang proseso ng katarungan para sa militar at sibilyan ay patuloy ang pag-inog. Patuloy na umuusad ang ating laban kontra sa kahirapan, lalo na ngayong may inaasahang pang-matagalang kapayapaan sa Mindanao.

Ang mga nagkakalat na intriga at nanggugulo ay isasantabi na.

I have designated Vice President Guingona as caretaker while I'm away. This is an institutional act. Some people are sowing intrigues about our policy differences with the Vice President but these are not pertinent to his designation. I am confident in his full capacity and resolve to uphold and implement constitutional governance and he will have the full support of the executive branch. Ang mga pangamba na dulot ng giyera sa Iraq, banta ng SARS, El Niño, destabilisasyon ay tuluyan nang napawi, at napalitan na nang bagong pag-asa sa mga lungsod at kanayunan.

Pinili ko bilang susunod na Secretary of National Defense si Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita. Siya ay lilipat sa Defense kapag sa palagay niya ay maaari na niyang iwanan ang trabaho ng peace process sa kaniyang kapalit, na 'yan ay si National Anti-Poverty Commission Secretary Ging Deles.

I call on the Armed Forces, the Defense department and the public to lend their full support for Secretary Ermita when he assumes the position sometime in the near future. And also to support Secretary Ging Deles when she also is ready to assume after Secretary Ermita decides that he has reached a stage when he can leave it to her. Not that Ging is not capable but of course Secretary Ermita I'm sure would like to be there when some of the early fruits of his hard work are bearing.

Secretary Ermita comes with an impressive track record in peace, development and security management. I am giving him three priorities: one, sustain the momentum of reforms in the military organization; two, bring the peace process into the mainstream of defense doctrine; and three, push forward the AFP modernization. I'm confident his impressive government record and vast experience will lead him on.

magtatalumpati sa United Nations. Ang mensaheng aking ipaparating sa kanila ay tungkol sa kapayapaan at seguridad.

Sa Vatican, ipaparating ko sa Santo Papa ang mainit na pagmamahal ng ating sambayanan, at hihilingin sa kaniya na basbasan ang bawa't mamamayan, pamilya at tahananang Pilipino saanman sila naroroon.

Sa Paris, pasasalamat ko ang UNESCO dahil sa tulong nito sa Pilipinas para itaguyod ang kapayapaan, kaunlaran, kagalingan ng utak ng ating mga kabataan, palakasin ang ating kultura kasama na 'yung pagpapa-alaga ng ating rice terraces sa ating mga pinakaliblib na mga barangay.

Sa aking mga pakikipagpulong, bibigyang-diin ko ang kahalagahan ng kapayapaan sa Mindanao at ang pagtulong sa ating laban kontra sa kahirapan at terorismo.

Pagkatapos ng Cancun, kailangang harapin natin ang mga pagbabago sa trade politics na makatuwiran para sa mga umuunlad na mga bansa o developing nations at nagpapahalaga sa ikagagaling ng sangkatauhan.

Sa Oktubre ay apat ang kaganapang may kaugnayan sa ating pambansang kapakanan: ang Asean Summit sa Bali, ang APEC Summit sa Bangkok, ang OIC Summit sa Kuala Lumpur at ang pagdalaw ni Pangulong Bush sa Pilipinas.

Ang mga lider ng mundo ay magiging mainit ang pagtanggap sa bagong ugnayan ng Pilipinas sa mundo, patunay na ang ating mga pagsisikap ay nagbubunga na. Kailangan natin ang pinakamagandang pakikipagloob ng mundo kung gusto nating umasenso.

Kaya samahan ninyo akong magdasal habang ipinapakilala natin ang Pilipinas sa mundo at itinatakda ang malaking pagbabago sa ating pambansang pamumuhay, pagkakaisa mula sa pagkakawatak-watak, kapayapaan mula sa kaguluhan, at katiyakan mula sa pag-aalinlangan.

Patuloy nating itataguyod at ipagmamalaki ang kagalingan at panindigan ng ating bansa.

Maraming salamat.

Speech of President Arroyo during a meeting with the Filipino community in Jersey City

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a meeting with the Filipino community in Jersey City

[Delivered at the St. Peter's College, Yanitelli Center, Kennedy Blvd., Jersey City, U.S.A, September 26, 2003]

Thank you very much, Ambassador Del Rosario.

Governor McGreevey; Mayor Cunningham and Mrs. Cunningham, Assemblywoman Guigley; Mayor Rivas, Father Loughran; Consul General Lacanlale; Loida Nicolas, representing the Filipino-Americans all over the country; and Rudy Nicolas, thank you for your wonderful plaque; Carmen Flores and the other leaders of the community; all the different members of the event organization committee of this wonderful Philippine community, thank you very much for your wonderful welcome.

Isang magandang gabi sa inyong lahat. At careng Cabalen cung capangpangan, mayap a bengi quecongan. Dagiti kakailyak ti bangir ni mamang ko, naimbag nga rabii yo amin apo. Tan masantos ya labi ed sikayon amin, pangasinan. Sa aton mga kaiguonan gikan sa mindanao asa ko nidako, maayong gabii kaninyong tanan. Kag sa mga kasimanwa sang akon bana, maayong gab-i sa inyo nga tanan.

Nagagalak akong makapiling kayong mga Pilipino na nakatira sa New Jersey at sa North East United States. Consul General Lacanlale tells me that Jersey City has the largest concentration of Filipinos in this state, in fact in her whole jurisdiction. There are even more Filipinos in Jersey City than in the whole New York State in New York City.

Hindi lamang 'yon, nalaman ko rin ayon sa supplemental report ng U.S. census of year 2000 na kahit isang porsiyento lamang ang Filipino sa populasyon ng New Jersey State, kayo naman ang pinakamataas na per capita income sa lahat ng ethnic groups.

In the state of New Jersey for the 2000 census of 1999 income, the per capita Filipinos is 81,000 dollars. The statewide median income was 55,000 dollars. At hindi lamang 'yon, sa lahat ng Pilipino sa buong United States, pinakamataas na per capita income taga-Jersey City.

And I would like to encourage the Filipino-American community to translate your economic prosperity into political clout in your adopted country so that you can help advance the interest of your fellow Filipinos. And so that you can contribute to the strengthening of bilateral relations within the United States and the Philippines.

But even now here in New Jersey and Jersey City, I can also see already the Filipinos political clout. The fact that your governor and your mayor and your assemblywoman are all here that's tribute to you, the Filipino-Americans and their constituency.

And I have learned that in New Jersey alone, many Filipino Americans hold important positions and perform important jobs for your community. Well, we are very proud of Bergenfield county mayor, Mayor Rivas, the first Filipino-American to be elected as mayor in Eastern U.S.A. and, you're running for re-election, aren't you mayor?

And he said, “so I told you why you have a big constituency.” and he said, “hindi lang yon, ang dami kong Kapampangan sa aking constituency.”

Well, hearing Jersey City, again, Lingling Lacanlale already said that some of the staff of Mayor Cunningham are also Filipino-Americans like Serafina Senco and Eduardo Tolosa. Congratulations on your recent appointment as director of Jersey City’s department of finance and city assessor of Jersey City.

A tribute not only to the competence of our Filipinos but the fact that they are in the revenue generating agencies is a tribute to the integrity of the Filipinos here in Jersey City. I also met Lucy Hughes earlier and she is with the governor. And I thank you Lucy for bringing Governor McGreevey to our very important gathering. Made important by their presence, made important by the fact that in this hall are some of the most prosperous and respected Filipinos in the United States.

Most of you have chosen to become American citizens but I’m grateful that nonetheless, you have kept your connections to the Philippines. And we in the Philippines continue to be proud of what you have all attained. Without doubt advocating Philippine interests and issues in the U.S. requires a strong and united Philippine-American community. And in the same manner that you have made the Philippines proud of you, the Philippine government also recognizes your continued support for our welfare back home so we have given you a voice in the conduct of Philippine affairs through the Overseas Voting Law.

I remember saying that when the bill is passed into law, I will sign it in 24 hours and I did. And that’s because, for many years when I was a senator, you have always asked me to file a bill to give you voting rights. And I always would file that bill, but when I was a senator it never went beyond the committee level. Finally, when I became president from year 2001, my first State of the Nation Address, I already asked Congress to pass it as part of the urgent administration measures — it has passed. And I hope in the years to come, more and more Filipino-Americans will register to vote for candidates in the Philippines. And at the same time, it’s also good for the welfare of the Philippines that you make your voices heard here in the United States.

In recognition of your contributions to the Philippine economy, I have also just sign into law something I think is more important to you than the Overseas Voting Bill, and that is the Dual Citizenship Act.

The passage of the Dual Citizenship Law is part of our country’s response to globalization but also it serves the strong homing instinct of every Filipino of their long stay in a foreign land. We know that you continue to love the Philippines even if you’re already American citizens. You demonstrate this because you’ve maintained your contacts and your interest in your homeland, and many of you when you retire, you retire in the Philippines. And many of you want to own properties and invest your hard-earned money in our country giving a further boost to the Philippine economy. Now, with the Dual Citizenship Act you can buy all the land you want and you can invest it in any business in the Philippines.

Let me also take this opportunity to reassure you that back home we have well in hand the reported threats to our political and economic stability. I’m sure last July 27 you were all watching not just The Filipino Channel but CNN and all the channels here because some elements of the military captured the headlines of that day. I’m speaking here of the ill-fated mutiny but which ended peacefully and quickly within 20 hours without a shot being fired, without a single drop of blood being shed, without a single square meter of property being destroyed.

And because we showed the world that we can address such a challenge quickly and bloodlessly, the Philippines is stronger today than it was before that attempt. That attempt was done by a handful of officers and the political intriguers who backed them. But on that day — and the market data followed — we saw that our institutions stood tall, our market remains stable, the population calm, and our political process intact.

Nonetheless, I would still ask you to spend even more remittances this time to the country, because it doesn’t mean that everything is perfect in the country, or that I am downplaying the incident of that day, the significance of that situation. No, I am not downplaying the event, rather what I want to underscore is the underlying strength of the Philippine democratic system. And I reassure you that I am in firm control. The country is stable and moving forward on all cylinders. The fact that I am here rather than hold up in Malacañang is testament to the fact that the country is stable and strong. And I will repeat, I remain confident that our nation is stronger as a result of overcoming that coup last month and that we had no cause for concern.

I'm here because I have an obligation to fulfill my duties abroad in pursuit of peace in Mindanao and in pursuit of the fight against terrorism. There's nothing going on at home that would deter me from this overseas trip and besides I owe a visit to the Philippine community of New Jersey. I can come to visit you because I have confidence in the support of the people back home who believed in upholding the democratic traditions of our nation. But as a fellow Filipino speaking to fellow Filipinos, let me express that it does a disservice to the nation for political intriguers to continually try to upset the ship of state. Those self-centered political intriguers are motivated by selfishness and they should focus on a positive agenda of building up the nation not tearing it down.

I say this because being Filipinos you know full well that the rumor mill is in full tilt in our election season. It is our political equivalent of the typhoon season, and that is part of the culture back home that I certainly hope to break as I try to build stronger institutions to support a stronger republic.

We must break that cycle, but let me assure you again the nation is stable, the economy is even stronger than many of our neighbors. While some of them are suffering from very low growth rates or negative growth rates, our country has experienced stable growth rates in the last two and a half years and low inflation at the same time. And, of course, peace in Mindanao is within our grasp.

My main focus has been to break the cycle of politics, focus on economic reform, work for peace, and the fight against terrorism. Because today, it is clearer than ever before that peace is an indispensable condition for economic development just as development is an essential component for peace. Nothing will do more to lift the Philippines out of poverty than peace itself. My trip to New York is motivated by my keen desire to advance peace on all fronts. I will travel anywhere anytime to advance peace in Mindanao.

Yesterday, I met with Prime Minister Mahathir to help me advance the cause of peace in Mindanao. He is the prime mover in helping us negotiate peace with the MILF. As a leader in the Muslim world and the organization of the Islamic countries his role is indispensable, and I hope one of his many legacies will be to bring peace to Mindanao.

But I would also like to acknowledge that President Bush is doing much to help our peace in Mindanao. Last May, some of you were there in Washington when I made my state visit, our joint communique contained a commitment from President Bush that the U.S. will give financial and diplomatic support for our peace efforts with the MILF. And they have been giving diplomatic support. The U.S. government has assigned the U.S. Institute of Peace to help us in our negotiations. And in this team of negotiators we have a very high-powered set of five former U.S. ambassadors to the Philippines working again for the Philippines for our peace process — Ambassador Nicholas Platt, Ambassador Murphy, Ambassador Wisner and Ambassador Solomon and Ambassador Bosworth — five former U.S. ambassadors all holding important positions in America's society today and they are all working to help us in our peace process with the MILF. At the expense of the U.S. government not at our expense. But that's not the only financial assistance of the U.S. government for our peace process, they have also put in their congressional budget an initial 30 million dollars as a carrot for the peace process so that the moment the MILF signs a peace agreement the USAID will spend 30 million dollars to rehabilitate the conflict areas.

At the same time I'm working with other heads of state to ensure continued cooperation in our battle to rid Southeast Asia of the threat of terrorism. While I was in the U.N. yesterday and today, I also made a speech before the general assembly, I met with Kofi Annan, and I finalized the election of the Philippines as the Asian representative to the U.N. Security Council. This is great honor for us because a seat in the U.N. Security Council is not done by rotation, it is done by elections. And the Asians voted for us.

I also met at lunch yesterday, as I said earlier, with the U.S. Institute of Peace and their negotiators who will aid the Philippines in our crucial negotiations in Mindanao.

So, my time in Northeastern United States is Targetted and well spent. Governor McGreevey asked me, how long am I staying here for? Well I said I arrived yesterday morning and I'm leaving right after this meeting. But it's time well spent: Kofi Annan, Mahathir, the U.S. Institute for Peace, the Filipinos of New Jersey.

I'm promoting the interest of the Philippines in the United Nations. This trip is not a trip to the U.S. specifically, it is a trip to the U.N. New York happens to be where the U.N. is located. So, since my trip is primarily for U.N.-related activities, it's not necessary for me to spend a longer time than my U.N. activities. I already worked with Washington anyway on a range of issues every day. It's easy for me to call up President Bush at any time. We worked together on a number of issues everyday. I do not need to take a trip to get things done here. I just need to take an extra trip to get to know these very successful Filipinos in New Jersey. And I'm sure you share with me the thought of looking forward to a warm rousing welcome for president bush by the Filipino people when he visits in October.

The Filipino experience in this country is a positive outcome of time -honored friendship based on shared values and traditions. Filipinos among other ethnic groups are held in the highest respect and trust. And not only here in New Jersey even in the West Coast. Today, in New York, I was also able to have a conversation with the young Filipina scientist named Marie de Guzman Gordon, is she here? I asked her to come. There you are Marie. She's from the west coast, from University of Southern California. I asked her to be here so that the Philippine community can know her because she has discovered a gene therapy cure for cancer approved by the FDA. That's the use of biotechnology rather than chemotherapy to cure cancer. And we should be proud of her as they in the west coast are also proud of you Filipinos here.

Indeed, I look forward to the day when as a community you can put more Filipino-Americans in positions of influence in areas of public policy, legislation, administration, law enforcement and justice.

I would like to take this opportunity also to repeat that we have another young Filipino here, Pierre Barredo, who is running for state senator. I also call on your support in our efforts to push the Veterans Bill. The Veterans Bill has passed Congress is now in the senate. And that's farther than it has ever gone in a long time, in the many years we've been trying to pass the Veterans Bill. And the chances of seeing the Veterans Bill passed have also increased because now when I went to Washington I met a newly-formed U.S.-Philippine caucus in the U.S. Congress who are made up of congressmen and congresswomen dedicated to pushing the cause of the Philippines in the U.S. Congress. I want to congratulate Ambassador Del Rosario for pushing that caucus to come into being.

And speaking of Filipinos in California, we have other Filipinos in California, also prominent, working on the Veterans Bill. I don't know if you know Dean Devlin, he is the producer of movies like "The Patriot," "Independence Day," "Godzilla," he is Filipino-American. He is producing a video infomercial to present to the U.S. Senate, an advocacy for the Veterans Equity Bill. And who are starring in his video infomercial, other Filipino-Americans like Lou Diamond Phillips, Tia Carrere and Rob Schneider. They're all working for the cause of the Philippines, they are all proud of their Philippine origin.

The pivotal role of overseas Filipinos in nation-building cannot be overemphasized. Aside from all of these that I've mentioned, there is also that particular statistic that Filipino-Americans constitute one-third of all overseas Filipinos but you contribute two-thirds of foreign exchange remittances to the Philippines.

I take this opportunity therefore to thank you and to ask you to continue to support our economy so that our inspiration of liberating our people from poverty can be fully realized.

Ako'y taus-pusong nagpapasalamat sa inyo dahil sa mga napakalaking kontribusyon ninyo dito sa hangarin ng ating bayan. Inaasahan kong tuloy ang inyong tulong sa ating bansa para naman matamo natin lahat ang ating mga minimithi at sana sa ganun darating ang araw masasabi natin 'yung mga Filipino ay kasing-matagumpay doon sa pilipinas kagaya ng dito sa New Jersey.

Sa inyong lahat magandang gabi.

Maraming salamat sa inyong pagdalo.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Pampanga Senior Citizens Congress/Multisectoral Program and formal declaration to run in the May 2004 elections

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Pampanga Senior Citizens Congress/Multisectoral Program and formal declaration to run in the May 2004 elections

[Delivered at the Expo Filipino Amphitheater, Clarkfield, Angeles City, Pampanga, October 4, 2003]

Maraming salamat.

Dacal a salamat, Governor Lito Lapid. Binabati ko rin si Speaker Joe de Venecia at yung ibang mga opisyal ng Lakas party na pumunta rito bagamat kusa silang pumunta rito, hindi tayo nag-organize at huminging pumunta sila rito, thank you very much. Binabati ko rin at nagpapasalamat ako kay board member Robert David at lahat ng mga senior citizens ng Pampanga na narito ngayon. Gusto kong malaman ng buong sambayanang Pilipino na ito ay isang kumbensyon ng senior citizens ng Pampanga pero nag-gate crash na ang marami sa ating mga kasama kasi nalaman nilang sa ating mga senior citizens ko ibibigay ang isang mahalagang ulat.

Salamat rin sa CREBA, kanina imbitado rin nila ako sa kanilang kumbensyon sa Holiday Inn. Sabi ko sa kanila, pumunta na lang kayo sa Centennial Expo, kasama ng kumbensyon ng senior citizens, doon na lang ako gagawa ng aking keynote speech. Caring ali-aliwang beneficiary naning mount pinatubo housing programs, dacal a salamat, queing laging pamag-suporta yo kanako. Caring senior citizens, dacal a salamat ing suporta yo kanako ampo queng tata ko, ing pinga... Ing Presidente Diosdado Macapagal.

Narito ang maraming kapampangan pero binabati ko rin ang buong bansa. Nandito ang senior citizens, sila ay nagsisikap para maganda ang kinabukasan para sa ating kabataan na kinatawan nitong araw na ito naman ni Bambam Aquino, salamat sa iyong pagsuporta sa akin. Salamat rin kay Ginoong Pangulong Dulalia sa iyong magandang sinabi sa ngalan ng housing industry at kang Marissa Sanchez, salamat que pa magkilala yo queng gewa ning kekatang gobyerno para ding biktima ning Mount Pinatubo.

Caring ali-aliwang opisyal keti queng Pampanga — governor, aliwang opisyal naning probinsiya, caring congressmen, caring city mayors, municipal mayors, sa napakaraming mga officials na pumunta rito sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng Central Luzon maging sa buong Pilipinas. Nandiyan si Senator Bobby Barbers at yung iba't-ibang mga congressmen. Salamat sa inyong lahat sa pagpunta rito. At siyempre yung aking mga Cabinet members na laging tumutulong para maganda ang kinabukasan ng ating bansa.

My beloved countrymen and countrywomen:

Today, I address our nation together with our Cabalens. Our historic problem has been the need for economic development to fight poverty.

Historically, our economic development has been slow compared to our neighbors. While we did better than our neighbors during the last two and a half years in the aftermath of the Asian crisis, with the region now starting to recover, our neighbors are starting to accelerate their growth again. This time we cannot afford to be left behind.

Our historic problems cannot be blamed on any single president, because the problems are fundamental caused by our economic and political system.

To really develop our economy and create a stronger republic, we need to change our system, to institute true reforms in our politics and our economy.

We also need to unify as a people.

In view of this need for unification, last December 30, I announced that I did not wish to seek for election for the presidency in 2004. I wanted to pass the torch. I wanted to earn my personal peace from the riveting pressures of presidential work. But most of all, I wanted to give our people relief from unabated politicking.

Nang inihayag ko noong Disyembre na hindi ko hahangarin ang pangunguluhan sa 2004. Naisip kong ito lamang ang paraan para makaiwas ang bansa sa pabigat ng nakakalasang pulitika na nagbabantang, nagbabantang sirain ang ating katatagang pulitikal at pagsulong sa ekonomiya.

For a while our enemies laid down their disruptive swords of politicking, and we finally moved as a country. In the first six months, we achieved 4.8 percent GNP growth, the highest growth in our country since the Asian crisis. In so short a time, we accomplished one of the most massive housing programs undertaken in our history. Kaya nga sabi ng CREBA, ang patakaran ng ating administrasyon ang pinakamabisa para sa pabahay sa buong kasaysayan ng ating bansa. And at the same time, we kept the supply and the price of food stable. We won victories in pinning down corrupt high-ranking officials, some of them on the basis of lifestyle checks never been done before in such a systematic manner. Long-awaited judgments were handed down in order to make us overcome the catharsis and trauma of the last several decades including the cases of the Marcos wealth and the coco levy.

In the all-out war against illegal drugs, we confiscated in this last eight months or so volumes of illegal drugs and arrested drug dealers in numbers that far outstripped those achieved in years before. We have sought a peaceful resolution to the Muslim insurgency, and we are well on the way to signing a permanent peace pact. Sabi ng CREBA, marami tayong nabuwag na red tape para sa pabahay. Hindi lamang para sa pabahay, we cut down red tape to make sure crucial infrastructure are built — yung Roll-On/Roll-Off ferry program. Caring taga-Western Pampanga, mga taga-Zambales, mga taga-Bataan, nandito yung mga ating officials, puwede nang bumiyahang sa Manila nang isang oras mula sa Bataan, hindi sa kalsada, doon sa ating Roll-On/Roll-Off ferry. We built new bridges and we are building highways, like the long-awaited, often-aborted expansion of the north expressway. We began meaningful debates on changes in the constitution, particularly on the parliamentary and federal form of government.

I longed together with our people to savor the gains of unity by taking myself out of the political landscape. For a while our enemies halted and we moved forward. We proved to ourselves how much we can achieve when we defeat divisiveness.

Ngunit hindi tumagal, ang aking naunang kapasyahan ay hindi nagpatigil ng tuluyan sa mapanirang daloy ng mga pangyayari. Our enemies prefer to sow disunity so that they can wrest power from the people, who become strong when our economy becomes strong. Ang mga agarang tagumpay natin ay sinalubong muli ng lubhang pulitika. Nagbagong anyo pa nga ang pulitika, nagkaroon pa ng sekretong sabwatan upang ibagsak ang lehitimong pamahalaan. Fearing that our success would frustrate their plans, our enemies once again resorted to their machiavellian schemes in Oakwood and in the hit-and-run exposes. Black propaganda, bulung-bulungan, dinasisiyahang mga sundalo, armas, mga kinita mula sa katiwalian at krimen, at maging ilang bahagi ng media ay nakuhang tipunin ang mga puwersang di-tapat sa ating demokratikong sistema. They do not really want our people to be strong. They want to hold the monopoly of strength through guns and gold, drugs and dregs.

Ang sabwatan ay nahinog sa oakwood, na nagbigay-linaw sa mga natatagong ambisyon ng mga taong hangad ibalik ang ating bansa sa madilim na panahon ng diktadura, gustong ibagsak ang demokrasya, at lupigin ang kalayaan.

Ang Oakwood ay pinuntirya ang puso at kaluluwa ng ating republika, kaya dapat lamang na pawalang-saysay ko ang mga naging bunga nito.

Nasupil natin ang kudeta sa loob ng wala pang isang araw, pero nagasgasan lamang natin ang ibabaw ng masama nitong kahulugan: ang ugnayan sa pagitan ng krimen at pulitika, ang paggamit sa walang muwang na sundalo, ang pag-iwas sa katarungan ng mga kriminal na nasa pasilyo ng kapangyarihang pulitikal.

And most of all, Oakwood broke wide the deep social and political divisions that we now have, that we have had for the past three years because for a long time, we have not been able to strengthen our Republic.

We need to heal the deep divisions within our society. We must have justice, but we must also have reconciliation. We must put a closure to our national divisions. We must give ourselves a fresh start.

Ang landas pasulong ay hindi madali. And in the more than two and a half years of my presidency, I have gained the experience necessary to understand what we need to do in order to change society in a way that leads to economic development and the elimination of poverty. Thus, I have deferred my retirement. I will sacrifice my yearnings for personal quiet and release from presidential strain and anxiety. And I will offer myself to the electorate in 2004 I will offer myself as the leader with the experience and vision necessary to change society, to achieve economic development, and eliminate poverty. Tatakbo ako sa pagka-pangulo sa eleksyon ng Mayo 2004.

In the same way that I made a decision last December 30 by myself. Today, I make known that I reached this decision also on my own discernment. In making this decision, I could have invoked the prodding of my party, the clamor of the people, the support of many. These, you know, are true and already made known by the media. But I am not motivated to run because I was thrust, shoved, urged or pressed. Nakikita ko ang pangangailangan nang mas higit pang sakripisyo at gagampanan ko ito.

Kailangan nating siguruhin ang ating katatagang pulitikal habang nagsisikap tayong makapagbigay ng pagkain sa bawat mesa, tahanan, trabaho.

As I said, I have gained the experience. I have gained the experience necessary to understand what we need to do to change society in a way that leads to a future that we Filipinos dream of and rightly deserve. A future marked by a prosperous economy, a future where we would have defeated poverty, a future where our people enjoy true social equity and equal opportunity, a future where we can once again stand proud among the community of nations confident of what we have accomplished for ourselves and for our nations. I long for a strong republic steep in justice, unity and peace.

Ibig sabihin nito ay babalansehin natin ang mga kinakailangan ng kabutihang panlipunan: depensa at seguridad, at pagsulong ng ekonomiya.

Ang ekonomiya ay sinalakay ng mga lokal at pandaigdig na pangyayari noong humihingi ng malinis, propesyonal at magaling ng pangangasiwa ng ating piskal at macroeconomic na direksyon.

Dapat tayong humubog ng pagpapatuloy ng matapat na pamamahala. Ang katiwalian ay dapat sugpuin. At kaya nga kung sinumang miyembro ng aking angkan na mapatunayang magkasala ay kailangang magdusa. Wala sa aking pamilya, personal o opisyal, ay ligtas mula sa batas.

Nasa pampang tayo ngayon, nagdidiriwang ng Linggo ng mga senior citizens, ngunit doon sa Mindanao dumadaing para sa kapayapaan at kaunlaran. Dapat nating dinggin ang panawagan at hamon ng mga biktima ng hidwaan.

Ang ating laban ay tungo sa demokratikong pagka-bansa dahil ito ay walang tigil na paglaban sa kahirapan. Kailangan nating pareho itong mapagtagumpayan kung nais natin nang magandang kinabukasan para sa kabataan, para sa apo ng ating mga Senior Citizens.

Ang alyansa ng administrasyon ay gagawa ng isang kampanyang nakabatay sa plataporma ng reporma at rekonsilyasyon.

I run because I'm confident that the experience I have gained will enable me to make a difference. That the experience I have gained will enable the people to pin their hopes and aspirations with me. Tiwala ako na ang sambayanang Pilipino ay nasa aking likuran at ang ating makatarungang dahilan ay magtatagumpay. Mahigpit nating ipapatupa ng mga pagbabago. I am confident that together we will win our future. Kakamtin natin para sa bansang ito ang mga pangmatagalang biyaya ng demokrasya, katarungan, kalayaan at kasaganaan.

Some ask why I changed my mind. What matters more is that I changed my mind because there is a higher cause — to change society. To change society in a way that flourishes our future. It would have been easier to take the road to retirement. Taking up the call laid before me exacts more courage, more sacrifice, more obedience to god and our people.

Paglilingkuran ko ang sambayanan kahit pa ako ay hamakin dahil dito. And humbly, I accept this sacred vocation. I shall stay married to my country.

Though I'm sad to say it, I can no longer stave the dam of politics. The political season is here. Hindi ako nag-aakala na titigil ang pamumulitika pagkatapos nito, mas lalo pang sigurong lulubha.

But even as I announce my decision today, I also wish to give greater certainty to business and our investors. Our programs are devoted to strengthening the economy, creating more jobs, and encouraging business activity that is unhampered by corruption and red tape. I instruct the bureaucracy to stay on track in the task of governance, and I shall keep a steady hand over the concerns of the state. I ask our people to keep your eyes focused on the challenges we face daily. Let us not allow ruthless politics to distract us from the all important charge of nation-building. Politicians come and go but our challenges are here to stay and to be met. Ang tanging hangad ko ay ang labanan ngayon ay magiging isang labanan para sa balota at hindi labanan upang ibagsak ang gobyerno sa pamamagitan ng dahas.

We must go to the sacred table of electoral decision in 2004, keeping in mind that reform and reconciliation, in the final analysis, will be what will heal the wounds of our divisiveness. And as we do, let us move on to flourish our future.

Mahal kong kababayan, magsama-sama tayo sanang umasa sa diyos, umasa sa isa't-isa at umasa sa ating pamahalaan na may magandang bukas tayong harapin at ang Pilipino ay muling tataas noo sa mundo.

Finally, I pray to God to grant me the grace to heal our divided land; the fortitude to unite our people; and the courage to be truly a president of reconciliation. A president of reform and reconciliation bringing peace and unity and the Lord's bounty to all our people under God's Divine Providence.

Patnubayan nawa ng Diyos ang Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat.

Speech of President Arroyo at the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) Business and Investment Summit

Speech

President of the Philippines
At the ASEAN Business and Investment Summit

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Bali Hilton International Hotel, Nusa Dua, Bali, Indonesia, October 6, 2003]

GEARING TOWARDS ECONOMIC PROSPERITY AND POLITICAL STABILITY IN THE ASEAN

I'm here in ASEAN to seek for our people the blessings of economic and political security. All the region's heads of state are gathered here in Bali to sign the historic Bali Accord II, which will set our collective directions for the future. On the part of the Philippines, we will continue to muster regional consensus to fight poverty and secure our nation and our region from terrorism.

Pushing forward Intra-ASEAN Growth Areas and ASEAN integration is indispensable to the main theme of our Bali Summit, which is "towards an ASEAN economic and security community".

The forces of economic development and global security are becoming more and more tightly intertwined. Cancun was a wake-up call for all nations to refocus on the stark relationship between world poverty and world trade. I'm certain, this topic will continue to spill over into our ASEAN Summit.

The collapse of the World Trade Organization trade talks in Mexico unravels the disparity in perception between first and third world countries, on how international trade should be conducted. While the WTO promised much in helping bridge the economic divide through a liberalized trading environment, it has only managed to tarry so painfully on delivery.

The emergence of the Group of 21 during the Cancun Summit, is a development that the Philippines will continue to work with, to press for agricultural reforms and the removal of first world subsidies to farm sectors. ASEAN should unite in support of this alliance to push for our collective interests in the WTO and ensure a just and fair global trading system.

These recent developments also underscore the need for greater cooperation among us to keep our vision of an integrated, prosperous and competitive ASEAN by 2020 on track.

I will not repeat the wise words that His Majesty the Sultan of Brunei spoke earlier about the blessings of integration. I would just want to practically add, in a practical sense, that we should consider the outcome of the McKinsey competitiveness study which it did for the ASEAN, which identifies the weak links in our integration efforts as well as to accelerate them. The McKinsey study identified the priority sectors in fast-tracking our regional integration, beginning with consumer goods and electronics, and the strengthening of ASEAN institutions, and addressing our individual country concerns. We need to look into these priorities to promote regional complementation and make our region more globally competitive.

I understand that the Business Advisory Council as well as the ASEAN economic ministers looked at this study and added more areas for ASEAN integration. So that now we have eleven areas for ASEAN integration, and the Philippines is honored to be chosen as the coordinator for the electronics sector, which makes up 60 percent of our exports.

The Intra-Regional Growth Areas like Brunei-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East ASEAN Growth Area (BIMP-EAGA) and the greater Mekong sub-region provide an appropriate environment to gain a relevant understanding of the dynamic developments in the region as a whole.

Sub-regional growth areas such as BIMP-EAGA and the greater Mekong sub-region are not merely building blocks of AFTA, they are essential elements to fully realize and sustain a genuine ASEAN economic integration.

Sub-regional growth areas do not weaken initiatives towards a single market. Rather, they complement and accelerate the realization of an ASEAN economic community, and maximize their own full potential through integrative enhancement of capacities among neighboring provinces and states, and by enhancing the traditional trading relations in the growth area that have existed for centuries.

For instance, in the BIMP-EAGA, we are made up of the regions, the internal regions in our countries that share common seas. The common seas have been our trading roots for centuries, and that is why it is natural there to be even more accelerated in the trade and integration within the BIMP-EAGA provinces of our four countries.

At the business firm level, investments in sub-regional growth areas such as the BIMP-EAGA enable firms to gain a better understanding of the changing customer needs within the region. It is a fruitful route of entry for small and medium enterprises or SMEs if they wish to gain particular signaling of customer needs. In fact, within the BIMP-EAGA, it has been the SMEs that have been the most vigorous in the private sector.

Through BIMP-EAGA institutions such as the East ASEAN Business Council and the BIMP facilitation center, more accurate and up-to-date information is within reach of investors. This enables businesses to craft responsive business plans and deploy resources more efficiently.

The Philippines has enthusiastically supported the BIMP-EAGA initiative since it was founded in 1994.

In 1997, because of the Asian crisis, the BIMP-EAGA momentum was halted. And since I became president in 2001, we have sought to revive that momentum.

I'm pleased that since the 11th BIMP-EAGA senior officials meeting and 8th Ministerial Meeting, which our country organized in Davao City last month, there has been a very strong indication of support by the stakeholders in the sub-region.

The meeting set the stage for BIMP-EAGA's strengthening through confidence-building initiatives, such as the opening of air and sea passenger and cargo services between Davao and Manado; between Zamboanga, Tawi-tawi, Sabah and Sandakan; between Zamboanga, Tawi-tawi and Tawau, among others, and the consolidation of existing institutional mechanisms and processes.

To consolidate these mechanisms and processes in the BIMP-EAGA Summit later this afternoon, I shall propose that the Asian Development Bank, which is the BIMP-EAGA advisor, should appoint a senior official to take care of BIMP-EAGA matters and push the envelope forward.

From a business standpoint, there are so many brilliant opportunities in BIMP-EAGA. To highlight a few: agro-industry, fisheries especially in the southern Philippine seas, energy, tourism — and we are here in Bali to dramatize that — telecommunications, air and sea linkages, retail, financial services, construction, among other areas.

BIMP-EAGA, of course, is mindful of the perceived security issue in the area. And I would like to assure the ASEAN business community that this is being vigorously addressed.

The Philippines is currently prepared for three major port-to-port bilateral customs-immigration-quarantine-security meetings with Malaysia and Indonesia to address border-crossing issues. We expect port-to-port arrangements to be concluded for Zamboanga and Sandakan, General Santos City and Bitung, and Davao and Manado. The accession of Brunei Darussalam to the agreement of information exchange and establishment of communication procedures which was initiated by the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysia after 9-11, completes the BIMP-EAGA loop, security loop, and is also a significant step forward.

Likewise, the Philippines will soon host the First BIMP-EAGA Security Officials Conference, to strengthen direct contacts among law enforcers within the sub-regional growth area. Through all these and more, we shall forge a stronger collective push against terrorism and transnational crime.

As I said, the theme of this summit is economic and security collectiveness, and this is the same not just for ASEAN but also especially for BIMP-EAGA. This has a bearing on the imminent stint of the Philippines in the U.N. Security Council. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the nations of ASEAN and the nations of Asia, for that matter, for supporting our nomination to the U.N. Security Council. There, I shall carry on our common banner of collective security, multilateral peacekeeping and the Rule of Law. These principles are strong guarantees of an ASEAN economic and security community.

Our summit meeting here in Bali, also links up with our determined drive for peace and development in Mindanao, which along with Palawan is that portion of the Philippines that belongs to BIMP-EAGA. We have the full support of the U.N. Secretary General, for this effort. I am grateful to Malaysia for facilitating the projected peace talks, just as Indonesia facilitated our peace talks with the MNLF almost a decade ago. The OIC countries are keenly awaiting developments with growing commitments of aid and investments. The U.S. Institute for Peace has committed to put in concrete support for conflict-resolution.

We're also paving the way for the establishment of a Multi-Donor Trust Fund that will cut in once a new peace accord is forged. This was one of the major outputs for our region of the World Bank meeting that was just recently held in Dubai. This multi-donor fund, the peace dividend for Mindanao will be led by the World Bank with commitments from the Islamic Development Bank, the OPEC, the USAid, and the governments of several QIC countries.

Yes, we will push the envelope on this effort as we unleash massive public resources and official development assistance for infrastructure, socioeconomic programs and autonomous capacity-building in southern Philippines, the part of the Philippines that belongs to BIMP-EAGA.

For the Philippines, I also wish to assure you of greater certainty to business and our investors. Our programs in the Philippines are devoted to strengthening the economy, creating more jobs, and encouraging business activity that is unhampered by corruption red tape in government.

The business environment is ready for a good take-off in the Philippines, in the BIMP-EAGA and in ASEAN as a whole. We shall continue to move towards greater complementarity as we shore up regional security. We shall win peace and development in the pockets of conflict as we shift the base of economic growth to the communities.

ASEAN has created and continues to offer opportunities for economic consolidation whether in ASEAN as a whole or in intra-ASEAN sub-regional groupings such as BIMP-EAGA. These opportunities are the key to regional stability and prosperity.

I am confident that the vibrant ASEAN business community will reach for these opportunities. Thank you.

President of the Philippines
At the Lakas Christian-Muslim Democrats National Directorate Meeting at Club Filipino, Greenhills, San Juan, Metro Manila

[Sent from Sultan Suite, Hotel Sheraton Laguna Nusa Dua, Bali, Indonesia, October 7, 2003]

My beloved partymates:

I've felt your sincere nudging to convince me to be the party's standard bearer in next years polls.

Last Saturday, I took the choice. My decision was based on my own determination of the national interest and the welfare of the people. But, though it was not a reaction to external influences, pressures or interests, you were also in my mind as I reminisced your own sacrifices during those dark hours in the life of our democracy. You were among the first to rush to my side during the Oakwood incident. It was an act of paramount patriotism for which a democratic leader must be grateful.

I've gained the knowledge, experience and insight to lead the nation out of the state of division, political instability and stunted growth that we inherited two years ago.

The ASEAN summit in Bali, which I'm presently attending, is an opportunity in this direction because its now striving to define our collective directions in a world beset by conflict and poverty. We must stream the Philippines into these directions as we fulfill the imperatives of our own reform and reconciliation from within.

Nation-building must be shaped by enlightened statesmanship and I challenge the opposition to define its own foreign policy platform and present this to the people.

Lakas is the strongest party in the country today. I thank the party for its unstinting support of my program of government and the people may be assured that our program of reform and reconciliation has the backing of a large segment of the legislature and our local government units.

Our party will work on a fresh platform combining strong economic, security, political, diplomatic and social features that will bring our nation at par with the imperatives of the millennium. We are ready for the long fight against poverty and terrorism, for the responsibility of strong democratic governance based on honesty, effectiveness and subsidiarity.

The price is costly in terms of the pains of political battle in a society that is caught in the quagmire of recrimination, black propaganda and personalistic warfare.

The struggle will be difficult because we shall wield righteousness, reform and reconciliation against guns, goons and gold. It will be difficult because we shall seek justice under the rule of law while our adversaries will seek to evade it. It will be difficult because we shall seek truth while our adversaries will seek to obfuscate it.

But we shall prevail, because we have the superior values, and because of the superior organization and superior strategy of our party.

The campaign period is a long way off, but for the ruling party, every minute of the day is a campaign for nation-building, for building a strong republic.

The party must be a structure to ensure the success of our initiatives.

Help me reach out to the people; help me communicate to them the urgency of reform and reconciliation; help me enlist the support of local officials and barangays so that positive change can take root and bear fruit in all our communities.

We must now shape our platform along the contours of a changing national, regional and global landscape. We live in a world that cries for peace, reconciliation and human dignity.

As I relay these thoughts from Bali, let me say that what we are going to do and offer to our people for the next six years must no longer be run of the mill. Change must be fundamental and all pervading.

Our party lives by the principle of subsidiarity. It is you and our rank and file members who are the backbone of the party. I shall support all your worthy endeavors.

Thank you for your support and your best wishes.

Let us have faith in god, faith in ourselves and faith in the Filipino.

Our goals are clear. Our triumph is in sight.

Mabuhay ang Lakas!

Speech of President Arroyo during the ASEAN Business and Investment Summit

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the ASEAN Business and Investment Summit

[Delivered at the Bali Hilton, Nusa Dua, Bali, Indonesia, October 7, 2003]

Thank you very Mr. Chairman Pesik.

Her Excellency Rini Sawandi, Ministry of Trade and Industry, my Cabinet escort for this trip; Mr. Tanri Abeng, Co-Chairman; participants of the first ASEAN Investment Summit, distinguished guest, ladies and gentlemen.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 40th Annual Conference of the Personnel Management Association of the Philippines (PMAP)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 40th Annual Conference of the Personnel Management Association of the Philippines (PMAP)

[Delivered at the Pacific Grand Ballroom, Waterfront Cebu City Hotel, Lahug District, Cebu City, Cebu, October 9, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Ka Blas.

Thank you very much, Mon. Thank you.

Thank you again. Cito and Ernie, officers and members of PMAP, ladies and gentlemen.

I'm very glad that providence brought me here with you today. Gaya nang sabi ni Mon, you invited me a long time ago. You invited me but then I saw that on the sixth... On the eight of this month would be the ASEAN Summit. And travel mean what it is, I would have to take a flight out of Bali this morning, fly to Singapore, take a direct... And then fly back to Manila. Which would mean the whole day of travel today which means I would not have made it. So that time long ago when you first invited me, I keep in mind this invitation.

But as it turned out, as I was leaving for Bali, I found out that the last flight, ah the last yesterday would end at about 6:30 pm and then I will be able to take the direct chartered flight from Bali to Cebu and arrive late last night in order to make it with you today.

Talk a little bit about what we've achieved. First and foremost in Bali, we signed what is called the Bali Concord II named after the Bali Concord I which established the ASEAN to begin with in 1976.

Now, in Bali Concord II, we signed an agreement that will determine the course of ASEAN for the future in the 21st century. Three important things came out of the Bali Concord II: number one, we will be forming an ASEAN Economic community before 2020. An ASEAN economic community is something like the European Economic Community before it became the European Union.

But aside from an economic community, we will be forming a security community. Because ASEAN is the site of transnational threats like terrorism in this 21st century.

And thirdly, because unlike other regions like Europe, South America, Africa, the Middle East, where the various countries are culturally homogeneous. In our region, we are not culturally homogeneous. We are ten countries made up of different cultures, different religions, different political systems, different social organizations, different histories, colonial histories. So we are so diverse and yet we have been at peace with one another including the period of ASEAN.

And we want to continue this so therefore the third aspect of the Bali concord ii is that we will strive to form formally a socio-cultural community. So this will be the great trends of ASEAN in the decades and the generations to come.

And I hope that this will, in the short time, provide for a stronger security, better economies, better trade and more jobs than in the longer run for surer more sustainable economic development.

I'm sure you as personnel managers know the importance of having conditions in the country and in the region even in the world that can create more jobs than lose them. And I'm very glad to hear from Cito that the good in this meeting is quite positive. For one thing you're more than a thousand delegates, the biggest attendance in the history of PMAP. Congratulations to you!

Last year, you were eight hundred. Nine hundred. So therefore, there is a more than ten percent increase in the attendance. And Cito said that talking to many of you, many of you are hiring especially with the small and medium enterprises. I hope that this is a reflection of some of the things we've been able to achieve in just over two years of my administration. I hope this is a reflection of the fact, the statistical fact that in the first six months of this year, we achieved a GNP growth rate of 4.8 percent, faster than many of our neighbors in ASEAN and the highest growth rate since the 1997 Asian crisis. So, I hope that your positive outlook in your companies especially SME is a reflection of that.

And indeed, I know also that as personnel managers your main concern is how to grow the jobs and how to keep the jobs of the personnel that you take care of. I know that you have to deal with the personal and financial problems of the workers in your care. I know that sometimes especially during the Asian crisis and its aftermath, you have had to handle the painful job of informing the workers, some workers, that they have to be laid off. So you know that our historic problem has been the need for economic development to fight poverty, to create jobs and to keep them.

Historically, our economic development has been strong compared to our neighbors. I just thank the lord that in the summits that I've attended as president, it was evident during the two and a half years of my presidency and in the aftermath of the Asian crisis, that even though we felt we were having a hard time, the others were having a hard time. The others were having negative growths around us, even the richer countries around us, while we were having our steady growth. And as I said, climaxed by the first six months of the year where we got the highest growth rate ever since the Asian crisis.

But in this last summit that I attended, with the region now starting to recover, I saw that our neighbors are starting to accelerate their growth again. Malaysia who has negative in some parts of these past two years, now has a very high rate of growth, for instance. And this time we cannot afford to be left behind.

Unfortunately, we have this challenge not to be left behind at the time when the political season is here. I would wish that the political season would only start in February of next year. But the Philippines being what it is, and I think that's part of the system, the cycle that we must change, the political system, always starts prematurely. Nonetheless, we cannot afford to be left behind, and through you I would like to give greater uncertainty... A greater certainty to the business and investors that you represent.

I would like to reassure you that our programs are devoted to strengthening the economy, creating more jobs, encouraging business activity unhampered by corruption and red tape in government. For instance, last night, I got word from the NBI that they're willing now to advertise that it is now only in five minutes to get an NBI clearance because we have been working on their computerization over the last two and a half years.

Even if there's political season, even if the headlines are about politics, I have instructed the bureaucracy to stay on track in the task of governance. And I myself am keeping a steady hand over the concerns of the state. And there's one thing I'd like to ask you personnel managers, because you take care of so many people, I feel you can influence them, encourage them to keep their eyes focused on the challenges we face daily. I think you can encourage them that we should not allow ruthless politics to distract us from the all important charge of nation-building and also building up your own business organizations.

Politicians come and go but our challenges are here to stay. I have my challenge and that's is to make sure that our country is not left behind again as the other countries now accelerate their growth after the Asian crisis. And for you the challenge is how to hire, fire, promote, demote, plan careers, develop potentials in such a way that your organization can survive and even flourish the future.

As personnel managers, you all would have experienced the pressure not to be left behind. Not to be left behind in the market in which your firm, your organization operates. And you know whom you can rely on in crunch time, somebody who has already gone down the learning curve, someone who has been experienced. Not someone with great ideas but to get... Highly get people to be in the team. Not someone who no matter how seemingly brilliant will need to go through a learning curve again.

As personnel managers, I know that you know that good policy is not necessarily good executions. And part of getting the job done, a large part of getting the job done is good execution. There are lots of good policies going around but to execute them requires experience as much or even more than reason. In fact, a wise man said, that reason may mislead you but experience never. As it is with your organization, so it is also with our nation.

Our historic economic problems cannot be blamed on any single president. Because our problems are fundamental caused by the economic and political system. In the more than two years of my presidency, i gained the experience necessary to understand what we need in order to change society in a way that leads to economic development and the elimination of poverty.

As I said in the first six months of the year, we achieved 4.8 percent GNP growth — the highest in our country since the Asian crisis. In so short a time also — and that's why for me I'm going to attend an urban poor convention — we accomplished one of the most massive housing programs undertaken by any administration. And I hope the workers in your companies are able to join in that housing program while, at the same time — thanks to the hard work of people like Cito Lorenzo — we've been able to keep the supply and the price of food stable.

We had to contend with traumatic cases that have divided our nation. We'd have to face them squarely like the Estrada case, the Misuari case, the Marcos wealth, the coco levy. We've won victories in pinning down corrupt high-ranking officials. Some of them we were able to do so because we did an unprecedented lifestyle checks. We've launched an all out war against illegal drugs. And in just a few months time, in the last three months, we confiscated an unprecedented 8 billion pesos worth of drugs using less than a hundred million pesos of enforcement money and arrested drug dealers belonging to or leading in the Philippines the Triad syndicate who used to be untouchable several years before.

We are seeking a peaceful resolution to the Muslim insurgency, and were on our way to signing a permanent peace pact.

We cut red tape to make sure crucial infrastructure like the Roll-On/Roll-Off ferry program, new bridges and highways are built.

As personnel managers, I'm sure many of you do your conferences in areas like Boracay, and I hope that you'll be able to use our roll-on/roll-off ferry system going there to see how we've cut red tape to make travel more convenient for our people.

We've began meaningful debate on changes in the constitution particularly on the parliamentary and federal form of government. What we really need however to develop our economy and create a stronger republic is to change our system. Maybe even change our constitution to institute true reforms in our way of politics and our economy. Aside from that reform, fundamental reforms, we also need to unify as a people.

We need to heal the deep divisions in our society. While we must have justice — and we have achieved much justice in the last two and a half years — we must also have reconciliation. We must put a closure to our past national divisions.

As personnel managers, I know you know the value of reform and the value of reconciliation. I'm sure you facilitate reconciliation all the time. I'm sure you have also experienced moments when divisions in the organization have become so deep that effectivity and efficiency are seriously jeopardized. and then you have to work on reforms in the system itself. It takes time to find this deep-seated reasons for division. It takes time to gain insights on how reconciliation can be effected.

And you as personnel managers know how much sleuthing and probing you have to go through to find the causes of the divisions so that you can work on the personalities as well as the system behind the causes if any.

And you as personnel managers so that you can't do it from the peanut gallery, you have to be immersed in the team, in the experience of the players. You have to gain experience before you can be effective.

As I see you here in this 40th convention, and jubilee year, ruby anniversary. I see you here forming your craft, I get inspired, you are practitioners. You're getting better and better with your experience. You're improving your craft. You're managing people better. You're managing conflicts better. You're promoting reconciliations better. You reform systems in a more mature way.

I'm inspired because I see myself in you as the personnel manager of the country. I too like you, I have gained experience, i have gained knowledge. Like you, I have clarified the mission of what has to be done for the country and how to execute it. For our country, just as you are doing it in your organization.

On the positive note that you are here in this very big unprecedented attendance in your convention, I ask you, lets support each other in undertaking each one's role. And as we do this, we can move on to flourish our future.

Congratulations! And thank you.

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Multi-sectoral Assembly in Cebu

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Multi-sectoral Assembly in Cebu

[Delivered at the Cebu City Sports Complex, Cebu, October 9, 2003]

Daghan salamat, Governor Garcia sa inyong pagpaila kanako. Ug paagi kaninyo ang akon pagpasalamat sa tanan mga Cebu sa kanunay suporta kanako sa niagi nga piliay.

Daghan salamat sab Mayor Tommy Osmena sa imong welcome remarks ug sa imo pagka-partner kanako sa aton paghuman diri sa mga reporma aron ang aton mga pobre sa Cebu City makadawat sa ilaha mga yuta.

Kauban ko karon ang laing-laing opisyaes sa akong Cabinet. Aniya karon ang atong Secretary sa mga strategic projects, si Secretary Mai Jimenez; ang akong kauban sa pagtabang sa mga pobre sa siyudad, sa lungsod si Mike Defensor ug ang iyahang mga kauban sa iyang organisasyon sa HUDCC; ug ang atong Secretary sa Media Affairs, si Secretary Dodie Limcaoco; kauban nato ang aton mga congressmen diri sa Cebu City, si Congressman Raul Del Mar ug si Congressman Tony Cuenco; kauban sab nato ang congressman sa Mandaue City, si Mayor Teddy Ouano; kauban nato ang laing-laing opisyaes sa probinsiya ug Cebu ug sa siyudad ug Cebu ug kauban nato ang mga laing-laing pumuluyo diri sa probinsiya ug sa siyudad, kaninyong tanan, salamat sa inyong pag-anhi karon.

Ug ako gikal šipay ko nga anhi ako karon gihapon diri sa mauswag nga siyudad Cebu, sa mauswag nga siyudad sa probinsiya Cebu kauban na ang mauswag nga siyudad sa Mandaue City. Gikalipay ko gyud nga kauban ko karon ang mga katawhan ug Cebu nga nakadawat ug oportunidad nga magapalit ug yuta asa na kadugay na kamo. Unta moistorya ninyo sa mga kauban kon paunsa ginugugma kamo ug gobyerno ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Gi-imbata ko sab karon ang mga miyembro ug kooperatiba sa kuryente sa Cebu nga dugay na may outstanding electric cooperative sa tibuok Pilipinas, asa sila karon? Anhi sila karon ang aton kooperatiba? Wala, tingali sa masunod kay gusto ko ipaabot ang akon dako nga pag-abi-abi sa outstanding electric cooperative diri sa probinsiya sa cebu. Busa gi-appoint ko ang ilahang leader, si Father Pacquing Silva, is its head sa National Electrification Administration. o, kamo diay. Unta masulti ninyo, maistorya ninyo sa mga uban ang atong pangita sa good governance agi sa mga opisyal murag si Father Pacquing Silva nga gikan sa Cebu.

Kagabii, niabot ko sa Cebu gikan sa ASEAN Summit sa Bali. Mi pirma mi sa ASEAN Concord nga nanaag ug labaw pa ang pagtinabangay nato sa ekonomiya ug sa seguridad, ug labaw pa ang pagsabot sa kultura ug usag usa aron magdala kanatong tanan ug labaw pa nga trabaho, labaw pa nga kaalaman ug kabansay ug labaw pa gyud nga estabilidad sa atong nasud.

Sa miaging labaw sa duha ka tuig sa akong pagka-presidente, sa akon pag-uban sa mga leader sa kalibutan, sa akong paghatag ug pribilehiyo sa mga kabus sa siyudad nga mupalit ug yuta asa nakatindog ang inyoha mga balay parehas sa aton mga kaiguonan diri sa atong convention karon sa akong pagka reporma sa mga electric cooperative aron mga uban mahimo maayo murag sa kooperatiba sa Cebu. Sa pag-atubangan ko sa daghang mga hagip sa atong nasud — terorismo, transnational crimes, SARS, lisud nga condition sa ekonomiya sa tibuok kalibutan — nakabaton na ako ug daghang kaalaman, eksperyensya ug saktong panan-aw sa pagmuno.

Sa nini ako eksperyensya ni sabot ko nga ang problema sa aton istorya muay kinahanglan ug kauswagan aron makalaban kontra sa kapobrehon. Sa atong istorya hinay-hinay gyud ang atong kauswagan kumpara sa kauswagan ug atong mga silingan. Apan garbo ko nga sa nining lisud nga tiyempo sa kalibutan, sa miaging duha ug tunga ka tuig sa akon pagka-presidente sa atong administrasyon, sa nagikan ang atong rehiyon sa Asian crisis mas maayo ang performance sa aton ekonomiya kumpara sa mga ekonomiya ug atong mga silingan sa rehiyon.

Apan sa karon ang rehiyon nagasugod na gihapon nga murecover, ang aton mga silingan nagasugod na sa paspas gihapon ang ilahang kauswagan karon dili ta unta mabilin sa ila. Ang problema sa ekonomiya sa aton istorya dili musala sa bisan usa ka presidente. Tungod kay ang atong problema maoy fundamental, na gikan sa sistema sa aton ekonomiya ug sa atong pulitika. Aron makauswag gyud ang aton ekonomiya ug makahimo ug labaw nga kusog nga republika kinahanglan ibalhin nato ang atong sistema kung ginahanglan bisan ang atong konstitusyon aron makahimo ug tuod nga reporma sa atong mag-agi sa pulitika ug ekonomiya.

Kinahanglan sab nga makig-usa kita isip katawhan. Sa gamay nga tiyempo nga ako nahimo presidente nakaabot kita karon sa labi nga growth rate. Pinakataas, labi na taas nga growth rate sukad sa 1997 Asian crisis. Sa gamay nga tiyempo nakahatag kita ug pribilehiyo nga magapalit ug yuta o balay ang labing daghan na kabus sa atong istorya kauban na exhibit ang atong mga kaigsuonan diri sa atong convention.

Miyentras ang inyo pagkaon, ang supply ug presyo ug pagkaon ug mga pobre nakabilin nga stable. Nakadaog sab kita sa laban kontra sa laing-laing taas nga opisyal sa corruption. Bisan ang akon pamilya ingon ko dili exempted sa balaod. Na ang mga desisyon sa korte nga dugay nga nahulat gihulat parehas sa desisyon sa Erap case, desisyon sa Misuari case, parehas sa Marcos wealth, sa coco levy ug karon sa Kuratong Baleleng. Sa tatal nga giyera kontra sa droga bisan daghan pa ang atong kinahanglan nga mahimo, gikumpiska nato ang labing kantidad ug shabu, ug gi-arrest nato ang dagko nga triad drug dealers nga bag-o sa atong administrasyon maoy untouchable.

Mangita kita ug kalinaw sa solusyon sa mga muslim nga rebelde ug pag-ingon nata sa pagpirma ug permanente nga agreement sa kalinaw. Nasugdan nato ang maayo nga debate sa pagbalhin sa konstitusyon uban na diri ang mga debate alang sa parliamentary government ug sa federal form of government. Apan daghan pa unta ang atong nahimo kung wala unta ang divisiveness sa atong nasud. Our country is deeply divided — naa MILF, naa NPA, naa loyalista sa diktadura, naa ang silent majority na mangita ug kalinaw. Naa EDSA Dos, naa EDSA Tres, naa ang silent plurality na ang iyang tuyo laing maoy madayon ang kinabuhi ug wala na untay divisiveness. We need to heal the deep divisions within our society.

Kinahanglan nato ang hustisya apan kinahanglan sab nato ang rekonsilyasyon. Kinahanglan mahuman na ang mga niaging balin-balin sa atong nasud. Kinanglan tagaan nato ang aton kaugalingon ug bag-o nga pasugdan. Sa labaw sa duha ka tuig sa ini akon nga pagka- presidente nadawat ko gyud ang eksperyensya ug panan-aw aron pabag-uhon ang society aron makab-ot ang kauswagan ug mabuntog nato ang kapobrehon.

Kusog ang akong tagtuo nga ang akon eksperyensya giagi-agian muoy makahatag kanako ug abilidad nga makahuman ug diperensya ug kini sab ang katarungan ngano isalig kanako sang mga tao ang inyohang mga damgo ug pangandoy. Muabti kita nga matuod ang reporma ug rekonsilyasyon. Lisud nga mawala ang pulitika apan gusto ko sab nga tagaan labaw nga seguridad ang negosyo ug ang aton mga investors aron labaw pa ang inyohang mga trabaho.

Ang aton mga programa anyahay tuyo nga mupakusog ang ekonomiya'y. Mahimo trabaho ug tagaan insentibo sa aktibidad sa negosyo nga walay unta corruption ug red tape sa gobyerno. Busa ingon ko sa burokrasya mabilin dayon ang trabaho miyentras ako dayon nga mamaneho sa mga kinahanglan ug atong nasud.

Busa kagabii nakauban ko si Secretary Mar Roxas sa dti gikan sa Bali, gi-ingon ko sa iya, kay siya'y miyembro sa monetary board, nga mopaspas ang pagbalhin sa mga yuta ug BSP sa barangay Apas Ug sa busay ug sa HUDCC, sa akon Chairman Secretary Mike Defensor ingon ko sa iya ug sa National Housing Authority nga mopaspas ang preparasyon sa ilahang pagbalhin sa mga kwalipikado nga benepisaryo didto gyud sa apas ug sa busay. Ingon ko sa HUDCC chairman Mike Defensor ug sa DOTC Secretary nga mahimo ug plano aron ang Casuntingan friendly settlers... Ang Casuntingan friendly settlers mo-occupy ug parte ug yuta sa DOTC-Tingub sa casuntingan sa Mandaue City. Ingon ko sab kay HUDCC Chairman Mike Defensor ug sa DOH Secretary nga mopaspas ang pagbalin ug yuta ug DOH sa jagobiao sa Mandaue City. Sa mga kamong kwalipikado nga benepisyaryo. Ug ingon ko sa HUDCC Chairman nga mopaspas ang rekomendasyon aron makahuman ta ug Socialized Housing Finance Corporation.

Lisud gyud kanunay ang mga paningkamot sa kabus. Gadali ang masulti lisud ang matrabaho. Kinahanglan naa eksperyensya. Anhi kita karon sa tungkaran sa usa kadako nga permanenteng pagbag-o. Ang kaugmaon nga gihandum ta dili lang alang kanato sa mga... Kundili sab sa mga sunod pang henerasyon. Reporma ug sa rekonsilyasyon sa katapusan muoy makaabot para kanato sa aton maayo nga kaugmaon.

Mga kaigsuonan, kita tanan makauban kita, mangita kita uban-uban sa kining kinahanglan nga reporma ug rekonsilyasyon sa atong maayo nga kaugmaon.

Daghan salamat kaninyong tanan.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the League of Municipalities of the Philippines (LMP) Luzon Island Conference and celebration of the 12th anniversary of the Local Government Code

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the League of Municipalities of the Philippines (LMP) Luzon Island Conference and celebration of the 12th anniversary of the Local Government Code

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Westin Philippine Plaza, Roxas Blvd., Pasay City, October 9, 2003]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat sa inyong napakainit na pagbati sa akin, mga punongbayan ng buong Luzon. Maraming salamat, Secretary Joey Lina sa iyung magandang pagpakilala sa akin na naalala sana ng ating mga punongbayan ng Luzon kung papaano natin kamahal ang mga punongbayan ng Pilipinas.

Dios ti agngina, apo Mayor Ramon Guico ken ti naduma nga mayors ti amianan. Agyamanak ti... Ay, nagpapasalamat ako hindi lamang sa mga mayors ng norte, sa mayors ng buong Pilipinas, ang mayors league, sa napakagandang resolusyon ninyo na nagsusuporta sa aking desisyon na sumali sa halalan sa susunod na taon.

Yes, I thank the league of municipalities of the Philippines for that resolution. Maraming salamat din Governor Dolfo del Rosario na sa ngalan ng buong ULAP ganun din sinusuportahan ninyo ang aking desisyon. And thank you for pointing out the twelve gains of the union of local authorities of the Philippines, but these twelve gains happened in the two and a half years of my administration.

Thank you very much, mayor mayor — I always call him that, mayor Mayor — for that resolution that you have attested to. I am very grateful for that. And I want to greet also our other officers of ulap who are here such as Governor Louie Villafuerte. Matagal na niyang pinipilit akong gumawa ng desisyon. Minsan, nagdinner kami sabi, mag-decide ka na. Ako silent, speaks like silent. Nakikita ko yung frustration ni Louie. Kaya kanina nung binati ko siya, sabi ko, ano, Louie masaya ka na? Sabi niya, masaya na raw siya.

Salamat rin kay Mayor Francis Tolentino kumakatawan ng League of Cities. Agad-agad nag-text siya sa akin na sinusuporta niya at ang mga cities yung aking desisyon. At kung nandito si James Marty Lim — ay, there you are. How could I miss such a handsome face — at salamat din, thank you for the support of the barangay officials. At lahat lahat ng dumalo dito sa Luzon island Conference — caring Cabalen cung Capampangan, mayap a bengi mga taga-Tagalog, mga taga-Bicol, marhay na banggi sa indo gabos, salamat sa inyong suporta.

Yung aking desisyon binase ko sa ating pambansang interes ganun na rin sa interes ng inyong mga constituencies. Kayong mga incumbents kayo, kayo alam ninyo ang halaga ng karanasan.

And in the more than two years of my presidency, I have gained the experience necessary to understand what we need to do in order to change society in a way that leads to economic development and the elimination of poverty.

Itong nakaraang anim na buwan, doon nga nagkukumpara kami ng growth rates sa ASEAN kung saan ako nanggaling. We achieved 4.8 percent GNP growth — this is the highest in our country since the 1997 Asian crisis.

And siguro naman sa maraming bayan ninyo nararamdaman ninyo, in so short a time of two years, we accomplished one of the most massive housing programs undertaken by any administration. At siguro sa inyong mga palengke nakikita rin ninyo, we've been able to keep the supply and the price of food stable. We confronted our deep national divisions face to face and implemented painful court rulings like the arrest of Estrada and Misuari. We won victories in pinning down corrupt high-ranking officials, some of them on the basis of unprecedented lifestyle checks. Even my family is not above the law.

Nabanggit ni Monching yung ating all-out war sa illegal drugs. At doon sa nakaraang tatlong buwan, pagkatapos kami ni Joey gumawa ng particular na all-out war, yung mga nakumpiskang illegal drugs sa tatlong buwan, mga 8 billion pesos worth, spending less than 100 million of enforcement money — unprecedented achievements. Iyung bilang ng mga drug dealers, kaya punong-puno na ngayon ang ating preso, far outstrip those made in several years before. At yung mga big fish na nahuli diyan, yang mga triad, big fish na noong araw sila ay mga untouchable, touchable na ngayon.

We have sought a peaceful resolution to the Muslim insurgency, and we are well on our way to signing a permanent peace pact. We cut red tape to make sure crucial infrastructure are built. Halimbawa, yung roll-on/roll-off ferry na umaabot sa mindoro at lumalampas pa sa Mindoro. Dumadaan na ngayon iyung mga bakasyonista sa Boracay sa Mindoro island and other areas. New bridges — ilan sa inyo noong dumaan ako ay nagpasalamat dahil sa matagal nang hinihintay na tulay na ngayon ay nagawa. New highways, and also because among other things, your leagues passed formal resolutions for changes in the Constitution. I listen to you and we began meaningful debates on those changes in the constitution, particularly on the parliamentary and federal form of government.

Kagabi, halos hatinggabi, dumating ako sa Cebu mula sa ASEAN Summit sa bali. Doon sa bali pinirmahan ng mga leaders ng ASEAN ang Bali Concord II. Ipinangalan ito sa unang Bali Concord noong 1976 na siya ang nagtayo ng unang ASEAN. Eh ngayon, many years later, bago na ang mundo kaya gumawa ng bagong Bali Concord. At dito ay nagkasunduan na tutulakin ang economic integration, papalawakin ang pangangalakal at ipag-iibayo, we will consolidate among the various countries in ASEAN our vigilance against terrorism. Kagaya rin ng inyong kasunduan doon sa inyong peace, unity and democracy na lalabanan ninyo ang terorismo.

Bukod doon sa Bali Concord II, China and India also acceded to a treaty with ASEAN, a treaty of amity and cooperation in Southeast Asia. These are key developments and — nandito yung ating hybrid rice winner — ang China ang pinanggalingan ng hybrid rice na nakadoble nang ani ng marami sa inyong mga constituents dito — ayun, nagpapalakpak si Cito Lorenzo, siya ang nagdala ng hybrid rice dito.

Yung India naman, dalawang daang milyon na ngayon ang milyonaryo sa india in a population of one billion. Eh tayo sa marami sa inyong mga bayan mayroon kayong malaking indian community, and many of them still hold indian citizenship, at tayo bumibili ng gamot sa India. Yung mga programa ninyo na I hope ginagamit ninyo yung murang gamot na half-priced galing yon sa India. Kaya kailangan, sabi ko naman sa Prime Minister ng India, ang dami naming binibiling gamot sa inyo dapat we are in the radar screen of each other. Sabi naman ng Prime Minister of India, he is giving our airline, our designated national airline landing rights unilaterally in several key cities in India. Kaya yung mga indians sa inyong community, marami ding Indian citizens pa, alukin n'yo sila na ipalawak ang pangangalakal sa kanilang mother country dahil mayroon silang dalawang daang milyong milyonaryo doon, mas malaki pa kaysa sa buong populasyon ng Pilipinas. Because in the end, whatever I negotiate it will be you, the frontliners, who will translate the gains we make in foreign policy into the momentum and effectiveness in our common battle against poverty, against terrorism, against criminality.

We are all in the executive branch. You are in that sense extensions of presidential authority in the communities. As I am chief executive of our nation; you are the chief executives of your municipalities. Together we share a determination to deliver the best of governance. But also together, we must overcome the obstacles to our mission.

Our historic problem has been the need for economic development to fight poverty.

Historically, our economic development has been slow compared to our neighbors. Mabuti na lamang na sa nakaraang dalawang taon at kalahati ng ating administrasyon, during the last two years and a half of our administration, we did better than our neighbors. Because our neighbors suffered very much in the aftermath of the Asian crisis but as an economist I knew that if I don't build up domestic demand we will suffer too. How did I build up domestic demand? I build up demand in the provinces, and now you know why I released all that IRA even the debts of the previous administration.

Kaya, oo, dahil mahal ko kayo, pero mahal din kayo ng ating bansa, and it worked. Yung mga ginamit n'yong utang na binayaran ko, utang ng nakaraan, ginamit n'yo para sa kaunlaran sa inyong mga bayan that's why we performed better than our neighbors in the last two and a half years. Kaya lang ngayon nagsisimula nang mag-recover ang ating rehiyon. Naku! Nakakatakot, nagko-compare kami ng growth rates. Our neighbors are starting to accelerate their growth again, and this time we cannot afford to be left behind.

Our historic economic problems cannot be blamed on any single president, because the problems are fundamental, caused by our economic and political system. Kaya nasisiyahan ako doon sa sinabi ni Monching na naintindihan n'yo, naunawaan n'yo nung sinabi ko yung aking desisyon. I said and you agreed in your resolution that to really develop our economy and create a stronger republic, we need to change our system. We need to institute true reforms in our politics and true reforms in our economy. And I am glad that in your covenant you have peace, democracy and unity, because we also need unity as a people.

We need to heal the deep divisions within our society. We must have justice and we have gotten much justice in this administration. Many cases waiting for decades have been resolved in our administration. But we must also have reconciliation. We must put a closure to our national divisions. Because in the final analysis, as you have said in your resolution, it will be reform and reconciliation that will heal the wounds of our divisiveness.

You've always been on my mind since the day I assumed the presidency. And because even then I had that idea that we need reconciliation, napatatag lang ang aking paniniwala sa aking karanasan. I also looked for the causes of division between the national government and the local government. At ang nakikita ko noon, Senador pa ako, na pinanggagalingan ng paghihiwalay sa pananaw ng national at local government ay may tendency ang national government na pakialaman ang autonomy ng local government. Kaya naman binanggit ni Dolfo, binanggit ni Joey, isa sa unang ginawa ko sa aking administrasyon was the recall of the executive orders which placed a yoke on your fiscal autonomy.

Labindalawa yon, hindi ko na ililista lahat. Nilista na ni Dolfo at inilaborate ang ilan ni Joey. But lately, I talked about the first, I'll just talked about the last major one.

I have released all your last local government service equalization fund. Bayad na ako sa utang ng national government sa inyo. At gaya nang sabi ng dalawa, walang bawas at lumaki pa ang inyong shares ng internal revenue allotment. Ang hinihingi ko lamang sa inyo dahil napakaraming nawalang trabaho sa nakaraang El Nino at mga bagyo, sana sa inyong LGSEF release gamitin ninyo ang isang milyong piso bawat bayan para sa microfinance ng inyong bayan. Sa ganun mabibigyan natin ng ginhawa ang maraming walang trabaho sa ating kanayunan.

Sad to say, the political season is here.

But because our neighbors are starting to accelerate their growth, and we can't afford to be left behind, we must together give — even as the political season is on — we must together give greater certainty to business and investors. We must together show them that our programs are devoted to strengthening the economy, creating more jobs, and encouraging business activity unhampered by corruption and red tape in government.

Sa inyong mga meeting over these last two and a half years sa mga league meetings ninyo mayroon kayong mga best practices sharing ng pagbawas ng red tape — yung mga one-stop shop, yung mga... ang dami, ang dami n'yong mga ginagawa yung mga mabilis na proseso. And I ask you to stay on track with that. I ask you to stay on track in the task of governance as I am keeping a steady hand over the concerns of the state. Let us also ask our constituents, your constituents to keep their eyes focused on the challenges we face daily. Sa pang-araw-araw kung minsan may krimen, sa pang-araw-araw mayroon diyang mga drug lords pa rin, mga pang-araw-araw na mga hamon. O kaya nagkaroon ng baha at hindi nakaani, daily challenges we have to face them daily. And let us not allow ruthless politics to distract us all from the all important charge of nation-building.

And in this all important charge of nation-building, I would like to assure you that as your president, I will always be — as the twelve accomplishments have shown — I will always be your champion for local autonomy.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during a meeting with the Filipino community in Malaysia

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a meeting with the Filipino community in Malaysia

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Concorde Hotel, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, October 15, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Ka Blas.

Hindi ko na siguro babanggitin yung mga pangalan ng mga kasama ko dito sa entablado dahil pinakilala na sila ni Ambassador Ong. Ngunit babatiin ko si Ambassador Ong dahil wala pang bumati sa kanya. At sa inyong lahat mga kababayan, magandang gabi sa inyong lahat. Karing Cabalen kung Capampangan, mayap a bengi que congan. Dagiti kakailyak ti bangir ni mamang ko, naimbag nga rabi iyu amin apo. Aah, nagado nga ilokano. Sa mga nagikan sa Mindanao asa ko nidako, maayong gabii kaninyong tanan. Sa mga kasimanwa sa akon bana nga Ilonggo, maayong gab-i sa inyo nga tanan. Sa inyong lahat mga minamahal kong kababayan dito sa Malaysia, magandang gabi muli.

Ano, kumusta na kayo ngayon? Mukhang okey. Ako ay napakasayang narito kaya isang maligaya at taos pusong pagbati ang aking ipinapaabot sa inyong lahat mula sa ating mga kababayan sa Pilipinas.

At salamat sa inyong mainit na naman na pagtanggap sa akin at sa aking mga kasama dito sa Kuala Lumpur. Kamiy nagagalak at nagpapasalamat na tayoy nagkapagtipun-tipon ngayong gabi kahit na itong araw ay ordinaryong araw. Alam ko na karamihan sa inyo Linggo lamang nakakalabas. Kaya mabuti na lamang na nagawan nyo ng paraang magkita-kita tayo ngayong gabi. Alam ko extra itong effort ninyo kaya maraming salamat sa inyo.

yung ating mga emcees kanina, pinaalala nga nila yung ating pagsama-sama dito noon. Naalala ng marami sa inyo — marami sa inyo ang narito rin noon — nagpunta ako dito noong 2001, yon ang aking unang-unang state visit bilang pangulo. At siguro maaalala nyo kung bakit inuna kong bisitahin ang malaysia bago pa man yung mga amerika kagaya ng ibang mga pangulo dahil sa malaking tulong sa ating bansa ng Malaysia at ni prime minister mahathir na mahanap ang kapayapaan, na makapag-negosasyon sa MILF para malutas na ang kaguluhan sa Mindanao.

Ako'y nasisiyahan na naalala ninyo ang sinabi ko noon na kayo ay competent, professional ngunit isa ring sinabi ko noon na kayo ay itinuturing ko bilang overseas Filipino investors. Eh noon hindi pa nga namin... Natin napag-usapan yung pinag-usapan ngayon. Eh di mas lalo ngayon sa napatunayan ninyong ginagawa talagang totoong-totoo nga yung aking bansag pala. Lalo akong naniniwala tuloy sa bansag na ito dahil sa ginagawa nyo dito na habang ginagawa nyo ang ikinabubuti ninyo, ikinabubuti din ninyo ang inyong mga pamayanan doon sa Pilipinas. Halimbawa, nakakagulat yung savings cooperative ninyo. Hindi maraming mga pamayanang Pilipino sa ibat-ibang lugar ay may savings cooperative kagaya nang inyo. At biro mo isang taon lamang three million pesos na. Congratulations sa inyong savings. At saka salamat sa labingwalong classroom na ibibigay ninyo. Sabi nga ni Ambassador Ong for starters pa lamang nga yon eh.

Gusto ko lang ipaliwanag kung papano nagsimula ito. Kasi iniisip ko, everytime na lamang kulang ng kulang ang ating classroom. Sabi ko, aber mag-imbentaryo nga tayo ng minsanan. Lahat ng paaralan kung saan ang student-classroom ratio ay humihigit sa 100 students to one classroom, dapat magtayo tayo ng bagong schoolbuilding. Kung more than fifty pero less than 100 dapat magkaron ng two shifts. Pero kung more than 100 kahit na two shifts talagang kulang. Kaya doon, sabi ko minsanan magtayo na tayo ng dagdag na classrooms sa lahat ng eskuwelahan that are having more than 100 students per classroom. At narinig ni Secretary Ople at saka ni Secretary Pat Sto. Tomas itong balak. At siyempre yon ay libu-libong classroom ang pangangailangan dahil libu-libo ang mga paaralan kung saan lampas ang 100:1 ang student-classroom ratio. Aba, ikuwenento sa ibang mga OFW at mga overseas Filipinos kagaya ninyo, at ang ganda ng response kasi talaga namang dati nagpapadala kayo, di ba ng pera para mag-aral ang mga kamag-anak ninyo. At maraming beses pa pag akoy nami-miyesta nakikita ko na meron itong donated by the Filipino community of so and so. Ako pa nga ang nag-i-inaugurate ng mga project ninyo doon kung minsan pag ako ang guest speaker sa fiesta. Kaya hindi ako nagugulat pero natutuwa ako na kayo ay nagustuhan ninyo ito ating balak na sa minsanan masarado na natin ang classroom gap sa ating bansa. Salamat sa inyong tulong. Salamat sa 18 classrooms.

At ito namang skills training program, kahanga-hanga. Ito ay ginagawa ninyo sa pamamagitan ng bayanihan. At salamat doon sa mga binigyan ng award kanina dahil binibigay nyo ang inyong mga linggo para matuto yung inyong mga kasamahan. Nalaman ko na ang inyong skills training program ay nagamit na ng marami para matuto at para umasenso.

At siguro dapat malaman din kasi nga marami naman nagnegosyo, gusto ko lang magbigay ng isang halimbawa. Isang halimbawa, na narinig ko ang kanyang kasaysayan ay yung inyong kasamahang dating domestic helper ang pangalan ay si Dolly Sumampong. Kilala ba ninyo si Dolly Sumampong? Siya ay domestic helper. Lola nya labandera sa Davao City. Nanay nya ay overseas domestic helper din. Dito si Dolly ay nag-enrol sa business development class ng aking magaling na dating kasama sa DTI — nasaan si Glen? Nakatanggap ng reward kanina. So, nag-aral siya sa Filipino Workers Resource Center ninyo. Tinuruan nga ng ating trade attache, si Glen Peñaranda — marami ka pala nagagawa dito sa ibabaw ng maraming investment na nakukuha mo Glen — nakakakuha na siya ng maraming Malaysian capital, nakakakuha pa rin pala siya ng Overseas Filipino capital.

Kasi si Dolly, halimbawa, matapos nang isang taong pag-aaral at naka-ipon ng kapital, umuwi siya sa Davao noong 2001. Ngayon, masaya akong iulat sa inyo ang kanyang tagumpay. Meron na siyang dalawang negosyo doon. yung isa ay pangalan SC Laundry Services at yung isa ay Mom Doll Lechon and Food House. kaya siya magandang halimbawa ng overseas Filipino investor. Maraming salamat kay Dolly sa kanyang investment. Pero sa inyo rin, kahit na kayo ay narito pa maraming salamat din sa inyong investment sa Pilipinas. Dahil alam ko tuloy-tuloy ang pagpapadala na ng mga remittances ninyo na tumutulong sa kaginhawaan ng buhay ng mahihirap sa ating bansa.

Mga Pilipinong nakatira sa labas ng bansa, ang pinakamalaking pamayanang Pilipino ay yung nasa Amerika — tatlong milyon sila. Walong milyon kasi ang Pilipinong nasa labas eh. Ang pangalawa pagkatapos ng Amerika na tatlong milyon at marami doon ay American citizens na, ang second at number one sa Overseas Filipino Workers ay ang Saudi Arabia one million. Pero ang pangatlo at pinakamalaki dito sa asia ay ang Malaysia na nga — 600,000 ang Pilipino dito sa Malaysia na nagtatrabaho bilang contract workers bagamat dito sa Peninsula ay 17,000 lamang kayo rito. Kaya sa 17,000 na narito biro nyo 1,200 ang nasa loob at meron pang nandoon sa labas. Kaya halos ten percent ng Filipino community ng Malaysia ay narito ngayong gabi, dito sa working day, talagang ang sipag-sipag ng mga Pilipino at ang taas ng inyong enthusiasm at pagkakaisa.

At sa nakikita ko sa inyo, pangalawang beses na, talagang buong-buo ang aking pagkilala sa inyong mga kontribusyon. Gaya nang sabi ng ating mga emcee ay pasado na pagkatapos ng napakatagal na panahon na hinintay, sa wakas sa aking administrasyon napasa na yung Overseas Voting Law pati na rin yung Dual Citizenship Law.

At ako ay nasisiyahan na dito sa malaysia, nalaman ko na 2,500 sa Pilipino sa Malaysia, dito sa Peninsula, sa maliit na community 17,000, 2,500 sa inyo ang nag-register mula sa Johor, Kuala Lumpur, Ipoh at Penang. Kung percentage-wise sa isang community, isa sa pinakamalaking percentage na ang nag-register itong mga Pilipino dito sa Peninsula, Malaysia. Kaya maraming salamat sa inyo.

Kayo ay nag-i-invest sa pag-aaral ng mga kamag-anak ninyo. Nag-i-invest ngayon sa classrooms. Nag-i-invest sa puhunan ng mga kamag-anak ninyo maging sarili ninyong puhunan. At yung savings ay gagamitin din ng savings cooperatives sa mga pagpuhunan. Isa ring malawak na nagagawa ng aking administrasyon, sabi nga nila sa mga survey na pinakamagandang programa ng aking administrasyon sabi ng ilan ay yung pabahay. Kasi pinakamalawak na pabahay ang naganap na ng ating administrasyon sa kasaysayan ng ating bansa. At marami doon ang bumibili ng pabahay para sa kanilang mga kamag-anak ay mga Overseas Filipino Workers din. Kaya sana kayo rin, sa mga naiimpok ninyo baka pag-isipan nyong bumili ng bahay para sa inyong mga minamahal.

Meron na bang pag-ibig dito, Ambassador? yon. Kaya yan ay isang magandang paraan din para mabigyan ng ginhawa ang inyong mga kababayan sa Pilipinas. Tapos pag-uwi ninyo, di meron din kayong maiuwian na tahanan. Maraming-maraming bahay na ang natayo sa Pilipinas sa dalawang taon at kalahati ng aking administrasyon at marami nga doon ay dahil kayo ay nagregalo ng pabahay sa inyong mga kamag-anak.

Kaya nasisiyahan akong magbisita dito parati. Actually, dalawang beses na tayong nagkita mula nang akoy naging pangulo ngunit actually pang-apat na ang aking pagbisita dito. Kasi pagkatapos ng aking unang state visit inimbata ako naman ni Prime Minister Mahathir sa isang konperensya, business conference. Pagkatapos noon inimbata niya ako doon sa summit meeting ng Non-Aligned Movement kung saan sa magandang trabaho ni Secretary Blas Ople ay naging vice chairman ang Pilipinas. Ngayon vice chairman ang Pilipinas ng Non-Aligned Movement. Ngayon naman gaya nang sinabi ni Ambassador Ong, ang pagparito ko ngayon bilang bisita na naman ni Prime Minister Mahathir, dahil siya ang chairman ng 10th Organization of Islamic Conference Summit na gaganapin bukas.

At ito ay isang malaking karangalan sa Pilipinas dahil sa tagal ng panahon na ang OIC ay existing at nagkakaisa ang mga bansang Muslim ngayon lamang naimbata ang pangulo ng republika ng Pilipinas. At ito inaasahan ko na ang ibig sabihin nito ay nakikita na rin na ang mga bansang Muslim na tayo ay iginagalang natin ang mga muslim sa ating bansa at itinuturing natin sila na talagang tunay na bahagi ng Pilipinas at hindi iba. Kaya narito kasama ko ngayon si Governor Parouk Hussin, siya ang Governor ng Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

Noong panahon ng MNLF rebellion, si Governor Parouk Hussin ang parang shadow foreign minister ng MNLF. Ngayon, MNLF pa rin siya ngunit ang MNLF ay kasama na sa gobyerno ng Pilipinas. yan ang sagisag ni Governor Parouk Hussin.

In fact, kahapon yon, ang magandang report ni Foreign Minister Hassan Wirajuda ng Indonesia — siya ang chairman ng Committee of the Eight ng Organization of the Islamic Conference na sinusubaybayan yung peace agreement ng Pilipinas at saka ng MNLF — at ang report ni Wirajuda ay natupad na natin ang ating mga pangako sa MNLF peace agreement at pwedeng maituring na yung mnlf peace agreement ang pinakamatagumpay na proyekto ng OIC sa kanyang buong kasaysayan.

Kaya ngayon, narito na naman ako muli para humingi na naman ng tulong ng oic doon naman sa ating paghanap ng kapayapaan sa MILF. At ito ay malaki rin ang pag-asa. Ang pagkakasundong nabubuo sa mga institusyong kagaya ng U.N. at OIC para sa kapayapaan at kaunlaran sa Mindanao, yon ay nagbibigay sa atin ng malaking pangarap at saka pag-asa.

Ngayon, ang hangad nating kapayapaan ay abot-kamay na sakaling matuloy ang peace talks. At yung peace talks malamang ay matutuloy dito sa Kuala Lumpur tungo sa pagkaroon ng pangmatagalang kasunduan.

Nagkaroon nga ako ng isang maliit na revamp sa aking Cabinet, at si Secretary Angelo Reyes na dating Secretary ng National Defense ay siya ngayon ang aking Special Ambassador for Counter-Terrorism. Gawa nang lahat ng bansa na lumalaban sa terrorism ay meron silang ganung pwesto. At yon ang ginagawa ni Secretary Reyes. In fact, nandoon siya sa Amerika ngayon dahil dito sa trabahong yon. Ang ginawa kong Secretary of National Defense tuloy ay si Secretary Ed Ermita na siya ay dating Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process at chairman ng peace panel para sa peace talks. Mula sa kapayapaan siya ngayon ang humahawak ng national defense. Anong mensahe yon? Gusto natin isama sa mainstream ng defense policy ang ating peace policy. yan din ang ibig sabihin nang paghirang ko kay Secretary Ed Ermita bilang secretary ng National Defense. Si Secretary Ed Ermita naman ngayon ang magpapatupad ng ating kasunduan kasama ng Indonesia at Malaysia para sa paglaban sa terorismo. Dahil tayong tatlong magkapit-bansa — eh yung mga terorista paikot-ikot sa ating mga bansa eh — kasi meron tayong common seas, kaya meron din tayong agreement, tayong tatlo. Tatlong bansa na maglaban sama-sama. Si Ermita naman ang magpapatupad noon.

Kaya nandito siya ngayon para magpaalam sa mga tumutulong sa ating peace process na Malaysian at para ipakilala naman yung kanyang kapalit, eto ay si Secretary Ging Deles. Si Secretary Ging Deles, noong siya ay nasa ngo bago EDSA 2, buong buhay niya halos ay binigay niya para hanapin ang kapayapaan. Kaya ngayon... Nung ako ay naging pangulo siya ay naging presidential adviser... Ah, secretary for Anti-Poverty. Pero ngayon, balik siya sa kanyang pangunahing mahal na ginagawa sa buong buhay niya at yon ay ipairal ang kapayapaan sa Pilipinas. Kaya talagang hinahanap natin ang kapayapaan sa pamamagitan ng pag-uusap at sa pamamagitan din ng paglalaban sa mga terorista.

yung pagkapatay sa international terrorist na si Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi sa Mindanao noong Linggo, yan ay patunay ng ating determinasyon na supilin ang bantang ito sa gitna ng positibong kaganapan tulad ng lumalawak na partisipasyon ng ating mga karatig-bansa sa asean paglaban sa terorismo kasama na nga ang Malaysia.

The terrorists are falling one by one. This reduces the weight of terrorist threats across the broad range of countries in Southeast Asia including our country of course. Were moving effectively to check terror in concert with our neighbors like Malaysia. Our ongoing constriction measures are eating up their room for maneuver and the peace process with the MILF will continue to isolate them. Our determined moves against poverty will drain their recruitment bases. We shall beat terrorism decisively and comprehensively.

Sa dalawa at kalahating taon sa aking pagka-pangulo, nagkaroon na ako ng malawak na karanasan para hanapin ang kapayapaan, para labanan ang terorista, para maunawaan ang mga kailangang gawin upang baguhin ang ating lipunan sa paraang magdudulot ng paglago ng ekonomiya at pagwakas sa kahirapan.

Talagang nakita ko sa dalawang taon at kalahati ng aking pagka-pangulo na kailangan pa ang malalim na pagbabago hindi lamang ng araw-araw na gawain kundi ang sistema mismo ng ating pulitika at ekonomiya gaya nang ginawa ni mahatir nung unang mga taon ng kanyang pagka-prime minister. Bago naka-unlad ang Malaysia ng ganito maraming kinailangan gawing pagbabago si Mahathir sa sistema mismo ng Malaysia. At sa ibabaw ng pagpapalit ng sistema mismo kailangan din ng ating bansa na mahilom ang malalim na hidwaan sa ating lipunan. Meron tayong MILF, may gobyerno; may komunista, may mga demokratika... Maka-demokrasya; may EDSA 2, may EDSA 3. Pero doon sa gitna malamang yung mga kamag-anak ninyong karaniwang Pilipino ayaw nila yung may komunista, may maka-demokrasya. Ayaw nila yung MILF, may gobyerno. Ayaw nila yung may EDSA 2, may EDSA 3. Gusto nila magsama-sama na lamang lahat. At yon ang ating kailangang gawin. At yon ang aking sinisikap.

Sinasabi ko nga parati, it is my duty to be the president of EDSA 2 and EDSA 3. Kailangan magkaisa ang ating bansa. Sa nakita ko sa inyong palakpak gusto nyo rin ang ganun.

Kaya, mula rito magagawa ninyo ang marami kagaya ng pinatunayan ng mga binigyan natin ng mga awards dito. Kaya ang hinihingin ko sa inyo muli, mga kaibigan, tulongan ninyo akong gawin itong mga pagbabagong kailangan sa ating bansa. Ginagawa na nga ninyo yung classrooms, yung skills upgrading, yung savings. Salamat mga huwarang Pilipino sa Malaysia. Sana tuloy-tuloy pa ang inyong tagumpay.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo at a Bilateral Meeting with United States President George W. Bush

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At a Bilateral Meeting with U.S. President George W. Bush

[Delivered at the Study Room, Malacañang Palace, October 18, 2003]

A REVITALIZED AND MATURING ALLIANCE

I'd like to thank President Bush for coming to the Philippines on this state visit. It affirms the warm and deep relations between our two countries. It's another building block in a revitalized and maturing alliance rooted in shared history and shared values, a common interest in global peace and prosperity, as well as a real commitment to combating terrorism and advancing freedom.

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the United States for its support for the Philippines as a non-permanent member of the Security Council for the term 2004 to 2005, and also for designating the Philippines as a major non-NATO ally.

I also welcome the Joint Defense Assessment made by our respective defense agencies. It recognizes that the world today requires a new perspective on political and economic security. The assessment recognizes the determination of the Philippines to take greater responsibility for its own political and economic security, even as it acknowledges that strong relations with the U.S. will contribute greatly to peace and prosperity, stability and security especially from terrorism.

Indeed, we must close ranks and stand firm against terrorist threats, however grave, however armed and from whatever quarter.

When Dos Palmas hostagetaking happened in May 2001, the Philippines chose to fight terrorism, compensating for such modest means at its command with an unshakeable resolve to defeat it once and for all.

I thank President Bush for continued security assistance which enhances the means to defeat terrorism. I also appreciate the help of President Bush for increased economic assistance to alleviate poverty and other socio-economic ills from which terrorism draws its strength.

I take pride in the robust economic ties that bind the Philippines and the United States. This past week in preparation for this visit, we witnessed the launching in the Philippines of "Convergys", the largest customer care service company in the world which is hiring 3,000 workers in its first year of operation.

We also witnessed the launching of the new 50 million-dollar investment of Ford, to launch the Philippines as an export hub to the world. We received 33 million dollars of new USAid money for educational assistance in the conflict-affected areas, and we celebrated the electrification of 1,650 barangays with the contribution of one million pesos per barangay from Mirant Cal Energy in San Roque – all in preparation for your visit, Mr. President.

I look forward to the rest of my talks with President Bush and the officials of his administration.

Once again, thank you, Mr. President. And thanks to Mrs. Bush for making this state visit to the Philippines.

Speech of President Arroyo at the State Dinner in Honor of President George W. Bush and Mrs. Laura Bush

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the State Dinner in Honor of President George W. Bush and Mrs. Laura Bush

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, October 18, 2003]

REVISITING RP-US RELATIONS

First of all, I would like to say, welcome to Malacañang!

American leaders also lived and worked here. This home is a monument to the relationship between the Philippines and the United States of over a century. This relationship has been warm and deep in the hearts of our peoples and nations. And today Mr. President, you saw in the thousands of people who were in the streets to meet you with great joy, how much the Filipino people love and admire you. And I am sure that you have seen that I can speak for them when I say that we are proud you are here.

We have a revitalized and maturing alliance rooted in shared history — exemplified by this monument in which we lived and worked — rooted in shared values, a common interest in global peace and prosperity, as well as a real commitment to combating terrorism and advancing freedom. We know the pain of terror, we know the relief brought by knowing we have faithful partners against terror. We appreciate that the United States has delivered indispensable support and assistance to our efforts to marginalize terrorists, and also to drain the breeding places of their recruits and push the frontiers of development and social justice to win the peace.

Today, we agreed to work on the recommendations of the Joint Defense Assessment, towards a realistic security cooperation program in which the Philippines takes greater responsibility for its own political and economic security, even as strong support from the U.S. will contribute to peace and prosperity, stability and security especially from terrorism.

We also take pride in the robust economic and trade ties that bind the Philippines and the United States. And tonight, we had in our midst American chief executive officers, who came to the Philippines just to be with you tonight in this dinner, Mr. President.

Our friendship has ripened into a maturity befitting the information age of the 21st century, largely practical with just the right tint of sentimentality and warmth by a growing people to people solidarity here and in the United States. For the Philippines, our friendship takes into account the three million of our men and women who lived in and contribute to the development of the economy of the United States. It also takes into account the young soldiers of World War II, now senior veterans, who fought side by side with American soldiers in defense of democracy.

Mr. President, Congress gave you a rousing welcome as well in Congress, and the Philippine nation heard your speech at the joint session. It was inspiring, many have said. And so I can say that our meetings today in Malacañang and in Congress will lead us forward.

We shall continue to respond to the manifold threats and challenges we faced in the spirit of a blossoming covenant that lives in the realities of the 21st century, especially the conjunction between security and development that has become a paramount reality in the developing world.

On this note, friends I invite you all to join me in a toast for the continued success and good health of His Excellency President and Mrs. Bush, and the strong partnership between our two countries.

Mabuhay!

Speech of President Arroyo the Annual Convention/Election and Seminar of the Philippine Judges Association

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Annual Convention/Election and Seminar of the Philippine Judges Association

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Century Park Hotel, Ermita, Manila, October 23, 2003]

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much, Kuya Etcho for the introduction.

Senate President Drilon; Speaker De Venecia; Chief Justice Davide; Judge De La Cruz and the judges of the Republic of the Philippines; Secretary Datumanong; Justice Velasco; our senators represented here by the principal sponsor of the Judicial Reform Law, Kiko Pangilinan; congressmen – Nonoy Llibanan, the principal sponsor of the same law that I just signed, Deputy Speaker Raul Gonzales, Congressman Nonoy Andaya. I believe we... Do we have Congressman Cajes here and Congressman Angara Castillo, Congressman Danton Bueser; fellow workers in government; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen.

It's so providential that the Senate and the House were able to ratify such a far-reaching landmark legislation on judicial reform in time for my it here in your convention. And I thank them for it, but I think once again the Lord's timing is perfect, and it was the Lord who timed this ratification.

I thank them for their work. It's a landmark piece of work. I would like to congratulate not only them but all of you who worked for it including our justices who are here in the front row today. I'd like to greet them too. Indeed, it is a tribute and a recognition of Philippine society of the hard work that our judges are doing for peace, order and the rule of law in our society.

I know the trials and tribulations of being a judge, not because I'm a lawyer, but I have a cousin who is a judge, I had an uncle who was a judge. I had an uncle too who was a judge. And observing them through the years and observing many of you whom I know, I can see that many judges have placed future on the line. And even more than that have placed family on the line. And even more than that have even placed life on the line to fight crime and terror.

All these in return for what used to be until today a salary that is much lower from the starting pay of a brand new lawyer in a De Campanilla Makati Law firm — that is up to today. Today, it was my honor and pleasure to sign into Law R.A. 9227, upgrading the compensation of judges. The culmination of the good work that the gentlemen in the platform and the lady in the front row have been working so hard for to come up with the correct bill in the right format, in the right source of budgetary allocation.

I thank the members of Congress. They heard your voices. But even before they heard your voices they saw the mute testimony of the many Salas that had no applicants and they share our philosophy that justice also demands that those who deliver it should likewise participate of its benefits.

Many sectors ask for an increase in pay but not all sectors have a mute testimony of Salas without applicants. It just goes to show that what used to be in the law was not the correct level that would have an equilibrium between the demand and the supply of judges.

And therefore, what the market would otherwise have provided for if our society were to be completely free enterprise including government pay was recognized by our congressmen and our senators. And we thank them for that. We thank them for realizing which petitions for increase in pay are the most essential and which are desirable but less essential. There are those that we wish will happen. There are those that must happen, and they recognize what must happen is the increase in pay of our judges.

I too have many times advocated this increase in salaries and allowances of members of the judiciary. I've said this in such unlikely venues as the PMA Alumni gathering and the PNP anniversary celebration because at that time I said the soldiers are getting their pay increase, the police have gotten their pay increase. If we really want to complete the reform of law enforcement and the criminal justice system, the judges also have to have their pay increase. That is an integral part of our reform program.

Many of us and certainly I have long held that the most basic foundations of democracy are the rule of law and an environment of peace. Where the law commands little respect, chaos will not be far behind; where peace is continually threatened the law becomes meaningless in the lives of citizens. Where there is lawlessness and unpeace, there is no progress for peoples or nations.

The community, the jailer, the judge, the prosecutor, the law enforcer all have an indispensable role to play.

And the judicial reform law that we just passed and signed is one of the most important components of judicial reform. Other components are being done within the judiciary itself. And we to the extent that it's possible to comment on interbranch independence, we would like to commend the judicial reforms being done at the side of the judiciary under the great leadership of Chief Justice Davide.

Earlier I said that the judges that I have observed have put their careers, their life, their future, their families on the line to fight criminality, and also in this day and age to fight even terrorism. Like all nations, we have to face the threat of terrorism but let's stop terrorizing ourselves. Let's keep the strength to jump forward day-to-day. We in the government including you when you do your judgments are doing something about the Jemaah Islamiyah in concert with other nations. And we will contain this threat, if not totally eliminate it. The death of Al-Ghozi and the recent arrest of Taufek Refke are proof of our collective determination and capability to end this threat.

This is an important event in our fight against terrorism. The signing of the bill into law today and the arrest of Taufek. We have exposed a large cell of the Jemaah Islamiyah here in Mindanao. Recent events show that their sinister plans are both deadly and far-ranging, both intended to threaten our country and to sow fear in the region.

I commend the judges who have been issuing timely warrants of arrest or rendering timely decisions of conviction for all of the things that we have had to do to fight crime and terrorism.

In as much as I talk about judges in PMA and PNP meetings, allow me to use a judges' meeting also now to commend the armed forces, the immigration bureau and the PNP for the deep and excellent sleuthing that led to the capture of Taufek Refke early this month. He was trained by the infamous Al-Ghozi somewhere in the mountain vastness of Central Mindanao. Their curriculum: murder tactics, weapons to sow widespread fear and panic, explosives, among others. Reports have it that a large number of his cohorts in training have returned to Indonesia but he stayed here to become the moneybag of the JI in Mindanao.

We have identified his companions and we have sounded out the Indonesian authorities. In Cotabato City, again, with the help of a judge's warrant of arrest, we raided a safehouse containing underground records of high intelligence value. Government operatives are pouring into Mindanao for the manhunt that will not relent until all these fugitives are accounted for.

The terrorists are falling one by one. This reduces the weight of terrorist threats across the broad range of targets in our country and across Southeast Asia. We are moving effectively to check terror as I said earlier in concert with our neighbors. Our ongoing constriction measures are eating up their room for maneuver. The peace process with the MILF will continue to isolate them. Our determined moves against poverty will drain their recruitment bases. We shall beat terror decisively and comprehensively. And when we say comprehensively all the way until conviction and that is the great contribution of our judges to the rule of law and the fight against terrorism.

I would like to take this opportunity also to commend the western police district for displaying the needed vigilance and taking firm action against residual threats connected with the Oakwood incident. The raid on the Magdalo safehouse is a clear signal to would-be destabilizers that they have nowhere to hide and they will be arrested one way or the other. What the WPD did should serve as an example to other law enforcement units. And of course, what they did is only the first step in a long chain of the rule of law which will find its way in the Sala of our judges.

And whether it comes to stopping petty crimes in the streets, to taking on the scourge of drugs, and even the greater challenge of terrorism, the judges are at the forefront.

With this new law on judicial compensation, we hope to bring justice to more people through the resolution of more cases as a result of making the judicial branch a more attractive option for lawyers. We also find in it a strong shield from temptations to which our judges and justices are always exposed.

This law is a worthy companion to the respect and dignity accorded to the members of the court and a manifestation of social justice, this time with the judges and justices as the beneficiaries of social justice. Above all, it is insurance... It is insurance that the rule of law will ever prevail in our land.

Of the three branches of government, the judiciary is the one that provides the people a sense of permanence and a constancy of direction. But this role is not easily performed. The credibility of judges is not one that can be openly wooed like that of politicians. It is a credibility gained from the competence in judgment, the impartiality of decisions, the swiftness by which justice is meted out and the probity by which judges lead their lives.

Yours is an institution that has been built for over a hundred years, a hundred two years. It is a fragile institution in a democracy or a republic that is not yet strong. It is an institution that can be eroded by the mere hint of suspicion or sudden attack.

Nothing, indeed, can help a republic endure more than strong institutions of law, as stated by your theme: "A Strong Judiciary: the Sentinel of Democracy."

While the institutions are not yet strong, and we are hoping, in fact we are confident that the reform law that I just signed, that these gentlemen and the lady worked so hard to pass, will strengthen that institution of the judiciary.

I bear faith in your courage and fortitude as individual judges to live up to the challenge.

Mga huwes ng Pilipinas, napakalaki ang pag-asa ng taong bayan sa inyo. And so on this day, as we begin a new chapter in the institution of the judiciary, to all of you, judges, I wish you the best in the performance of your duty. And as more judges join you now, because it has become more attractive to be a judge, I hope that there will be more speedier justice for the poor, for the rich, for the weak, for the strong. And thereby, you will be a vanguard in strengthening our Republic.

Mabuhay ang mga huwes ng Pilipinas.

PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo towards a Culture of Responsible Information

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
Towards a Culture of Responsible Information

[Delivered at Ballrooms 1 & 2, Dusit Hotel Manila, Makati City, October 24, 2003]

TOWARDS A CULTURE OF RESPONSIBLE INFORMATION

Last night, the Philippines was elected to the U.N. Security Council. Our seat in the U.N. Security Council combined with our earlier designation as a major non-NATO ally by the United States, puts our country in a vantage position to contribute to world peace and to achieve enduring peace in our own shores. It is a source of national pride that 179 out of 182 countries voted for the Philippines. We only needed 122 votes to be elected. We got 179 votes. This shows the support, respect and prestige we have gained in the international community. This is because of the Filipinos' courage and sacrifice in the fight against terrorism, in the fight against poverty and in our willingness to work with other nations in promulgating international consensus, multilateral peacekeeping and the Rule of Law.

We shall continue to stand by these principles as we strive to keep every Filipino home and family safe from harm and closer to economic prosperity.

Yesterday, too, the number two man of Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) in the Philippines was presented to the public after being arrested a short while ago. We are elevating the JI into our national official threat spectrum. We used to have the MILF, the NPA and the Abu Sayyaf up there. But I have decided to update our priorities. The JI's sinister plans are both deadly and far-ranging. Both intended to threaten our country and to sow fear in the region.

At any rate, we're about to enter into formal talks with the MILF, and the Abu Sayyaf is a spent force. We're going therefore into a more focused campaign against the JI with a complete order of battle, a new order of targets for domestic and transnational intelligence in concert with our allies.

We're moving effectively to check terror in concert with our neighbors. Our ongoing constriction measures are cutting up their room for maneuver. The peace process with the MILF will continue to isolate them. Our determined moves against poverty will drain their recruitment bases.

Meanwhile, preparations for the peace talks with the MILF are pushing forward. Philippine officials and MILF representatives are to meet in Malaysia very soon to set a timetable for the formal negotiations. As Prime Minister Mahathir steps down on October 31st — I'm glad his ambassador is here — I take this opportunity to express once again my gratitude to him for his abiding support for the peace process,

I would also like to take this opportunity to extend my best wishes and greetings for greater unity and peace to the Muslim world on the start of the Ramadan tomorrow.

Our peace panel has just finished setting the detailed guidelines for closer coordination with the MILF in going after lawless elements. The authorities are readying a list of wanted persons to be delivered to the MILF, and, I expect them to cooperate in assisting find these wanted elements.

I want the MILF specifically to stand clear of the JI because we have special teams on the trail of the JI fugitives and we don't want this manhunt to get in the way of the peace talks.

President Bush's recent visit was a boost to political and economic security in the region. In the run-up to the visit, "Convergys", the last customer service company in the world, committed to make us a center of operations. Ford put in an additional 50 million dollars to launch the Philippines as an export hub to the world. Mirant Cal opened a power plant in the Visayas and staked more of its resources to contribute to our barangay electrification program. Intel applied for a 300-million peso expansion. And just a few days ago, Texas instruments announced a 70 million dollars expansion.

The state visit marked another step forward in the development of a modern, mature relationship between friends and equals. President Bush acknowledged the gains we have made in all fronts, including poverty alleviation and combating corruption. And we appreciate his generous words for our country and our government.

In keeping with our agreement that we made during my state visit to the U.S. to conduct a comprehensive security assessment, President Bush and I reviewed and endorsed the findings of the 2003 Joint Defense Assessment (JDA) of our armed forces' capabilities and requirements.

The purpose of the JDA is to assist our government in developing a defense program that will improve the ability of the Philippine military to respond to threats to our security. President Bush in his statement to the Philippine Congress committed to assist us in our program of military reform, including increased allocation of resources to our national defense.

I also welcomed the new U.S. initiative to strengthen education in the poorest and most conflicted areas of the Philippines, particularly Mindanao. This new program complements our government's efforts to uplift the communities in the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao and expand their access to education and training.

The visit of President Bush was a prelude to the APEC Summit. The APEC leaders committed to revive negotiations at the WTO and pledged anew to eliminate terrorism. APEC economies are collectively determined to put more reasonable consensus into the multilateral trading system, make a dent on global poverty and mop up the recruitment grounds of extremism.

All these eventually will translate to a better life for our people. The Philippines was cited by APEC as one of the fastest growing economies in the Asia Pacific region. Of the 21 member-economies, the Philippines ranks number six in probable GDP growth for this year. And I'm talking GDP because our GNP growth is usually higher but even by the more conservative GDP growth, we will be outpaced this year only by China, Vietnam and Russia, Thailand and Malaysia.

Whatever boons we are facing will be a cumulative effect of what we've done over the past two and a half years.

We insulated our country quite effectively from the impact of SARS. We gained market share in electronics even when it was weak worldwide. That's why Intel and Texas instruments are making these major expansions. We prevented the El Niño phenomenon from depressing our rice production, right Cito? Where's Cito L? Right?

We are pushing the frontiers of social reform in tandem with the peace process.

Through my trials and little triumphs in the difficult past two years and a half — difficult for our country and difficult for the world — I gained the experience and the insight to shape effective political, economic and social policies to fight corruption through positive and negative measures, to control terrorism wielding domestic programs and international cooperation, to combine good governance with fiscal discipline and macroeconomic stability.

We need even bigger things to do. We need to keep the deficit in check but more than that, we need to reduce our debt to GDP ratio. We need to do lifestyle checks and prosecute erring officials but more than that, we need to build up the institutions to rev up the fight against corruption, and of course, against poverty -the fundamental problem of our society.

We need fundamental reforms to bring about long-term solutions to finally strengthen a republic. Yes, we need reforms and we need reconciliation.

I'm sorry to learn of the impeachment raps against Chief Justice Davide. The Executive is obligated to stand down from this controversy involving co-equal branches of government. However, I would like to douse wild speculations that we are in the midst of a constitutional crisis. So far it appears that the Rule of Law is being followed and there is a Constitutional process being applied. I only wish that the process will be speedy and insulated from heavy partisan or personal undertones. Let us demonstrate institutional strength and stability and the will to uphold democracy, justice and fair play.

As Mr. Nathan said, we have had many trials this past year. We have had many trials these past three years for that matter. And I thank you once again for inviting me here today as you said, to reflect on some of these important happenings in our country and in the world.

Thank you, once again, for inviting me and I hope we have a good exchange. Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the opening program of the 2003 Palarong Pambansa

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the opening program of the 2003 Palarong Pambansa

[Delivered at the Mindanao Civic Center Grandstand and Oval Area Tubod, Lanao del Norte, October 25, 2003]

Daghang salamat, Congressman Dimaporo.

Daghang salamat Sab Governor Imelda Dimaporo; Chairman Buhain; Congressman Badelles; mga laing-laing mayors sa Tibuok Pilipinas, Mindanao at buong Ppilipinas; aton mga governors headed by the governor of Davao Del Norte, the President of ULAP, Governor Dolfo del Rosario; aniha sab si Governor Loreto Ocampos, whose beautiful daughter sang our national anthem and the Llanao Del Norte hymn; ARMM Vice Governor Mahid Mutilan; Cabinet members — Secretary Mike Defensor, Secretary Mai Jimenez and Secretary Dick Gordon, Undersecretary Bacani; Congressman Monico Puentevella, Chairman of the Sports Committee of the House of Representatives, sa inyong mga lahat, magandang araw, kahit na umuulan, sa inyong lahat.

‘Di ko hahabain ang aking diskurso kasi ayokong masipon kayong lahat. Maayong hapon kaninyong tanan. Assalaamu alaikum pagariya. Binabati ko ang lahat ng naritong dumalo sa pagbukas nitong ating palarong pambansa itong taon. Espesyal ang akong pag-abi-abi sa mga pumuluyo sa Lanao del Norte asa ko nidako, nagdugay ang akong kinabuhi diri. Salamat sa mga officials sa DepEd diri ug tanan ug mitabang aron madayon kining palaro. Binabati ko rin ang lahat ng ating kababayang Muslim sa pagsimula sa araw ng ramadhan bukas. At hinihiling ko rin sa ibang Pilipinong hindi muslim na makiisa sa pagdiriwang ng ramadhan at isama rin sa panalangin ang kapayapaan ng mindanao at ng buong bansa.

Wala tayong mas hinahangad pa kundi mawakasan ang kaguluhan at terorismo dito at nang ang pangmatagalang kapayapaan ay lubusan na nating matamo. Ang tagumpay natin laban sa terorismo at para sa kapayapaan ay mangangahulugan magiging mabilis ang mga gawain para sa kaunlaran lalo na dito sa mindanao. At hindi na mauulit ‘yung pangyayari naghintay ng ilang buwan, hindi lang ilang buwan, ilang taon na maging host ng palaro dahil sa banta sa seguridad ng mga manlalaro.

The Palarong Pambansa is a symbol of excellence in sports. And now, more than ever, the palaro is a tribute to our unity and solidarity as a people. An affirmation that sports can bridge differences and misunderstanding, transcending religion, culture and tradition, understood by everyone regardless of one’s dialect and a common language of peace and camaraderie. It is also a tribute to the energy that the young can contribute to our country’s future. At sana dahil bata pa kayo, maraming energy at masigla, hindi kayo sisipunin kahit na nababasa kayo.

Ang sports ay humuhubog sa kabataan. At sabi nga ni Dr. Jose Rizal, ang kabataan kagaya ninyo ang pag-asa ng ating bayan. An important goal in the Palarong Pambansa is to develop champions, local and international, from among our youth. Kaya nga ako ay nananawagan din sa lahat ng ating mga manlalaro at atletang narito, gawin ninyo ang inyong makakaya upang matulad kayo sa mga kilalang pilipinong manlalaro tulad nila Lydia de Vega-Mercado, Elma Muros-Posadas at Isidro Del Prado na nagsimulang makilala sa mga Palarong Pambansa.

Ako'y nagpapasalamat din sa lahat ng mga kabataang narito na nagsisilbing modelo hindi lamang sa kanilang kapwa-kabataan kundi na rin sa inyong mga pamayanan, ang pagpalakas ng katawan at pag-iwas sa bawal na gamot. Sabi nga ni Congressman Fuentevella sa kanyang distrito sa Bacolod, "do sports, not drugs." at 'yon din ang isang layunin ng ating palaro.

Bago ako naging pangulo ay napakasama ng ating batas ukol sa pinagbabawal na gamot. Bago ka makulong nang permanente kinakailangan 200 grams ng shabu. Kaya't agad-agad na pinabago ko ang batas at binaba ito sa 10 grams upang matigil na ang walang humpay na pagbebenta at makulong ang mga sindikato ng bawal na gamot. Ngayon, patuloy tayo sa kampanya laban sa bawal na gamot sa lahat ng kalye, sa lahat ng barangay, sa lahat ng siyudad at lungsod. At tuloy-tuloy ang ating laban upang makulong ang lahat nang nagbebenta ng bawal na gamot. Hindi ako papayag na sirain nang droga ang kinabukasan ng ating kabataan at ang pag unlad ng ating bayan.

Kaya ngayon pa lamang, lalo ninyong paghusayin ang inyong paglalaro. Maglaro sa sports, hindi sa droga. Dapat magamit ang ating natutunan sa palakasan upang paghandaan ang kinabukasan — competitiveness, team play, respect for the rules of the game. Kailangan ang mga ito sa sports. Kailangan din ang mga ito para sa malakas na republika. Kailangan rin nating labanan pa natin ang terorismo at ipagpatuloy ang peace talks habang patuloy ang rehabilitasyon ng mga nasalantang lugar sa mindanao. Kailangang siguruhin na ang pagpapalaganap ng kapayapaan ay kaagapay ng pagpapaunlad sa pamayanan. Kailangan ipagtaguyod natin ang kabuuan at integridad ng teritoryo ng Pilipinas na aayon sa ating saligang batas. Kailangan bigyan ang bawat isa ng tamang paggalang at pagkilala anuman ang kanyang relihiyon o kultura nang sa gayon ay maiwasan ang pagkakawatak-watak na nagtutuloy sa hidwaan.

Let us be united. Let us be one team, the team of the Republic of the Philippines.

Kaya nalulungkot ako sa kasong impeachment na sinampa kontra kay Chief Justice Davide, na nirerespeto ko sa kanyang integridad at pagka-professional. No chief justice has imagined and undertaken a reform program of the judiciary as comprehensive and far-ranging as the program now undertaken by Chief Justice Davide. It is a bold and revolutionary reform effort that will bring our judicial system to the 21st century. It is a vital effort that will strengthen our democracy and satisfy our people's demand for reliable and speedy justice. And that is why I am hoping that we shall be able to overcome the divisions and wounds that continue to divide us.

I will ensure and uphold both the integrity of the institutions of the Supreme Court and the House of Representatives. We shall overcome this conflict. Inaasahan ko na sa madaling panahon, mareresolba ang hidwaan ng Kongreso at Korte Suprema dahil maging bansa o sa palaro kailangan ang fair play at teamwork.

We need fair play. Kailangan natin ang katarungan. And we need teamwork. Kailangan natin ang pagkakaisa. Kailangan natin ang rekonsilyasyon maging sa bansa, maging sa palaro.

And on this note, I now declare the 2003 Palarong Pambansa open.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the awarding ceremony by the Concerned Women of the Philippines

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the awarding ceremony by the Concerned Women of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, October 27, 2003]

Thank you very much.

Our new Justices, our new Ambassadors, our new Generals, our new Judges, our new Cabinet officials, the new inductees in the various outstanding and prestigious organizations of the Philippines. And of course, the Concerned Women of the Philippines who have given me this award.

In behalf of all of the awardees, I would like to thank all of the inductees today for joining the government and also for your active participation in civic activities in our country. And I would like to thank the Concerned Women of the Philippines for this very important and valuable award.

This morning, some of us were together at the Supreme Court, to hear mass. On my part I prayed that all ends well in the Davide impeachment controversy, and that God give us the wisdom to be constructive, fair and ever loyal to the flag. I believe that there must be peace among our great institutions if there is to be peace in our democratic society.

Without going into the merits of the impeachment case, over the weekend, since the controversy broke out, I consulted with the chief justice, the speaker of the house and Mr. Eduardo Cojuangco about the controversy. Again, without going into the legal merits of the issue, I have been trying to seek a principled solution in the national interest.

I had earlier said, last Thursday, that this being an issue involving co-equal branches of government, I deemed it proper for the executive to stand aside and allow constitutional processes to take their course. However, a political threshold has been reached in which the presidency is called upon for the extraordinary duty to mediate a controversy that may invite opportunistic destabilization attempts perpetrated by parties outside the dispute.

Indeed, it was not my intention until now to interfere in the substance of the constitutional process put in motion in the legislature, or much less to intervene in behalf of any parties involved. But what I want is for our people to be freed from the anxieties that could adversely affect their work and livelihood, and for our economic and political stability to be secure in the eyes of our people and in the eyes of the international audience.

This looking for a solution does not involve any deals with anyone or any vested interests. I do this with pure and patriotic intentions, with only national unity and reconciliation at heart.

I believe that even in the face of the constitutional separation of powers, when the supreme welfare of the people is involved, all the constitutions of our republican democracy must have a congruence of faith and action.

A woman is at the center of governance of our nation today, and it's my job as chief executive to execute the assurance that I made last Friday to the people of the Philippines and the people of the world that we are not in the midst of a constitutional crisis. It is my job as chief executive to make that assurance stay a reality and to avert a constitutional crisis.

Today, the woman is at the center of governance, not merely because the president is a woman, but because we have fielded women of all ages and persuasions in key positions in the public service.

But more than that the woman is at the center of changing things in our society where change needs to be done. The awardees today are and were women who have championed change and have been able to achieve much change. Women are also the champions of peace and reconciliation.

In many parts of the country, women have quietly nurtured a culture of peace by helping address not only the immediate causes of conflict, but by boldly striking at its roots — inequity, injustice, economic exclusion.

Poverty reduction is the highest agenda of my administration. And women have helped me lead that struggle.

For one, peace can only thrive in an environment of relative prosperity and social justice. And that is why we need to fight poverty aside from that poverty in itself is an evil we must fight.

But building a culture of peace does not stop at addressing poverty.

Peace only reigns when human worth is upheld. The way to peace is the nurturance of the good values of global citizenship, mutual respect, tolerance, solidarity, and freedom with responsibility.

And I am proud, as having been one of the members of the Concerned Women of the Philippines, that these values are the values that the Concerned Women of the Philippines have fought for all these decades.

And let me say again that poverty or social exclusion does not confer the license to kill or to maim. People cannot claim the right to dignity at the expense of other lives.

And once again, I congratulate the awardees of the Concerned Women of the Philippines for what they did especially during martial law in order to ensure human dignity and human rights.

Today, the fight is against terrorism but lurking in the distant clouds is a possibility again that the days of dictatorship and authoritarian rule may come upon us if we are not careful to avert the crisis that could lead to another destabilization.

Women must be involved in this fight. Women must be involved in the fight against terror, in the fight against the possible return of dictatorial forces. Not only in tasks of vigilance, but in the greater task of fighting poverty in the recruitment fields of those who would become the hatchet men and errand boys of the terrorists and the would-be authoritarian rightist rulers.

I have had great difficulty during the past two and a half years of my administration because I came into this position amid great turmoil in the world and in our country. You know only too well the trauma of that impeachment trial. We cannot go through another trauma again because that trial left our country divided. We cannot afford to divide it again already divided as it is.

I came into the presidency when the world had not yet recovered from the 1997 Asian crisis. In 2001, that was compounded by the bursting of I.T. bubble, 9-11 came, early 2003 was SARS. I am proud though that through these critical years, especially the last two and a half years, the Philippines was cited by the last APEC summit as one of the fastest growing economies in the Asia Pacific region. Of the 21 member economies of the Asia Pacific region, and they include the most powerful and the most advanced economies in the world, the Philippines is number six in growth forecast for this year, out of 21.

The upturn for the second half of the year is due to the recovery taking place in the U.S. and Japan, along with Europe. But our economic prospects will largely depend not on the growth in those countries but on the course of our way of doing politics.

Already, we can see the mudslinging, the libelous air, the recriminations, the raw posturings in the horizon and even on center stage.

I do not wish to be part of this sorry spectacle of traditional and destructive politics.

I seek to address issues to work, to plod. I seek reconciliation, not further division of this already divided nation.

Our historic problem has been the need for economic development to fight poverty.

To develop our economy and create a strong republic, we need to change our system of doing things, to institute true reforms in our politics as well as in our economy. We also need to unify as a people.

I want to concentrate on the economy, on getting jobs back, on healing divisions, on clean elections. And these are difficult things to do in the last several years of internal and external crisis, but the other countries are beginning to recover and we cannot afford to be left behind. We cannot afford for our country to go into the way of destruction because of greater divisions.

And I see my role at this point in time as somebody who will seek a healing, who will seek reconciliation, who will seek a solution to the constitutional crisis that we all want to avoid. It is my role to seek a solution before the crisis even breaks out. And that was why I heard mass this morning with the justices of the supreme court, with the employees of the supreme court, with the judges and the lawyers of the Philippines, and several of you who were there including the Concerned Women of the Philippines.

As I accept the award that you have given me and I feel so honored to receive this award in the midst of the great women that I was able to observe and admire outside and inside the Concerned Women of the Philippines. I mean I admire them from outside and I admire them from inside as a member. I ask you all to join me in praying for a healing, a reconciling solution. Help me make the right decisions and do the right persuasions to assure our country in the world that indeed when we say that we are not in the midst of a constitutional crisis, we mean what we say and we can deliver what we can assure the world.

To all of you, I thank you. This is a defining moment in our history. Let us be united in seeking a solution, the solution that is in accordance with the will of the Lord above.

Speech of President Arroyo during the inauguration of the Center for Health Improvement and Life Development (CHILD) House Project

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the inauguration of the Center for Health Improvement and Life Development (CHILD) House Project

[Delivered at the PCSO Complex, E. Rodriguez Sr. Avenue, Quezon City, October 28, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Bayani Fernando na kumakatawan sa MMDA na partner ng PCSO at Ricky, Ricky Reyes Foundation, dito sa napakagandang CHILD Center.

Binabati ko rin siyempre ‘yung kanyang ka-partner, ang PCSO Chairman, si Honeygirl De Leon. Happy Anniversary sa PCSO! ‘Yung iba’t-ibang mga ngo na tumulong dito, mga iba’t-ibang mga government agencies at saka ang ating host mayor dito, si Mayor Sonny Belmonte. At sa inyong lahat, isang malugod na pagbati.

Binibigay buhay ko... Ah! Binibigay pugay ko — hindi buhay, kasi sila ang nagbigay ng buhay — pero binibigyang pugay ko ang CHILD House, ang Ricky Reyes Foundation, ang MMDA, ang PCSO at ‘yung iba’t-ibang mga NGO na nagpunta sa entablado kanina sa kanilang pagsisikap para magkaroon ng kaganapan itong CHILD house.

Thank you for your generosity, especially for those who need it most.

We face threats from killer diseases like SARS and cancer, but the deadliest of all is apathy, and CHILD house is medicine against apathy. CHILD house shows why we must keep on working together. Gaya nang sabi ni Honeygirl, ang gandang halimbawa — government agency, NGO foundation — nagsasama-sama imbes na nagwawatak-watak. At mabuti naman ay ito ay pinili para sa mga kabataang... No, mga batang biktima ng cancer. Tinanong ko nga kay Ricky Reyes, bakit cancer ang pinili mong alagaan? Well, mahigit tatlong porsiyento ng mga kaso ng cancer sa ating bansa ay bumibiktima ng mga bata. At mahigit pitumpung porsiyento ng cancer patients ay mahihirap. At walumpung porsiyento ay galing pa sa malalayong lugar.

Kanina ‘yung isang bata sabi ko, “dito ka ba nakatira?” “hindi, po.” “saan?” “sa Makati.” okey lang kung taga-Makati, pero papano ‘yung mga tiga-malayong lugar at dito sila nagpapa-chemotherapy. Bukod sa kinakailangan ng batang maysakit ang higit na atensiyon mula sa magulang, malaking problema rin ang paghahanap ng malinis at murang matutuluyan. Eto ngayon, ang CHILD house ay malinis at murang matutuluyan ng CHILD cancer victims.

Dito sa CHILD house magkakaroon sila nang panandaliang tirahan na bukod sa abot-kaya ng bulsa ay makapagbibigay din ng moral support sa mga pasyente pati na rin sa magulang nila. Dahil para sa mga magulang, maaari silang maturuan ng iba’t-ibang mga gawaing mapagkakakitaan.

Every effort that we expend to promote our people’s health contributes to our advancement as a nation.

Kapag ang mahihirap ay nagkakaroon ng suliraning pangkalusugan, lalong humihina ang kaniyang kakayahan upang makilahok at makasama sa pagsulong ng ating lipunan. Sila ang higit na nangangailangan ng ating paglingap.

Simula nang ako ay manungkulan sa pamahalaan, at hanggang ngayon na ako ay pangulo na, naniniwala ako ang isang mahalagang prayoridad ang kalusugan ng sambayanan. At ang aking priority Universal Health Insurance and half-priced medicine.

‘Yung universal health insurance, alam n’yo matagal na ‘yang batas ng Universal Health Insurance, senador pa ako nung nabuo ‘yang batas. Ngunit sa haba nang panahon na ‘yan ay batas, noong ako ay naging pangulo, ‘yung aking namanang mahihirap na covered ng health insurance ay wala pa mang kalahating milyong pamilyang maralita, at anim na milyon ang mga maralitang pamilya. Ngunit ngayon, sa dalawang taon at kalahati ng aking pagka-pangulo, mula sa wala pang kalahating milyon halos dalawang milyong maralitang pamilya na ang sakop ng health insurance. At dahil bawat pamilyang average sa ating bansa ay lima ang kasapi, ibig sabihin noon halos sampung milyong mahihirap na ang sakop dito sa health insurance. At kung ganito kabilis ang tuloy ng Philhealth, sa loob ng tatlong taon pa ay masasama na nating lahat ang anim na milyong mahihirap sa pamilya.

Marami sa pagbayad ng premium ng health insurance... Kasi ang premium ay 100 pesos a month bawat pamilya. Ibig sabihin noon average 20 pesos a month bawat me mber ng family. Pero ang dami namang nalilibreng pagpagamot. Marami dito gastos ng local governments at national government. At mula sa national government ang malaking nagbibigay ng kontribusyon ay walang iba kung hindi ang Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office.

Kaya tuwing may project si Honeygirl na binibigay sa akin, for my approval, sabi ko, "Honeygirl, huwag mong babawasan 'yung premium ng health insurance meron tayong target." ngunit magpapaskong mapapasa ang reporma ng buwis sa alak at sigarilyo mas lalo pang bibilis ang pagganap ng Universal Health Insurance sa lahat ng mahihirap.

Eh 'yon naman hindi gaano kahirap, 'yung mga manggagawa, eh kasama na nga 'yon sa binabayarang premium sa SSS. Kaya kung idadagdag mo 'yung manggagawa doon sa mga mahihirap na tinutulungan ng pcso at saka mga ating mga local governments ngayon ay higit na sa kalahati ng lahat ng Filipino ay sakop na ng PhilHealth insurance.

Sa ilalim naman ng ating half-priced medicine program, merong apatnapu't dalawang imported drugs na antibiotic, gamot nang pang-high blood, gamot nang asthma, gamot nang diabetes ay mabibili natin ngayon sa higit pitumpu't ospital ng gobyerno, maglagay na rin tayo dito, Honeygirl ng botika sa mga botika ng barangay, sa ilang rolling store ng NFA. Sa botika ng mga barangay makakabili na tayo ng mga murang herbal medicine.

At ito ay ginagawa ng pamahalaan sa pamamagitan din nang puhunan na sinabi kong ibigay ng PCSO sa Philippine International Trading Corporation. Ngayon sabi ko kay Honeygirl, "Honeygirl, magdagdag ka nang puhunan ng PITC para sa half-priced medicine, bigyan mo rin ng 100 million pesos." kaya members of the board ng PCSO — ayan, si Tony Abad 'yung aking estudyante — okay. Iyon 'yung parati kong pinipingot na estudyante ko. Ngayon, mula nung PITC hindi ko na siya pinipingot at talagang sinusuporta ko siya sa kaniyang programa na pagpasok ng murang gamot para sa ating mga mahihirap.

Gusto natin libre o halos libre ang pagpagamot. Gusto natin kalahati ang presyo ng gamot, 'yan ang ginagawa natin upang mai-angat ang katayuan ng ating mga kababayan.

Ang mga problema ng ating bansa, hindi kasalanan ng isang presidente lamang, ito ay naka-ugat sa ating economic at political system. Kaya para umunlad ang ating ekonomiya at lumakas ang ating republika, kailangan baguhin ang sistema sa pamamagitan ng reporma — reporma sa pangkalusugang gawain, reporma sa pamumuno, reporma maging sa uri ng ating pulitika.

Ito ang bunga ng aking karanasan sa nakalipas na dalawa't kalahating taon ng pagkapangulo sa pinakamasalimuot na sigurong panahon ng ating mundo. Hindi naman pinakamasalimuot pero isa na nga sa pinakamasalimuot na panahon ng ating mundo. Biro n'yo 'yon, nagsimula tayo sa 1997 Asian crisis; nagkaroon ng impeachment crisis kay Estrada; nagkaroon na naman ng impeachment crisis kay Davide ngayon; nagkaroon tayo ng pagbagsak ng I.T, ng computer industry noong early 2001, natamaan ang buong mundo; nagkaroon tayo ng 9-11, ng terorismo, natamaan ang buong mundo; nagkaroon tayo ng SARS, natamaan ang buong mundo, ngunit salamat din sa trabaho ng DOH, local government, lahat ng ahensiya, at pondo ng PCSO, nakaraos tayo sa SARS.

Sa dalawa't kalahating taon ng aking pagiging pangulo, nagkaroon nga ako nang karanasan para maunawaan on the ground at hindi lamang sa teheriya, ang kailangan nating gawin upang baguhin ang ating lipunan sa paraang magdulot ng paglago ng ekonomiya at pagwakas sa kahirapan.

Hinihiling ko ang inyong patuloy na pakikiisa sa lahat ng gawain ng ating pamahalaan upang matigil ang kahirapan.

Kaya ako'y muling nananawagan para sa pagkakaisa ng lahat ng Pilipino, kung nais nating mawakasan ang kahirapan at makamit ang masaganang buhay sa ilalim ng isang malakas na republika.

Kanya naman, I'm still hopeful that a principled compromise on the impeachment raps against Chief Justice Davide can be reached. For the sake of national unity, I am keeping a positive attitude that would help bring about a meeting of minds rather than a hard impasse. Let's not further divide the nation amid the heavy rhetoric of a continuing institutional battle.

Looking back at past events will show us how such controversial confrontations between powerful institutions have a way of setting back our economy and driving more of our people into hardship. Let us heed the supreme welfare of the people. Let's not lose our faith in our capacity to unite in crisis and hurdle our challenges together.

Kaya itong CHILD house — 'yan ay huwaran ng ating kakayahang magkaisa at masugpo ang krisis. Sana ito ay gawin natin sa buong sambayanang Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat, Ricky Reyes. Maraming salamat, PCSO. Maraming salamat, MMDA. Maraming salamat sa lahat nang tumulong sa CHILD house.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Mindanao Wide Indigenous People's Summit for Peace and Development

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Mindanao Wide Indigenous People's Summit for Peace and Development

[Delivered at the Waterfront Insular Hotel Ballroom, Lanang District Davao City, Davao del Sur, October 30, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Ging Deles. Lingkod na kamo tanan palihog.

Maraming salamat Secretary Ging Deles, ang dating chairman ng Anti-Poverty Commission na siyang tumutulong sa akin na magmaneho ng National Commission on Indigenous Peoples. Ngunit hindi na siya ngayon chairman ng Anti-Poverty Commission dahil siya na ngayon ang aking Presidential Adviser for the Peace Process.

Kasama rin natin ang ilan sa ating mga Cabinet members — si Secretary Mike Defensor na siyang tumutulong sa pabahay ng ating mga mararaming lumad. Kararating lang mula doon sa pagbuo pagkatapos ng ating National Anti-Poverty Commission meeting na tungkol nga, alang gyud sa aton mga lumad, walay laing kundili ang atong bag-o nga Secretary ug Anti-Poverty Commission na siya karon ang mahimo Overseeing Secretary sa NCIP, walay laing kundili ang anak ug Davao City, Secretary Camilo Sabio.

Kauban sab nato ang inyoha nga partner, ang Secretary sa Department na dugay na ang tabang kaninyo kay dili ko makalimot nga niadto ako ni sa iyang puwesto sa walay pondo kaniadto ang ncip, ang pondo sa inyong mga meetings nga gikan sa akong Department, ang head karon sa nining Department, si Secretary Dinky Soliman sa DSWD.

Ug ang atong Secretary nga nasaad sa mga eskuwela ug manunudlo para kaninyo, ang DepEd Secretary, DJ De Jesus. Ug ang Secretary na ngihatag ug daghang nga trabaho alang sa inyohang mga community, inyohang mga produkto, inyohang mga bayle, kultura, ang Secretary sa Tourism, Secretary Dick Gordon.

Salamat sab sa tanang commissioners ubos sa atong chair, si Chairman Ben Lingating. Salamat sa inyong... Salamat sa maayong trabaho. Ug tungod kay naa kita unya nga paghatag ug certificates of ancestral domain titles, ang ilahang mga representante ug atong mga beneficiary, si Datu Roilito Gawilan, Datu Rio Besto ug Timuai Carlos Pendaupan. Ang atong Secretary sa National Defense, si Secretary Ed Ermita. Kaninyong tanan, mga kaigsuonan usa ka mainit nga pag-abi-abi gikan kanako alang kaninyong tanan.

Gayundin ako ay nagpapasalamat sa inyong suporta at pagkikilala sa mga ginawang reporma at inisyatibo ng aking administrasyon hinggil sa pagpapatupad ng Indigenous Peoples Rights Act o IPRA. Siyempre po ipapatupad ko ito kasi noong ako ay senador, ang principal author ng IPRA ay walang iba kung hindi si Senator Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. Noong ako ay senador ang fi-nile kong panukalang batas ay ang Ancestral Domain Bill. Unya ang chairman sa committee, si Senator Flavio, pinalaki niya at ginawang Indigenous Peoples Rights, hindi lang Ancestral Domain.

So, ako ay nasisiyahan na partner kami, principal author... Ah, principal sponsor si Senator Juan Flavio, principal author naman o pangunahing tagatakda ako noong ako ay senador.

Busa sa akong nakita sa mga una nga tuig sa nahuman nang batas ang balaod murag dili maayo pa ang implementasyon. Busa sa ako nahimo presidente, ang akong Executive Order number one, ang akong order kay Presidential Adviser Howard Dee na ma-reorganize ang Commission on Indigenous Peoples. At siyempre ngayon nandiyan na ang batas, nandiyan na 'yung reorganization, sinusulong na natin ang ating I.P. sector agenda.

Gusto ko rin batiin ang napakaimportanteng medium-term Philippine development plan for indigenous peoples na ibinigay sa akin kanina ni Chairman Ben Lingating. Pirmi kong ginasulti nga ang kalinaw ug pag-uswag kanunay magkauban. Kung may kapayapaan maaasikaso nating mabuti ang ating mga bukirin, karagatan, kagubatan, kabundukan. Modaghan ang mga mamuhunan sa nasud tungod kay dali ang pagdani kanila aron motukod sila ug mga negosyo.

Kaya lang sa kabila naman ang negosyo ay nadidismaya kapag ang mga nangyayari ay nagpapakita ng malalim na hidwaan. Malalim na hidwaan maging sa mga lumad, ang mga lowlanders, maging sa NPA at sa mga sundalo, maging sa milf ug mga christians, maging sa EDSA 2, sa EDSA Tres, maging sa Congress at Supreme Court gaya nang binubunga ng kasong impeachment kontra kay Chief Justice Davide.

Therefore, I would like to take this opportunity — I'm sure in behalf of even our indigenous peoples who long for peace and stability — appeal to our leaders not to sit and wait out the situation.

I know that there are issues of high principles involved on both sides, but there is no higher principle in a democracy than the welfare of the people. These calls for a valiant patriotic effort to set aside strong countervailing beliefs and hurt pride and willfully come together for the nation. Everyday of intransigency sets back the opportunities for national advancement, for economic stability, and its attendant harvest of more trade, investment and jobs. Let's act now and as one nation. This is a time for statesmanship and sacrifice.

Iniimbita ko ang aking Secretary ng Agrarian Reform, si Obet Pagdanganan na sumama dito sa ating entablado. Ang kalinaw — at ang Secretary of Agriculture, si Cito Lorenzo, taga-Mindanao. Anak ug Mindanao, anak sa Davao ug Bukidnon. Daghan kaninyo taga-Davao ug Bukidnon, si Cito Lorenzo Davao ug Bukidnon — ang kalinaw ug kauswagan, ang estabilidad tuyo sab nining kongreso ang pagpalambo nining panuntunan alang sa kalinaw ug kauswagan.

Tungkol sa usapin ng ancestral domain, sabi nga ni Chairman Lingating, nagtakda tayo ng target na isangdaang libong ektarya ng lupain bawat taon para sa sertipikasyong ito. At kagahapon dunay newspaperman gikan sa community nga sa mga lumad nga nangutana kanako, "pila na kuno ang atong achievements sa certificate of ancestral domain?" ingon ko sa iya tingali ugma — kay karon kagahapon nahimo — tingali ugma mahibalo mo kay mao gyud ang atong usa sa mga anunsiyo sa atong I.P. Congress. Ug gusto ko maingon sa iya ug sa tanan at lahat ng Pilipino natupad na ang tatlongdaan at animnapung libong ektarya sa Certificate of Ancestral Domain.

At madadagdagan pa ito dahil sa CADTS na ating igagawad mamaya sa mga benipisaryong taga-Mindanao. Ang CADT para sa kitaotao I.P. communities, higit isangdaang libong ektarya. Sa miarayon I.P. communities, higit labing-isang libong ektarya. Aromanin manobo I.P. communities — asa kamo? — higit limang libong ektarya.

I'm hereby instructing the Land Registration Authority to exempt CADTS from land registration fee requirements. Paagi nga masulod ang mga CADTS ug CALTS, the inclusion of CADTS and CALTS under the handog titulo program.

Inaatasan ko rin ang pcsa na kaagad palabasin ang ikalawang sampung milyong piso para sa delineation ng ancestral domain. Apan wala nagahunong dinhi ang atong pagtabang sa mga I.P. communities.

Nandito si Secretary Pagdanganan, Obet dahil habang pinag-aaralan pa ang overlaps sa pagitan ng IPRA at Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Law, pinahinto muna ni Obet ang implementasyon ng CARP sa ancestral domain areas. Padayon sab ang atong pag-ayos sa paghatod ug mga labing kinahanglan nga serbisyo apil na ang pagtukod sa mga imprastruktura aron mapagdaghan ang mga higayon alang sa pagpa-uswag kaninyo ug sa mga uban pang mahuyang natong sektor.

Murag kailya na ninyo ang kalahi. Sa mga hindi pa alam ang Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan—Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services o KALAHI-CIDSS program ay flagship ng aking administrasyon upang mawakasan ang kahirapan. Dili muayo ang kinabuhi sa aton mga kabus kung pag-usa-usa ang paghatag sa mga serbisyo. Para mapabilis ang daloy ng kalakal mula sa kanayunan patungo sa pamilihan, patuloy tayong nagpapagawa hindi lamang ng mga maliliit na serbisyo like livelihood kundi na rin mga tulay at farm-to-market roads, mga gagmay nga tulay, mga gagmay nga dalan, apan mga dagko sab nga tulay ug dagko sab nga dalan sama sa hapit na mahuman ang Bolton bridge.

Ug parte sa Davao-Bukidnon road, ingon gyud nila — oh, ayan si Undersecretary Rasuman ang atong Undersecretary sa DPWH gikan sa Mindanao — dili bala, guwapo na gyud karon ingon nila ang buda road kanusa nakumpleto sa atong administrasyon.

Pinabibilis din natin ang paghatid ng mga batayang serbisyo para sa kapakanang pantao. Dinhi sa Davao, kapin sa tulo ka libo na ang mga lumad nga benepisyaryo sa National Health Insurance Program o PhilHealth.

Sa ngayon nga, sa buong Pilipinas, sa buong populasyon, mahigit na sa 54 percent ng ating populasyon ay sakop na sa health insurance.

Gipakobus nato sa katunga ang bili sa daghang mga tambal nga kanunay ginagamit ug aton mga kabus. Ang mga gamot na ito, half-priced medicine, na madalas binibili ng ating mga mahihirap. Ang mga ito ay mabibili sa mga ospital ng gobyerno sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng ating bansa.

Apil sab sa aton mga tuyo ang pagpatukod ug mga eskwelahan sa duha kagatos sa I.P. communities ug pagkabutang ug beinte kada munisipalidad nga dunay mga lumad nga nagapuyo nga mga maestra gikan sa DepEd. Kaya nandito si Secretary DJ De Jesus.

Ang Department of Agriculture naman — ‘yung ating taga-Bukidnon at Davao, kung isasama mo ang lolo niya taga-Zamboanga rin — ang D.A. naman ay naglaan ng 90 million pesos para sa mga programa at proyekto nito sa I.P. communities.

Tuyo sab nato nga ayuhon pa ang partisipasyon ug koordinasyon sa mga I.P. communities ug aton mga kapulisan aron mulambo ang kalinaw ug seguridad sa mga komunidad. Ang lahat ng ito at marami pang binanggit — ‘yung mga nagsalita kanina — ay ginagawa ng pamahalaan upang maiangat ang katayuan ng ating mga kababayan.

Sa niaging duha ug tunga katuig sa akong pagka-presidente, nakakuha ako ug igong eksperiensiya aron masabtan kon unsay gyud ang kinahanglan natong himuon sa pagbag-o sa panginabuhi aron muhabsay ang aton ekonomiya ug masumpo na ang kapobrehon.

Kinahanglan nato gyud ang mga dagko nga reporma ug usa gyud nining mga reporma, ang reporma sa Indigenous Peoples Rights. Ug tingali tungod kay daghan sa atong mga indigenous peoples taga-Mindanao ug usahay lisud nga mahulat pa ta ug pondo gikan sa manila. Tingali usa pa sa aton mga dagko nga reporma maoy makaabot kita sa pederalismo sa atong nasud.

Dagko nga reporma apan kinahanglan sab nato ang panag-usa — reconciliation. Unta sa atong pagkauban-uban karon, sa atong pagkauban-uban sa aton trabaho alang sa panginabuhi ug sa kauswagan sa atong mga igsoon nga Lumad o Muslim o Kristiyano, makaabot kita sab sa rekonsilyasyon sa atong nasud. Kaysa naa nay dagko nga reporma ug naa nay tinuod nga rekonsilyasyon, mao ang paagi sa atong tinuod nga kauswagan sa atong nasud.

Congratulations sa atong kongreso sa I.P.!

Speech of President Arroyo during the 12th Mindanao Business Conference Closing Program

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 12th Mindanao Business Conference Closing Program

[Delivered at the PHIVIDEC Industrial Estate, MCTP Complex Tagoloan, Misamis Oriental, October 31, 2003]

Thank you very much, Secretary Cito Lorenzo, fellow child of Mindanao as well. Because while I am from Iligan, Cito is from Bukidnon, Davao and Zamboanga.

I would like to greet also the other Cabinet members who are here — oh, not to greet them but to just introduce them to those who might not have seen them previously or not seen them enough — my fellow Cabinet members who have joined me today: Secretary Dick Gordon of Tourism; Secretary Marita Jimenez of special projects and ODA, where's Mai? And Secretary Jess Dureza, P.A. for Mindanao.

I would like to greet Joji Ilagan Bian — although you saw me talking to her animatedly because I was already answering point by point the different resolutions to her — chairperson of the Mindanao Business Council. I thank Governor Calingin for his welcome and his expression of support. My response is: "I need your support not necessarily in the May elections. I need your support for my work for Mindanao today."

Mayor Bambi Emano, thank you very much for hosting us in this beautiful terminal port in your beautiful town, and I join you in welcoming everybody here. I think I have the right to welcome you to this Mindanao container port, because as Governor Calingin said, while this loan was made available long ago, the loan proceeds and the local counterpart was only made available in my administration.

Mrs. Noemi Saludo, Vice President of PCCI, incidentally, mother of my Cabinet secretary, Ric Saludo. And Tony Santos, Vice President of PCCI for Mindanao. As I said, thank you for reading the resolutions, and I've already answered many of them to Joji so that my speech will not be so long. So, some of them I will answer in my speech, the others I already told Joji about especially the ones that are not so Mindanao wide in their application.

I would like to greet the chairman of the board, Boy Abadia of PHIVIDEC. I'm sorry that Gabby Evangelista is not well. So, sabi ko nga kay Chairman Abadia, "maybe until Gabby gets well, we'll have to delegate his work upward." ikaw na muna. After all, Boy Abadia is also a son of Misamis Oriental.

And I see here the mayor of my childhood city, Mayor Franklin Emano, ay, Quijano; and the vice mayor of my childhood city, Lawrence Cruz; and the businessmen of my childhood city, sila Benny Badilles, I'm glad to see all of you here.

And, of course — no, I don't want to start mentioning all the names of the businessmen I know here because there's so many of you — but I'd like to greet all of you, especially the PCCI Mindanao regional governors, and to welcome our foreign visitors headed by Ambassador Lim Cheng Hua of Singapore. Ambassador Lim Cheng Hua is one of the many lady ambassadors in our country today because I am very happy that the sending government has taken into account that we have a woman president and a lot of them have gone out of their way to send a woman ambassador, whom Dick Gordon likes to call "Women of Wonder." thank you ambassador for being part of our "Women of Wonder." other members of the... Yeah, "Women of Wonder" is part of WOW (W-O-W), "WOW Philippines!" and we are here in "WOW Mindanao," "WOW Misamis Oriental." Welcome to all the members of the diplomatic corps as well, ug kaninyong tanan, maayong buntag gihapon. Murag ingon ni Tony Santos, sa sunod sa halos sa duha ug tunga nga tuig sa akon pagka-presidente, wala akong mupakyas sa pagtambong nining Mindanao Business Conference ug ang mga uban pa nga sectoral conferences dinhi sama sa food congress, shippers congress, tuna congress.

And indeed, I greet the businessmen of Mindanao, led by this conference's host, the ORO chamber, the Mindanao Business Council. You have been our proven allies for peace and development.

Our unity has stood the test of time. And more than ever, we need that unity when the strength and resilience of our democratic institutions are being tested.

I'm hopeful that the leaders of Congress and the judiciary will soon move towards healing their rift, exercising the highest degree of statesmanship untainted by personal or partisan concerns and with the supreme interest of the republic in mind. The executive shall firmly hold the middle ground in this controversy.

But let this never be interpreted as weakness. To be drawn want only to either side of this dispute will derail the chances of a principled compromise and further erode national stability. I shall not overreact to events as I call upon our people not to be unduly alarmed.

I asked Jess Dureza, "what's the mood of the business sector here?" he said his mood is, "life goes on." And that is the way it should be.

The presidency has the will, the authority and the resources to quell any disorder or attempts at destabilization. And we shall not hesitate to move decisively against those who will exploit this inter-branch impasse to foment violence. No one is above the law. Our crisis mechanisms are in place even if we have not reached a point of crisis. Part of that crisis mechanism being in place is an instruction I'm giving to General Balaoing: "account for all the men in the 4th division." this is also my instruction to all the division commanders all over the country.

There is hope in dialogue, and we shall continue to pursue it while keeping our options open. We have the flexibility to change track if called for by the imperatives of national security. We shall not be rushed into impulsive action by the agenda of others. The situation is not spinning out of control as projected by doomsayers. Those doomsayers should come here to this conference to see that they are wrong or that they are misleading the people. In fact, the situation has strengthened the presidency as a middle force rather than weakened it.

There are those who believe that the presidency must step in and take sides to resolve the looming crisis, but this will only aggravate it at this point. I am taking the middle ground because as president and commander in chief, I must keep the powers of government at an even keel. I shall keep the peace and protect the people, whatever happens in the midst of this transient clash of powerful institutions. And no quarters can force me to take sides. A principled solution is in sight that will serve the nation's peace of mind, and I shall continue to pursue it.

That's why I commend the Mindanao businessmen. You continue to pursue peace, you continue to pursue business. You seek peace of mind, you seek national unity, but you go about your business of increasing incomes and creating jobs. I can perceive this in your theme, "one global Mindanao." your collective drive for global engagement falls in line with the aspirations of other nations in this part of the world.

This was expressed in a covenant we released in the recent ASEAN Summit, the Bali Concord 2, where some of you in fact were attending. The BIMP-EAGA has returned to the limelight of ASEAN. And I am very, very happy that today we have an Indonesian delegation, which will open the General Santos-Bitong, Indonesia cargo vessel route in February 2004. This is a BIMP-EAGA project assisted by USAID gem.

I'm also happy that Merpati airlines will mount its first flight to General Santos on November 4. These are big ticket transport items under the BIMP-EAGA. But the BIMP-EAGA has also identified SMEs as the most vigorous driving force in the sub-region, followed by other rising stars like other industry, fisheries and tourism.

The Asian Development Bank, following a recommendation I made in ASEAN way back in 2001, is currently undertaking a study to accelerate SME financing for BIMP-EAGA.

On the security side, the Philippines is preparing to host a number of major meetings on cross border concerns which are crucial points of focus in the drive against roving terrorist cells.

I am giving an instruction to the Bureau of Immigration that they should make their main immigration office located in Glan, in Sarangani. And the Davao Immigration Office, where only a few travellers go, should be a sub-office, not the other way around.

We know the growing risk of terrorism, and we're continuously sharpening our diplomatic, organizational, operational and intelligence resources to confront it. We are acting domestically, regionally and globally to meet the threat, and we have a strategic partnership with Washington for long-term political and economic security. Both the U.S.A. and the OIC countries are watching our peace process unfold with keen interest and commitments of assistance. Gem, aside from the assistance to projects like the BHE cargo vessel route, is already deep into its computer literacy program, particularly for the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

During the week of President Bush's state visit to the Philippines, the U.S. committed a new 33 million dollars over the next six years to broaden access to education, again, primarily in Mindanao.

I would also like to thank Gem and USAID for the assistance provided for 500 community infrastructure projects. Gem has also contributed to capacity-building efforts to achieve transparency in governance.

The World Bank has agreed to sponsor a multi-donor Mindanao reconstruction and development fund to support the peace process, including activities for confidence-building, disarmament, demobilization, reintegration and reconstruction, and development. This was one of the major outputs of the World Bank conference in Dubai. And now, donor meetings are ongoing.

On my part, I shall continue to act on your concerns with deserved focus, the concerns that Tony Santos expressed earlier in his reading of your resolution.

I remember an earlier concern in previous Mindanao business conference meetings. Remember your concerns over transportation, over bringing down the rates in the ports? Well, we found a solution out of the box. Your concerns over transportation resulted in the Strong Republic Nautical Highway that now interconnects Mindanao through the major islands of the Visayas to Luzon through a system of road networks and Roll-On/Roll-Off ferries. There is that old ferry service from Surigao to Luzon, but that's a very, very long route.

Then we opened after this conference, after working on the results of the last conference, we opened the Zamboanga del Norte route that goes through Negros island, Panay island, Mindoro island, and Luzon. And then, we opened the Cagayan de Oro-Dumaguete-Manila Roll-On/Roll-Off route. And together with the roads we have improved in this administration — Cotabato-Cagayan De Oro, Cavao-Cagayan De Oro — you can bring your fruits or your other products from anywhere, load them on one truck, and that one same truck can travel all the way from Davao, through cotabato, through Cagayan, through the roll-on/roll-off all the way to any market in the Visayas and in Luzon. Just one truck travelling at one time, without having all these expensive port fees that you have been complaining about.

You know, that old, old route that Surigao through Leyte, Samar, Bicol took five years to break even. That route from Zamboanga del Norte, through Negros island, Panay island, Mindoro island, and Luzon took one trip to break even. Now, the market is providing for more boats, Roll-On/Roll-Off ferry boats. But the businessmen tell me it's the Cagayan de Oro route to Manila that will really make cargo rates go down for the Mindanao businessmen. And so, as a result of your interest in pushing forward this out of the box solution, we are giving a check of 6,850,000 pesos for the Mindanao Business Council for further studies to make this roll-on/roll-off system even more effective.

We continue to push hard for our products in the global markets. We've gained preferential status for our tuna in the E.U. market. Our friendship with Thailand helped us in this diplomatic initiative.

I appreciate your foresight about Mindanao power demands. Southern Mindanao especially has a dynamic and industrial manufacturing potential. The last two days I was in Davao, and I learned that Davao's power consumption has gone up by 8 percent this year, representing the big increase in business activity. But southern Mindanao does not produce its own power, and this should be an attractive site for new IPPS.

Earlier, you talked about power and therefore... And earlier you talked about asking the senate to ratify some agreements. Since you're gonna go to the Senate, anyway, I ask you to join me in reiterating my call for the senate to pass the Transco Franchise Bill to make it more attractive for privatization.

Your concerns about the quality of basic education are being dealt with through curriculum improvement, particularly in our English language, science and math proficiency. And I invite the businessmen of Mindanao to expand your corporate responsibility programs by helping us build classrooms in those schools whose student-classroom ratios are more than 100 to 1.

I'd like to take this opportunity to commend Cagayan de Oro – your father, Bambi — because in Cagayan de Oro, there is no school that has a classroom-student ratio of more than 100 to 1. So Cagayan de Oro has been taking care of its classroom needs. But that's not the same for the rest of the island.

In the autonomous region of Muslim Mindanao, I counted the schools whose classroom-student ratio... No, student-classroom ratio exceeds 100 and multiplied it by the amount of pesos that we have to build for every classroom, we need 40 million pesos worth of additional classrooms in the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao alone. So, not to mention the other places where you work and live.

I will push on with our reforms for transparency, accountability and good governance. And we have never lost sight of our main goal — winning the fight against poverty and against terrorism and crime.

In the two-and-a-half years of my presidency — where we were able to do this port, we were able to do the Roll-On/Roll-Off system, we were able to make the roads from Cotabato to Cagayan de Oro and from Davao to Cagayan de Oro much, much shorter in travel time — I've gained the experience necessary to understand what must be done to reform society so that we may move forward and finally break the chains of poverty on our way to building the strong republic that we deserve.

We dream of a future of equitable prosperity where our people enjoy through equity and justice. You, the Mindanao business community, have stayed with me in all these years. In fact, you were with me when I was vice-president, when I was in the Senate as chairman of trade and commerce, and chairman of economic affairs. You were even with me when I was Undersecretary of Trade and Industry.

We need to be stronger now. DTI, yeah. When I was in the DTI, that was when we also started the Cagayan de Oro-Iligan corridor. And I'm very happy this project is one of the flagships of that Cagayan de Oro-Iligan corridor. And later on, I will go to the Cagayan de Oro port as well. From conceptualization to actual operation, which is gonna be in January of 2004. I remember the Cagayan de Oro-Iligan corridor. I remember our culminating presentation of the master plan was in 1989. It takes a long time to plan, to do the detailed studies, to do the paper work, to do the implementation.

And that is why as now, we are beginning to bear the fruits of the more than one decade of work. We need to stay even closer together to realize our vision for Mindanao and for the whole nation.

Hinaot pa nga dili nato buhian ang atong pinag-usa hangtod madangat nat ang gidamgong kalinaw ug kauswagan.

Mabuhi kita tanan.

Thank you.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 34th anniversary of the Laguna Lake Development Authority (LLDA)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 34th anniversary of the Laguna Lake Development Authority (LLDA)

[Delivered at the Daungan, Brgy, Palingon, Calamba City, Laguna, November 3, 2003]

Maraming salamat, GM Cataquiz.

Batiin ko ang mga official ng mga gobyernong nagpapaligid sa lawa ng Laguna, ang gobernador ng Laguna si Ningning Lazaro; ang congressman ng Laguna, si Boy San Luis; ang ating mayor dito sa bayan kung saan nating ginaganap itong ating pagdiriwang, Mayor Lajara; Vice Governor Fernandez; ang barangay captain kung nasaan tayo ngayon, Kapitan Giliaco.

‘Yung mga punong lungsod at punong bayan ng mga paligid sa lawa, si Mayor ng Muntinlupa, Mayor Fresnedi; si Mayor ng Taguig, Mayor Tinga; Mayor ng Binangonan, Mayor Ynares; mayor ng San Pedro, Mayor Viernes; mayor ng Taytay, Mayor Zapanta; mayor ng Baras, Mayor Garciano; mayor ng Cardona — hindi ba nandito? — mayor San Juan, din ang kapangalan; mayor ng Sta. Rosa, Mayor Arcillas, kasama na lahat ng mga mayor ng buong Laguna dahil siya ang presidente ng Mayors’ League. At ewan ko kung nandito lahat itong mga check na ito dahil hindi ko naman nakikita ‘yung ibang narito. So, batiin ko na lamang ‘yung mga iba’t-ibang mga mayor... Ay, mayor ng San Pablo, Mayor Boy Aquino; mayor ng Calauan, Mayor Berris.

‘Yung iba’t-iba kung hindi ko sila nakita kanina patawarin na lamang ngunit binabati ko kayo kahit na hindi ko nakita ang inyong pangalan dahil na-check lahat dito eh alam ko naman ilan dito wala rito. Okey, hintay muna kasi... Si Mayor Aguillo, ayun; Mayor Ramos; hindi ko nakikita si Mayor Perez ng Los Baños, okey; Mayor Rebong; Mayor Quiat; Mayor Badulis; Mayor Afurong; Mayor Sombilla; Mayor Acero; Mayor Diwajon. Eh ‘yon na nga, dalawa kasi ang ating Mayor Perez eh. Hindi ko nakikita ‘yung sa Los Baños — ayun, okey, alright. Mayor Magana; Mayor Rodillas. Okey, salamat, salamat ha. Kung meron hindi ko pa nasabi sa listahan, patawarin ngunit ako ay nagpapasalamat na kayo ay narito. Maging kayo ay bahagi ng lawa o hindi, salamat at kayo ay narito.

At lahat naman ng mga mangingisda, magsasaka, mga batang kanina pa naghihintay. Sabi ko, “Ningning, talaga naman alas dose y media ang usapan natin.” ngunit mga teachers salamat na kayo ay maagang pumunta rito.

Taos-pusong binabati ko ang lida sa inyong anibersaryo.

Binabati ko rin ang mga kabalikat na ahensiya na tumutulong para magampanan ng LLDA ang kanilang tungkulin. Binabati ko rin ang sektor ng kalakal, industriya nasasakupan ng LLDA, maging ang sektor ng pangisdaan na kinakatawan ng Laguna de bay region’s fisheries and aquatic resource management council o farmc. Saan kayo? Saan ang FARMC? Okay. Alam naman natin kung gaano kaimportante ang Laguna de bay sa ating pamayanan. Sa ating rehiyon ang Laguna de bay ang pinakapangalawang pinakamalaking inland freshwater body sa buong Asya. Ang mas malaki lamang dito sa asya ay ‘yung Lake Toba sa Indonesia. Eh ‘di hamak naman mas malaki ang Indonesia keysa Pilipinas. Pilipinas ay number twelve biggest country sa buong mundo. Indonesia ay number four.

Pilipinas ay may 7,000 islands, Indonesia ay may 18,000 islands. Kaya 'di hamak naman talaga naman mas malaki ang Indonesia. Ngunit sunod na nga sa kanya eto na ang pinakamalaking freshwater body of water.

Ang sentro ng ating pagdiriwang ngayon ay ang pagtataguyod ng kapakanan ng mga mangingisda sa lawa at ang pagpapakilala sa tilapia bilang pagkain ng masa. Kasi 'yung galunggong pangingisda 'yon sa dagat eh. 'Yung ibang galunggong pa nga imported pero ang tilapia pwede nating palakihin sa lawa. Pwede natin palakihin sa ating mga fishpond. At mas mura dahil kaya natin ma-kontrol ang pagpapalaki ng supply. Pwede nating palakihin ang supply. Pwede nating i-culture. Kaya tama na gawin nating pagkain sa araw-araw ang tilapia. Ewan ko, para sa akin mas masarap ang tilapia keysa galunggong eh. Talagang favorite ko, itanong n'yo sa mga dswd noong ako'y nandoon. Kaya hanggang ngayon pag ako ay nagbibisita sa kanila tilapia ang pinapakain sa akin.

At malaki ang benta ng tilapia breeding para sa ating mga mangingisda kung ikukumpara natin sa ibang bansa. Kaya palawakin natin ang tilapia para manatiling mura ang ating pagkain.

Kanina nga nagpakawala tayo sa lawa ng sampung libong tilapia breeders. Ito ay bahagi ng pinalawak na fish dispersal program ng LLDA.

Sa unang semestre ng taong ito, mahigit daw na apatnapu't walong libong tilapia breeders ang naipakalat sa LLDA.

At natutuwa akong gumaganda ang kalidad ng tubig sa lawa. Alam n'yo parati kong binabantayan ang tubig sa lawa pag ako'y lumilipad nang helicopter eh kung brown ba o nagiging asul na. Salamat naman at maraming bahagi ay nagiging asul na muli.

Mahigpit rin nating hinahadlangan ang illegal fishing sa lawa, lalo na sa loob ng limang libong ektaryang fish sanctuary LLDA. Kanina meron akong tinapong boya, 'yon ang magmamarka ng ating sanctuary. Hindi pwedeng mangingisda doon ang illegal na fishermen.

Ang pangangalaga natin sa laguna de bay ay tumatanggap din ng tulong mula sa mga organisasyon sa labas ng ating bansa. Halimbawa, noong ako ay — hindi pa nga ako pangulo — nagpunta ako doon sa isang pagdiriwang doon sa isang hotel sa makati kung saan ang Laguna de bay ay pinangalang kasapi ng International Living Lakes. Kinikilala na buhay na muli ang ating Laguna lake. May sister lake partnership agreement din ito sa Taihu lake ng China at Sun Moon lake ng Taiwan.

Noong ako ay bata, nagtuturista sa Taipei, parating kasama ang Sun Moon Lake sa ating pagkaturista. Ngayon dapat parating kasama ang laguna lake sa ating pagkaturista.

Alam ito ng mga mayor ng mga lugar diyaan, lalung-lalo na 'yung ating paglibot, kasi ang ganda-ganda ng lawa kung magda-drive ka around the lake. Nandoon 'yung mga artists. Nandoon 'yung mga old churches. Nandoon naman 'yung mga craftsmen. Nandoon 'yung mga waterfalls. Nandoon 'yung mga maliliit na lawa. Nandoon 'yung mga halaman. Nandoon 'yung mga spa. Lahat noon mapupuntahan mo kung ikaw ay iikot sa Laguna lake. Kaya mahahambing natin ang kagandahan ng Laguna lake at 'yung tourism diversity sa mga lawa kagaya ng lake Lanao sa Pilipinas at kagaya ng Lake Geneva doon sa Europe. Eto ang gusto kong mangyari sa ating lawa.

Sa darating na Enero raw ay sisimulan naman ang isang proyekto ng llda upang palakasin ang partisipasyon ng mga komunidad sa paligid ng lawa sa kanilang pag-unlad.

At sa kabila ng lahat na ito, ang Laguna de bay naman ay — bakit ko parating tinitignan kung asul o brown ang tubig, kung bakit natin binibigyan ng diin ang pagka-natural, 'yung pagka-living lake — ay dahil sa paligid, dahil ang Laguna lake ay nasa Calabarzon, nahaharap din sa environmental hazards na nagbabantang sumira dito at sa kabuhayan ng mga mahirap na mangingisda na walang inaasahan kundi ang lawa.

Ang pagdami ng mga industriya sa palibot ng lawa — at hindi lamang industriya, ‘yung mga tumitira, mga subdivision dahil lumalaki ang ating populasyon dito sa Calabarzon sa proseso ng urbanisasyon — ito ay dahilan ng patuloy na erosion ng watershed dito.

Kaya meron tayong hamon na isiguradong manatiling buhay ang lawa. Ayaw natin maging kagaya ng Pasig na noong nagkaroon ng industrialization sa Metro Manila at nang dumami ang nakatirang bahay sa Metro Manila ay namatay. At wala nang isda na nandoon sa pasig river ngayon kung hindi na lamang ‘yung mga isdang hindi na natin gustong kainin. At ‘yung mga dumi mula sa mga pagawaan at mga bahay sa tabi ng lawa, ito ay maaring makasira sa kalidad ng tubig at ecosystem ng lawa kung hindi ito mahadlangan.

Ito ang inaasahan nating mabilis na matugunan ng llda. Kanya lamang kailangan makipag-ugnay sa mga industriya dahil ang industriya naman ay nagbibigay din ng complaint na kung minsan ginagamit, pinaggagamitan ito ng burokrasya at harassment para hindi sila makapaggawa ng kanilang tamang gawain. Kaya kailangan sa isang panig inaalagaan ang lawa, sa kabilang panig ‘wag gamitin para mag-harass ng ating mga pabrika na nagbibigay naman ng hanapbuhay sa taong bayan. Alam ko naman na kaya itong gawin ng mga kawani, mga nagtratabaho na mga rank and file at mga officials ng LLDA.

Ang tema ng selebrasyon ngayon, “Masaganang Lawa, Matatag na Republika.” ito ay angkop sa mga nakamit na tagumpay ng llda sa mga nakaraang panahon. Inaalagaan ninyo ang likas na kayamanan ng lawa. Naisusulong din ninyo sana ang interes ng ating mga mahihirap, lalo na ang mangingisda, ngunit huwag i-harass ang mga industriya.

Sa simula pa lamang ng aking panunungkulan, naging layunin ko nang wakasan ang kahirapan at makamit ang isang mapayapa at maunlad na bansa.

Alam ni Freddie tinga ‘yung ginawa natin para sa ganun ay maisaayos ‘yung ating dike, ‘yung ating flood control sa bandang kabila para sa ganun ang lawa ay magbibigay ng buhay at hindi magbibigay ng sigalot sa ating mamamayan.

In the two and a half years that I have been president, I’ve gained the experience to make me realize on the ground what fundamental reforms we must make in order to achieve these goals. Halimbawa, maraming bumabati na ‘yung mga kalsadang patungo sa mga North and South Expressway nitong nakaraang Holy Week — ay, All Saint’s weekend — sabi nila ang mga traffic hindi na kagaya ng mga nakaraang panahon. And yet meron tayong construction — may construction tayo sa North Expressway, may construction tayo sa South Expressway — pero maayos ang traffic papunta sa probinsiya nitong nakaraang weekend.

‘Yan ay nanggaling sa karanasan sa dalawang nakaraang taon. And I have gained enough experience to make me realize that we cannot achieve these goals unless we achieve unity and reconciliation as a nation. Diyaan sa PNCC, diyaan sa DPWH, diyaan sa DOTC, diyaan sa PNP, iba-iba ang kanilang mga teritoryo ngunit ginawa nating magkakaisa sila sa mag-organize ng traffic. At ito ay kailangan gawin natin sa buong bansa. Ganun na rin ang reconciliation ng kapakanan ng mangingisda at industriya dito sa CALABARZON, dito sa Laguna Lake.

We must do these reforms, but we must also achieve reconciliation of interest if we do not want to be left behind by our neighbors who are again accelerating their growth in the aftermath of the Asian crisis.

Salamat na lamang sa nakaraang dalawang taon at kalahati, habang ‘yung ibang bansa ay naghihingalo pa sa Asian crisis, sa SARS, sa terorismo, ang Pilipinas sa 21 economies sa buong Asia at pacific, number six ang ating growth rate.

Salamat na lamang na ‘yung Japanese na number one investor sa buong mundo, sa kanilang latest ng kanilang preferred investment sites, number three ang Pilipinas.

But the others are beginning to recover from the Asian crisis. They are beginning to recover from the SARS. Huwag tayong maiwan. At ang kailangan natin reporma. Kailangan din natin rekonsilyasyon at pagkakaisa. Hindi lamang pagkakaisa ng PNP, DOTC, DPWH, PNCC sa kalsada. Hindi lang pagkakaisa ng mangingisda at pabrika sa lawa. Pagkakaisa rin ng mga dakilang institusyon ng ating pamahalaan.

Kaya ako nitong nakaraang All Saints Day matindi akong nagdasal tungkol sa kontrobersiya ng impeachment. At ako ay nakipagkonsulta sa mga leader ng mga dakilang sanga ng ating pamahalaan. At sa aking nakita tayo ay lumampas na doon sa political threshold kung saan pwede nang makialam ang pangulo para maghanap ng maka-prinsipyong solusyon dito sa ating impasse.

Sa ilang araw nakaraan, na-headline pa nga sa mga peryodiko, na ako'y nanawagan na itong solusyon ay dapat maging sa anyo ng isang covenant sa paligid... Sa mga malalaking sangay, 'yung tatlong malalaking sanga ng ating pamahalaan. Itong covenant na ito ay maaring manggaling sa mga batayang prinsipyo: una, dapat respetuhin natin na ang kapakanan ng taong bayan ang pinakamataas, at itong kapakanan ay nandoon nakaguhit sa ating konstitusyon at sa ating mga tradisyon ng ating pulitika.

Pangalawa, dapat diinin natin ang magkapantay at malaya ngunit kailangan ang kooperasyon at pagkakaisa ng tatlong dakilang sanga ng ating pamahalaan.

Pangatlo, dapat palakasin natin ang prinsipyo ng check and balance bilang instrumento ng pambansang pagkakaisa at estabilidad at hindi dapat bilang instrumento ng pulitika.

Pang-apat, ang ehekutibo, ang lehislatibo, ang hukuman, ang mga awtoridad ay dapat magkasama bilang tiwala ng interes ng publiko at makahanap ng resolusyon sa kontrobersiya sa loob ng batas panglima, ang pagpapamahalang demokratiko ay dapat nakabatay sa pagtiwala sa isat-isa — respeto, civility, responsibilidad, transparency sa lahat ng kanyang mga leader.

At ako ay naniniwala na itong mga prinsipyo ngayon pa lang ay nagdadala na sa atin tungo sa daan sa resolusyon ng problema at sa daan tungo sa estabilidad at progreso ng ating pulitika. Kailangan natin ng nagkakaisang panindigan na ito ay magpapalarawan ng ating collective statesmanship. Bagamat kailangan makialam ang pangulo, hindi ko ito magagawang mag-isa. Lahat ng may kinalaman, at kayong mga officials ng lokal, kayong mga kawani ng pamahalaan, lahat kayo may kinalaman sa paghanap ng pagkakaisa. At lahat ng mga direktong apektado, everyone concerned will have to bend backwards a bit na hindi naman nasasakripisyo ang mga prinsipyo.

Ngunit ang masasabi ko sa ating mga sinisikap na ginagawa, mayron na tayong nakikitang solusyon kung saan panalo lahat.

Manalangin tayo magtagumpay itong ating mga sinisikap sa ganun, mga kawani ng llda, kawani ng pamahalaan, mga official na halal ng taong bayan, lahat tayo magdasal, magkaisa. Dahil sa awa ng panginoon malapit na ang resolusyon ng ating problemang nangyayari ngayon.

Sa inyong lahat, Happy Anniversary!

Congratulations sa inyong lahat!

Speech of President Arroyo during the 105th anniversary of the Philippine Postal Service and celebration of Postal Consciousness Week

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 105th anniversary of the Philippine Postal Service and celebration of Postal Consciousness Week

[Delivered at the PhilPost Central Office Bldg., Liwasang Bonifacio, Manila, November 3, 2003]

Thank you. Thank you.

Salamat. Salamat. Thank you.

Maraming salamat, Kalihim Mendoza.

Maraming salamat din General Villanueva, ibat-ibang opisyal ng DOTC at saka Philpost. Maraming salamat, Mayor Lito Atienza sa magandang ginawa ninyo sa kapaligiran dito lalo na dahil maganda ang harap ng PhilPost, ngumingiti na ang gusali ng PhilPost Corporation.

Binabati ko rin si Secretary Mai Jimenez at iba't ibang mga officials, lalo na mga postal workers, ladies and gentlemen:

Congratulations for more than a century, you have been working so hard. You have been messengers of all Filipinos. I commend you for your good work.

In your continuing drive to keep up with the times, you have opened your express mail service, congratulations sa ating mga driver ng express mail service. Meron itong mga dedicated hubs for door-to-door delivery. You have also tapped I.T. to improve your money order system, congratulations din. Salamat. Salamat. Thank you.

At 'yung anti-drug campaign, sumama kayo mga youth, sumama ang mga youth at Postal Corporation. Lahat kayo bibili ng selyo ng anti-drug pag gagawa tayo ng sulat.

I congratulate General Villanueva who not only did these innovations that I just mentioned to improve efficiency and reliability but was also able to raise funds for your salary differentials and your rice allowance.

Hindi ako nagugulat, hindi ako nagugulat na nagawa ito ni Diomeng, because General Villanueva has always been good not only in the conduct of warfare but also in the management of resources. Alam n'yo bago ko siya nilagay sa philpost, noong siya ay Chief of Staff ng Armed Forces, siya rin ang chairman of RSBS, and under him for the first time in a long time, the AFP pension fund RSBS was able to make profit for the first time in a very long time. (batiin ko rin si Rene Diaz, nandito pala.) Kaya kung ano ang ginawa niya sa pension fund ng mga sundalo, nilalakad rin niya 'yung inyong provident fund para maging successful.

Sa kaniyang report sa akin, sa pagkaintindihan ko, in 1993 — sino nandito noong 1993 pa? Dami na — you established a provident fund. But I understand, the DBM did not recommend post-facto approval kasi pinag-aaralan pa raw 'yung rationalization ng iba't-ibang provident fund sa iba't-ibang ahensiya at korporasyon ng pamahalaan.

But I can understand the urgency of addressing the personal needs of our employees because we are now in the midst of among the most difficult times in the history not only of our country but of the world economy.

Mula pa noong 1997, nagka-Asian crisis tayo. Nung year 2000, nagka-impeachment crisis. Nung 2001, iyung I.T. bubble ng Amerika ay pumutok and the world's exports went down — kasi Amerika is the number one buyer of the world — kasama na ang Pilipinas. Tapos nangyari ‘yung 9-11 at nagkaroon ng terorismo sa buong mundo. Early this year, SARS happened in our region. And though the Philippines handled it very well, tourism in Asia and the Pacific went down. All of these contribute to trying times and our hardworking government employees must have ready access to credit. I recognize that since 1994 your provident fund has provided you with an accessible source of low-rate loans for your emergency needs.

I congratulate your fund for growing to a self-sustaining and viable source of steady credit for PhilPost employees despite the fact that since 1996 PhilPost Corporation has ceased providing for the employer contribution to the fund. Kaya sabi ko, as long as you do not require the employer contribution, I cannot see why we cannot institutionalize your provident fund.

Therefore, with the condition that you said you agree to that we will not require employer contribution until a total policy is made for all agencies, I am hereby giving post-facto approval to the Philippine Postal Corporation provident fund.

Ito ay senyas ng aking pagpasalamat sa inyong sinsero at makabuluhang trabaho ‘di lamang para sa philpost kung hindi sa ating bansa at taumbayan.

Jobs, investments, reform — these are our priorities at sa inyong suporta, we shall pursue them as we ward off those who wish to foment division in our society. We shall pursue our reforms through the unswerving pursuit of justice and reconciliation.

I have prayed hard about the current impeachment controversy, and I have consulted with the leaders from the great institutions. There is a growing consensus among the great institutions that we have crossed a political threshold to the point wherein it is now proper for the president to step in and forge a principled solution to the impasse.

A few days ago, I proposed a covenant among the three great branches of government. Today, I would like to add that such a covenant may be premised on several fundamental principles such as the following:

First, we must respect the supreme welfare of the people as defined by our constitution and political traditions;

Second, there must be an affirmation of co-equality, independence, but indispensable cooperation and harmony among the three great branches of government;

Third, we must reinforce the principle of checks and balances as an instrument of national unity and stability and not of partisanship;

Fourth, the executive, legislative and judicial authorities must come together as trustees of the public interest and come to a resolution of the controversy within the rule of law; and fifth, democratic governance must be based on mutual trust, respect, civility, responsibility, and transparency among its leaders.

I believe these principles are even now leading us along the road to a principled solution, and therefore, along the road to stability and political progress.

Among the great institutions, there is now a growing consensus that we must have a common stand that will reflect our collective statesmanship. I cannot do it alone. Everyone concerned will have to bend backwards a bit without sacrificing principles. I am sure that right now a win win solution is in sight.

Of course, there is no doubt that there are continuous efforts to show divisiveness in our nation. But with you, the bureaucracy supporting unity and reconciliation, the plans to divide our society are futile and will fail.

They will fail because people are tired of infighting. People want unity and reconciliation. We have the support of the people in seeking unity and reconciliation.

Kaya, mga nagta-trabaho sa gobyerno, if you and I are united in this goal, there is no turning back from the tide of positive change — change in the powerful institutions of our country, change in the bureaucracy like the reforms being done in Philpost, and change in the entire nation.

We want to promulgate justice with reconciliation. We want reforms to uplift the poor and make life more comfortable for the ordinary Filipino. And that's the contribution of PhilPost — making life easier for the ordinary Filipino. You and I, because we are the government, the government will lead these reforms, will lead this reconciliation.

Kaya mga kawani ng Philpost, salamat sa inyong tulong sa ating mga reporma para sa katarungan, para sa pagkakaisa, para sa kaginhawaan ng ordinaryong taong bayan.

Ako ay binabati ko itong mga manila youth na nakikita ako. Binabati ko rin 'yung mga kawani ng philpost na nandoon sa harap ng fountain na maganda. Hindi ninyo ako masyadong makita kasi maliit lang ako, pero mamaya bababa ako para batiin kayo.

Sa inyong lahat, aking taos-pusong pagpasalamat sa inyong suporta sa administrasyon. Magkasama tayong magtatagumpay sa mga kailangang reporma at kailangang pagkakaisa ng ating bansa.

Happy anniversary sa inyong lahat!

Speech of President Arroyo during the 29th Top Level Management Conference of the Kapisanan ng mga Brodkaster ng Pilipinas (KBP)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 29th Top Level Management Conference of the Kapisanan ng mga Brodkaster ng Pilipinas (KBP)

[Delivered at the Bougainville Pavilion, Taal Vista Hotel Tagaytay City, Cavite, November 7, 2003]

Thank you very much, Cerge. And congratulations for being overwhelmingly re-elected as Chairman of KBP.

I'd like to thank also our very young and handsome mayor of Tagaytay City, Mayor Francis Tolentino for joining us. Nasa likod raw siya kasi naka-maong siya, pero okay lang. Tagaytay is a resort city, nagugulat nga ako ba't naka-amerikana kayo lahat. Pati sa APEC pag sa resort kami naka-casual. But anyway, it's good to have you here.

Thank you, Pinky for your excellent report of success of the KBP in this challenging times. Bobby Barriero, Jun Nicdao, Lito Yabut, Father Bungayan, Romy Yabut, Rudy Gularbal, and Atong Henares. Congratulations! You're the new member, right? Where's Atong? I see his father.

I'm here today with you together with Milt Alingod, our Secretary of the Press; Secretary Defensor, my secretary for housing; Secretary Mai Jimenez, my secretary for ODA; and our new Undersecretary for the Press, Claro Fernandez, 'yung sa likod. noong araw kasi noong wala pa 'yung pwesto ni Claro, si Milt kahit na cabinet member nandoon sa likod doing the backroom work, now that he has an undersecretary he can be on the center stage. Okay.

Well, I'm glad to be here with you again. Every year in the last five years, I've inducted your national officers. And the last two events were held in Malacañang. I would have wanted to hold this one in Malacañang but you wanted me to come to you instead this time. Masyadong sanay na kayo sa Malacañang, but we held the last two events in Malacañang because I was president. And these events recalled your courage and commitment to the high ideals of your profession.

Yes, you have achieved success in difficult times even before the five years that I've been with you every year. You have fought in behalf of our people. You have fought for the Constitution. You have fought for good governance.

And our relationship goes back a long way, longer than the five years that you have invited me to be your inducting officer. In these five years before I joined you in swearing in your officers, our relationship is longer, it goes back to our mutual adherence to the pursuit of press freedom — as Cerge said — freedom dear to our nation. After all our nation has toppled empires and tyrants — and you have been contributory to that — our nation has a freedom that continues to live in the fountain of our democratic society.

Our democratic society today, our republic is like a house standing on three pillars — the Presidency, the Congress and the Judiciary. Each pillar must be strong against the wind of controversy. I was delighted at Pinky's metaphor about going against the wind. She feels she was going against the wind. She felt I must also feel sometimes I go against the wind. I go against the wind lots of times. And that is important for a presidency to be a strong pillar in our Republic.

Aside from the presidency, the two other pillars are now engaged in self-strengthening measures through introspection on the part of the supreme court and consensus building on the part of congress. I call on our people, I call on you to support these processes as they are being carried out. This is a test of democracy as well as how deeply we understand democracy. Of course, we cannot shut out the issues that are causing anxiety or even undue alarm. But we can focus our will as a people on unity rather than division, on resilience rather than defeat, on the triumph of peaceful freedom over irrational strife.

Last night, I was caught... Said, why don't I just call the Lakas congressmen to withdraw their signatures. I said Lakas is ready to do what it must do, but there are unifying solutions and there are divisive solutions. And we must first try the unifying solutions.

Once more, I call for national unity as I warn all attempts to undermine the Republic through unlawful plots. If anyone attempts to turn this controversy into an illegitimate bid for political power, let them be forewarned. We will pre-empt criminal conspiracies with the full force of law.

And likewise, I appeal to media's men and women not to allow yourselves to be used, wittingly or unwittingly, as pawns in political games or worst destabilization efforts.

After all, press freedom itself will be the first to be sacrificed if the will of the people is thwarted by lies and false causes.

As the three branches of government strive to gravitate towards a common solution, it's the responsibility of the press to refrain from fueling the debate with intrigue, conjecture and speculation.

I trust that your commitment to the ideals of your profession will be equalled by your commitment to our nation's future. Remain vigilant of wrongdoing but deliver the facts straight and true.

The coming elections in May will be another opportunity for the Philippines to show that our democratic institutions are strong and vibrant. The government is putting in place measures that will minimize if not eradicate cheating in the elections.

And two years ago, I signed a law lifting the political ad ban. I hope you consider that then and you still consider it now as another victory of the people in their bid to know their candidates better, and thereby secure their future with greater certainty.

The lifting the political ad ban was part of my commitment to promote clean, honest, orderly and peaceful elections — a commitment that stands firm to this day.

Press freedom is meant to secure the welfare of our democratic institutions. It is meant to secure the welfare not so much of the media but of the citizens and the public interest. We are committed to press freedom, as Cerge says, despite the excesses of the media.

My neighbors in the countries around us, are considered us strong. But I think part of our strength should be our outstanding and unique commitment to press freedom.

We know from our past — not necessarily from the experience of our neighbors around us — we know from our past, from our martial law experience that without press freedom our democratic institutions die.

Broadcasters, just as other media practitioners — as very well pointed out by Pinky — have become dangerous men and women to those who have unlawful secrets to hide, and to those who have the dark mind to silence the seekers of the truth.

In fact, according to the national union of journalists, an average of three journalists are killed per year. Maybe you would prefer average of three journalists being slapped with a libel case. But in our country very few libel cases prosper, but on the other hand the extra legal means are the ones that are used against your profession.

This morning, before I came here, I talk to General Jun Ebdane, of course, about instructions on thwarting any destabilization attempts even before they start, but also on following up what we had agreed about the task force to solve the crimes against the members of journalism. I told him I would like the Philippine national police to move faster and more resolutely in the investigation of all unsolved murder cases victimizing broadcasters and media practitioners.

I'm committing one million pesos as reward money for the solution of each of the killings to the media practitioners over the last ten years.

I thank Pinky for pointing out about that accused murderer in Zamboanga del Sur. And while his colleagues are here — Jimmy Caringal, Boysie Rosales — Boysie, give your counterpart in Zamboanga del Sur the message: "his position is on the line — arrest that killer." and the... well, in that area a lot of the killings are also related to the terrorist threat. And Mai Jimenez is here, Secretary Mai Jimenez, she helps me go through the maze of ODA in order to see what fund availabilities are there to match what fund requirements there are. And now I'm asking her to help look for funds... to look for fund sources to augment the KBP training fund for broadcast journalists with the specific aim of helping you to better understand the threats of terrorism and the Mindanao conflict. I'm glad Pinky mentioned the Pagadian, because that is like the interface between the safety of journalists and the terrorism and the Mindanao conflict.

And I thank Pinky for pointing out the different positions between the industry and the government on the wipo, so I'm asking Chairman Borje to please work with the KBP so we can have a consensus building exercise as well, like the house is undergoing now, the House of Representatives. And is it true that you're concerned over the proliferation of low-power stations? So, I'm also asking Chairman Borje, the national telecommunications commission chairman, to temporarily stop the issuance of licenses to operate low-power stations pending the approval of rules and regulations governing them.

I have been with you for five years, two-and-a-half years of those as president. I have been with you in the last two-and-a-half years as I went through the learning curve of the presidency, and as I gained the experience necessary to understand what must be done — to understand what must be done on the one hand to reform society, on the other hand to deal with its deep divisions and heal them so that we may move forward and finally break the chains of poverty on our way to building a strong Republic.

I have been with you long enough to know that you as well as I dream of a future of equitable prosperity and justice. And I have been with you long enough to know, five years and long before the five years, that free and fair broadcasters are essential in fulfilling our dreams.

Therefore, may you continue to achieve success. May you achieve greater success in difficult times, whether this times are difficult for your organization, for our country or for the world. In fact, in this times, they are difficult for your organization, for your country, for the world.

Let us together reform the institutions of our society including media. Let us together use our own influence in order to build unity rather than to foment division.

Sa inyong lahat, mabuhay! And thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the welcome reception for the 9th International Association for Volunteer Effort (IAVE) Asia-Pacific Regional Conference

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the welcome reception for the 9th International Association for Volunteer Effort (IAVE) Asia-Pacific Regional Conference

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, November 7, 2003]

Thank you very much, Secretary Dick Gordon. It's very appropriate that you're the honorary chairman of this conference because you are one of the great volunteer examples.

Mrs. Virginia Davide, who was doing volunteer work when she was in government and continuously do volunteer work now that she's out of government. I greet you and please send my best regards and my best respects to his Excellency Chief Justice Davide.

Miss Lizburns, other leaders of the world of volunteers in the Asia-Pacific, both those from the NGOs and the private sector, and those from the government who deal with them, ladies and gentlemen.

The Philippines is proud to host this important event. When Mrs. Davide invited me to speak before you, she said, I can speak in your conference site or I can ask you to come to Malacañang. She said, "but I think they would rather that you ask them to come to Malacañang." and so, I have invited you here today.

I'd like to great the excellencies of the diplomatic corps for being here with the volunteers of their country. This event affirms our country's active involvement in volunteerism as a tool for national and international development and cooperation. This is also a reflection of our government's deep commitment to the alliance forged with the international volunteer community.

Volunteerism is part of every nation's history. Volunteerism and solidarity are both sides of the same coin of community and nationhood. Those of you who came here to attend the 5th IAVE Asia-Pacific Regional Conference in 1995, the first in the Philippines which was held in Subic in Dick Gordon's time, probably had the chance to know how volunteerism converted that former U.S. base into a showcase of Philippine commerce, trade and tourism. At that time, challenged with the need to lift themselves from disaster, the volunteers of Subic built a freeport. The success of Subic is a testament to all Filipinos who believe that anything can be accomplished through volunteerism.

Traditionally, Philippine volunteerism has been associated with non-government organizations engaged in relief and rehabilitation work. And many of you are doing that, that's why my friends from DSWD are here. Today, however, volunteerism has added many other facets to itself that involve individuals, groups and institutions in addressing a common development agenda, whether in the area of social services – the traditional field of volunteers — or technical support, humanitarian assistance, capacity building and governance.

Academic institutions, the business community, socio-civic organizations and the government have benefited from volunteer services not only in terms of development programs and projects, but also in terms of enabling the personal and professional growth of individuals and institutions.

A significant feature of this multi-sectoral and multi-disciplinary participation is the partnership between and among the volunteers and volunteer organizations, and the government and the private sector to share their best efforts towards a common goal.

Our medium-term Philippine development plan identifies volunteerism as a convergence strategy in the delivery of social services, right Nelia? In winning the battle against poverty, and in strengthening the tourism industry.

With the volunteer 12 program where Dick Gordon gets Filipino Americans, overseas Filipinos in other countries to bring over to be the volunteer tourism marketing promoters of our country.

My administration, as Mrs. Davide said, upholds the ideals of volunteerism and the important role of government in promoting volunteer service in nation-building and international understanding.

I consider these to be important legacies of my father as well, Former President Diosdado Macapagal. Because he was the one who created the Philippine National Volunteer Service committee in 1964. That became the forerunner of the present Philippine National Volunteer Service Coordinating Agency, which was headed by Mrs. Davide before her retirement from public service, and that agency is a co-organizer of this conference.

Despite the conveniences offered by modern science and technology, humankind is still plagued with poverty, illiteracy, political conflict, disease, and environmental degradation, among others. And this is where volunteers can do so much.

Regardless of our standing in society, each of us is called upon to responsibly act and contribute towards the greater good of all.

Some do this volunteer work by themselves, unofficially. Some do it in an organized way, such as those who are participating in this conference, because the calling to improve our society which each one of us must do is a calling we volunteers cannot ignore.

We must continue to close ranks. That's the beauty of organized volunteer work. We must continue to close ranks in creating a culture of cooperation, solidarity. And when we do that, we can create a culture of peace which is what we need so much in this world.

And so, to all of you, thank you for coming to the Philippines. Let's all join hands in friendship and understanding to create a better world for all of mankind.

May I particularly express my appreciation to the Philippine association for volunteer effort or PA-VE or PAVE and the Philippine National Volunteer Service Coordinating Agency for organizing this conference which is another milestone in the country's volunteer service program.

I look forward to your having a successful conference because the communities and the institutions of the Philippines look forward to benefiting from the fruits of your interacting together. Thank you and good day.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Counter Drug Mission Fusion Piston 2003 Graduation Ceremonies (Maritime Enforcement Training)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Counter Drug Mission Fusion Piston 2003 Graduation Ceremonies (Maritime Enforcement Training)

[Delivered at the Sangley Point Naval Base, Cavite City, November 7, 2003]

Thank you very much, Undersecretary Anselmo Avenido, the head of the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency. May you please sit down.

Ambassador Ricciardone, and the other officials and officers of the United States government; Vice Admiral Ernesto de Leon and my other hosts here in Sangley Point.

I would like to also greet our other guests, especially the father of the new Drug Enforcement Law, Congressman Tony Cuenco.

I also have with me two Cabinet members: Secretary Mike Defensor and Secretary Mai Jimenez.

Sa mga nagtatapos dito sa napakaimportanteng pagsasanay natin, congratulations sa inyo! You are 52 very well chosen recipients of this training program.

I wish to thank the government of the United States for making this training course possible. Lahat tayo ang alam natin “Balikatan 02-1,” pero ang dami-daming training na ginagawa sa pamamagitan ng gobyerno ng Amerika at gobyerno ng Pilipinas, at ito na nga ay isa doon.

And I was very happy to learn from Tim Teal, our new U.S. DEA representative to the Philippines, welcome Tim to the Philippines! I was happy to hear from his speech that our requests for other training exercises will also be forthcoming.

I congratulate the graduates of this course, particularly the recipients of the honor man awards. You are 52 specially chosen trainees, and I expect you to echo what you have learned, echo it to your fellow law enforcers so that we can form a larger body of efficient and effective anti-narco and terrorism experts specializing in sea operations.

I’m very happy to hear from General Avenido that this training will be followed by land-based training against terrorism and especially against drugs. Here, in this training course, we have taken one important step towards institutionalizing maritime law enforcement in our shores and enhancing our coordination with the law enforcement agencies of other lands.

Terrorism, illegal drugs and other transnational crimes have increasingly threatened the peace of this world and the freedom of nations and peoples.

Our country is no stranger to terrorism, which has victimized our southern Philippines for a long time now. As President George Bush said in his recent state visit here: “both our nations are threatened by terrorism, and we are determined to fight that threat until it is defeated.”

The Philippines will do its share, with the help of this and other training programs, and other forms of assistance that the U.S. has extended to us through the years, and especially during the last two and-a-half years of my administration.

The expertise that our law enforcers and soldiers, well, have gained from this is also similar to the expertise that our soldiers gained from the Balikatan exercises. In those exercises, our soldiers increased their capability to neutralize the top men and diminish the strength of the Abu Sayyaf.

Armed with the skills and firepower to match the strength of our will, we notched several gains against terrorism since then. The latest of these have been the death of the terrorist Al-Ghozi; the raid on a Jemaah Islamiyah safehouse in Cotabato; and the arrest of Taufek, a ranking Jemaah Islamiyah operative.

Most recently, we captured and deported Victor Moore Infante, an arms smuggler for the Abu Sayyaf, wanted in the United States.

We are proud of our role in the fight against terrorism in this part of Asia. We are proud of our alliance with the U.S, and we are proud of our information and communication sharing alliance with Indonesia, Malaysia Cambodia, Brunei and Thailand, which was initiated by the Philippines.

Recently, in APEC, we were given the charge of being the coordinator for maritime security in the Asia-Pacific region. We hosted the meeting on maritime cooperation, security cooperation, and soon we will also host several trilateral customs-immigration-quarantine security meetings to strengthen cooperation particularly in our southern islands.

Through all these fight against terrorism, through all the wars our soldiers get into, peace remains our preferred option. And we thank the United States for supporting our peace initiatives in the south, including the recently initiated education projects, including the ongoing electrification projects coursed through USAID. And we also thank the United States government for the commitment to rehabilitate the areas of conflict when the peace talks shall have pushed through.

To you, the group of 52, I expect your contribution to our anti terrorism, our anti-narcotics and to our positive peace efforts to be special in line with your special training. I expect you to form the nucleus of our maritime-based anti-terrorists and anti-narcotics operations.

And I know that as you were especially chosen, you will especially do your work for the good of our country, its future, for a strong republic that is peaceful and prosperous — free of drugs, free of terrorism — where you and your children can enjoy the blessings of peace and prosperity.

Mabuhay ang ating mga graduates ng ating special training course!

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the closing ceremony of the World Bank-sponsored 25th Consultative Group Meeting for the Philippines

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the closing ceremony of the World Bank-sponsored 25th Consultative Group Meeting for the Philippines

[Delivered at the Rosal Ballroom, Shangri-la Mactan Island Resort Lapu-Lapu City, Cebu, November 8, 2003]

Thank you, Secretary Camacho.

Mr. Vance Pulley, Governor Garcia, excellencies of the diplomatic corps and heads of the delegation, local government officials who are present here, members of the Cabinet who are present here, members of the delegations to this consultative group meeting, guests, ladies and gentlemen.

First of all, I join Governor Garcia in welcoming you to Cebu. Thank you for being here. We meet at a time when attention is centered on how Philippine democracy weathers its tests.

The situation in the Ninoy International Airport has been resolved. Nothing will ever justify the taking over of an international airport control tower and prejudice the lives of air passengers.

And I must commend the swift and decisive response of our aviation security units to this incident. They were working under the direction of secretary of transportation Larry Mendoza while he was here.

I think that just goes to prove how disaster and terrorist ready the Philippines is.

I'm glad that after a spate of high alarm, for a few hours last night, all passengers, guests, and airport personnel are out of harm's way. I think I can assure the world, after we've shown our swift action last night, that our airport is safe and sound. Let there be no doubt about our physical security and stability.

As to the controversies besetting two of the great branches of government, I make my point clear, that I shall abide by any decision of the supreme court, as the ultimate arbiter and interpreter of the law and the constitution. Nonetheless, I'm gratified that the leaders of the Supreme Court and congress are earnestly considering a draft covenant I submitted to them to ensure principled adherence to constitutional processes and to strengthen democratic institutions in resolving the controversies between them. Again, this shows that there should be no doubt as to our permanent political stability.

The present challenges have not diminished our will or our ability to push on. We will work with more determination to meet our goals — to reduce the number of our poor by half; to achieve unity and lasting peace for our people; to sustain the rule of law and defeat terrorism and other obstacles that block our path to equitable growth and development.

As we heal the divisions of our society — and that I'm determined to do — our country will be able to position itself even better in the face of improved opportunities for growth.

Despite the adversities in the global economy and some internal concerns in the first half of this year, we achieved the highest growth rate since the 1997 Asian crisis. And we are expected to have the 6th highest growth rate for this year among the 21 economies of the APEC region.

We have fortified our macroeconomic fundamentals amidst the fluctuations of global markets and despite the uncertainties brought about by the Iraq war, the SARS scare and the perennial threat of terrorism.

We smoothened out the economic wrinkles brought about by politically-motivated attempts to destabilize the country in the last few months. And last week saw our stock market index at its 20-month high.

Strong fundamentals have kept the economy on a sustained growth path. Our inflation remains tame and in fact the three percent average growth from January to September is much lower than our projections. Meantime, our interest rates have been contained below the target for the year.

Our strong fiscal position in the first half of the year has enabled us to settle our financial obligations. We shall maintain good macroeconomic management.

We will institute more reforms that will allow us to withstand future economic disturbances and enable our most disadvantaged sectors to be more active in the country's economic life.

Changing circumstances have caused us to modify our strategies. For instance, our fiscal scenario has prompted us to shy away from excessive loan assistance. And I'm glad, in fact, that the 2 billion dollars that were pledged here are much higher than what we expected. Because we have become more selective of projects. And while being selective, we have made sure that the projects selected will be implemented quickly and smoothly as possible putting to use the lessons of the past.

With our increased absorptive capacity of the credits and grants from ODA and the improved monitoring of projects, we will get better at infrastructure delivery and capability-building programs. And we have indeed gotten better as the World Bank itself has acknowledged.

I was lifted by the presidency by the clamor of a people demanding good governance. And I have made reforms in all aspects of public administration. The lifestyle checks, the creation of the anti-graft commission, procedural reforms in processing documents, the government e-procurement law, the reforms in tax administration are among the measures that enhanced transparency, accountability and effectivity in governance. And we thank donor community for supporting these measures.

We are, of course, especially targeting for our expenditures the pockets of poverty that have become recruitment grounds of terrorists and insurgents. Mindanao is our special focus.

Development and peace always go together. We can only foster lasting peace in Mindanao by promoting its sustained development. Talking peace with the MILF is our consistent priority. But our peace is not for terrorists. We talk peace with secessionists, with insurgents but not with terrorists. We have captured or neutralized ranking Jemaah Islamiyah members.

The programs we have established for the people of Mindanao were made possible with the help of partners like you.

Last September, I asked the president of the World Bank, Mr. Wolfensohn to lead the efforts for a multi-donor trust fund for Mindanao, a multi-million peace dividend' to be operative as soon as a peace agreement between the government and the MILF is forged.

I'm glad to hear that the World Bank is now gearing for the needs assessment phase of this trust fund. And to make this trust fund operable as soon as possible, I am very grateful to the Malaysian government that is facilitating the talks and spearheading the ceasefire monitoring process. At the same time, we are seeking a final round of exploratory talks to wrap up outstanding issues before the formal talks begin.

The MILF has assured us that it is not harboring terrorists, and we appreciate that statement. Therefore, I have instructed our peace panel to send them a list of most wanted persons in Mindanao.

Now that there is growing stability in the field, we would like to put up more confidence-building measures so that the atmosphere can lighten up enough to allow unimpeded rehabilitation and development programs.

It is in the poorest communities where the action is needed, and we don't want to use force as the first option. We want to use development.

With the help of the World Bank and other multilateral institutions and bilateral partners, we can drive up the dividend of peace by keeping alive the hope for a better and more dignified life among the most underprivileged and disenfranchised. Mindanao has been pinpointed, especially the autonomous region, as indeed the most underprivileged and the most disenfranchised. It is also one of the areas where the Jemaah Islamiyah seeks to roost.

They have tried but they have failed. Our coordination with our neighbors and allies is strong and in earnest. We will work together, continue to work together for stability in all fronts — security, economic and political.

And in working for stability, all these fronts, ladies and gentlemen, I ask you once again to help me and my government bring enduring peace and sustainable development to the Filipino nation.

Thank you so much for your support.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Multisectoral Program in Mandaue City

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Multisectoral Program in Mandaue City

[Delivered at the Mandaue City Cultural and Sports Complex Mandaue City, Cebu, November 8, 2003]

Daghang salamat, Inko Pidong ug belated happy birthday kanimo. Belated 80th birthday gyud, usa ka jubilee nga birthday ni Inko Pidong ug gitawag ko sa iya, sa iyang birthday, apan karon nianhi ako aron makapag-abi-abi espesyal sa iya. Happy birthday!

Governor Pabling Garcia, daghan salamat sab sa imong guwapo kaayo nga pag-abi-abi kanako ug sa imong expression sa suporta kanako, kauban ug pamilya ni Mayor Ouano, ang pamilya ni Governor Garcia kanunay nga suporta kanako busa nahimo ko gyud nga duol kaayo diri sa sugbu ug sa Mandaue City.

Vice Mayor Seno; mayor sa Consolacion, Mayor Gungob, daghan salamat sa imo pag-anhi; mga provincial board members; mga barangay captains ug officials diri sa Mandaue; ang mga kauban sa provincial board members; ang akong Cabalen nga si board member mMagsangkay; mga konsehal diri sa Mandaue City; aton mga SK; ug ang guwapa nga anak ni governor, si Gwen Garcia.

Kauban ko karon ang akon mga Cabinet members na kanunay mutabang diri sa Mandaue ug sa Cebu. Kasama ko ngayon si Secretary Mike Defensor. Kining atong gihatag nga mga titulo ug certificate of full payment, nahimo an resettlement project nagikan sa Mandaue City na kauban ang tabang gikan sa gobyerno sa HUDCC ug sa NHA ubos kan Secretary Mike Defensor. Senator unta kon sigurado na ta na dili siya underage. Sabi ko, Mike, senador ka na kung sigurado tayo na hindi ka underage. kay si Mike makaabot sa 35 years old sa June 30 ug kinahanglan mahibalo nato sa balaud kan usa ang effectivity sa kinahanglan 35 years old ang usa ka senador. Is it on June 30, the day of the oathtaking or on the day of the election? Apan bisan underage o of age, hibalo nato na kining aton mga gidawat ug certificate karon, tag-iya na sa kaugalingon yuta.

Kasama ko rin, together with me is Secretary Marita Jimenez. She is my secretary for Special Projects and Official Development Assistance. Ug hibalo naton nga diri, here in Cebu province and Mandaue City, there are so many for assisted projects, ug kining mga proyekto na nianhi sa akong administrasyon gikan sa aton mga sources sa foreign assistance na nianhi agi sa trabaho ni Secretary Marita Jimenez.

Kasama ko rin, together with me also is Secretary Teresita Ging Deles. Karon siya ang akon bag-o nga Presidential Adviser for the Peace Process. Siya ang nagne-negotiate sa mga MILF, sa mga NDF, sa mga kung sinu-sino pang mga maliit na grupo na rebelde at secessionist apan bag-o siya nahimo ang akong Presidential Adviser sa Peace Process, siya ang akong Secretary for Anti-Poverty. Ug daghan sa mga aton mga projects diri sa Sugbu, ang mga kabalikat laban sa kahirapan, nianhi sab agi sa maabtik nga trabaho ni Secretary Ging Deles.

Kauban ko sab ang akong Presidential Assistant for Region VII, Felix Guanzon. And we have also with me one of the brightest intelligence officers in our country, na karon siya ang atong Region VII Regional Director sa pulis, General Bobby Delfin.

Kaninyong tanan, mga kaigsuonan, maayong hapon ug daghan salamat sa inyong maiinit na pagdawat ug pag-abi-abi kanako karong adlaw.

Niadtong gipaila ko ni Inko Pido Ouano, ingon niya na tingali di na ko kinahanglan pakaila kaninyo kay daghan kaninyo kaila na ko, ang akong musulti nga ang akon muingon tingali naa kaninyo kaila na ko dugay, tingali naa karon ra apan hibalo ko nga dugay na makaila mi sa pamilya Ouano. Kay sukad pa sa ako nahimo senador, sukad pa sa 1992, kanunay ko mabisita dinhi sa Mandaue aron makahatag ug akong respeto kan Mayor Ouano ug sa iyang pamilya.

Busa ako murag nahimo na usa ka miyembro sa pamilya Ouano. Sukad sa akong senador, duha ka beses, vice president, busa ingon gyud ni Inko Pido kaganina nga ako nahimo presidente, grabe gyud ang ilahang pamilya murag usa sa iyang anak nahimo na presidente. ingon gyud ni Inko Pidong na daghan kuno ang utang ug iyang pamilya ug Mandaue City kanako. Sa mga higala dili na kinahanglan makuwenta ang utang kay dili na nato hibaw, sila naa utang kanako, kamo naa utang kanako. Ako sab daghan sab ang akong utang kaninyo ug sa ila, sa ilang pamilya.

Dili na naton makuwenta kon kinsay naa ang balance of surplus. Ang importante kanunay magkauban kita sa kauswagan sa Mandaue city ug sa probinsiya ug Sugbu.

Ug bisan unsa naay ako nahimo para kaninyo, dili ko na isulti karon, ang importante hibalo nato na daghan pa ang kinahanglan mahimo alang kaninyo gikan sa akong administrasyon.

Sama sa laing mga proyekto nga kinahanglan nato mahimo, una sa tanan, si Mike Defensor, ang NHA nakatabang na gyud sa atong resettlement victims... Ay, beneficiaries. Now, I'm also asking Mike Defensor to fast track the release by NHA for the construction of the medium-rise buildings in Looc, Mandaue City for the squatter families of paradise island. Okay ba yon, Mike? Okay ba yung 100 million pesos? 100 million pesos sa mga pamilya sa Looc, Mandaue City.

Ikaduha, ang aton nga tabang alang sa pagpalit sa bugas ug labaw pa nga mga housing materials sa mga fire victims sa Sitio Aroma, barangay Subangdaku, ready na karon para sa release. Dili nato... Wala gidala, dili nato gidala? Malou, ang tseke gikan sa PCSO, wala? Pero apan ready na for release, so ingon ko kan Felix Guanzon, na siya makuha sa PCSO ug personal dalhin niya dinhi kan Mayor Teddy Ouano sa pagbalik ni Mayor Teddy Gikan sa Bangkok.

Ikatulo, nahibalo ko nga ang inyohang hospital undergoing karon ug renovation ug expansion. Sa maingon ko sa PCSO, kay ang PCSO nga ubos sa Office of the President ang akong gihatag ug obligasyon nga mutabang sa aton mga health projects, murag ingon ko kan PCSO nga mu-contribute sa equipment ug laboratary supplies ug annex sa inyohang Mandaue City Hospital.

Ikaupat, murag naa kamo request nga ma-reclassify ang foreshore land aron mahimo urban development. Alam mo yon, Mike, ano? Yung kanilang foreshore land na gusto maging urban development? So, ang in-charge diha ang DENR. So, muingon ko sa DENR, agi gihapon kan P.A. Felix Guanzon nga ang DENR ug uban pa mga ahensiya mutabang ug City of Mandaue sa iyang request sa reclassification sa foreshore land. Aron madaghan pa ang mga urban areas diri sa Mandaue City.

Tungod kay ang Mandaue City urban na gyud. Kay kamo gyud ang industrial center sa Tibuok Sugbu, ug ang Sugbu ang industrial center sa Tibuok Visayas, busa ang Mandaue ang industrial center sa Tibuok Visayas.

Ug tungod sa mga produkto sa inyohang mga pabrika diri sa Mandaue bisan ang tibuok probinsiya Sugbu, bisan ang tibuok Pilipinas nakataas ang iyahang growth rate. Ingon gyud nila bisan ang kalibutan karon daghan ang mga problema sukad pa 1997 Asian crisis, sukad pa sa 9-11, sa terrorist bombing sa World Trade Center, sukad pa sa SARS, sukad pa sa laing-laing problema sa kalibutan ug sulod sa Pilipinas tungod kay dayon kanunay ang progreso sa industriya diri sa mandaue dayon ang growth rate ug Pilipinas sa Tibuok Asia ug pacific region nga naa 21 economies, ang Pilipinas number 6 sa growth rate. Ug daghan gyud sa aton mga exports nagikan diri sa sugbu ug nagikan sa industrial center sa Mandaue.

Busa naa na ako daghan nga utang sa pamilya Ouano ug sa mga katauhan sa Mandaue, daghan pa ang utang ug tibuok Pilipinas, ug tibuok ekonomiya ug Pilipinas sa mga katauhan ug mga magtrabaho, mga nagatrabaho, mga pabrika sa Mandaue, busa kinahanglan gyud na espesyal ang atong tabang diri sa inyong siyudad.

Sa gihapon, kay dili ko na gusto madugay sa akong pag-diskurso, gusto ko lang ipaabot sa gihapon ang akon dako nga pagpasalamat ug ang akong saad na miyentras ako presidente kanunay tua sa akong kasing-kasing ang City of Mandaue ug probinsiya ug Cebu.

Daghan salamat kaninyong tanan.

Speech of President Arroyo during the closing program of the Peace and Development Summit “Kasulong sa Kapayapaan at Kaunlaran, Tatak Bulakenyo” [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa pagtatapos na programa ng Peace and Development Summit “Kasulong sa Kapayapaan at Kaunlaran, Tatak Bulakenyo”

[Ipinahayag sa Regino Carmeli University Gymnasium, Brgy. Catmon Malolos City, Bulacan, ika 12 ng Nobyembre, 2003]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat, Governor Josie de la Cruz.

‘Yung pagkuwento ni Josie tungkol sa akin, bagay na bagay para sa isang estudyanteng nagke-kuwento tungkol sa kanyang teacher.

Ako’y nagpapasalamat na tayo ay narito lahat. Salamat sa inyong napakainit na pagtanggap sa inyong lingkod at aking mga kasamahan ngayon.

Kasama ko ngayon ang ilan sa aking mga Cabinet member. Ang ating Cabinet officer for regional development sa Region III, si Richard Gordon, ang ating Secretary of Tourism. Nabanggit na ni Josie kanina si Secretary Michael Defensor, siya ‘yung ka-partner nitong ating lilipat na mula sa ating railroad. nandito rin, nandoon siya kasama ng mga media, inaalagaan n’ya, ini-entertain n’ya, ang ating Press Secretary, si Secretary Milt Alingod. At nandito ang isa sa aking tatlong Cabinet member mula sa Bulacan, si Secretary Lito Sarmiento. Nandito rin ang ating Presidential Assistant for North Luzon, si Rene Diaz.

Sabi nga ni Josie, ang dami-dami ko ng appointees mula sa Bulacan. Tatlong Cabinet member, maraming undersecretary, maraming importanteng director, at lately nag-appoint ako ng tatlong Sandiganbayan Justices, sabay-sabay, lahat taga-Bulacan. Si Judge Baldos, si Judge Jurado, at saka si Fiscal de la Cruz. Lahat Bulacan.

Kaya binabati ko lahat ng mga officials ng Bulacan na naririto ngayon. ‘Yung ating mga congressmen, ang congressman n’yo dito ay si Congressman Willy Alvarado. Siya ay... Inurong n’ya ‘yung kanyang pirma sa impeachment. nandito rin ‘yung aking kaibigan, dating Chief of Staff noong ako ay Vice President, si — kalahating Capampangan — si Congressman Willy Villarama. Narito ‘yung ating napakagandang dalawang mga congresswomen — si Lorna Silverio at saka si Nining Nicolas. At ‘yung ating Congressman sa party list, kinakatawan ang mga magsasaka ng butil, si Congressman Ben Cruz.

Gusto kong batiin ang ating host mayor, si Danny Domingo. Tama si Josie, pag malapit sa Pampanga ang Bulacan, nasilip lahat ng nabibigay ko sa Pampanga. nasilip ninyo ‘yung San Fernando overpass. Mula sa San Fernando pumunta ako dito sa Bulacan, sa Baliuag. Tuloy, hiningan ako ng overpass para sa Malolos. At gaya nang sabi ni Josie, dumating kaagad, three days after ‘yung engineering team. At sabi ni Danny Domingo sa akin na nagsisimula na ‘yung mobilization.

Binabati ko lahat ng punongbayan ng Bulacan, ang dami-dami n’yong narito. Ako ay nagpapasalamat sa inyong lahat dahil kayo ay narito. At gusto ko ring batiin ‘yung ating mga nag-aalaga ng ating kapayapaan, si General Dominguez, si General Braganza, at saka si General Querol. Romy, ‘di ba Bulacan ka rin? Ah, pero si Vidal Querol, ‘yan, taga-Bulacan ‘yan.

And I would to greet the private sector. Kung nandito lang sana ang pangalan babatiin ko lahat pero nandito ang pangalan ni Rey Simbulan, ang Regional Director ng Luzon PCCI. At ang ating host sa eskwelahang ito. Thank you for receiving me for the second time, Sister Carmeli Catan, ang pangulo ng University of Regina Carmeli. Pagpasok ko nga hinahanap ko 'yung mga estudyante eh. Nandoon sila. Kumusta kayo lahat. At mga napakaraming mga DepEd dito, binabati ko rin kayo lahat. Mga iba't-ibang official — ay, magandang hapon sa inyong lahat.

At itong pagpupulong nating ito para sa kapayapaan at kaunlaran ay talagang tatak ng bulakenyo. Ang inyong pagmamahal sa kapayapaan at kaunlaran ay katangiang pinatunayan na ninyo sa maraming makasaysayang pangyayari sa ating bansa kung saan naging mahalagang bahagi ang mga Bulakenyo.

Isa na nga dito, hindi natin makalimutan dahil ito ay isang pinagdidiriwang ng buong bansa, ay 'yung Malolos Congress na bumuo ng unang Konstitusyon sa buong Asya — ang Malolos Constitution. Dito sa Malolos, dito sa Bulacan ipinakita ng mga Pilipino ang pagpapahalaga at paggalang sa Saligang Batas. Tamang-tama, naalaala natin 'yon dahil itong pagpapahalaga sa ating saligang batas ay muling napatunayan sa Davide impeachment case, kung saan ang desisyon ng Korte Suprema base sa Konstitusyon ay inayunan at iginalang ng sambayanang Pilipino.

Kailangan talaga mayroon tayong rekonsilyasyon at panibagong pagkakaisa kung gusto nating sumulong ang bansa. Kailangan natin ang kapayapaan kung gusto nating kaunlaran para sa bansa. Para sa katahimikan ng pag-iisip ng taong bayan, dapat patahimikin na natin ang kontrobersiya ng krisis ng impeachment pagkatapos na resolbahan sa paraang maka-saligang batas. Lahat ng mga panig sa alitan ay kumilos na maka-bansa at tayo dapat tayo magkaisa at pasiglahin natin ang ating mga institusyong demokratiko kaysa pahinain pa sila.

Binubuksan ko muli ang sinsero at tahimik na pag-uusap sa lahat ng mga grupong may kinalaman, at inaasahan ko na pakikilingan nila ang panawagan sa maka-prinsipyong rekonsilyasyon. Itong maka-prinsipyong rekonsilyasyon ay talagang panawagan ng ating mga panahon. Hindi lamang 'yung maka-prinsipyong rekonsilyasyon sa iba't-ibang panig ng alitan sa nakaraang impeachment crisis kung hindi na rin 'yung tuluyan rekonsilyasyon na hinahanap natin sa pamamagitan ng mga npa at 'yung gobyerno, milf doon sa mindanao, 'yung gobyerno, 'yung mga importante rin ang rekonsilyasyon sa pamamagitan ng mga pwersa ng Edsa Dos at Edsa Tres. 'Yan ang napakaimportanteng rekonsilyasyon na dapat habulin natin ngayon.

Ang taumbayan kasi ay kailangan makita ang pwersa nakakapag-kaisa kung hindi ang taong bayan mismo ang magwawatak-watak at hihina sa pagharap sa mga nakakasindak na hamon. Ang mga hamon natin, ang batayang hamon natin ay dalawa — pairalin ang kapayapaan, labanan ang kahirapan. Ang bansa ay kailangang mahilom sa pamamagitan ng pinagkaisang patriyotismo at damdaming tungkulin maging mga lider, maging sambayanan.

Ako sa mga nakaraang krisis, nakaraang krisis ng impeachment, habang tumutulong makahanap ng solusyon sa paraang magpairal ng dignidad ng mga dakilang institusyon ng ating pamahalan, tuloy-tuloy ang ating higit na pansin sa mga serbisyong pang-kalakalan at pang-kabuhayan. Dahil hindi naman pwedeng tumigil ang pagtakbo ng ating bansa porke't lamang may alitan o hidwaan.

Sinisikap kasi natin magkaroon ng malakas na republika. Salamat na lamang na sa matagal na problema natin ay meron tayong mga nakakamit. Matagal na nating problema ang pagpapasigla ng ating ekonomiya dahil ang pagpasigla ng ekonomiya ay siya ang solusyon sa kahirapan. Kaya kaunlaran 'yung pinag-uusapan natin sa summit na ito. Mabuti na lamang na sa gitna ng impeachment crisis noon pa tumaas ang ating stock market sa pinakamataas na sigla sa loob ng nakaraang dalawampung buwan. Ibig sabihin noon nandiyan pa rin ang tiwala ng mga nagnenegosyo sa ating bansa. At sa maikling panahon, marami tayong naitaguyod. Itong mga magkakaroon ng bagong buhay at bagong bahay, sila ay bahagi ng naitaguyod nating pinakamalaking housing program at land tenure program sa maralitang taga-lungsod sa buong kasaysayan. Maraming mahihirap, hindi lamang itong mga ladies nating naka-berde sa kanan ko ang nabigyan ng karapatang magkaroon ng bagong tahanan at nabigyang karapatang bilhin ang lupang tinitirikan. At ito ay... Ang dami noon dahil limampung taon, tatlumpung taon na naghihintay. Ang dami ko nang nakitang umiyyak dahil hindi nila naisip na mangyayari ito sa wakas, pero nangyari sa ating administrasyon.

Sabihin man ng mga nagbabatikos, kung ano ang sasabihin nila, ang ating GNP growth rate noong itong taong ito ang pinakamataas na nakamit natin mula noong ating 1997 Asian financial crisis. At sabihin man — kung ano ang sasabihin ng mga nagbabatikos sa atin — dalawampu’t isang ekonomiya sa Asia-Pacific o APEC, sa dalawampu’t isang ekonomiya, ang ating growth itong taon ay pang-anim sa lahat sa dalawampu’t isa. Ibig sabihin nun haming sa labinglima sa ating mga karatig ekonomiya sa Asia at Pacific ay mas maganda ang ating performance.

Ngunit kahit mas maganda ang ating performance kumpara sa ating mga karatig-bansa at ito ay totoo sa nakalipas na dalawa at kalahating taon ng aking administrasyon, ang mga bansang ito sa aking pagbibisita at pag-uusap ay nagsisimula na muling umahon. Kaya sa pagkakataong ito dapat hindi nila tayong maiwan pag-ahon nila.

Kaya ito ang mga kailangan nating gawin. Maging sa paglaban sa krimen lalo na sa laban sa iligal na droga meron tayong mga importanteng tagumpay. Nagpapasalamat ako sa nalaman ko kanina kay Josie na doon sa Doña Remedios Trinidad magkakaroon ng rehabilitation center para sa ating mga drug addiction victims. Ito ay ngo-initiated, kaya mabuhay ang mga bulakenyong NGO at private sector. Malubha ang problema ng droga kaya ‘yon ay isa sa mga batayan ng performance ng ating mga pulis, chief at police director.

Kahapon, ang mga pulis ay nakahuli ng ini-smuggle na drogang halagang isang bilyong piso pagkatapos nang masinsinang intelligence operations diyaan sa inyong karatig-bayan, sa Valenzuela. Ito ay napakaimportante. Kasi noong unang tatlong buwan ng ating panibagong paglalaban kontra sa droga pagkatapos ng ating State of the Nation Address ay marami na tayong mga drug bust sa mga drug lord na noong araw ay untouchable. Marami tayong mga pabrikang nasarado ng shabu kaya naging mahal ang shabu sa kalsada. Ngunit ganunpaman, kahit na naging mahal, tumaas nang five times, meron pa rin. Eh, kung nasarado na ang mga pabrika, saan nanggagaling ‘yon? Nanggagaling sa importation, nanggagaling sa smuggling. Kaya doon natin nilagay ang ating detective work. At kahapon doon sa isang pabrika nahuli, nakalagay pala sa ilalim ng sofa, furniture imports kunyari. At doon nga, one billion pesos ang drogang nahanap. Pinakamabisa, pinakamabungang drug bust sa kasaysayan ng ating bansa.

At dito sa Bulacan, alam kong abala kayo sa problema ng droga. Alam ko na ang mga barangay dito sa Bulacan ay hindi magpapaiwan sa kampanyang ito. Nalaman ko na pati ang mga Homeowners Association dito sa Bulacan ay gustong tumulong. Talagang kailangan ko ang inyong tulong. Maganda ‘yan, religious ngo nagtatayo ng drug rehab center. Homeowners Association, private sector sumasama sa paghanap ng mga drug pushers. Maganda ‘yan at dapat tularan ng mga kaparehong asosasyon at ngo sa ibang lugar. Huwaran talaga ang Bulacan.

Sa buong Pilipinas, talagang meron tayong maraming tagumpay tungkol sa kapayapaan. Napahina rin natin ang Abu Sayyaf. Nabasa ko sa peryodiko, isa doon sa mga main leaders ng kidnapping nung Sipadan pa noon panahong year 2000 ay nasugpo ng ating mga sundalo. At puspusang kinakampanya nating madakip ang mga kasapi ng Jemaah Islamiyah, para sa ganun ay masugpo sila bago sila kumalat hanggang dito sa Luzon at Bulacan.

Ang pamahalaan ay nagsisikap na gawin ang lahat ng ito para sa lahat ng Pilipino, dahil gaya nang sabi ng inyong tema ng inyong summit kailangan ang kapayapaan para sa kaunlaran. At ginagawa natin ito lalong-lalo na sa ating mga kabataan, tulad ng kabataan dito sa eskwelahang ito, ‘yung nasa kaliwa ko dahil kayo ang kinabukasan ng ating bansa.

Dito sa Bulacan, nagkaroon nga kayo ng summit, may ilang mga... Si Josie ang kailangang sasagot. Ngunit meron ding ilang nakita ko na may kinalaman ang national government. ‘Yung iba pinag-aaralan — lahat nga pinag-aaralan — pero meron akong tatlong nakita na medyo dapat siguro bigyan na ng anunsiyo ngayon pa man. O, bakit dalawa na lang ito? Ayun. Hindi. Ah, ayun, ayun. Okey. Ano kaya ang uunahin ko dito?

Ah, gusto kong batiin ang bulacan kasi ang gaganda ng mga produkto ninyo, lalong gaganda sa packaging na ginagawang tulong ni Raul Hernandez dito sa Bulacan. At dahil napag-usapan natin ‘yung pangangalakal ng Bulacan, ‘yung North Food Exchange, sabi ni Josie anim na taon na n’yang linalakad kaya talagang kailangan karanasan at panahon para matupad. And may anim na taon, kaya inuutos ko ang TESDA, NEDA, Foreign Affairs — nandito ‘yung anak ni ka Blas Ople. Ay, hi! Si Felix Ople — at ang DOST na tulungan ang probinsiya ng Bulacan para pabilisan, pabilisan ang information component ng North Food Exchange.

Ngayon, alam n’yo ang Bulacan malapit hindi lamang sa aking ama, kungdi sa akin, kundi na rin sa aking ama. At panahon ng aking tatay, parating kinikuwento sa akin ni Mayor De Leon pag nagpupunta ako doon — noong una pang panahon ng aking pagpupunta doon — “ang tatay mo ang nagbigay ng patubig dito sa Bulacan, sa Angat.” eh, ngayon mukhang kailangan nang panibagong trabaho sa Angat. Kaya nalaman ko meron pala noong 1992 pa isang MOU sa pamamagitan ng MWSS at saka Provincial Government of Bulacan kung papano ma-allocate ang tubig ng angat. Eh, dapat naman siguro ang MWSS, 1992 pa ‘yon — ‘yan ang problema pagpalit nang palit ng pangulo eh — mabuti na lang, na-research natin sa pamamagitan nitong summit na ‘to. Kaya inuutusan ko ‘yung MWSS na balikan itong 1992 MOU kasama ng probinsiya ng bulacan at tignan kung papano matupad itong allocation na ito.

Tapos ‘yung pangatlo. Merong Bayabas Dam Project, sa DRT na naman. Ano ba itong DRT? At merong... Kasi nga may problema kayo ng patubig at merong rekomendasyon na gumawa ako ng Executive Committee na siya ang mag-o-oversee ng build-operate-and-transfer implementation ng Bayabas Dam. Gumawa raw ako ng Inter-Agency Committee. Hindi ako naniniwala sa committee eh. Naniniwala ako sa isang tao lamang dapat nag-o-oversee o isang kagawaran. Kaya itong Memorandum Order na sinasabing “create an inter-agency committee to oversee the build-operate-and-transfer implementation of the Bayabas dam.” papalitan ko itong Memorandum Order. Sasabihin ko “Authorizing the Governor of Bulacan to oversee the B-O-T transfer.”

Importante talaga na tayo ay nagkakasama para matugunan itong mga pangangailangan. Madali mag-usap ng prinsipyo at saka theory eh. Madali magbatikos kung ano ang masamang ginagawa o pangit na ginagawa o mali. Pero mahirap ang magpatupad — execution. At ‘yang execution ay nanggagaling sa karanasan, sa alam natin kung saan-saan ang mga papeles naghahanap, ‘yan ang tinatawag na bahagi ng learning curve. At ang masasabi natin, itong ginanap natin sa ating summit na ito, ‘yan ay isang malaking tutulong sa tagumpay para maunawaan natin ang kailangang gawin para sa pangunahing lalawigan ng Bulacan, na siya rin kung kayo ay maunlad, maunlad ang buong Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 22nd Philippines National Prayer Breakfast

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 22nd Philippines National Prayer Breakfast

[Delivered at the Centennial Hall, Manila Hotel, November 12, 2003]

Thank you.

Thank you, Secretary Romulo.

Other Cabinet members, Senate President Drilon, Speaker de Venecia, Justice Puno, mayor Atienza, Congresswoman Dumarpa and the other elective officials who are here.

Joe Tan Ramirez and George Drysdale, the leaders of this prayer breakfast; former Senate President Salonga, thank you for your prayer for the president; Bishop brother Eddie Villanueva; Bishop Tenderso and the other reverend bishops; Father Tapiador and the other reverend fathers; Commissioner Ide Tillah, happy birthday to you; ladies and gentlemen; brothers and sisters:

Thank you for inviting me again to be a part of the Philippine National Prayer breakfast.

I think today is a good day for having this prayer breakfast. I think today is a good day to thank our lord that our democratic system has survived one of its greatest tests in recent times. I think today is a time to thank the Lord that this passing a test has made us prouder of our democratic system. The three great powers of government have come together to express faith in each other and in a stable national future.

There is indeed no substitute for living and leading in God's presence, and calling on his holy name for help or for thanksgiving.

I have never doubted that the lord would guide us to a resolution that highlights our governments capacity for self-repair and self-redemption.

And now, as we have heard from the many prayers and many reflections today, I would like to stress that we must have reconciliation. We must have a newfound unity if we are to move the nation forward. For the peace of mind of the people, we must quiet down the controversy of the Davide crisis now that it has already been constitutionally resolved. All sides in the dispute have acted with statesmanship and we must gather around our democratic institutions rather than erode them further.

I have opened earnest back channels to all the groups involved and I hope they will heed the call for principled reconciliation.

What is principled reconciliation? Yesterday, I called my cabinet to a special meeting to reflect on this — what is principled reconciliation? We had asked our resource persons to guide us in the theology of principled reconciliation. Reverend Archbishop Capalla, who is the incoming President of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines and Father Intengan, Romeo Intengan, who is the provincial of the Jesuit Community of the Philippines. And when we talked about what is principled reconciliation, and Archbishop Capalla opened the floor for comments, questions and reflections, Joey Lina, our guest speaker for today, talked about the story of Zacchaeus. And, indeed, as we reflected on the different elements of the story of Zacchaeus, abstracted from that story were indeed the elements of principled reconciliation.

I will not repeat the theological analysis of our learned archbishop and learned priest, but that should be for another time and they can explain it more not me. But I found it providential that today's gospel reading was about the story of Zacchaeus. It is the story of principled reconciliation. It is the call of god to our people today.

The people must sense a unifying force in their institutions of governance or they themselves will be divided and weakened in facing the formidable challenges of waging the peace and fighting poverty. The nation must be healed by a common patriotism and sense of duty among leaders and constituencies.

This is the meaning I discern in your theme for today's prayer breakfast living and leading in God's presence. Your theme is a timely and relevant call towards strengthening our virtues and addressing our ever evolving roles in this new millennium. In 2 Peter 1:5, we are told to put forth "Earnest effort in supplying virtue to our faith." Earnest effort to me the meaning of that in today's context is we need to speed up the healing process. This is a time to fortify our democratic moorings.

We are not past the pressures of nationhood, for we are not yet a strong republic. There are challenges that we must confront to make us stronger, wiser and closer to God.

As president, I face the duty of stewarding the welfare of over 80 million Filipinos. How did I come to this stewardship? I remember that evening in the prayer in Araneta Coliseum where Bishop Tondero invited me. In fact, I was having at that time a very crucial meeting, a very crucial command conference because then there was yet another challenge to our country at that time. But Reverend Bishop sent a message: come, for even just a short while and pray with us. And I went. I had no time prepare a speech. No time to prepare a prayer because, indeed, I had to leave a very crucial meeting just to spend a few moments in prayer. And so, I had to ask the Lord, Lord, what do you want me to pray? And the Lord, in a little voice made me pray: here I am Lord. I have heard you calling me by name. I will go Lord where you lead me. I will hold your people in my heart.

And today, that was the song of our choir. How providential once again. I believe it is a message about what I must do about my stewardship. Hold his people in my heart by listening to the lord. And as Joey said, saying always, here we are, Lord.

My supplications, together with prayers of support of all of you, our brothers and sisters, who all say here we are, lord. These have given me the strength to pursue our goals in the midst of great challenges. Challenges in our internal society, challenges in the world environment.

I stand fast to our vision of prosperity for the greatest number under a strong republic.

You and I, who are praying today, we are partners in faith as well as in nation-building. As we pray together, we must support each other in building the just and equitable society we aspire to have because we know that that is the kind of society, that is the kind of nation that the lord wishes and wants for us.

I seek your prayers, brothers and sisters, so that we can institute true reforms in our way of politics, in our way of economics to really develop our economy and create a stronger republic to bring about the common good.

Yesterday, as we were reflecting on the need for reconciliation, reconciliation is always a bible value, but it is an even critical value at this time for the common good. That was what our reverend fathers reflected. And somebody in my Cabinet said, the common good. We haven't heard that term in a long time. We must remember the term once again and reflect on the common good.

And today, in this prayer breakfast, I heard that term again on the other side of this podium — the common good. The lord is reminding us again to reflect on and seek the common good.

The common good today, I firmly believe in my discernment is healing and reconciliation.

And so I seek your prayers so that we can heal our broken land. So that we can reconcile the fragmented ramparts of the nation.

I've often said that together we must build a strong republic. Psalm 127:1 says: Without the help of the Lord, it is useless to build a home. We can only build the strong republic that we want to be the home of our people with the help, in fact, with the lordship of the Lord.

Let each one of us then pray to the Lord for the wisdom, the courage, the strength of character to bring about true reforms and true reconciliation.

With the grace of god, lets share the spirit of fellowship and prayer, reinforce the ties of family and community, reach out in unity to our brothers and sisters who all comprise our one nation — God's chosen people in Asia. For the lord said, love your God with your whole heart, your whole soul; love your neighbor as yourselves.

In our challenges, may God's will be done. In your triumphs, in our triumphs, to God be the glory.

Thank you and amen.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the launching ceremony of Task Force Safe School: Be ACTIVE (Awareness and Communication through Involvement, Vigilance and Empowerment) for a Safe Community

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the launching ceremony of Task Force Safe School: Be ACTIVE (Awareness and Communication through Involvement, Vigilance and Empowerment) for a Safe Community

[Delivered at the Augusto Rosario Gonzales Theater, De La Salle University College of St. Benilde Campus, Taft Avenue, Manila, November 12, 2003]

Thank you very much, Secretary Mike Defensor.

We have excused Mayor Lito Atienza on his way out. Thank you, Lito because he's going to have a meeting with his Barangay Tanods right now.

I would like to greet also Dr. Clemenita, Dr. Bernardo, Dean Lazatin, Dean Tang, Dean Bautista, Mrs. Parago, Ms. Lactao from the students, and Ms. Sy, Mr. Rufino, and our very active and much accomplished District Director of Manila, General Pete Bulaong, faculty, students, ladies and gentlemen.

I truly congratulate La Salle-Manila and College of St. Benilde for this very exemplary initiative convening the task force safe school.

Indeed, I agree that to maximize the full potentials of students, it's not enough to provide quality educational and co-curricular experiences. It's not even enough to provide adequate facilities, not even topnotch apprenticeship. Students must also be given an environment in which they feel safe and secure to minimize distractions that could stand in the way of sound learning.

This is very important in all schools but La Salle is one of the pioneers and you have taken this initiative. I congratulate you for that – La Salle and St. Benilde.

On my part, the entire archipelago is my campus. And it falls upon my shoulders to ensure that our citizens are secure in the home and the workplace.

Mayor Atienza talked about law enforcement, the duties of law enforcement, and how values get turned around in a republic that is still not so strong, one such as ours.

The security of our nation was on the line in the Ninoy Aquino International Airport last weekend. The airport was a national security installation and the security authorities had to regain command and control of it by the most expeditious means.

I understand the grief that the Villaruel family is undergoing. For a son, for a daughter, for a wife, a husband could do no wrong. I pray that time will heal the wounds in their hearts and that by that time, we hope they would realize that his death did not come from any form of personal hatred or anger. Yet I'm deeply dismayed, like Mayor Atienza, how grief and loss have been exploited by partisanship and propaganda, and those who want to destabilize.

It's sad that there are those who did not go to his wake to grieve but rather to string up their placards and streamers and put down the government. The moment calls for dignity and we must accord dignity to the departed.

I've directed the authorities involved to look into the security lapses that allowed the entry in the first place. And that those responsible should be immediately fired and charged with criminal negligence. This is what we must do. We must enforce the law.

Terrorism is another threat that deserves our vigilance at all times. The security of metro manila is vital and important, and we need your help to be the eyes and ears of the community. It is very important to address these issues because destabilization is a force that can take advantage of any situation to bring down the democracy that we know and that we enjoy.

I'm glad that the impeachment case against the chief justice has been resolved in the spirit of conciliation under the rule of law. We must have reconciliation and a newfound unity if we are to move the nation forward. For the peace of mind of the people, we must quiet down this controversy since it has already been constitutionally resolved. All sides in the dispute have acted with statesmanship and we must gather around our democratic institutions rather than erode them further.

I've opened earnest back channels to all the groups involved, and I hope they will heed the call for principled reconciliation. The people must sense a unifying force in their institutions of governance or they themselves will be divided and weakened in facing the formidable challenges of fighting poverty and waging the peace including the peace and order, the safety that you the students, the faculty, the parents of La Salle and St. Benilde are looking for.

A nation must be healed by a common patriotism and a sense of duty among leaders and constituencies. And I congratulate the community of La Salle-Manila and St. Benilde because you have shown this sense of duty in putting this task force together.

We are determined to triumph over terrorism, to triumph over destabilization, and in the specific case of your task force, to triumph over criminality. These three are our big threats to our safety. And that is why I commend your schools for putting together measures that will prevent these threats — criminality, terrorism, destabilization — from ever entering your campuses.

We do not recall of any institution of learning that has been the target of a terrorist attack, but as you have said very clearly in your situationer, the areas around your schools have been areas where street crimes have been detected. One street crime is one street crime too many. And we hope that as you form the measures that will stop street crimes, these measures can also stop terrorism and destabilization, and its effects in this school environment. Because even if we had not had an attack, a terrorist attack on a school, it doesn't mean that it cannot happen. An ounce of prevention is always worth a pound of cure.

But our main concern, immediate and existing concern is criminality. And I agree with you that the tentacles of criminality must be cut decisively. You have stabbing incidents, and the threat of kidnapping in your midst is real. Your safe school project is an important means to eliminate this threat of criminality for the peace of mind of the students and their parents.

I was asking your officials earlier if the crimes were committed by... involved students, and they said, 'yes, they victimized students.' and I said, perhaps they are drug-related because in our national statistics, 70 percent of crimes are drug-related. So, if you are able to solve the drug problem, you'll be able to solve 70 percent of the criminality in our country. Well, in the statistics, it's not so much drug-related but alcohol-related. And therefore, it means that we have to perhaps enforce rules about establishments serving alcohol in the areas around the schools.

But I was telling your officials earlier, it doesn't necessarily mean that the one committing the crime has to be high on drugs when he or she is committing the crime. They could commit the crime while they're sober because they need to commit the crime to finance their habit. And many of the snatching and hold-ups are related to that.

And that is why it is important for our task force also to work together against drug abuse. I have declared drug abuse as a threat to our national security. It's destroying the future of our youth, including those in the best of schools.

In the war against drugs, we need the collective efforts of families, communities, the youth and various sectors of our society.

Last August, I was at the University Belt. I made a pitch to make the university belt drug-free. And we have succeeded to a very great extent. I am now setting the same goal for the many schools and universities along Taft Avenue.

Let me take this opportunity related to the drug threat to remind everyone that the dangerous drugs act of 2002 mandates random drug testing among students of secondary and tertiary schools. And therefore, this is something that we can do together, and your task force can participate in your partnership with the government.

I congratulate your task force for partnering with the barangay governments, the police and the business establishments in the area. We should propagate this kind of cooperative undertaking not only in the school but also in the places where you live.

There are many things that we can do together. I have given you a bird's eye view of some of the things that we do from the national point of view about crimes — street crimes, drugs, kidnapping. What can we do together? How can government help you?

As far as street crimes are concerned, what we have done is — because we don't have as many policemen as we would like to, compared to say the city of New York — what we try to do is to have what we call the police multipliers where the Barangay tanods and the security agencies of the establishments in the area of a police station work together as one team. So that they can to their rounds together and therefore the one policeman that must do the round at one particular time has a team going around with him. That is the concept of the force multiplier. And in this case, the tanods and the security agencies have to undergo training. In the schools, you have your ROTC and the substitute programs within the ROTC. It would be a good idea if your ROTC curriculum would include the work of the task force to be accredited in fulfillment of the requirements.

What can the national government do to help you. In case... As I said in the case of the street crimes, we can work together by having the police supervised the joint work of patrolling. In the case of kidnapping, I have formed a special task force headed by former Secretary of National Defense Angelo Reyes no less to do the enforcement against kidnapping. And to the extent that students in your schools are more or less from affluent families, I would suggest that we have a follow-up to this launching by asking Secretary Reyes to come here and speak before you, together with his team, because I have heard the module on how schools can help prevent kidnapping as well.

And on the part of drugs, the drug menace is so big. And it is related to many petty crimes and even bigger crimes that we have decided to make it, as I said earlier, a national security issue. And I have allocated from the lotto receipts of the PCSO the amount of one billion pesos, total, for the fight against drugs. Now, this amount is a lump sum and it is spent by the law enforcers in accordance with the different specific programs or projects or operations that may be submitted to the Dangerous Drugs Board or the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency.

Therefore, if you have some expenses related to building up the capability of your school, your school community in fighting drugs, and therefore fighting street crimes, I guess under General Pete Bulaong, he could submit whatever proposal you might have together, to his chief of the task force, General Aglipay who has access to these funds in the PCSO.

We need to be operational aside from talking about framework and principles. And I am very glad that you are called a task force. Because that is the meaning of a task force, you are a force to reckon with and you have specific tasks that you set out to do.

And so therefore, I congratulate you once again. And I thank you, once again, for helping us promote safety and security in the community. Truly you are showing yourselves to be among the great pillars of law enforcement and peace and order in our society. I congratulate the community of La Salle and St. Benilde for this initiative.

Mabuhay kayong lahat!

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2003). Speech of President Arroyo during the De La Salle University Symposium with the President's Lecture on "The Politics of Economic Crisis"

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the De La Salle University Symposium with the President's Lecture on "The Politics of Economic Crisis"

[Delivered at the De Las Alas Hall, De La Salle University Dasmariñas, Cavite, November 13, 2003]

Thank you.

Thank you, Brother Rolly Dizon, one of La Salle's many outstanding contributions to my administration.

You know, I'll have to tell you the story of how Brother Rolly became the Chairman of CHED. I have a search committee that helps me spruces possibilities for my presidential appointments. Of course, in the end, it's my prerogative, it's my duty to choose the best. Sometimes I choose from among the nominees of the search committee, sometimes I don't. And when the last CHED chair has already retired. In fact, she held over for a while the search committee was doing its work.

Finally, they came to their short list and they submitted the short list to me. Well, you know, as president as much as possible, my schedule is like this: 10:00 to 3:00, I do public affairs like this; 3:00 down, I do paperwork. That's when I go to my desk and attend to these things. And so, I had a pile of papers, among them was the short list of the nominees for CHED. Okey, so I put it there, and from the short list, I made a tentative note — okey, from this one appoint this person. So that the secretary of my search committee would then prepare the papers for appointment. And then I was going over on my other papers in my incoming box then I saw the invitation from Brother Rolly Dizon inviting me to his retirement from La Salle. remember that time... And I said, this is the CHED chair while this one is being nominated by God, because the retirement invitation came on the same day that the short list came. It was an addition to my short list and I chose that addition to my short list. And I have no regrets that Brother Dizon is now CHED chair.

I would like to introduce some of the other members of my official family who are with us today. We have a resident of Cavite, Secretary Marita Jimenez. then we have my youngest Cabinet member, closest in age to you my audience, Secretary Mike Defensor. we have my Presidential Assistant for Education Mona Valisno. you know, because education has CHED, has DepEd, even has TESDA who runs the technical schools, I don't believe in a committee system that puts them all together. Because then you only do your work during committee meetings not in between. Well, when you have different agencies handling a common field, I would rather have it coordinated out of Malacañang by a presidential assistant, and that's WHAT MONA does.

I would like also to acknowledge the presence of the number one provincial board member of Cavite, Dominic Tolentino. and I would like to greet all of you and thank you for your welcome headed by Dr. Herminia Torres. Thank you very much, Dr. Torres. she and you are my host, not brother Rolly. He is now my co-guest.

I think it's a very important day for us to be all here. A very important moment in our current events and our history.

After the impeachment controversy was constitutionally resolved, the peso rallied close to 55.17 to one dollar last Tuesday, up almost 20 centavos from last Monday's rate. But after yesterday's protests against that resolution, the peso went down again. You can see, therefore, that the first day was clearly influenced by the positive market sentiment following the coming together of the three branches of government in an expression of faith in each other and in a stable national future. And then very clearly, yesterday's market was a reaction to those who wish to undermine that stability. This is a clear example of the relation between politics and the economy.

Our historic problem has been the need for economic development to fight poverty. Our fundamental problem of our country is poverty. And our historic problems cannot be blamed on any single president or individual, because the problems are fundamental, caused by our economic and political system.

We inherited a weak state — that's why i keep talking about a strong republic. We want to strengthen the republic which is the antithesis of the weak state that we have inherited — this weak state is one in which dominant classes or sectors have controlled or shaped its policies, especially those dealing with the economy.

And so, therefore, as a result of this dominance of the privileged classes dominating economic and political policy, there exist a large gap between the rich and the poor which has been exploited for political ends. This large gap is exploited by the NPA, this large gap between the very poor in Muslim Mindanao and the better off in the rest of the Philippines or even maybe in Christian Mindanao has also been exploited by the secessionist. This gap between the rich and the poor, where many of the poor were identified with EDSA 3, and many of the intellectuals or elite were identified with EDSA 2, have also been exploited by those who want to reverse the gains of EDSA 2.

But even outside of those very dramatic cleavages in our society caused by those who exploit the gap between the rich and the poor, the political system itself has been based on patronage, and ultimately at the extreme, on corruption to support patronage. And lately, the use of destabilization, black propaganda and character assassination have become tools of the political trade. What a contrast from the time when my father, Diosdado Macapagal, first run for Congress in 1949.

At that time, my father was a diplomat, a career diplomat working in Washington, and President Quirino was the president. There was a communists insurgency going on. They had their members of Congress and in the first district of Pampanga, the congressman was a communist, but he was a poet communist. And President Quirino decided that he needed a charismatic brilliant young man to challenge this incumbent. So, he brought my father back from Washington. My father was also a poet, he wrote Sarsuelas. So, there were two poets running against each other and they conducted their campaigns by reciting poetry in their respective platforms.

Anyway, my father won. It doesn't mean he was the better poet, but I'm just pointing out that at that time, they could talk issues and couched this talk in poetry. Today, the issues are muddled by character assassination, black propaganda, destabilization. And this is again a manifestation of the weakness of our state.

Because we are not yet a strong state, historically, our economic development has been slow compared to our neighbors. That's why it should be a source of pride to us that during this Asian crisis and especially in the last two years of my administration, we did better than our neighbors, especially again, I said, during the last two and a half years. For instance, in the first 6 months of this year, we achieved a 4.8 percent GNP growth rate. And among the 21 member economies of APEC, we have the sixth highest growth rate among our neighbors. And that growth rate of ours in the first six months of this year was the highest growth rate that we achieved since the 1997 Asian crisis. So, we've done gains despite the weakness of our state.

And, in so short a time of the two and a half years, we accomplished — and my youngest Cabinet member is somebody I should thank for that — the most massive housing and urban land reform program undertaken in our history. In fact, after this meeting I will proceed to Paliparan, to again give lot entitlements to a 150 families who will join almost 300,000 other families who have gained the right to buy the land that they are occupying.

We won victories in pinning down corrupt high-ranking officials, director level, undersecretary level, some of them we were able to do because we did unprecedented lifestyle checks. We launched an all-out war against illegal drugs. In a few months time within 3 months of when I gave the first or allocated — because I haven't all used it up — one billion pesos that I found from the lotto earnings of the PCSO, we confiscated unprecedented volumes of illegal drugs, closed down an unprecedented number of large shabu factories, arrested big drug dealers who used to be untouchable before my administration. And I would like to — wala siya dito — si Boysie Rosales, our provincial director of the police here is one of the heroes of that campaign against illegal drugs.

So we have made gains in our fight against illegal drugs that outstrip by far the gains made in several years before. That's on the side of law enforcement. On the side of looking for peace, a peaceful resolution to the Muslim insurgency is within our grasp. We have a successful ceasefire going on with the MILF and we are on the way to signing a permanent peace agreement. We cut red tape to make sure crucial infrastructure are built. I asked some of your students here if you are from... All from Cavite, Dasmariñas, some of you are from Batangas. And the roll-on/roll-off ferry out of Batangas to Mindoro, to Panay island all the way to Mindanao has made travel very convenient for tourists going to Boracay but also for Mindanao-based agricultural products coming to Manila. New bridges, new highways after many, many years of getting stuck in bureaucratic red tape, our south expressway is under construction again.

We began meaningful debates on changes in the constitution, particularly on the parliamentary and federal form of government. Government prosecutors won landmark decisions, a painful decision, landmark nonetheless, on the arrest of President Estrada. Long-awaited decisions lying for years in the courts on the Marcos wealth, the coconut levy, and at least in the Supreme Court to Kuratong Baleleng case. Sinabi ko, at least in the Supreme Court. Kasi alam rin naman natin ang nangyari ngayon sa lower court.

On the dismissal in the lower court of the Kuratong Baleleng case, as I have said time and again, we must abide by the rule of law. There is a process by which the parties will have to deal with the situation and we have to patiently go through it. Let justice forge on unsullied by too much noise and controversy.

Our enemies prefer to sow disunity so that they can wrest power from the people who become strong when the economy is strong. Our enemies do not want our people to be strong.

Fearing that our success, our successes that I enumerated partly in a few minutes ago, would frustrate their plans. Our enemies have resorted to machiavellian schemes in Oakwood, in 'hit-and run' exposes, in exploiting the emotions generated by the impeachment crisis and the NAIA siege.

I'm saddened that our people are obviously being misled out of desperation by some plotters of destabilization. In the spirit of democracy, a permit was given for yesterday's rally until 5 p.m., and maximum tolerance was observed during that time frame. Thereafter, Mayor Jojo Binay and the other authorities had to act to restore order in the streets. And they were called upon, they did their duty, they dispersed the rally. While we respect and uphold the full expression of civil rights, we cannot allow anyone to cross the line of public order because of the harm wrought upon the general welfare. And I thanked Mayor Binay for making that judgement call in the interest of public welfare.

On the other hand, nevertheless, I'm greatly dismayed by the way some unscrupulous political leaders are using the masses as cannon fodder, which deprives the latter of their dignity. We should have unity and reconciliation based on respect for the dignity of the masses and a healthy respect for their constructive role in society. There is a proper time and venue for partisan struggle and these are the elections of 2004.

In the more than two years of my presidency, I went through a learning curve. I gained the experience necessary to understand what we need to do in order to change society in a way that leads to economic development and the elimination of poverty.

And that is so important to work on that because with the region now starting to recover, even if we were ahead of them in the last two and a half years, our neighbors are now starting to accelerate their growth rate again. And this time, we cannot afford to be left behind as historically, we've been left behind.

To really develop our economy and create a stronger republic, we need to change our system, to institute true reforms in our way of politics and our economy. We also need to unify as a people.

Our enemies thrive on the deep social and political divisions that we now have. We need to heal these divisions within our society. Yes, we must have justice, but yes, we must have also reconciliation. We must put a closure to our past national divisions and give ourselves a fresh start, so that we can concentrate on changing society in a way that flourishes our future. So that we can give greater certainty to business and our investors who provide jobs for our people, because jobs for our people represent the most important and effective way to fight poverty.

Our programs in my administration are devoted to strengthening the economy. That's why we talked about our macroeconomic fundamentals being strong, our GNP growth rate, our deficit which is below the ceiling, our inflation rate below expectations, our interest rate also below projections. But that macroeconomic fundamental picture is only a precondition to the environment that will make the businessmen put their money where they can create jobs. And our economic policies, our government policies are also meant to encourage them. To encourage business activity unhampered by corruption and red tape in government.

I talked about housing. To build medium-cost housing, it used to take two years — mike, for a permit? — and 280 signatures. Thanks God if all the 280 signatories are honest. but this is what I mean by cutting corruption and red tape. And we've cut that down. And the housing sector has been responding — 280 to 40. We'd like to reduce it some more but you can imagine what laws we have to change, or what flourey of implementing rules we have to change, but at least, that this the housing sector tells us that we have the friendliest housing sector policies in a long time. And that's why they're building houses again.

Through all the political challenges that dominate the front pages and headlines, I have instructed the bureaucracy to stay on track in the task of governance — they continue to do their work. During the last all saint's day holiday, I was listening to the radio and I heard congratulations from many of those who said that the traffic was less than in previous years including the traffic in the north expressway and the south expressway, and yet construction was going on in the north expressway and the south expressway. That's because the bureaucracy continued to work under my direction on the day to day things that we need to do to make life more convenient for our people.

That did not come by accident, we held a cabinet meeting to discuss how to improve traffic during that period. Traffic is not a triviality that we dismiss. In the APEC Summit, just to make sure that there would be no traffic, the government of Thailand gave a 10-day holiday, nobody was in Bangkok. And when I had a reunion of the 300 or so Filipinos who lived in Thailand, some of them came from Pattaya and Pukhet — you know, where the beaches are — and they said, "haayy, I'm so happy to be here in Bangkok with you because all the Thailanders are there in Pattaya and in Pukhet, and they're filling up the whole place. So crowded there." and so things like this, you know, these are everyday... Everyday life things that our bureaucracy must work on to make life better.

And to spur them to keep doing that, not to be distracted with what they read in headlines, I continue to keep a steady hand over the concerns of the state. I continue to hold meetings, to handle everyday things as well as to handle big things like reconciliation and reform. And that is what I would ask you and the people, to keep your eyes focused on the challenges we face daily. For you, the youth, the daily challenge is to prepare well, to study well, to prepare yourselves to run the economy of your generation. My father always used to tell me that when you say prepare, it means prepare intellectually and prepare morally. And that's why aside from studying well — and you're so lucky to be in a school like La Salle — it also means being vigilant in the face of threats to your moral fiber and productivity like the scourge of drugs which we consider a national security threat. And of course, let's not allow ruthless politics to distract us from the all important charge of nation building.

In the final analysis, it will be reform and reconciliation that will heal the wounds of our divisiveness. It will be reform and reconciliation that will allow us to move forward to flourish our future. And that is the great connection between politics and economy, between reconciliation and between prosperity.

And I hope you, the students of La Salle, especially here in Calabarzon will be the leaders in the next phase of reform and the continuing reconciliation that we all need. And I hope in your generation, you will be able to find the Philippines, at last, a strong republic.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 50th anniversary of the Philippine Mines Safety and Environment Association and the Annual National Mines Safety and Environment Conference

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 50th anniversary of the Philippine Mines Safety and Environment Association and the Annual National Mines Safety and Environment Conference

[Delivered at the Centennial Hall, Manila Hotel, Manila, November 13, 2003]

Thank you.

Thank you very much, Secretary Bebet Gozun.

President Rodriguez; incoming president of the Chamber of Mines, Phillip Romualdez. I would like to also greet my other Cabinet member who's here, Secretary of Planning Romy Neri, and Congressman Maurice Domogan.

I would also like to greet the other leaders of the industry: Mr. Brown, Mr. Robins, Mr. Decini, Mr. Fujimura, Ms. Sandy Prieto-Romualdez, Mr. Callaghan. And all of you, leaders of the Philippine Mines Safety and Environment Association, congratulations on your Golden Anniversary! Congratulations, too, to your golden jubilee awardees! May they serve as exemplars of safety practices and environmental protection, and be the concrete proof that you can have mining, you can have jobs, and you can have concern for the environment at the same time.

And that is why first and foremost, I would like to take this opportunity to confirm what our two speakers have already said, that our policy for the minerals industry is no longer just mere tolerance but active promotion of sustainable mining.

This is why, as President Romualdez said, I am the president to address your whole industry in a long time. Because for a long time, the policy has been tolerance. And if your industry is merely tolerated, why should a president bother to give you the time. But I bother to give you the time because I want to confirm the good news. This policy shift occurred shortly after I appointed a new Secretary of Planning, Romy Neri, and a new Secretary of Environment and Natural Resources, Bebet Gozun. That's why I wanted to make sure both of them are on stage with me tonight.

Your foremost advocate is the secretary of economic planning. And I was already aware of that when I asked him to join the government, my administration, because he already had a very good microeconomic program that I felt could supplement the macroeconomic gains I had made in the first half of my administration. And so I knew that if I would get Romy Neri as planning secretary, I knew that that would really mean a big push for the mining sector.

There were many though who said, "Well, Romy is sure to push the mining sector because he's been very open about that because his beliefs have been very well known. He's written about them, lectured about them." but they said, "but the Secretary of the Environment is an environmentalist. So she will be... And she comes from the NGO group." and as Phillip Romualdez said, NGO is equated to anti-mining. But we are all gratified to find that the Secretary of Environment and Natural Resources is very open-minded and modern in her approach to mining policy.

When I first interviewed her — Bebet, remember? — Before I appointed her, before I announced her appointment as Secretary of Environment and Natural Resources, we discussed mining policy. And she said that she believes that for the mining investors who from the very beginning do their social preparation rather than springing surprises on the community; if from the beginning they do their social preparation and engage the community, there is no reason why the investment will not succeed. And she has been doing that in her work, doing early social preparation for the mining investments. And though Mr. Rodriguez said that there's still no single mining firm that has come in on the ground. Actually, there are two investments in very advance stages now. And I hope therefore, they will be the first roots of our policy of pushing sustainable mining rather than just tolerating it as has been done in many years in the past.

After all, I'm aware of the big demand for copper, gold and nickel, and their great potential for creating jobs. And after all, creating jobs is the most important means of fighting poverty.

And after all, our historic problem has been the need for economic development to fight poverty. Because we are not yet a strong state, historically, our economic development has been slow compared to our neighbors. That's why it should be a source of pride to us that in the last two-and-a-half years, we did better than our neighbors. And in the first 6 months of this year, we achieved a 4.8 percent GNP growth rate, the sixth highest among the 21 economies of the Asia-Pacific region, and the highest in our country since the 1997 Asian financial crisis.

If about a year ago, I announced that policy shift to active promotion rather than mere tolerance, it was because, in these two years, more than two years of my presidency, I have been going through a learning curve. And I have gained the experience necessary to understand what we need to do in order to change society in a way that leads to economic development and the elimination of poverty, especially now with the Asian region starting to recover, our neighbors are starting to accelerate their growth again. And this time, we cannot afford to be left behind.

To really develop our economy and create a stronger republic, we need to change our system, to institute true reforms in our way of politics and our economy. And among the reforms I recognized we need to do is the reform of our mining policy.

Incoming President Romualdez said, that the national mineral's policy has been five years in the making, and still no sign of coming to a conclusion.

I am very happy to let you know tonight that on December 3rd and 4th, in the National Mining Conference, Bebet Gozun will unveil the national minerals policy. I will leave the details up to her. Otherwise, you will have no more main feature for your December 3rd and 4th Conference. But I just want to say in general and confirm that it's my administration's policy to promote responsible mineral resources exploration, development and utilization to enhance economic growth in a manner that adheres to the principles of sustainable development.

I am merely being consistent with what I have been doing since I was a senator, because as senator, I have sought solutions to the concerns of the mining industry. And now, as president, we have started addressing your long-standing concerns. First of all, your concern for a holistic policy, and that is coming on December 3rd and 4th.

With regard to specific concerns, not just yours, but the concern of the community regarding your industry, we have acted, as Phillip Romualdez said, we have acted decisively on Marcopper and Diwalwal to end lingering fears of the community. In the case of Marinduque, of Marcopper, upon the request of the people of Marinduque, I released 20 million pesos of presidential funds to finance the environment and health study which will recommend the appropriate rehabilitation strategies for the areas affected by the Marcopper tailings spill.

And last year, with the help of the Chamber of Mines — and I must thank them for it — we firmly asserted government control in Diwalwal. As Phillip said, because he's very much involved in it, this ore-rich mountain shall be a good example of rationalized operations that allow big players, small scale miners and artesians miners to co-exist.

The National Resources Mining Development Corporation was incorporated in July this year, precisely to promote the mining industry, and I appointed Dennis Belmonte as president. By the way, he's not the only mining man that I got into my government, there's also Teddy Taguinod who is now the chairman and CEO of the Public Estates Authority. But of course, that's not mining. It is our friend Dennis who is in mining. And well, what I can say is that — is Mr. Murga also from mining? No, okay. Anyway, going back to Dennis. I feel he has done a yeoman's job of instituting in Diwalwal a new social order founded on mutual trust and confidence. The construction of an engineered tailings dam to arrest pollution, I understand, has already started. Thanks to the Chamber of Mines.

We want to make the area a showcase of our policy to recognize small scale mining as a formal sector and put an end to the negative impact of artesial and unsystematic operations.

We've mobilized so many agencies to address this age-old problem in Diwalwal. There's the DND and the PNP to enforce law and order. Aside from that DSWD, DOH and other agencies have put up livelihood training, environmental protection, and public health programs for the most disadvantaged people in the area, especially the women.

Aside from addressing this very specific high-profile problems that somehow have contributed in the past to keeping the policy towards mining mere tolerance rather than promotion because this sort of gave mining a bad name, we've also addressed other concerns to push mining investments. And again, incoming President Romualdez mentioned some of them. But I would just like to stress that the environmental clearance certificate, which has been the bane of operation start ups, has had its processing time reduced significantly under the administration of Bebet Gozun.

Of course, aside from the national minerals policy, the other related framework for mining policy should be the Mining Act. And while we are waiting for the Supreme Court to come out with its rulings, we're in the process of harmonizing the Mining Act and the Indigenous Peoples Right Act to facilitate applications of qualified investors. The Supreme Court has lately been coming up with important decisions on many issues that have been pending for a long time. And now, with the impeachment crisis over perhaps — and also with the supreme court having disposed of several other long pending issues — perhaps we can soon expect the supreme court to go back to addressing the pending great policy issues including the mining issue.

Not that I can speak for the Supreme Court, but if our impeachment crisis had lingered on and on, then it would have been an even longer wait. Thus, we can say that even the mining industry benefits from the three great branches of our government reaffirming their faith in each other and in a stable national future.

Aside from fundamental reforms, the impeachment crisis shows also that we need to unify as a people.

The Philippine Mines Safety and Environment Association knows the lessons of unity very well. Beyond advocacy of safety practices, your annual conference is a prime event because it affords every stakeholder in the industry a chance of learning and discourse, and above all, planning together for common advancement.

I congratulate you for what you have done, not only for your industry but also for our country. Bebet reminds me that during the great earthquake in Baguio and other parts of Luzon in 1990, it was your association that helped in the relief and rehabilitation of the affected earthquake communities. And with your snap — safety network action program — you are institutionalizing that support that you have been giving whenever there is a great disaster.

Indeed, your association has played, and I'm sure will continue to play a significant role in national development and growth.

And tonight, I ask the mining sector to help me, not only in creating jobs, not only in safety and in protection of the environment, help me also to start the healing process that will give you and the whole business community and the whole people of the Philippines a better environment in which to work, do business and live in.

Congratulations! Happy Golden Anniversary! And thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Gawad Parangal sa mga Entrepinay (A Tribute to Women Entrepreneurs)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Gawad Parangal sa mga Entrepinay (A Tribute to Women Entrepreneurs)

[Delivered at the Bahay Pangarap, Area 3, PSG compound Malacañang, Manila, November 13, 2003]

Maraming salamat Kalihim Bert Romulo, Executive Secretary.

Maupo na kayong lahat.

Una sa lahat, binabati ko ang aking Cabalen, ang Director General ng TLRC, si Rico Laxa. Sa katotohanan, first time ko siya narinig nagtagalog kanina. Magaling ka pala magtagalog, rico.

Alam nyo, ikukuwento ko sa inyo si Rico Laxa bago siya naging mayor noong 1998, isang napakalaking housing developer, isa sa pinakamalaki. Pero ginusto niyang pumasok sa pulitika at naging mayor ng Macabebe. Pero noong ako ay naging pangulo at dahil nga napakaganda yung kanyang successful experience bilang isang housing developer bago siya naging politician ay hiningi ko sa kanya maging secretary... Director-General ng TLRC para ganun yung kanyang entrepreneurial skills ay maipaabot din sa ating mga kababayan. Kaya siya ngayon nandoon at belated happy birthday sa inyo.

Gusto kong batiin si Secretary Manolito Dayrit ng Department of Health. Siya ay narito dahil nga isa sa gusto natin na maging hanapbuhay ng mga entrepreneur ay yung botika na nagbebenta ng murang gamot at DOH ang pangunahing gumagawa ng programang yon. Narito rin ang ating bagong secretary ng Anti-Poverty, si Secretary Camilo Sabio, isa sa aking maraming Cabinet members na galing sa mindanao. At ang dahilan kung bakit nandito ang Secretary ng Anti-Poverty Commission ay dahil sila ang nag-oorganize nung programang kalahi o kabalikat laban sa kahirapan kung saan napakamasigasig ang partisipasyon ng TLRC.

Nandito yung aking estudyante, si Anthony Abad, ang pangulo ng Philippine International Trading Corporation. Siya rin ay narito dahil doon sa mga maghahanapbuhay ng pagbenta ng murang gamot. Eh para makapasok yung murang gamot sa ibang bansa at hindi kayo madadaya na peke yung gamot, ang gumagawa noon, gagawa ng pag-import para sa inyo ay yung Philippine International Trading Corporation. So, mga partner sila.

Binabati ko yung ibat-ibang punongbayan na narito. Kung meron akong hindi nakita kanina, paumanhin. Pero nandito sa ating harap ngayon ay yung mayor ng Taguig City, Mayor Freddie Tinga. Pag nakikita ko yung mga kababaihan ng Taguig, naaalala ko si Mrs. Marichu Tinga, nanay ni Freddie, dahil siya ang nag-oorganize ng mga kababaihan at ang gaganda ng mga... Kayo ba yon? Ay, naku! Kaya kayo naman pala ang Entrepinay ngayon yung... Anong tawag nung ano, Kabalikat? Balikatan ang tawag ng mga ladies ni Marichu noon. At nandito rin mula rin sa metro manila yung aking abogado noong ako ay vice president na tumutulong para magtanggol ng mga kababaihang inaapi o yung pinagsasamantala, ito ay si Mayor Rosendo Capco ng Pateros. Ayun! Mga taga-Pateros.

Ngayon ang pinagdidiriwang natin ay hindi yung pagtanggol ng karapatang pantao ng kababaihan ng Pateros kungdi yung pag-iral ng inyong karapatang pangkabuhayan sa ilalim ng liderato ni Endo Capco. yung kababayan namin ni Rico Laxa, ang aking Casiping Balen, mahirap pumunta sa bayan niya kung hindi ka muna dadaan sa bayan ko sa Lubao, ang mayor ng Sasmuan, si Mayor Catalina Bagasina. Kung tutuusin si Mayor Bagasina isa ring very successful entrepreneur. Kaya pag nagbi-birthday party siya nakikilala ko hindi lamang yung mga taga-sasmuan kungdi yung taga mga empleyado niya kasi malaki rin ang kaniyang negosyo kaya very successful din. Halos kagaya ni Rico Laxa noong hindi pa siya mayor. At mabuti nakita ko siya nung papasok ako, tignan mo ang dami palang mga awardees ang kaniyang constituents kaya tinawag ko siya dito sa harap, si Mayor Bartolome Ramos ng Santa Maria, Bulacan.

Kayong lahat binabati ko, magandang hapon, lalung-lalo na yung mga kababaihang negosyante na tinatawag nating entrepinay, magandang hapon sa inyong lahat. May mga lalaki rin tayo rito ah. Batiin ko yung mga nagmamahal sa mga entrepinay at gumagalang sa kanila.

Ako ay natutuwa na tayo ay narito kasi ang kailangan ng ating bansa ay trabaho kung gusto natin masugpo ang kahirapan, at hindi lahat ng trabaho ay mahahanap sa malalaking pabrika. Maraming trabaho sa ating bansa ay mahahanap sa mga sariling pagnenegosyo, yon na nga ang tinatawag nating entrepreneurship.

At kayo tinulungan ang marami sa inyo ng TLRC magkaroon ng kakayahang pangkabuhayan. Kaya marami sa inyo hindi na ninyo kailangan mamasukan sa mga pabrika, kayo ay mga entrepreneur na. At kayo pa nga ay kung minsan may mga entrepreneur na sariling negosyo isa... Siya lang mismo o siguro dalawa ang anak niya ang kanyang empleyado, yon ay self-employed. Meron kayong self-employed dito, ang tawag doon ay micro-enterprise. Meron din naman kayong mga maliliit na negosyo kaya nakakabigay ng trabaho sa mga sampung tao, yon naman ay small enterprise. Kaya kayo whether kayo sa sarili ninyo o ibang tao nabibigyan ninyo ng trabaho, kayo hindi na kayo kailangan mamasukan, kayo ay entrepreneur, Entrepinay, mga negosyanteng magtatagumpay.

At yon nga, yung industriya ng buong mundo ay humina noong nakaraang since 2001, nung nagkaroon nang slowdown yung U.S. economy na bumibili ng produkto sa lahat kaya nag-slowdown ang buong mundo. Before that nag-slowdown pa ang Asia dahil sa Asian financial crisis kaya maraming nawalaan ng trabaho at inuuna nga mawalan ng trabaho yung babae, di ba? Nahalata ninyo? Kaya mangyayari diyan, pag yung babae ay walang trabaho ang gagawin na lamang mag-iistambay na lamang sa neighbor, magtsi-tsismisan. Pero ngayon dahil sa pagka-entrepinay ninyo hindi na kayo kailangan mag-aksaya ng inyong panahon, magtambayan at mag-tsismis sa kapitbahay kasi meron na kayong magandang gagawin sa panahon ninyo, itong mga negosyong inaasikaso ninyo. Entrepinay na kayo, aktibong naghahanapbuhay.

Naibalita sa akin ni Director General Rico Laxa na ang TLRC ay tumutulong sa mga kababaihan ng humigit-kumulang dalawang daang lugar sa ilalim ng programa ng NAPC, yung Kalahi. At kanina narinig ko 20,000 na ang mga entrepinay na nakinabang dito sa programang ito.

Ang Entrepinay ay isa sa mga programang microfinance, 20,000 ang kontribusyon ng TLRC so far. Sa buong mga gusto nating magbenepisyu, siguro puwede nating matawag sila lahat ng Entrepinay. Dahil kahit na hindi member ng kilusan ninyo basta entrepreneur na babae, Entrepinay na nga yon.

Kaya gusto nating magkaroon ng isang milyong kababaihan na maging Entrepinay sa ating bansa. Maging ito ay dumadaan sa TLRC o yung ibang mga microfinance program kagaya ng livelihood support fund, kagaya ng mga ibat-ibang mga microfinance. And ako'y nasisiyahan na nung sinabi ko na magbibigay tayo ng hanapbuhay sa pamamagitan ng microfinance sa 300,000 women a year, lampas na lampas na tayo sa target na ito. Kasama na nga kayo, mga Entrepinay.

Binanggit ko noon na si Mayor Endo Capco ang aking kasama noong ako ay vice president para magtanggol ng karapatang pantao ng kababaihan. Talagang dalawa ang programa ng inyong lingkod sa aking administrasyon para sa kababaihan. Yung isa na nga yung pagtanggol sa karapatang pantao ng kababaihan. Halimbawa, yung mga binubugbog ng asawa, biktima ng rape, biktima ng prostitution at iba pa, at yung isa naman, yung pagsulong ng karapatang pangkabuhayan. At itong ginagawa nating ito, yung programang entrepinay, ito nga ay bahagi ng ating programang pagsulong ng karapatang pangkabuhayan ng ating kababaihan.

Nabanggit nga ni Lydia Pederal. Ayan, Lydia matagal na rin naming kasama yan sa Pampanga dahil siya yung humahawak din ng livelihood nung Mt. Pinatubo Commission noon, di ba Lydia? Dami mong batikos sa amin noon, ano? Buti ngayon magkaibigan na tayo. Kasi pag senador ako, pag senador ka medyo meron kang hindi magandang attitude na pagbatikos nang batikos sa executive. Eh ngayon executive na ako, kasama ko na siya sa trabaho. Kaya paumanhin lydia kung ako ay nagbatikos sa iyo noon.

Anyway, gaya nang sabi ni Lydia nadalaw ko na ang ilang Entrepinay na mga nakikinabang sa mga microfinance sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng Pilipinas. At yung outstanding na Entrepinay chapter — o, ano ba yon, tatlo na ang awards na nakuha nila, apat — yung barangay Holy Spirit, nabisita ko na yon. At doon sila nga ay gumagawa ng iba't-ibang mga cake, pastry, juice, siopao, puto pao. Noong nagpunta nga kami doon, kumain pa nga kami nang masarap na cupcake at puto, masarap.

Pero noong nagke-kuwentuhan kami doon, meron mga dumadaing at sa iba ring lugar, na sabi nila... Hindi ba nakita natin lahat ng pagsasanay dito? Meron mga... Suwerte yung mga direkto mayrong bibili ng produkto ninyo, pero may iba na nagsasanay doon, natututo silang gumawa, wala namang bumibili ng produkto nila sa mga lugar nila. At dahil bago pa lang sila sa skill pa yon, hindi pa export quality. So, may problema ng marketing.

Kaya doon ko sinabi sa TLRC, ang payo ko sa kanila huwag kayong magturo ng produkto hindi sigurado ang benta. At sabi ko, alam kong isang produktong talagang hinahanap lalo na nang matatanda yung mga murang gamot. Kaya pinapasulong natin ngayon yung mga botikang nagbebenta ng murang gamot. At saan manggagaling itong murang gamot? Isa na nga yung parating galing sa india sa pamamagitan ng Philippine International Trading Center. Yung iba naman ay yung herbal at saka yung generic medicine na dumadaan naman sa Department of Health. Kaya kasama sila dapat sa pag-organize nitong inyong ang mga botikang ito.

In fact, kanina nga sinabi ko kay Secretary Dayrit, dahil dinadaing din sa akin nung ibang mga nagtatayo ng botika na sabi nang BFAD, hindi sila puwede magtayo ng botika kung wala silang full-time pharmacist na nandoon, walang ginagawa buong araw... Eh, mauubos naman ang kanilang pera sa suweldo sa isang pharmacist.

Kaya sabi ko, Manolet, hindi naman kailangan yung pharmacist ay nandoon buong araw dahil very small scale lamang ito. Kaya dapat may common pharmacist yung ilang mga grupo ng mga botika. Isang supervising pharmacist na lilibut-libot sa ilang botika. Kaya yan ang aking gustong ipaliwa... Yon bang ipaalala sa ating mga tatlong ahensiya na gumawa nitong Memorandum of Agreement. At ito ay makakatulong tayo dahil isang malaking programa nga natin, gusto natin ng mura ang gamot ng taong bayan, lalo na yung gamot na binibili ng mga mahihirap. At madalas binibili nila ganito ang mga sagot sa mga sakit na madalas nagkakasakit ang mga mahihirap sa mga ganun.

Malaki ang aking pag-asa na sa pamamagitan ng inyong samahan gumawa na kayo ng foundation. Magkakaroon nang dagdag na trabaho ang inyong pamayanan. Kasi nga whether you're own, kung jobless kayo noon, di may trabaho na kayo. O kung dalawang kamag-anak ninyo nabigyan ninyo ng trabaho, may dalawang nabigyan ng trabaho. O kaya kung naging small scale kayo, may mga at least sampu. Kasi nais ko na may pagkain sa bawat mesa. Papaano tayo magkakaroon ng pagkain sa bawat mesa? Kailangang magkaroon ng trabaho.

Kaya kayo na nagkaroon na nang pagsasanay, nagkaroon nang konting capital, tulungan nyo ako na magkaroon ng pagkain sa bawat mesa sa inyong mga pamayanan. Kayo ang aking pag-asa na magkaroon ng trabaho sa inyong mga pamayanan.

Kanina marami sa inyo tumanggap ng parangal. Huwag kayong titigil sa pagsisikap. Pagsikapin nyong lumaki pa ang inyong negosyo.

Kung kayo ay micro-entrepreneurs, dapat maging small scale na kayo. At kung kayo ay small scale, sana maging medium scale na kayo sa loob ng dalawang taon. Sa ganung paraan, bagamat maliliit na negosyante ang tawag sa inyo, malaki ang inyong kontribusyon sa pagkalakas ng ating republika.

Congratulations! At maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Mass Oathtaking of New Members of Lakas-CMD Officials Rizal Chapter

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Mass Oathtaking of New Members of Lakas-CMD Officials Rizal Chapter

[Delivered at the E. Rodriguez Gymnasium, Angono, Rizal, November 14, 2003]

Maraming salamat sa anak ng Angono, ang Chairman ng Energy Regulatory Commission, si Manny Sanchez.

Alam po n'yo, bago ko batiin 'yung ibang mga panauhin, 'yung mga nasa entablado, gusto kong ikuwento sa inyo kung papano naging ERC Chairman si Manny Sanchez. Noon hong ako ay naghahanap ng Chairman ng Regulatory Office ng MWSS, 'yung Water Regulatory Office, sabi ng search committee, meron kaming magaling na biodatang nakita, ang ganda-ganda ng kanyang record, galing pa sa Harvard, siya ang nino-nominate namin bilang chairman ng Regulatory Office ng MWSS. Sabi ko, sino 'yon? Sabi nila si Congressman Manny Sanchez. Aba! Sabi ko, si Congressman Manny Sanchez? Kilala ko 'yon! Bagama't bagay nga siya sa Regulatory Office ng MWSS, kailangan ko rin ng Undersecretary of the Press sa ngayon. Gusto ko sa Malacañang siya magtrabaho, hindi doon sa MWSS. Kaya kinuha ko siyang Undersecretary of the Press. Naging Undersecretary Manny Sanchez. Pagkatapos noon, doon naman sa Energy Regulatory Commission si Chairman ay si Fe Barin. Tapos noon, nagkaroon ng... Natapos 'yung termino ng ilang mga members of the monetary board, kaya dahil si chairman ng ERC si Fe Barin ay matagal siya doon sa Central Bank, 'di inappoint ko siya bilang member of the monetary board. Nagkaroon tuloy ng vacancy sa Energy Regulatory Commission, napakamakapangyarihang pwesto. Ang dami-daming nag-aagawan para maappoint doon sa pwestong 'yon. Kaya sabi ko, sa pwestong napakamakapangyarihan at maraming nag-aagawan, naalala ko 'yung sinabi ng search committee, si Manny, isang abogado, tiga-Harvard, bagay na bagay sa regulation, kaya siya ang ginawa kong Chairman ng Energy Regulatory Commission.

Gusto kong batiin siyempre ang Ama ng Angono, si Mayor Gerry Calderon, na matagal nang tumutulong sa akin. Senador pa lang ako, 'di ba? At si mayor ay vice mayor pa. Matagal nang kaibigan ko, kaya ako ay matagal nang kaibigan ng Angono. Gusto kong batiin si Vice Governor Jovita Rodriguez, pinakamataas nating opisyal sa partido lakas sa lalawigan ng Rizal.

Gusto kong batiin 'yung iba't-ibang mga official na narito ngayon. Batiin ko si Vice Mayor Villamayor. 'Yung mga konsehal ng Angono kasama na rito si ABC President Armando Villamayor. Alam n'yo, merong sinasabi ni Mayor Calderon na madalas ako magbisita sa Angono. Kasi artist center ito, nagpupunta ako sa mga museo ninyo, binibisita ko 'yung mga artists ninyo. Bumibili ako ng mga art pero meron yata nagba-black propaganda sa akin. Sinasabi na pumupunta ako rito wala akong iniwanan. Testigo si ABC President Villamayor na lahat ng barangay ng Angono ay na tulongan ko na. Kaya hindi totoong wala akong iniwanan, dinaan ko ang tulong kay ABC President Armando Villamayor. Gusto ko ring batiin si ABC Vice President Francisco Saginsin. At saka si SK Chairman Anover Tiamson. Nandito tayo sa ano, 'di ba, barangay Sto. Niño? Kaya batiin ko ang barangay captain ng Sto. Niño, si Chairman Roberto Miranda. At saka si Mr. Ding Roan. At saka ang ating kilalang artist, si Orviel Quiamson. Saan si Orviel? Siya 'yung parati pinupuntahan ko, okey. Si Atty. Efren Bautista, binabati ko rin. At saka si Judge Rosa Tatad.

Kasama ko rin ngayon, si Secretary Marita Jimenez at meron siyang gustong ipabalita ko sa inyo. Kasi si Mai Jimenez ang tumutulong sa akin sa mga bagay ng Official Development Assistance o 'yung tulong na nanggagaling sa ibang bansa. At alam ko dito sa Angono, isa sa mga daing ninyo ay 'yung baha. 'Yung daing sa baha hindi nasasagot sa sampung milyong piso. Ang kailangan ninyong flood control project ay 'yung talagang kumpleto at komprehensibo. At ayon kay Mai Jimenez, ito ay gumagawa na tayo ng proposal. Ang tawag nitong project na ito ay east of Manggahan Flood Control Project. Ito po ay hindi ten million pesos, ito po ay ten billion pesos po ang halaga nitong proyektong ito. Ito po ay sakop hindi lamang Angono kung hindi na rin Cainta, Pasig, Marikina, Taytay, Antipolo. At dahil po maraming bayan ang sakop, kailangan lahat ng bayan ay mag-endorso sa regional development council. Kaya pwede ba hingiin ko kay Mayor Calderon na ikaw na lang ang kumuha ng endorsement ng mayor ng Cainta, Pasig, Marikina, Taytay, Antipolo, maging sa iyo. Kasi gusto nating habulin na kung maibibigay ito sa Regional Development Council at ma-approve nila, pwedeng ibigay na ito sa Japan government pagpunta ko sa Japan itong darating na Disyembre. Kaya ako na ang bahala sa paperwork.

Anyway po, gusto ko ring batiin ang kpatid ng ating national artist, si Botong Francisco, nandito po ang kanyang kapatid. Nasaan? Nakita ko kanina. Isa sa ating mga senior citizen. Tayo kayo! Alam po n'yo, 'yung mga painting ni Botong Francisco, 'yung mga iskultura ni Botong Francisco, sa bahay ho ng aking tatay, sa aming entrance and exit, nandoon po 'yung kanyang iskultura na pinagawa ng aking tatay sa kanya tungkol po sa ating land reform, sa ating independence day. At doon naman sa malaca,,ang, malalaking tatlong painting ni Botong Francisco, linagay ko rin sa pintuan ng Malacañang, labas ng aking kuwarto para araw-araw bago ako lumabas ng Malacañang, tinitingnan ko si Botong Francisco. Dahil ipinagmamalaki natin ang mga artists na nangagaling dit o.

At noong ako ay senador — alam ito ni Mayor Calderon dahil vice mayor siya noon — bahagi sa aking cdf bilang senador ay binigay ko po upang magtayo ng music hall para matuloy 'yung musika ni Lucio San Pedro. Ngayon, dalawa ang hiniling ni Mayor Calderon sa akin tungkol sa inyong kultura. Una, sana magtayo ng artists center, 'yung gallery and museum for artists of Angono. Sabi ko, tutal sinimulan ko na 'yung music hall, sige, magdadagdag ako ng 2 million pesos doon, para 'yon na ay ma-expand mo, ma-improve mo, Gerry at maging hindi lang music hall kung hindi gallery and museum for Angono.

At meron din akong hihingiin kay manny sanchez, dahil sa ibabaw ng siya ay abogado at chairman ng ERC, dahil abogado naman siya, pwede ba gumawa nang kunting trabahong hindi kinalaman sa iyung trabaho sa ERC? Manny, tulungan mo akong gumawa ng draft declaration para madeklara ko ang Angono bilang artist capital of the Philippines.

Ako ay nagpapasalamat sa mainit na pagbati sa lahat ng mga narito ngayon, lalo na 'yung mga bagong kasapi ng partido ng ating administrasyon, ang Lakas-CMD. Ito ay patunay ng inyong pagsang-ayon at pagtaguyod sa mga layuning panlipunan ng ating gobyerno. Ngayon, dahil kayo ay kasapi ng ating partido gusto kong iulat sa inyo na ang nais ng ating partido at aking administrasyon ay reporma at rekonsilyasyon. Itong ating mensahe ng rekonsilyasyon, kung mamarapatin po, ipapahayag ko hindi lamang sa inyo kung hindi na rin sa buong bansa dahil may telebisyon tayong nagko-cover nitong ating pangyayari.

The country has suffered enough from extreme divisiveness. I have called for reconciliation and healing as a moral duty and I will persist even if repudiated along the way. I am seeking light in the minds of our leaders so that we can breach the cynicism and hatred that is rending the nation and depriving the people of peace of mind and economic opportunity.

I am making this offer before things become worse for our people. We must not leave the Filipino people trapped in the middle of political clashes. Let us not forget, the people are sovereign and they expect more statesmanship and solidarity from their leaders.

Marami sa ating mga pag-uugali at pananaw bilang lipunan ay kailangan baguhin o kaya mabalik sa mga dating magagandang asal kung magkakaroon tayo nang reporma at rekonsilyasyon sa pagbabago o pagbabalik sa loob, sa tanaw sa mga dating magagandang asal, malaking kinalaman ang kultura. At sa kultura, malaking kinalaman ang Angono dahil ang Angono ang tahanan ng pinakamaraming artists sa ating bansa. Kaya kung gagawin nating art center of the Philippines, artist capital of the Philippines ang Angono, hindi lamang para sa inyong karangalan ito, ito ay para sa kinabubuti na rin ng diwa at kaluluwa ng bansang Pilipinas.

Kaya, mga mamamayan ng Angono, mga kababayan ni Gerry Calderon, mga kababayan ni Manny Sanchez, salamat sa mga artists na nilikha ninyo, salamat sa diwa na sana madala n'yo sa kaluluwa ng buong Pilipinas.

Mabuhay ang mga artists ng Angono!

Mabuhay ang diwa! At sana nga buong pilipinas maging kasing-kaluluwa ng Angono.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Jesus Saves Crusade Prayer Rally

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During during the Jesus Saves Crusade Prayer Rally

[Delivered at the Quirino Grandstand, Luneta Park, Manila, November 14, 2003]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat kay Dr. Benny Abante, aking kaibigan, matagal na kaming nagdadasal na magkasama. At ako ay nagpapasalamat sa panginoon na narito rin ang bayani na malaking nagawa para maresolba yung crisis ng impeachment, si Speaker Joe de Venecia.

I thank Evangelist David Janney because what he talked about tonight, the story he talked about tonight, by providence — because there's no coincidence in God — by providence he told the story of Zaccheus. And that is what my Cabinet and I have been reflecting on for three days now, the story of Zaccheus. Because the story of Zaccheus is the story of reconciliation. At yan ang ating kailangan para maligtas tayo at tayo ay siguradong nasa piling ng ating panginoon.

Ako ay nagpapasalamat na kayo ay narito at hindi umaalis, ang dami-dami ninyo kahit na umuulan. Kanina — kasi yung ulan umaabot din dito eh, hanggang sa akin — kanina, iurong sana nung ilang mga technicians itong aking entablado. Sabi ko, huwag, kasi kung nababasa ang ating mga kapatid, ako rin dapat ay mabasa.

Sa katotohanan, kanina pa naman ako talagang nababasa dahil nanggaling ako sa probinsiya, sa Rizal. At doon ay naglalakad ako at umuulan. Kasi tuwing may pagkakataon na magkaroon ng sakripisyo, ang aking ipinapanalangin ay sinasabi ko, salamat Jesus dahil isinasama mo ako sa inyong sakripisyo sa krus. at sa lahat, tuwing tayo ay nagkakaroon nang sakripisyo kagaya ng pinapabayaan nating tayo ay mabasa sa ulan, nababawasan yung kahirapan ng panginoong hesus doon sa kanyang krus. We share in the sufferings of Jesus Christ by making sacrifice and prayer.

Ngayong gabi tayo ay nagdadasal, tayo rin ay nagsasakripisyo. Ang sakripisyo natin ay pinapayagan natin na ang sarili nating katawan ay mabasa sa ulan na nanggagaling sa langit. Ang ating sakripisyo ay importante. Doon sa bibliya, parating hinihingi ng panginoon ang ating sakripisyo para tayo'y maligtas. Si Zaccheus na tinawag ni Jesus, nung tinawag ni Jesus siya ay nagreconcile, si Zaccheus din ay nagsakripisyo. Kung anuman daw yung ninakaw niya ay ibabalik niya times four sa mga ninakawan niya. At kahit na yung hindi niya ninakaw na yaman niya, kalahati ay ibinigay niya sa mahihirap. Yon ang kanyang sakripisyo.

Tayo, ang sakripisyo natin ay itong ulan. Naalaala ko, tinuturo sa akin ito noong ako ay nag-aaral sa kumbento, ang tawag dito ay mortification. Kasi dapat tayo ay magkaroon nang mortification para ang ating dasal ay mapuri at buo at pag tayo ay nagmo-mortification, pwede tayong humingi ng petisyon sa Panginoon. Ang tanong ko, ano ang hinihingi ko ngayong gabi at sana kayo rin ay kasama ko na humingi sa Panginoon bilang kanyang binabalik sa atin, sa ating mortification, sana iligtas ang sambayanang Pilipino, Jesus save the Filipino people. Jesus save the Filipino people from sin and evil. Jesus save the Filipino people from those who want to destroy our democracy. Jesus save the Filipino people from those who do not want reconciliation.

Tinawag ni Jesus si Zaccheus. Si Zaccheus ay isang maraming sala. Kaya sinabi noong mga pharisee, yung Jesus na yan bakit nagbabait-bait, tingnan mo naman yung mga kasama niya mga makasalanan. yon ang dapat ipagdasal natin, na itong mga pharisee sa ating kapaligiran ay malinawan ang kanilang diwa at makita na reconciliation ang gusto ng Panginoon para sa akin.

Reconciliation ay kinakailangan para magawa natin ang reporma na kailangan ng ating bansa para masugpo natin ang kahirapan. Dahil kung parati na lang watak-watak ang ating lipunan, wala na akong gagawin bilang pangulo kung hindi sanggahin yung mga sinisikap na sirain ang ating lipunan. Papano natin magagawa yung batayang reporma para ating mahihirap na minamahal ng panginoon.

Kaya mga kapatid, maraming salamat na tayo ay magkasama. Maraming salamat at tayo ay magkasama sa ating mortification. Magkasama tayo sa ating dasal. Jesus save the Filipino people through our sacrifice in union with the sacrifice of Jesus on the cross.

Amen.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Distribution of Certificates of Lot Awards to Qualified Beneficiaries

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Distribution of Certificates of Lot Awards to Qualified Beneficiaries

[Delivered at the Francisco Felix Sports Center, Brgy. San Juan Cainta, Rizal, November 14, 2003]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat, Governor Nini Ynares. At siya rin po ang Chairman ng Lake Laguna Development Authority.

Una sa lahat, doon sa ating binuksan na magandang fountain sa inyong renovation. Binabati ko rin si dating Vice Governor Ben Felix. At saka si Vice Mayor Julio Narag. At yung ibang mga punong bayan na narito, si Mayor De Los Santos ng Jala-Jala, si Mayor Bernardo ng Morong, at saka si Mayor Zapanta ng Taytay. Binabati ko yung ibat-ibang mga members ng Sanggunian, yung ibat-ibang mga barangay captain na narito. At nandito na pala si Mike Defensor, yung chairman ng HUDCC, at yung mga officials ng mga ahensya sa ilalim ng HUDCC. Binabati ko yung mga makikinabang sa pagdistribute ng Certificate of Llot Allotment. At binabati ko yung pinanggalingan ng lupang madi-distribute ngayon, si Ginoong at Ginang Boboy Virata.

Sa mga makakatanggap ng papeles ng inyong lupa, congratulations sa mga bagong may-ari ng lupa. Hindi na kayo squatters sa sariling bayan. Sana makatulong ito na maunawaan ninyo na sa dami ng mga problemang hinaharap ng ating bansa, hindi kayo nakalilimutan ng inyong pangulo at hindi kailanman mangyayari makalilimutan kayo ng inyong lingkod. Dahil sa inyong pagtutulungan, unti-unti nang nagiging maayos ang inyong pamumuhay. Masisipag ang mga opisyal ng inyong mga asosasyon, kaya congratulations sa mga opisyal. Saan kayo? Saan kayo? Gayundin, mga pinuno ng inyong pamahalaan — probinsiyal at lokal — sa pangunguna ni Governor Nini Ynares at Mayor Nicanor Felix.

Kung bawat Pilipino ay kasing-sipag at nagtutulungan tulad ninyo at hindi panggugulo ang inaatupag, mas bibilis pa ang pagsulong ng ating bansa. Kaya ang cainta napakamaunlad na lugar. Ito ay napaka-urban na talaga itong lugar na ito. Lungsod na nga itong lugar na ito sa ekonomiya. At dapat makita ito ng buong Pilipinas bilang huwaran na kapag kaunlaran ang iniisip at hindi kaguluhan sumusulong ang ekonomiya ng isang bayan. Kaya mula sa maunlad at mapayapang bayan ng Cainta, magbibigay ako ngayon ng mensahe sa ating taong bayang Pilipino.

There is a pattern of renewed destabilization to erode the looming electoral process and I call upon the people to stand for democracy. We shall respect the right of protesters to express their political views and grievances, but we would like to draw the line on the side of civility, lawful conduct and public order.

I'm calling for reconciliation but I must stand in the way of anarchy. I extend my hand to my detractors but I cannot allow them to flaunt the law. I ask the leaders of protest actions to police their own ranks and instill discipline among their followers. The police and the military are holding maximum tolerance but they are ready to enforce the full might of the law when required by any situation.

Kaya mga kaibigan, taga-Rizal, taga-Metro Manila, ang aking panawagan naman sa inyo, lalo na yung mga maralita, huwag kayong basta padadala sa mga maling balita o paghimok ng mga grupong gustong siraan at ibagsak ang gobyerno. Dahil lubos na pinangangalagaan ng pamahalaan ang dignidad ng bawat Pilipino. Kaya, ganun na lamang ang aking pagsisikap na maibigay sa inyo ang inyong mga pangangailangan katulad nang maayos at disenteng lupang tinitirikan.

Ang pagkaloob ng mga titulong kagaya ng ginagawa natin ngayon ay sinimulaan ko mula pa noong ako ay unang umupo bilang pangulo. At nalampasan na natin ang target na bibigyang katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan. Dahil gumawa tayo ng mga limampo at isang proklamasyon na nagdeklara sa mga lupang pag-aari ng gobyerno na maaring bilhin ng mga nakatira doon. Gayundin ng community mortgage program sa mga lupang meron nang may-ari. Kaya nagpapasalamat ako kay ginoong boboy virata, na isang malaking negosyante, dahil siya ay nagsusuporta sa ating programa.

Gaya nang sabi ko, mahigit limampung proklamasyon na ang ating ginawa. At halos tatlong daang libong pamilya na ng ating mga maralitang taga-lungsod ay nakinabang kasama na nga ang ating mga kapatid dito sa San Juan, sa Cainta, sa Rizal.

Ang aking panawagan, basta tayo ay magkaisa. At gusto kong ipaalala sa inyo at tiyakin sa inyo ang inyong kapakanan ay laging nasa aking isipan, may gulo man o wala.

Kaya mga kaibigan sa Cainta, maraming salamat dito sa pagkakataon. Gusto ko lang magpasalamat sa inyong lahat dahil parati kayong nagsusuporta sa akin. Magtulungan tayo upang umunlad ang Pilipinas, ang Rizal, ang Cainta.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Mass Oathtaking of new members of Lakas-CMD Officials Rizal Chapter, November 14, 2003 Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa malawakang panunumpa ng mga bagong miyembro ng opisyaes ng Lakas-CMD Rizal Chapter

[Ipinahayag sa E. Rodriguez Gymnasium, Angono, Rizal, ika 14 ng Nobyembre, 2003]

Maraming salamat sa anak ng Angono, ang Chairman ng Energy Regulatory Commission, si Manny Sanchez.

Alam n'yo, merong sinasabi ni Mayor Calderon na madalas ako magbisita sa Angono. Kasi artist center ito, nagpupunta ako sa mga museo ninyo, binibisita ko 'yung mga artists ninyo. Bumibili ako ng mga art pero meron yata nagba-black propaganda sa akin. Sinasabi na pumupunta ako rito wala akong iniwanan. Testigo si ABC President Villamayor na lahat ng barangay ng Angono ay na tulongan ko na. Kaya hindi totoong wala akong iniwanan, dinaan ko ang tulong kay ABC President Armando Villamayor. Gusto ko ring batiin si ABC Vice President Francisco Saginsin. At saka si SK Chairman Anover Tiamson. Nandito tayo sa ano, 'di ba, barangay Sto. Niño? Kaya batiin ko ang barangay captain ng Sto. Niño, si Chairman Roberto Miranda. At saka si Mr. Ding Roan. At saka ang ating kilalang artist, si Orviel Quiamson. Saan si Orviel? Siya 'yung parati pinupuntahan ko, okey. Si Atty. Efren Bautista, binabati ko rin. At saka si Judge Rosa Tatad.

Kasama ko rin ngayon, si Secretary Marita Jimenez at meron siyang gustong ipabalita ko sa inyo. Kasi si Mai Jjimenez ang tumutulong sa akin sa mga bagay ng Official Development Assistance o 'yung tulong na nanggagaling sa ibang bansa. At alam ko dito sa Angono, isa sa mga daing ninyo ay 'yung baha. 'Yung daing sa baha hindi nasasagot sa sampung milyong piso. Ang kailangan ninyong flood control project ay 'yung talagang kumpleto at komprehensibo. At ayon kay Mai Jimenez, ito ay gumagawa na tayo ng proposal. Ang tawag nitong project na ito ay east of Manggahan Flood Control Project. Ito po ay hindi ten million pesos, ito po ay ten billion pesos po ang halaga nitong proyektong ito. Ito po ay sakop hindi lamang Angono kung hindi na rin Cainta, Pasig, Marikina, Taytay, Antipolo. At dahil po maraming bayan ang sakop, kailangan lahat ng bayan ay mag-endorso sa regional development council. Kaya pwede ba hingiin ko kay Mayor Calderon na ikaw na lang ang kumuha ng endorsement ng mayor ng Cainta, Pasig, Marikina, Taytay, Antipolo, maging sa iyo. Kasi gusto nating habulin na kung maibibigay ito sa Regional Development Council at ma-approve nila, pwedeng ibigay na ito sa Japan government pagpunta ko sa Japan itong darating na Disyembre. Kaya ako na ang bahala sa paperwork.

Anyway po, gusto ko ring batiin ang kpatid ng ating national artist, si Botong Francisco, nandito po ang kanyang kapatid. Nasaan? Nakita ko kanina. Isa sa ating mga senior citizen. Tayo kayo! Alam po n'yo, 'yung mga painting ni Botong Francisco, 'yung mga iskultura ni Botong Francisco, sa bahay ho ng aking tatay, sa aming entrance and exit, nandoon po 'yung kanyang iskultura na pinagawa ng aking tatay sa kanya tungkol po sa ating land reform, sa ating independence day. At doon naman sa malaca,ang, malalaking tatlong painting ni Botong Francisco, linagay ko rin sa pintuan ng Malacañang, labas ng aking kuwarto para araw-araw bago ako lumabas ng Malacañang, tinitingnan ko si Botong Francisco. Dahil ipinagmamalaki natin ang mga artists na nanggagaling dito.

At noong ako ay senador — alam ito ni Mayor Calderon dahil vice mayor siya noon — bahagi sa aking cdf bilang senador ay binigay ko po upang magtayo ng music hall para matuloy 'yung musika ni Lucio San Pedro. Ngayon, dalawa ang hiniling ni Mayor Calderon sa akin tungkol sa inyong kultura. Una, sana magtayo ng artists center, 'yung gallery and museum for artists of Angono. Sabi ko, tatal sinimulan ko na 'yung music hall, sige, magdadagdag ako ng 2 million pesos doon, para 'yon na ay ma-expand mo, ma-improve mo, Gerry at maging hindi lang music hall kung hindi gallery and museum for Angono.

At meron din akong hihingiin kay manny sanchez, dahil sa ibabaw ng siya ay abogado at chairman ng ERC, dahil abogado naman siya, pwede ba gumawa nang kunting trabahong hindi kinalaman sa iyung trabaho sa ERC? Manny, tulungan mo akong gumawa ng draft declaration para madeklara ko ang Angono bilang artist capital of the Philippines.

Ako ay nagpapasalamat sa mainit na pagbati sa lahat ng mga narito ngayon, lalo na 'yung mga bagong kasapi ng partido ng ating administrasyon, ang Lakas-CMD. Ito ay patunay ng inyong pagsang-ayon at pagtaguyod sa mga layuning panlipunan ng ating gobyerno. Ngayon, dahil kayo ay kasapi ng ating partido gusto kong iulat sa inyo na ang nais ng ating partido at aking administrasyon ay reporma at rekonsilyasyon. Itong ating mensahe ng rekonsilyasyon, kung mamarapatin po, ipapahayag ko hindi lamang sa inyo kung hindi na rin sa buong bansa dahil may telebisyon tayong nagko-cover nitong ating pangyayari.

The country has suffered enough from extreme divisiveness. I have called for reconciliation and healing as a moral duty and I will persist even if repudiated along the way. I am seeking light in the minds of our leaders so that we can breach the cynicism and hatred that is rending the nation and depriving the people of peace of mind and economic opportunity.

I am making this offer before things become worse for our people. We must not leave the Filipino people trapped in the middle of political clashes. Let us not forget, the people are sovereign and they expect more statesmanship and solidarity from their leaders.

Marami sa ating mga pag-uugali at pananaw bilang lipunan ay kailangan baguhin o kaya mabalik sa mga dating magagandang asal kung magkakaroon tayo nang reporma at rekonsilyasyon sa pagbabago o pagbabalik sa loob, sa tanaw sa mga dating magagandang asal, malaking kinalaman ang kultura. At sa kultura, malaking kinalaman ang Angono dahil ang Angono ang tahanan ng pinakamaraming artists sa ating bansa. Kaya kung gagawin nating art center of the Philippines, artist capital of the Philippines ang Angono, hindi lamang para sa inyong karangalan ito, ito ay para sa kinabubuti na rin ng diwa at kaluluwa ng bansang Pilipinas.

Kaya, mga mamamayan ng Angono, mga kababayan ni Gerry Calderon, mga kababayan ni Manny Sanchez, salamat sa mga artists na nilikha ninyo, salamat sa diwa na sana madala n'yo sa kaluluwa ng buong Pilipinas.

Mabuhay ang mga artists ng Angono!

Mabuhay ang diwa! At sana nga buong pilipinas maging kasing-kaluluwa ng Angono.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Farmers' Forum and Awarding of Certificates of Land Ownership to Farmer Beneficiaries

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Farmers' Forum and Awarding of Certificates of Land Ownership to Farmer Beneficiaries

[Delivered at the San Luis Sports complex Sta. Cruz, Laguna, November 17, 2003]

Maraming salamat at happy birthday sa ating Clean and Green Governor Ningning Lazaro

Tama yung sabi ni Ningning, anak siya ng mga magsasaka. Kuwento nga ni Obet Pagdanganan na si ningning ang mga magulang niya ay taga-Calumpit, mga kababayan ni Obet, na lumipat sa Laguna at yon na nga naging gobernador ng probinsya ng Laguna.

Batiin ko yung nag-kuwento sa akin ng kasaysayan ng buhay ni Ningning, ang kanyang kababayan sa kanyang mga magulang, si Secretary Obet Pagdanganan ng land reform. Si Obet din po ang nag-organize nitong ating seminar at siya rin po yung nag-ayos para kayo, mga magsasaka ay hindi na squatter sa sariling sakahan, congratulations po sa inyo!

Kasama ko rin ngayon ang Secretary of Housing naman, si Michael Defensor. Tamang-tamang kasama ko si Obet at saka si Mike, kasi ang Laguna Industrial Center sa Calabarzon doon sa bandang Calamba, doon kay Mayor Lajara at dito naman ay agricultural center. Kaya ang Laguna ay huwaran ng ating urban land reform na ginagawa ni Mike Defensor at agricultural land reform na ginagawa ni Obet Pagdanganan.

Batiin ko ang... Hindi naman dahil sa matanda siya kasi maganda nga at bata pa, pero para bang tinuturing nang nanay ng Congress, si First Lady ng Congress Gina de Venecia. Kasi babatiin ko siya bago ko batiin yung kanyang mga anak na tiga-Laguna. Yung dalawang congressmen na narito: sa 3rd district si Dan Bueser at saka dito dating mayor ng Sta. Cruz, si Mayor San Luis. Ay! Congressman San Luis na nga ngayon, noong araw mayor ngayon congressman. at siyempre pinag-uusapan natin ang mayor ng Sta. Cruz, salamat sa ating host mayor sa kanyang napakagandang welcome, si Mayor Panganiban.

Nabanggit na ni Governor Lazaro ang ating iba't-ibang mga mayor na narito. Hindi ko na babanggitin ang pangalan nilang lahat. Batiin ko na lamang sila, lahat-lahat ngunit espesyal na bati sa presidente ng Mayors' League, si Mayor Arcillas bilang pakikiramay, dahil dalawang oras lang ang nakaraan yumao yung kanyang mahal na ina. Nakita naman natin yung kanyang sense of duty, narito pa rin si Mayor Arcillas kasama natin.

Batiin ko rin yung nag-aalaga ng ating mga punong bayan at saka punong lungsod. Dalawa lamang ang lungsod nga ng laguna, yung Calamba binanggit ko na si Mayor Lajara at saka San Pablo, banggitin ko rin si Mayor Boy Aquino. Ang kanilang nag-aalaga naman ay si Undersecretary Agnes Devanadera ng DILG. At yung members of the board ng Laguna under the presiding officership of Vice Governor Dan Fernandez. Batiin ko lahat ng mga barangay captain sa pamumuno ni ABC President Board Member Nomel Buenviaje.

Mga kaibigan, una sa lahat, ulit, happy birthday kay Ningning Lazaro! Pangalawa, ulit, congratulations sa mga bagong may-ari ng lupang sakahan! Hindi na kayo squatter sa sariling lupang sakahan. Yung mga binigay natin ngayon, titulong-titulo na po yon, Transfer Certificate of Title (TCT). At nabigay din natin yung ilang tulong doon sa barangay ng Los Baños at saka, saan pa yung isa? Doon sa barangay ng Siniloan. At yung mga yon, yung

Certificate of Land Ownership at yung tsekeng pinamahagi natin sa Siniloan at saka doon sa Los Baños, sa isang barangay ni Mayor Cesar Perez, ay kasama na ang regalo natin kay governor Ningning Lazaro sa kanyang birthday.

Gusto ko ring batiin yung mga kasama ni obet pagdanganan sa DAR dahil kayo ang gumawa nitong matagumpay na seminar-workshop. Binabati ko yung mga farmer-leaders, mga cooperative chairmen, mga barangay officials. At yon na nga dahil ang Laguna ay malaking probinsiya, malaking bahagi ng lungsod ay kanayunan kaya meron tayong land reform. At doon naman sa ibang lugar nagbibigay naman tayo ng lot awards para sa mga maralitang taga-lungsod. Kaya yon dalawang klase ng land reform ang nakikita natin sa Laguna: urban land reform at rural land reform. Kaya ibig sabihin noon kung ano ang takbo ng reporma sa Laguna, ganun din ang takbo ng reporma sa buong Pilipinas.

Sa seminar ninyo, marami kayong resolusyon na nagawa — mga gagawin ng mga magsasaka at mga kailangan sa pamahalaang nasyonal. At nakita ko sa inyong listahan ay meron kayong kailangang marketing assistance. Kaya gusto kong sabihin sa inyo, bahagi rin ng ating regalo kay Governor Lazaro, meron tayong five million pesos para sa bagsakan center dito sa Laguna.

Ang sarap-sarap dito sa Laguna, kahit na maraming gustong manggulo doon sa kamaynilaan, hindi ko tuloy makalimutan kayo. Ang sarap-sarap pumunta rito lalo na't birthday ni governor. Sa gymnasium na ito, ningning, di na natin mabibilang ilang beses tayo mag-kasama dito, di ba? Tuloy-tuloy ang ating trabaho dito sa Laguna .

Ang hinihingi ko naman sa inyo, mga kaibigan ng Laguna, sana basta huwag kayong padadala sa mga maling balita o paghimok ng mga grupong gustong siraan at ibagsak ang gobyerno.

Kung bawa't Pilipino sana ay kasing-sipag, clean and green province, clean ang green capital town, land reform, industrialization, kung sana lahat ng Pilipino ay nagtutulungan at ang sipag at ang daming nagagawa kagaya ng laguna kaysa sa nanggugulo, siguradong mas mabilis sana ang pagsulong ng ating bansa.

Itong ginagawa natin ngayon, yung pamimigay ng biyaya sa mahihirap ng laguna, yung reporma sa lupa, yung mga proyekto para sa social reform para sa ating mga maliliit na barangay o bayan, yung bagsakang tulong dahil yon ang pinagkasundong kailangang-kailangan ng magsasaka dito, ito ay isang paraan tungo sa hangad kong pagkakaisa at rekonsilyasyon sa ating bansa. At yon ang isang gustong-gusto kong nagawa natin dito. Kasi sabi nila ang Laguna raw ay bahagi ng Edsa Tres. Ayun! Si Mayor Ejercito nandito pa nga. Pero tingnan mo, nandito si Mayor Ejercito kahit na ako ang guest of honor. Kaya itong ginagawa natin sa laguna ay sigasig ng rekonsilyasyon ng Edsa Dos at Edsa Tres. Huwaran din ang Laguna sa rekonsilyasyon.

At dahil yan ang nakikita natin dito mga simbolo ng Edsa Dos, ng Eedsa Tres, dito napakagandang panahon at pagkakataon na maipahayag ko ulit na gusto kong mahilom ang mga sugat ng ating pagkawatak-watak. Marami rito ay dulot ng malaking agwat sa pamumuhay ng ating mayayaman at mahihirap kaya nagkakaroon ng pagkawatak-watak. Naririnig ko nga nung araw yung mga diskurso sa Edsa Tres, sinasabi nila, iyan mga mayayaman, yan ang kumakampi kay Gloria. Mga mahihirap nandito. talagang ang agwat sa mahihirap at mayayaman ay pinanggagalingan ng maraming pagwawatak-watak. Yon din ang sinasabi ng mga komunista, yon din ang sinasabi ng mga MILF. Kaya gusto natin bahagi ng paghilom ay labanan natin ang ating kapwang kalaban at yon ay ang kahirapan at hindi ang isa't-isa.

Kaya ito rin ang dahilan kung bakit patuloy tayong nagsisikap na magbigay ng pagkain sa bawa't mesa. At ako ay nagpapasalamat sa laguna dahil sa kabila ng marami na kayong industriya doon sa bandang 1st and 2nd district ay dito naman ay gumagawa pa rin kayo, nagtatanim pa rin kayo ng pagkain sa ganun ang buong kamaynilaan at luzon ay nagkakaroon ng pagkain sa bawat mesa. Salamat sa mga taga-Laguna.

At yung ating ginagawa ngayon, halimbawa, kayo magsasaka, may-ari na ng inyong sariling lupa, ito ay dahil lubos na binibigyan nang halaga ng pamahalaan ang dignidad ng bawa't Pilipino, kaya ganun na lamang ang ating pagsisikap na maibigay sa inyo ang inyong mga pangangailangan, tulad ng maayos at disienteng pag-aari, sa ganun kayo na ang sariling may-ari ng inyong lupa, kayo na ang panginoon ng inyong lupa.

Gaya nang sabi ni Obet, ako yung anak ng ama ng reporma sa lupa. kaya unang upo ko pa bilang pangulo gusto ko na talagang masugpo ang kahirapan at matapos na ang reporma sa lupa. Noong ako'y umupo ang unang nakita natin na statistics na hindi pa namamahaging lupa sa reporma sa lupa ay one million hectares. Kaya kung gusto nating masugpo ang kahirapan sa loob ng sampung taon, dapat at least 100,000 hectares ang napapamahagi natin. Ngunit ang masasabi natin, salamat kay Obet sa kumbinasyon ng land to the tiller at saka yung leasehold, lampas na lampas na tayo sa ating mga target para sa reporma sa lupa. Congratulations, Obet!

Kaya kailangan natin reporma, reporma sa lupa, maging sa sakahan, maging sa maralitang taga-lungsod. Ngunit, kailangan din natin ang pagkakaisa.

Kaya itong araw na ito, sa birthday ni Governor Lazaro, ito ang aking panawagan sa inyong lahat — nagkakasama tayo sa kaunlaran ng Laguna na malaking pinanggagalingan ng kaunlaran ng buong Pilipinas. Sana tayo rin sa Laguna manguna sa rekonsilyasyon, sa pagkakaisa dahil doon makikita natin kung malalampasan natin ang mga target ng land reform na binibigyang katiyakan sa lupang sinasaka. Sana maabot din natin ang layunin ng rekonsilyasyon at pagkakaisa ng Laguna at ng buong Pilipinas.

Kaya ating mga kababayan, magkaisa na tayo, magsama-sama tayo. Unity ang kailangan ng ating bansa. Yan ang aking birthday wish para kay ningning, sana yan din ang kanyang panalangin para sa ating bansa.

Maraming salamat at happy birthday once again, Governor Lazaro.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Launching Ceremony of the “Sagip Kabataan sa Droga” (SAKADA)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Launching Ceremony of the “Sagip Kabataan sa Droga” (SAKADA)

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, November 17, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Dodi Limcaoco.

Binabati ko rin ‘yung aking pinakabatang Cabinet member, si Secretary Mike Defensor. Saan na siya, umalis na? Ayun! Sumama na sa ating mga... Binabati ko rin ‘yung ating kinatawan ng kabataan dito, si Mark Castroles, National Youth Commissioner. At saka ‘yung ating... ‘Yung ating lumalaban hindi lamang sa droga kung hind na rin doon sa mga pirated discs para ipagtanggol ang ating mga artist ng Pilipinas, si Bong Revilla.

Nagpapasalamat ako kay Assistant Secretary Rudy Caisip sa kanyang presentation. At si Undersecretary Efren Fernandez, siya ang namamahala ng Dangerous Drugs Board at siya ang kasama natin sa iba’t-ibang mga activities para labanan ang droga.

Thank you for your songs and... Well, I want to mention all of the stars who are here today pero kung magsisimula ako hindi ko matatapos. Salamat na lang kay Vic Del Rosario dahil ikaw ang nag-imbata sa kanila, sa marami sa kanila ngayon. At sa inyong lahat, ang masasabi ko na lamang — mabuhay ang mga batang artista! Mabuhay ang mga artistang lumalaban sa droga! Salamat sa inyong lahat.

Nanggaling lamang ako ngayon sa Sangley Point kasi doon ay nagkaroon ng graduation ‘yung mga nag-aral sa ilalim ng American Drug Enforcement Agency kung papano labanan ang droga sa ating mga dagat. Dahil nakita naman ninyo kay Assistant Secretary Caisip na marami dito sa ating shabu ay imported, galing sa ibang dagat, lalo na ngayon na ang dami na nating pabrika na naisara in the last three months. At noong nandoon ako ay tumawag din ako kay Efren Fernandez — nandito siya kasama n’yo noon — sabi ko, “Efren, umpisahan mo na ‘yung Drug Enforcement Academy. Para sa ganun, magkakaroon na tayo ng mga bagong generation na rin ng mga lumalaban sa droga like the young blood of the show business industry who are here today.”

Kaya ako’y nasisiyahan, labis ang aking kagalakan na nagtitipon-tipon tayo ngayon para palakasin ang ating pagkakaisa laban sa iligal na droga.

Bago ako umupo sa pagkapangulo, ang hirap ng batas sa iligal na droga. Kasi bago ka makulong, kailangan muna dalawang daang gramo ng shabu ang mahuli sa inyo. Isa doon sa nagko-complain sa akin nga ‘yung tatay ni Bong, si Don Ramon Revilla. Kaya dahil doon kailangan 200 grams of shabu. Eh merong mga isang libo at limang daang nahuli na “bigtime pushers” pero dalawa lamang sa kanila ang nakulong. Kasi ‘yung iba nakapagpiyansa. Kasi sino ba naman ang nagdadala ng 200 grams sa kanyang katawan. Karamihan nagdadala nang mas mababa keysa sa dalawang daang gramo.

Kaya’t noong ako ay naging pangulo, naalala ko nga ‘yung complaint ni Don Ramon noong kami ay magkasamang senador. Kaya noong ako ay naging pangulo, ipinababa ko ang dalawang daang gramo at ginawang sampung gramo na lamang ng shabu. Kaya ngayon sa ganung kantidad, huli ka na habangbuhay.

Itong laban sa droga ay nananatiling pangunahing prayoridad ng aking administrasyon. Kasi karamihan ng krimen ay may kinalaman ang droga. Kaya kung mapipigil mo ang droga, maraming nakawan ang mapipigil mo rin. Kung mapipigil mo ang droga, maraming rape ay mapipigil mo rin. Kung mapipigil mo ang droga ay maraming patayan ay mapipigil mo rin.

At kapag nahaharap ko ang mga bata tulad sa inyo, tulad 'yung mga batang menos ang kanilang kapalaran sa inyo ay naaalala ko tuloy 'yung aking apo na si Mikaela. Ayoko naman na pag siya ay naging teenager na ay marami pa ring droga.

At kung gaano ko kamahal ang aking apo, palagay ko ganun din kamahal ng mga magulang ang kanilang mga anak. At lahat sila ay kontra sa ilegal na droga. Kaya kanina sinabi ko, mabuhay ang artistang bata, mga kabataan. Mabuhay 'yung artistang lumalaban sa droga. Dapat mabuhay din ang mga magulang dahil sila rin ay laban sa droga. At sigurado ako na 'yung mga magulang ay nakikiisa sa hangaring masugpo ang banta ng droga para maayos ang ating pamumuhay.

At ako rin ay isang ina. Isang anak ko nga ay artista rin eh. At alam ko ang pagdalamhati ng isang magulang na naliligaw ang anak. At nakikita ko yung maraming magulang, 'yung kanilang damdamin kapag nawawala ang kinabukasan ng kanilang anak.

Kaya ang ating mensahe, tayong lahat ay sana sabihin natin sa kabataan na huwag na huwag silang padadala sa tukso ng bawal na gamot. At inaasahan ko na kayong mga artista ay mahihimok n'yo 'yung mga mag-aaral, mga bata, mga movie fans na huwag padadala sa tuksong ito. At maikuwento sa kanila at magbigay ng babala na lagi silang dapat maingat, na huwag na lamang basta tatanggap ng kahit na ano, tulad ng kendi, pagkain o pera sa mga taong hindi nila kilala.

At sabihin sa mga kabataan na kung meron silang kaklase o kaibigang masama ang ugali, biglang naging masama ang ugali, o natututong magnakaw o mangupit, o hindi na nag-aayos sa sarili, o parating namumungay ang mata o parang nanghihina, o sumasama sa mga kaduda-dudang tao ay sana bigyan n'yo sila ng advice na ipagbigay-alam sa kanilang mga guro, magulang, awtoridad.

Dahil alam naman ninyo, ang mga gumagamit ng droga ay madalas tinatamad, walang tiwala sa sarili, mabilis mainip, walang interes sa pag-aral, walang interes sa trabaho, mahilig magsisi sa iba, pumipili ng grupo. Eh, itong klaseng buhay ay hindi dapat tularan. At kayo ang makakasabi sa mga kabataan.

Hangga't may droga sa ating pamayanan ay hindi pa rin ligtas ang ating mga kabataan. Hangga't may nagbebeenta ng ilegal na droga ay hindi pa rin ligtas ang mga pamilya.

Kaya tayo lahat may responsibilidad. Basta may impluwensiya tayo, meron tayong responsibilidad. Mga artista may responsibilidad. Hindi natin dapat payagang sirain ng droga ang buhay ng ating mga kababayan, lalung-lalo na ang mga kabataan.

We're at war with illegal drugs. And in this war, we need the collective efforts of families, communities, schools and various sectors of our society, including the media and the showbiz industry. Gaya nang sabi ni kuya germs, walang iwanan dito sa laban kontra sa droga.

Napagsabihan ko na 'yung mga militar, 'yung mga pulis, 'yung mga pulitiko: walang arbor-arbor! Walang prote-proteksiyon! Walang sinumang sinasanto ng laban na ito, ang lahat nang sangkot ay mananagot!

Ngayon naman nananawagan ako at nagpapasalamat ako sa ating mga artista. Kayo ay idolo ng mga kabataan. Kayo'y role models para sa kanila. Kapag sinabi ninyo na kayo man ay umiiwas sa masamang bisyong ito, ang inyong mga tagahanga ay gagayahin din kayo.

Ganyan kalakas ang inyong impluwensiya sa kabataan. Kaya ako ay nagpapasalamat na kayo ay narito at sinabi n'yo na tutulong kayong pigilin ang mga murang isipan na matuksong gumamit ng bawal na gamot.

Our movement aims to influence the youth of the country to stay away from drugs and to help rehabilitate those who have become drug dependents.

Pagnagpupunta ako doon sa mga drug rehabilitation centers, nagkakaroon ng programa. May ilang mga talents doon ay mga showbiz personalities that are undergoing therapy. Kaya sila ang star usually ng mga show. At ako naman ay nagpapasalamat na sila naman dahil nandoon sila sa center stage ng mga programa sa mga rehab center, ipinapakita nila na hindi nakakahiyang pumasok sa rehabilitation. In fact, 'yon ang paraan kung papano muli mababawi nila 'yung nasira nilang karera.

At ito, itong ating panawagan ngayon, ang pagpapasalamat ko sa inyo ay bahagi 'yan ng ilan-ilang hakbang na ginagawa natin. Kagaya nung kanina nga, 'yung pag-aaral ng ating mga enforcers sa drug enforcement agency ng amerika o 'yung pagtatayo natin ng Drug Enforcement Academy.

Noong hunyo nandoon naman kami sa Luneta. 'Yon naman ay programang "Batang Iwas Droga" o bida. At dito naman ginagamit ang pwersa ng mga bata, hindi 'yung kabataan, 'yung mga bata. 'Yung mga masyadong bata pa para gumamit ng droga para bago pa man sila ma-attract dito ay nasugpo na ang problema sa kanilang batch.

Kanina lamang nga gaya nang sabi ko, nandoon ako sa Sangley Point, 'yung training. Fifty-two sila, iba't-ibang mga pinanggalingan, mga nagpapatupad ng batas laban sa krimen sa ating karagatan. Ang susunod naman daw dito ay training ng mga land-based law enforcers. Pero importante itong sea-based dahil nga, lalo na mula noong nasarado natin ang maraming factory, nandiyan pa rin ang droga sa kalsada. Saan kaya sila nanggagaling, eh 'di imported.

Kaya ako ay nagpapasalamat na itong araw na ito, sinabi ninyo, pinahayag ninyo sa akin ang inyong kooperasyon. At sana sa pamamagitan ninyo ay pati 'yung iba pang taga-entertainment industry ay sasama rin sa kampanyang ito. Kailangan ko ang kooperasyon ng lahat, mga kabataang artista at kabataang hindi artista, lahat ng kabataan. Dahil nakataya dito ang kinabukasan ng ating kabataan, kaya nakataya ang kinabukasan ng ating bansa. Kaya ako ay nagpapasalamat sa inyo na sinabi n'yo na hindi n'yo papayag na masira ang ating kabataan.

Salamat sa inyo, lumalakas ang aking loob at lalabanan natin ito para sa kinabukasan.

Maraming salamat.

Mabuhay muli ang artistang lumalaban sa droga!

Speech of President Arroyo during the Opening Ceremony of the 15th International Convention and Exhibition of the Federation of Asia-Oceania Pest Managers Association

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Opening Ceremony of the 15th International Convention and Exhibition of the Federation of Asia-Oceania Pest Managers Association (FAOPMA)

[Delivered at the Rizal Ballroom, Shangri-la Hotel Manila Makati City, November 18, 2003]

Thank you very much, Undersecretary Drilon.

Mr. Chan and Mr. Chin, and our other guests from the different parts of the world, welcome to the Philippines. Ms. Genuino and the other Filipino leaders of the associations participating in this conference, thank you very much for your expression of support. Chairman Genuino of PAGCOR, association presidents, honored guests, ladies and gentlemen.

Once again, to our foreign delegates, I welcome you at a time of continuing dynamism in our country, and I thank you for the confidence you have shown by holding your convention in Manila.

We are at the front of the political season, and I suppose you all see the usual run of controversy in the news media. But we have been noted for this for having the most freewheeling democracy in Asia. But it works.

I would like to assure you that we are firmly in the map of investment and are holding out relatively well in terms of macroeconomic stability and law and order. In fact, there was just a recent survey of Japanese investors, and they find that the Philippines is their third favorite place of investment here in our region.

Coming out of the summits of ASEAN and APEC last month, I bear enduring faith that our region will wake up one day to the future of shared aspirations and energies, just as these are evident in your meeting here today.

Earlier, I was asking Sheryl, “are you also including agricultural pesticides?” and she said, “it’s really mostly urban.” but I see the presence of Agriculture Department Undersecretary Drilon here. And indeed, while more of the delegates are here in behalf of urban pest control, I would like to say that the presence of agriculture in this conference is important to us.

The Philippine economy has a very big agricultural sector. Food production in our country has plenty of room for growth. But higher yields can only be had with the proper application of cost-effective and environment-friendly agricultural inputs. In fact, not only in the Philippines but anywhere in the world, in your countries, there will be no food security anywhere without pesticides.

But there is much more to this that occupies people’s minds about pesticides, and it is that they must be understood not only in light of their impact to food production, but to the environment and our health.

As Sheryl said in her welcome remarks, “it is in this spirit that I welcome this opportunity to join you in this ceremony. This is the ideal opportunity for industry’s professionals to learn and to be exposed to the latest, pest management strategies, products and technology.”

I also envision this conference to forge deeper cooperation among all stakeholders — the government, represented by Undersecretary Drilon and myself, pest control operators, associations, manufacturers, distributors, and the private sector who buy your products. We are all stakeholders in this vital field of socioeconomic development and progress.

Integrated pest management, that is something we use very often in agriculture. But integrated pest management is not confined to lending bounties to the farmers and fisher folk alone.

Surely when we talk about integrated pest management, we can also talk about it in other areas, other sectors of the economy, but taking into account not only the killing of the pests but other concerns as well. The deterioration of health is not the only consequence of poor pest management. We are also challenged by the deterioration of our treasured heritage sites that are vulnerable to insidious attack.

For instance, if we don't respond accordingly, I understand that the Philippines stands to lose to termites more than a hundred 18th and 19th century Spanish-style houses in Vigan and Northern Luzon at all.

But not even to talk about those great heritage villages, I have gone to so many hospitals and school buildings that had to be rebuilt because there was no pest management in the first place. We could have saved a lot of money if we had sent a little. In this particular case, it's really true that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Without proper pest management, we would even find it difficult to foster sustainable development strategies that would benefit the great masses of our people. We have to think of the larger picture as Sheryl said, the global picture, where our future is concerned, and this is a matter of collective concern.

Of course, we know that in pest control there is an underground trade. And the underground trade is both unwelcome and dangerous.

Many people are still in need of education regarding pests and the possible effect on their homes, their lives and the environment. Professionalism is the key to the resolution of many of these issues.

I am a believer in free enterprise. In fact, I've spent a lot of my administration, and even prior to this as senator and undersecretary of trade and industry, trying to break down unnecessary rules and red tape.

I believe that as much as possible there should be no rules in business except for we have to attend to the needs of safety, security and public morality. But in this particular industry, safety is a very important consideration. Health is a very important consideration. Therefore, we cannot subject your industry to laissez faire and total free enterprise.

I would suggest therefore, as part of the results of this conference, for the leaders of your industry, especially the Philippine industry, to draft an amendment, to push for an amendment to the national building code of the Philippines that would require... I see that we are on the same wavelength. and I hope you mean that the amendment you welcome is one that would require all pest control treatments, whether structural or household, to be done by a licensed operator. Because we must protect the consumer.

With such a prestigious convention, plus the yearly symposia and seminars being organized by your various local and international associations, I trust that the industry will continue to live up to its role as a guardian of sustainable agriculture, the environment and public health.

To all of you, have a fruitful convention.

To the Filipinos, thank you for your support.

To our foreign guests, welcome once again to the Philippines.

Thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Opening Program of the 18th Philippine Advertising Congress (PAC)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Opening Program of the 18th Philippine Advertising Congress (PAC)

[Delivered at the Auditorium, CAP Convention Center, Camp John Hay, Baguio City, November 20, 2003]

Thank you, Secretary Afable.

Let me first greet my hosts in this Congress: Gabby Lopez, Congress Chairman; Cerge Remonde, ad board chairman; and the other members of the 18th Philippine Advertising Congress Organizing Committee.

Now, let me also greet our host in this city, Mayor Bernie Vergara, Mayor Maurice Domogan, members of the city council headed by Vice Mayor Tabanda, and our student volunteers from Baguio City.

Let me acknowledge my companions today, members of my Cabinet: Secretary Richard Gordon, Tourism; Secretary Marita Jimenez, priority projects and ODA; BCDA chairman Florencio Padernal; Presidential Assistant Rene Diaz and PCSO Chairman Honeygirl de Leon. Participants of this Congress, guests, ladies and gentlemen, movers of the advertising industry, good morning.

I know that this morning I am speaking before some of the most creative minds in our country. I'm speaking before a gathering of some of the country's most eloquent people, the professionals with the big ideas, the professionals whose messages shape the mind and change the behavior of our people.

Gabby Lopez is happy with this SRO crowd, and so am I, and so are we all. He is happy that this congress is the most attended in your history, congratulations!

I asked gabby, why is this Congress your most attended? He thinks this turnout is a sign that first, Baguio is very popular — congratulations mayor Vergara and Congressman Domogan! — but second, that Philippine business is getting more brisk.

Indeed, while historically our economic development has been slow compared to our neighbors, this year — in fact, the last two and a half years — this once basket case of Asia is posting a growth rate that is number six overall among the 21 economies of the Asia-Pacific region. and this year in particular is our highest growth since the Asian crunch of 1997. That performance owed much to two leading sectors — the increased marketing activity in telecommunications and the obviously positive consumer confidence shown by the growth of retail — witness SM's opening tomorrow. And these two activities, these two leading sectors in our growth are both intimately intertwined with the advertising industry.

Thus, I am here with you to celebrate and to thank you for your big contribution to our economic development. You have always known that you influence the minds of our people. But this time, by increasing marketing activity, by helping consumer confidence, by stimulating commerce, you have influenced the growth of our economy itself. You are so powerful, not only do you influence confidence, you can influence the pace of the economy. You are more powerful than we have imagined, and in a way you are powerful than any presidency.

In fact, it has been said that presidents are only elected by men but creative people like you are the truly anointed. You use the media as the main outlet of your trade. The media is our town plaza of the 21st century. The test of social acceptance used to be can we defend it in Plaza Miranda today, you are our Plaza Miranda.

And I come here today with full recognition of that strength of yours as a major economic force of our country whose primary concern is economic development and the elimination of poverty.

You are here to celebrate the great idea.

And Cerge said, Remonde, that you can contribute your great idea to our economic development by helping create brand Philippines. but for you to create the brand, I must give you the material without the pizzazz, because pizzazz is not my job, that's yours.

And so let me spend a few moments to speak to you about the material that I hope your great idea can contribute to, so that we can indeed have a brand Philippines.

Our historical problems cannot be blamed on any single president because the problems are fundamental. They're caused by the economic and political systems.

To be a stronger republic, we must change the system, reform the system. Usher in deep and far-reaching reforms that will lead to political and social stability and sustained economic development. And we must also unify as a people.

My learning curve of the last two and a half years in the presidency has taught me that we need five fundamental reforms: reforming the market, reforming agriculture, reforming our social assets, reforming the bureaucracy and reforming our protective institutions.

Yes, we must reform the market. The market that you know so well, by making it a market that creates jobs and opportunities. I'm proud of our market successes on the macroeconomic front: our growth rate is steady; our inflation rate has been kept under control; the budget deficit has been kept within manageable levels; fiscal performance has improved; bandwidth became cheaper and more accessible in my administration.

But we must build the long-term underpinnings of infrastructure, telecommunications, electric power, expanded credit.

We must also broaden education to sharpen that great idea, the intellectual competitiveness of our country. I believe in investing in education because I believe that the Philippines greatest resource is indeed the great idea — the Filipino skill and the Filipino mind.

And I congratulate you for coming up with the congress theme that indeed proclaims the power of the Filipino mind through the great idea.

Anywhere in the world, there will be Filipino country business managers, marketing directors, top advertising personnel. It is not strange to us that the founding chairman of the Asian Federation of Advertising Agencies was Antonio de Joya, a Filipino. In all fields, in fact, intellectual and physical, from Antonio de Joya to Manny Pacquiao, we are world class.

But to do justice to that world class Filipino, we need structural reforms for the government to broaden its fiscal controls and capabilities, provide the infrastructure needed to leverage the nation's competitive advantages, and promote a business-friendly environment based on good governance and a strong deep financial and banking system.

We must also liberate the country with reforms in agriculture. It is where the keenest struggle for survival takes place. And it is where we must pursue that great idea pagkain sa bawat mesa. no Filipino who works hard for family and country must be deprived of a decent meal.

For agricultural modernization, we spend at least — in my administration — at least 20 billion pesos a year. Gabby talked about the miracle rice. I hope he's talking about our hybrid rice in my administration. Rice productivity has reached a new bounty with the propagation of hybrid rice doubling the yield of the farmers who use it and also with the biggest irrigation program in history.

We have found new markets — and markets are very important for you to help us find — new markets for tuna, carrageenan, tropical fruits. As a boost to agriculture, we have the roll-on/roll-off ferry highway system now reducing the cost of food transport from Mindanao to Luzon.

Pagkain sa bawat mesa. a duty to every Filipino. A commitment that cannot be compromised no matter what. And to do this, we must put real wealth in the hands of our farmers by legislating the acceptability of farmland as collateral.

And now reforming our social assets. Land credit minimum basic needs, these are social assets where we have given an unprecedented number of people including people in Baguio the right to buy the land they occupy. We must apply deeper reforms, and I have the model developed by Hernando de Soto to follow.

We are providing micro credit, another asset, to one million asset less rural women. And we're being praised by no less than the author of the Grameen Bank model himself, Dr. Yunus. But beyond that, if we can have fiscal and banking reforms, we will be able to have a one-time seed fund of one million pesos in microfinance per barangay as proven successful by the one million baht, one village project in Thailand.

Stable prices for the food of the poor, like ordinary rice and fish, which we have achieved. And stable prices for medicines, which we must achieve by cutting the price of medicines for the poor in half, are asset reforms as well. All these programs can graduate into fundamental reforms if we work hard enough on governance reform.

Through my two and a half years of the learning curve, I've learned the complexities of the bureaucracy.

The World Bank has praised our vigilant advances in fighting corruption, acknowledging that we have been effective in our lifestyle checks and procurement reforms.

The people's dissatisfaction about government services are being addressed too. There have been dramatic changes in the land transportation office. And I also make surprise visits to police stations.

But once and for all, we must end graft with a mighty hand of political will and a change of values among our citizenry. And you, the movers of advertising, can help us change values and change behavior. At the same time, we must use our fiscal reforms to have a better compensated civil service.

It is also important to reform our system through constitutional change. A stronger republic must be a more secure republic.

I would like to announce that the kidnappers of the coca-cola executive have been caught, some of them. The others have been killed in an encounter including their leader the notorious number one kidnapper in the order of battle, Roberto yap. He was killed in Bataan in an earlier encounter.

The quick solution of the coca-cola executive slay is a combination of strong barangay vigilance and swift police and inter-agency response. And I commend all those involved in the operation under the leadership of Secretary Angelo Reyes.

Let us show these criminals that the law never sleeps and they cannot escape it. But the fact that the quick solution had to be done by an AD HOC task force shows that we need institutional reforms. We need to reform our protective institutions because of the imperatives of peace and order, the war against terrorism, and the vision of a drug-free Philippines by 2005.

We increased the salaries of policemen and military personnel during my administration to the same level as that of teachers. But we need a deeper reform of the military and the police towards graft-free and dedicated organizations with the tools to enforce peace and order throughout the land and to be true protectors of our people.

Our major non-NATO ally status with the United States will be used, will enable us to have a modern armed forces with less pain to the economy. Indeed, these are the ideas that I had been able to fashion over the last two and a half years of my learning curve.

And just like you, in dealing with the bureaucracy, in dealing with the people, I recognize that this is a country of intelligent people, but why are we miserable? It's because we delight in the things that divide us more than the things that unite us.

There is too much negativism and conflict in our society, and I attribute much of these to the social and political divisions that exist in our nation today. We need to heal those deep divisions. While we must have justice, we must also have reconciliation. We must put a closure to our past national divisions. We must have permanent peace in Mindanao. We must end the communist insurgency. And the recovery of the Marcos wealth, with a final decision of the Supreme Court, should now put martial law behind us. And most of all, the most difficult, we must find a closure to the divisions between Edsa Dos and Edsa Tres.

If we must survive national unity and reconciliation, it's the resolution that is non-negotiable. We must be relentless in the pursuit of reconciliation no matter how impossible it looks. Like Jesus Christ would not have changed his gospel no matter how many times he would have been crucified and ridiculed. No fear, no resistance should distract us from our vision. Our nightmares should not distract us from our dreams.

And you, movers of the advertising industry, creators of great ideas, with your overwhelming influence on the Filipino mind, with your ability to move people into thinking, to action and even to battle if need be, you can make every Filipino believe in his heart that our history far from ending is giving itself a fresh start.

Work with me on this fresh start. Tulungan ninyo ako sa pagbabago at pagkakaisa ng ating bansa. And to me, a fresh start, deep reform, unity and reconciliation, that is the greatest idea of all. But you are the ones who can move people to make that great idea come true.

Congratulations! And thank you.

Speech of President Arroyo during a Dialogue 'Isang tanong, Isang sagot' with the Civil Society Groups

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During a Dialogue 'Isang tanong, Isang sagot' with the Civil Society Groups

[Delivered at the Ateneo Professor's School Auditorium, Rockwell Drive, Makati City, November 22, 2003]

Thank you very much Father.

Friends, ladies and gentlemen:

When your organizers invited me today, they said that you a me to speak about I want to be remembered for. I think that the best way to do this would be to speak on the experience I gained during my two in a half years of learning curve in the presidency. What I've learned about the deep changes in the system and the principled unity that need to be done if we are to bring our country to real political and social stability and real economic development.

While historically our economic development has been slow compared to our neighbors. I thank god that despite the difficulties we perceive in our country, during my administration as acknowledged by the APEC research secretariat we have been posting a growth rate that is number six over-all among the 21 economies of the Asia pacific!

In fact this year we are achieving our highest growth since the Asian crunch of 1997. That performance I believe no, not I believe, that performance as per our national income accounts, owed much to the increased activity in telecommunications and in retail. In telecommunications, I would like to think that one reason why it grew by leaps and bounds is partly that during my administration bandwidth became cheaper and more accessible. And as far as retail is concerned, though we see a lot of negatives in the media, the growth of retail can only reflect positive consumer confidence, as I said, despite the negatives that are expressed so loudly. Incidentally, the structure of this growth jibes with what I said way back in my first state of the nation address in 2001, that the growth sectors of our future are in the service sector.

And I would like to believe that civil society shares in the accomplishments of my administration—people like Dinky, people like Ging, people like Vicky, they have been a central part of how we have done our strategic directions. And beneath the macroeconomic growth rate that I have pointed out, beneath the obvious leading sectors of the economy telecoms and retail, lie a number of things that we are able to do in terms of addressing governance, a preferential option for the poor, and the long-festering national divisions.

On the preferential option for the poor, notwithstanding that people complain about high prices, we have been able to keep the price of what we call wage goods stable — the basic necessities bought by the poor, meaning regular milled rice, the fish of the common folk, especially tilapia, and the medicines commonly bought by the poor. For medicines bought by the poor lo, I believe we need deeper reforms so that we can really say that medicines bought by them are half the price of what we inherited in 2001.

We've been able to bring interest rates down, and small and medium enterprises have gobbled up the credit programs that we have designed for them. The stable prices of these wage goods reflect a low inflation rate, which together with the low interest rate and steady growth rate regime are a result of our macroeconomic market reforms, including keeping the budget deficit within manageable levels and improving fiscal performance through disciplined spending.

But my learning curve has taught me that we must reform the market more fundamentally to make it a market that creates enough jobs and opportunities for our vast and young population.

We must build the long term underpinnings of infrastructure, telecommunications, electric power, expanded credit and to be able to afford these, we must have deep fiscal reforms. We must broaden education to sharpen the intellectual competitiveness of our country.

I believe in investing in education reform, because I believe as I said ,way back again in my first state of the nation address, that the Philippines' greatest resource is the Filipino skill and the Filipino mind. And again I repeat what I said in my first state of the nation address about the growth sector of our future being in services. With education reform, it will be particularly in the human resource- intensive, skills intensive service sectors.

If we have been able to keep food for the poor stable in supply and in price, it is also because I believe to a large part of what my administration has done to modernize agriculture. We spend at least 20 billion pesos a year for agricultural modernization, that is an unprecedented allocation. Rice productivity has reached a new bounty with the propagation of hybrid rice, which has been doubling the harvest of farmers that they've used that hybrid rice. That hybrid rice can only grow well in irrigated areas and we have also the biggest irrigation program in history.

We've found new markets for tuna, carageenan, and tropical fruits. In fact general Victor Corpus, who is now the head of the Civil Relations Service of the Armed Forces believes that the massive propagation of carageenan in the coastal areas south of Manila –meaning Batangas, Bicol, Visayas, all the way to Mindanao will be an important answer to insurgency and secession. As a boost to agriculture, Secretary Marita Jimenez who is my Secretary for priority project in ODA has helped me to reduce the cost of food transport from Mindanao to Luzon by cutting the red tape to bring about what is call the roll-on roll-off ferry highway system. This is part of her general program to cut red tape to make sure crucial infrastructure are built.

But we must liberate the economy, the country with deeper reforms in agriculture, for it is where the keenest struggle for survival takes place. Pagkain sa bawat mesa, means not only the mesa of the people in the urban areas even the farmers themselves. No Filipino who works hard for family and country must be deprived of a decent meal.

Pagkain sa bawat mesa has always been to me if we were to have a battle cry that's been my battle cry since my senate days. It's a duty to every Filipino. A commitment that cannot be compromised no matter what. And we must put a real wealth in the hands of our farmers. We must empower the farmers by enabling them, empowering them to turn their farm land into credit-worthy assets, this is the principle of Hernando de Sotomayor the great Latin-American social scientist and this principle has been demonstrated successfully in many other developing countries. And they have also been applied now in countries that are doing even well , have been doing well like Thailand.

Hernando de Sotomayor, is a celebrated author of the principle of unlocking the mystery of capital that is locked in land. It is my inspiration for asset reform. If you want to know what deep reforms we have to make in land, I could give a separate lecture on Hernando de Sotomayor but I would just suggest for those who want to know please read Hernando de Sotomayor.

In so short a time of two in a half years of my administration also, again following that principle, we have accomplished one of the most massive housing programs undertaken by any administration. But we must do deeper reforms in our social assets, we call this asset reform and sometimes people tell me asset reform. And sometimes people tell me –asset reform please don't talk about the heads of people even businessmen don't understand asset reform . But I've got to explain it because it is so, you know it is so deep in our program of government. It is language used by Ging Deles. And what are we talking about assets ?–land, credit, minimum basic needs.

As far as land is concerned too, we have given an unprecedented number of the rural , ah, no, of the urban poor the right to buy the land they occupy. But to truly liberate the urban poor, we need deeper reforms than this. Hernando de Sotomayor has done this in a lot of Latin-American countries. He is doing it now in Thailand– a whole comprehensive set of reforms in the titling system dedicated by that model and I have asked him to study particularly this system for our country.

Credit is an asset and part of our asset reform in credit is microfinance. We are providing microcredit to one million asset less rural women, and being praised for it by no less than the author of the Grameen bank model itself, Dr.

Yunos of Bangladesh. But one million asset less, income less rural women, when we have maybe 25 million poor families? Oh no, poor people I mean, so but beyond that, we still have to do fiscal and banking reforms that we allow us to provide again Thailand is doing , because i study other successful models . Thailand in the last two years did a one-time seed fund of P1 million Baht in microfinance per village and it doubled the growth rate of Thailand in the last two years .

When Thaksin first started to do it, and everybody made fun of him “gimmick” sabi nila. But two years later, other countries like South Korea and the Philippines are trying to replicate it.

Our programs are what we’ve done within the present system but they must graduate into fundamental reforms. But we can only do this if we work hard enough on governance reforms. Through my two and a half years of the learning curve, i have learned the complexities of the bureaucracy. The world bank has praised our vigilant advances in fighting corruption it is acknowledged that we have been effective in our lifestyle checks and procurement reforms. The people’s dissatisfaction about government services are also being addressed. There have been dramatic changes in the land transportation office, and I’ve been inspecting surprised visits . I’ve been doing surprised visits to police stations . But once and for all, we need deep reforms to end graft and we need to do that with the mighty hand of political will and a change of values among our citizenry.

Ending corruption is not done by St. Michael coming down and slaying the dragon with one’s well, one fells swoop of his sword. It is done by, it is like , corruption is like an infected wound that must be cured by constant healing and disinfecting. Systems changed combined with prosecution.

At the same time, we must use our fiscal reforms to have a better compensated civil service. That is the key to the graft-free civil service of Singapore and Hongkong. Aside from the values, they’re well paid but the... Reform doing that again is fiscal reforms.

It is also important, and I’m glad Dr. Abueva’s here to reform our system through constitutional change. We must begin a meaningful and dispassionate debate on changes in the constitution, particularly the parliamentary and federal form of government.

To strengthen our republic, we must make it more secure.

We need to reform our protective institutions because of the imperatives of peace and order, the war against terrorism, and the vision of a drug-free Philippines by 2005.

In my administration we increased the salaries of policemen and soldiers to make it the same level as the teachers, but we need to do deeper reforms in the military and the police, towards graft-free and dedicated organizations with the tools to enforce peace and order throughout the land, and to be true protectors of the people. The Feliciano commission which includes Father Bernas of Ateneo has given me its findings , their findings on the ongoing Philippine police reform recommission’s work headed by Justice and .. Sedfrey Ordonez should be the basis of our military and police reforms.

I have said that we must do these reforms so that we can do justice to our most important resource and that is our world competitive , world-class human resources. This is a country of intelligent people. But why are we miserable? I believe it’s because we delight in the things that divide us more than the things that unite us.

There is too much negativism and conflict in our society and I attribute much of this to the social and political divisions that exist in our country today. And if we are going to make our reforms successful, we need to heal these deep divisions. While we must have justice, we must also have reconciliation. We must put a closure to our past national divisions. We must have permanent peace in Mindanao. We must end the communist insurgency. And one reason why Ging Deles is not here with us today because she is there in Oslo having exploratory talks with new people’s army.

The long-awaited judgment on the Marcos wealth has come down and that should help put martial law behind us. But most of all, and most difficult, I believe, for civil society, we must find a closure to the deep divisions between Edsa dos and Edsa tres. And in this most difficult reconciliation I will be guided by the great fathers of our church, including the theology of principled reconciliation as expounded by Father Romeo Intengan, the provincial head of the Jesuit community in the Philippines , who is himself a leading veteran of some of the great social movements of our country.

If we must survive, national unity and reconciliation are the resolution that is non-negotiable.

We must be relentless in its pursuit. No matter how impossible it looks.

Like Jesus Christ would not change his gospel no matter how many times he would be crucified and ridicule.

No fear, no resistance should distract us from our vision. Our nightmares should not distract us from our dreams.

And I hope that you leaders of civil society, young people who would be the leaders of our country's 21st century , I hope that you can work with me in building prosperity for the greatest number of our people in a strong republic that we Filipinos dream of and rightly deserve.

Thank you very much.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 53rd Founding Anniversary of the First Scout Ranger Regiment (FSRR)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 53rd Founding Anniversary of the First Scout Ranger Regiment (FSRR)

[Delivered at the Camp Tecson, Brgy. Tartaro San Miguel, Bulacan, November 26, 2003]

Maraming salamat, General Narciso Abaya.

Troop Commander, give the troops “Tikas Pahinga.”

Una sa lahat, gusto kong batiin ‘yung ating mga officers na nagtanggap sa atin itong araw na ito sa kanilang pagdiriwang. Nandito si bagong namumuno ng Philippine Army na siya ay nanggaling din sa Scout Ranger, Major General Efren Abu. Nandito ang ating Commander ng Northern Luzon command, General Romy Dominguez, at saka siyempre ‘yung namumuno ng mga scout rangers, si Colonel Danny Lim.

Batiin ko naman ngayon ‘yung ating mga kasama na nagpunta rito. Una sa lahat batiin ko ang maybahay ng Speaker of the House of Representatives, si Mrs. Gina De Venecia. At sa kanyang pamamagitan magpasalamat tayo sa Kongreso dahil mabilis nilang pinasa ‘yung batas na hiniling ko sa kanila na itaas ang suweldo ng ating mga sundalo kagaya ng mga teachers. Kasama rin natin dito ngayon, iba’t-ibang mga officials ng pamahalaang nasyonal at pamahalaang lokal. Ang punong-bayan ng San Miguel, Bulacan, si Mayor Santi Sevilla; ang Congresswoman nitong distritong ito, si Congresswoman Lorna Silverio; ang bise-gobernador ng probinsiya ng Bulacan, si Vice Governor Rely Plamenko. Pinapaabot din ni Governor Rosie De La Cruz ang kanyang pagbati bagama’t siya ay itong umagang ito umalis papuntang hapon. Nandito rin si board member Tony Ligon, salamat sa inyong pagpunta rito. At saka ‘yung barangay captain ng barangay Tartaro, si Chairman Manuel Apoderado.

Kasama ko ang ilang Cabinet members. Ilan dito nga ay may kinalaman sa Bulacan. Una sa lahat, alam natin dahil dating gobernador siya ng Bulacan, si Secretary Obet Pagdanganan. At salamat sa kalsadang itatayo niya mula sa housing project hanggang sa main highway. Nandito rin, apo ng Bulacan, apo nga ng San Miguel, Bulacan dahil ang kanyang lola ay walang iba kung hindi si Doña Trinidad De Leon Roxas, si Mr. Palengke, Secretary Mar Roxas. Si Secretary Roxas ay narito hindi lamang upang makipagdalo sa kanyang mga kababayang taga-San Miguel kung hindi dahil dala ko dito ang national media at si Secretary Roxas ay may isang gustong ipabalita at handa siya magsagot sa mga tanong nila pagkatapos ng ating programa, ang ating huling mga statistics, huling record, update ng investments as of October 2003 for the last ten months, tumaas ang investments by 22 percent. Kaya sa kabilang batikos nang batikos at alitan nang alitan, nakikita natin na nandiyan pa rin ang tiwala ng mga investors. Pwede magsalita ang ilan pero in the end, they vote with their money, and there’s a 22 percent increase of those who voted with their money for confidence in the Philippines.

Marami dito nga foreign investment pa nga eh. Nakararami sa investment na ito ay foreign investment. Kaya hindi tayo nagugulat dahil sa kabila ng kon sinu-sino nagsasabi na wala nang tiwala raw, ang survey ng Japanese investments ay number three favorite pa rin ang Pilipinas, next to Thailand and Malaysia. Ano pa kaya kung tayo ay nagkakaisa.

Gusto ko ring batiin, isa pang anak ng Bulacan, ang ating chairman ng National Food Authority na may Cabinet rank, si Secretary Lito Sarmiento. At kanina ay nagpirma ng memorandum of agreement dahil magtatayo ng housing project para sa ating mga kawal dito sa likod ng Camp Tecson, si Secretary of Housing, Mike Defensor. Gusto sabihin ni Mar Roxas na sa mga umangat na mga pagtaas ng ating production sa ating bansa, ang pinakamabilis na pag-angat ay ang housing sector. Kaya congratulations, Mike Defensor.

Gusto ko ring batiin 'yung ating kinatawan ng National Defense nitong araw na ito — ay, hindi pala. Nasa akin pa pala siya sa Malacañang — si Undersecretary Abby Puruganan dahil binabati ko siya dahil siya rin ay scout ranger dati. At binabati ko 'yung ating mga iba't-ibang may ginanap sa ating programa ngayon, si Presidential Assistant for North Luzon, si Secretary Renato Diaz. At salamat sa kanyang magandang pinahayag tungkol sa kalahi program natin dito sa Camp Tecson. Dahil ito ang unang-unang kampo na nagkakaroon ng KALAHÍ program o integrated community development programs.

Kaya kayong lahat, gusto ko rin batiin hindi lamang 'yung mga officials kung hindi 'yung mga private sector na napakalaki ang igaganap sa mga darating na panahon. Gusto kong batiin 'yung chairman ng Manila Bank, Luis Puyat at kanilang presidente, Benjamin Yambao. 'Yung may-ari ng lupa na idinodona, 50 hectares, Attorney Dave Puyat, Attorney Raymond Puyat. At babatiin ko 'yung nagsabi kay Dave Puyat na kailangan ng mga sundalo ang pabahay, 'yung anak ni Executive Secretary Bert Romulo, Mrs. Berna Romulo-Puyat. Berna, akyat ka nga dito sa entablado at makaupo ka dito, somewhere here. Dapat nandito ka rin. Si Berna parati in the background. Pero itong araw na ito, donor siya ng lupa eh dapat nandito rin siya sa entablado. Binabati ko lahat ng iba't-ibang mga officers ng Armed Forces of the Philippines na narito at siyempre sa inyong lahat mga scout rangers, maligayang bati sa isa sa mga grupong pinakamahusay na mandirigma sa sandatahang lakas sa inyong anibersaryo.

Kasabay sa pagbati ko sa buong scout rangers, binabati ko rin 'yung mga scout rangers at 'yung mga civilian na nagkamit ng parangal bilang patunay ng inyong natatanging serbisyo sa ating bansa. Sa inyong patuloy na napakahusay na paglilingkod sa bansa, kung naaalala pa ng ilan sa inyo, pinili ko na kayo ang una kong dalawin sa lahat ng mga rehimento ng Armed Forces nung ako ay maging pangulo. Naalala ninyo, a long, long time ago, early 2001. Noong araw na 'yon, Pebrero a-siete 2001, nagdalaw ako sa inyo. At doon din, right after I became president, doon ko rin unang pinahayag ang aking plano upang mapahusay pa ang serbisyo ng buong militar. And we continue those reforms I talked about them up to today.

Continuing reforms, better morale and discipline, and the even handed pursuit of justice and compassion have steadily immunized the Armed Forces from the coup fever. The intelligence community sees no reemergence of underground groups in the command. And I call upon the politicians who are inclined to inveigle or support these groups to train their sights on the forthcoming polls rather than futile destabilization. Let's resolve all political issues by the ballot rather than the gun and give our people the peace of mind they deserve.

Noong una ako nagbisita rito, ano ang mga nabanggit ko, noong unang pagbisita ko dito sa inyo? Sabi ko, dadagdagan ko ang tulong para sa mga pamilya ng sundalong masusugatan o mamamatay sa digmaan. Sabi ko, tataasan ang pensiyon ng mga nagkamit ng Medal of Valor na ang karamihan naman ay galing din sa scout ranger regiment. Sabi ko, bibigyan ko nang mas maraming tax exemption ang mga kasapi ng AFP. Sabi ko, papalakasin natin ang mga programang pabahay at iba pang benepisyo para sa militar. Sabi ko, sisiguruhin ko ang mga promotion batay sa kahusayan at hindi sa kapit. Sabi ko, makikinig ako sa mga inyong hinaing.

Kung titignan n'yo, isa't-isa doon sa mga aking sinabi noon – February 2001 — today, November 2003, masasabi n'yo tinupad ko 'yung aking mga sinabi as early as two years ago. Halimbawa, sinabi ko 'yon Pebrero, sumunod na Abril, two months later, inanunsyo ko na ang pagtaas sa mga tulong pinansyal sa mga nasugatan at mga naiwan ng mga namatay. At ni hindi ko sinabi noon ngunit nakita ko pagkatapos dahil sa aking karanasan sa learning curve na kailangan pala ninyo na maging pantay ang suweldo ninyo sa titser at pulis. Mabilis na pinasa ng Kongreso — salamat kay Speaker De Venecia, salamat kay Congresswoman Lorna Silverio – mabilis nilang pinasa ang batas upang maging 20,000 na ang pensiyon ng mga may Medal of Valor. Noong araw, ilang daan lamang, ngayon 20,000 na. Binigay rin nila 'yung mga exemption sa mga allowances, mga non-salary benefits, at higit na importante, tinaas din ang inyong suweldo. Una, sa savings lamang natin sana makukuha 'yung suweldo ninyo, dahil 2003 pumasa 'yung batas — hindi, 2002 pala — pero 'yung 2002 na budget na pinasa for 2003 hindi kasama ang pagtaas ng suweldo dahil nga wala pa 'yung batas. Ngayon, salamat pinasa ng House of Representatives 'yung inyong supplemental budget, kasama na doon 'yung 50 percent sa pay increase. Kaya salamat sa Kongreso.

Ipinagpapatuloy natin ang iba pang programa upang mapabuti ang inyong mga buhay tulad nga nung pabahay, tulad nga nung KALAHÍ, 'yung ating comprehensive and integrated delivery of social services. Katunayan nga, ang ating patuloy 'yung proyektong pangkabuhayan at pabahay para sa limampung ektaryang ibubukod para sa inyong pabahay.

Nalulungkot, nakakalungkot ang pangyayari sa Oakwood noong Hulyo. Kahit na nabuksan ito ang naiwan pang hinaing ng mga sundalo dahil patuloy naman ang mga gawain ng pamahalaan upang gumaan ang inyong buhay. Gayunpaman, patuloy kong pinapalakas ang Armed Forces sa pamamagitan ng mga batayang reporma.

Ang pagpapalakas ng mga patakaran, ang mahusay na pangangasiwa ng mga gamit at tao, at ang matuling pagpasunod ng mga utos na walang sagabal o sa ingles ang tawag nito reinforced policy control, sound management of resources and untrammelled command efficiency. Eto ang mga estratehiyang ating sinusunod sa ating batayang pangreporma. At tinatangal ko na ang kaugalian ng conversion na pinagmumulan ng maraming corruption. At ang AFP Chief of Staff ngayon siya na lamang ang tanging hahawak ng mga cash reserves. Nalulungkot ako na may iba pa sa rehimentong ito na nagkulang ng tiwala sa katapatan ng pamunuan ng ibinigay kong mga pahayag two years ago. Ngunit nakita naman n'yo sa aking accounting ngayon, hindi ko nakalilimutan 'yung sinabi ko noon. Hindi ko nalilimutan sa dalawang taon at kalahati ng aking pagkapangulo. At bagama't hindi ako araw-araw nagbibisita, nag-aanunsyo kasi kailangan ang pangulo ay nagtatrabaho sa kanyang desk para magawa lahat natin 'yung mga bagay na 'yon. Ginagawa naman natin even before oakwood. Walang maidudulot na kabutihan ang pagtanim ng sama ng loob.

Ang lahat ng pumunta sa Oakwood na napatunayang iniligaw lamang ng kanilang mga officials ay pinawalang-sala, 133 na sila. Ang mga lider naman ng kaguluhan ay paparusahan ayon sa batas sapagkat hindi lamang sila nakipagsabwatan sa mga ambisyoso upang pabagsakin ang pamahalaan, nilito rin nila ang kanilang mga tauhan. Wala nang dahilan upang bigyan ninyo ng kahit konting panahon ang mga sulsol ng mga pulitikong nagnanais lang na gamitin ang lakas ng kasundaluan upang makamkam nila ang kapangyarihan sa anumang paraan.

Ang ating pagsisikap ay dapat batayang pagbabago sa sistema at saka rekonsilyasyon. Rekonsilyasyon din ang dahilan ng ating pagsisikap na makamit ang pangmatagalang kapayapaan sa mindanao kung saan marami kayo ay naglilingkod kahit na ang headquarters n'yo ay narito sa Camp Tecson. Kapayapaan din naman ang hangad nating lahat pati mga sundalo. Batayang reporma at pagkakaisa, ito ang kailangan ng buong bansa.

Kaya mga Scout Rangers, hinihiling ko ang inyong suporta tulad ng paghingi ko ng suporta sa buong sambayanan para sa ating pagbabago at pagkakaisa sa buong bansa.

Muli, maraming salamat sa inyong serbisyo sa sambayanan. At mabuhay ang ating Elite Scout Rangers of the Philippines!

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Farmers' Forum on Agrarian Reform

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Farmers' Forum on Agrarian Reform

[Delivered at the Central Luzon State University (CLSU) Multi-Purpose Gym Muñoz, Nueva Ecija, November 26, 2003]

Maraming salamat, Governor Tommy Joson sa inyong pag-welcome sa aming lahat. At tungkol ho sa pagkain, huwag ho kayong mag-alala, ang mga district engineers ay hindi lamang pinapakain ang ating mga barangay captain kung hindi linilibot din, magto-tour dito sa CLSU at 'yung iba doon pa nga sa Subic.

Gusto ko rin pong magbigay ng galang sa ating congressman po dito sa distritong ito, si Congressman Violago. Meron tatlo tayong congressman din na kasama niya, hindi nga congressman kundi congresswomen. Nandito po si Congresswoman Josie Joson ng first district. Nandito rin ho si congresswoman ng ano... Dapat ang pangalan... Hindi pangalan niya ang maaalala natin kung hindi ang pangalan ng kanyang partido, Butil, Congresswoman Butil, si Nelly. Atsaka congresswoman ng Quezon, maybahay ng vice chairman ng Road Board, si Congresswoman Aleta Suarez. Ang nanay ng mga congressman ay narito rin, bagamat mas bata siya keysa doon sa ibang mga congressman, First Lady ng House of Representatives, si Gina De Venecia. Nabanggit ko na rin si Mrs. Suarez kaya batiin ko na rin 'yung mga DPWH officials, ang chairman ng Road Board ay si Dante Soriquez, ang vice chairman na nga ay si Danny Suarez.

Mga Cabinet members na kasama ko na narito ay si Secretary Mar Roxas, "Mr. Palengke;" si Secretary Mike Defensor, maraming pabahay 'yan dito; at saka si Secretary of the Press, Milt Alingod; si Secretary of DAR, Obet Pagdanganan; 'yung aking Presidential Adviser for infrastructure, si Teddy Encarnacion; at saka anak ng Nueva Ecija, kilala ninyo, si Presidential Assistant Rene Diaz; nandito rin si General Boysie Braganza, ang Commanding General ng 7th Division.

Batiin ko naman ang ating mga host dito. Nabati ko na nga si Governor Joson. Nabati ko na nga si Congressman Violago. Batiin ko rin si Mayor ng Muñoz, Mayor Alvarez. Ganun na rin, lahat ng mga Board members, mga mayors ng Nueva Ecija, si Vice Mayor Alvarez at members ng City Council ng Muñoz. Ngayon, binabati ko na 'yung nag-host sa atin, mga guests naman natin.

Tinatanggap ko, welcome sa mga barangay captains ng Regions I to V, magandang tanghali sa inyong lahat.

Una sa lahat, batiin ko ang mga taga-Nueva Ecija. Kasi sa dalas ng pagbisita ko rito, siguro wala nang nagdududa kung gaano ko kayo kamahal mga taga-Nueva Ecija.

At itong araw na ito dito rin natin linulunsad ang mga pagbabagong ating kailangang gawin para maging mas maunlad ang ating bansa. Gaya nang sabi ni Vice Chairman ng Road Board Danny Suarez sa pagkakataong ito linulunsad natin ang pangatlong bahagi — kaya tatlong ilaw, tatlong kulay ng ilaw — tatlong bahagi ng "Kalsada Natin, Alagaan Natin" program.

Itong programang ito ay gumagamit ng one billion pesos para alagaan ng mga barangay ang mga national road na dumadaan sa inyo. At ito ay sisikapin nating gawin sa buong bansa. Kasi kung hindi wasto ang pag-aalaga ng kalsada, ito ay nasisira. Ngayon, ang programang ito ay sasakop so far dito sa ating ginawa, pangatlong launching. Ito ay sakop so far sa lahat ng national arterial roads at lahat ng national secondary roads sa buong Luzon because every citizen, every barangay must contribute to the whole enterprise. At sa pagkaintindi ko, sa karanasan noong unang dalawang paglunsad, 'yung Unisan to Urdaneta at saka 'yung Southern Luzon, nalaman ko, nakita, napag-alaman ko na 'yung mga barangay captains ay grabe rin ang tulong sa mga manggagawa sa mga implementasyon nitong programang ito.

Kaya ako ay inaatasan ko si Chairman Soriquez at si Vice Chairman Suarez na simula sa susunod na December 1, 2003, lahat ng tumutulong na barangay captain sa buong Luzon ay tatanggap ng 500 pesos a month supervision fee. Nauna kasi kayong tumulong eh, so bigyan na kayo nang supervision fee.

Itong ating ginagawa, itong ating pag-aalaga ng kalsada, 'yung national road na dumadaan sa barangay, itong programang ito ay maaaring magsilbi batong panulak ng kaunlaran ng ating bansa. Ang importanteng pakinabang na agad mabibigay ng programang ito ay trabaho. Ito ay parang noong panahon ng tatay ko, noong itinatag ang emergency employment program ni Pangulong Macapagal noong 1962. Ako rin, kagaya ng tatay, para sa akin ang paglikha nang trabaho para sa ating mga kababayan ang pangunahing preyoridad simula nang ako ay maging pangulo. Salamat na lamang na anuman ang binabatikos sa akin ng mga kalaban, nandito si Mar Roxas, "Mr. Palengke," pero itong araw na ito tatawagin natin siyang "Mr. Investment" dahil batay sa pinakahuling ulat tungkol sa investments sa Pilipinas tumaas pa rin ng 22 percent ang mga investments sa Pilipinas. Ito ay ayon sa pinakahuling ulat ng Department of Trade and Industry na siyang nag-aasikaso ng Board of Investments at 'yung Philippine Economic Zone Authority. At karamihan nitong salaping pumasok ay galing sa foreign investments. Ibig sabihin noon, anuman ang sinasabi ng ilan dito sa ating bansa nariyan pa rin ang tiwala ng foreign investors sa atin. May mga negosyanteng mga nagbabatikos, ang importante 'yung negosyanteng nagsasalita sa kanilang salapi hindi lang sa kanilang bibig. Kaya itong ating investors ay nagsalita, 22 percent increase in investment. At ayon pa sa mga Hapon, number 3 preferred investment ang Pilipinas next only to Thailand and Malaysia.

Ano pa kaya kung tayo ay nagkakaisa keysa nag-aalitan. Matapat na hangarin ng pamahalaan ang bumuti ang kalagayan sa buhay ng mga mamamayan. Kapag dumami ang negosyo gaya nito, dadami rin ang trabaho para sa ating mga kababayan. Kaya kayo, mga barangay captain, kayo mga officials na narito, hinihiling ko sa inyo, sa ibabaw ng pagsupervise n'yong maganda, itong ating "Kalsada Natin, Alagaan Natin" hinihiling ko ang pagkakaisa nating lahat sa halip na tayo ay magwatak-watak at maglaban laban dahil sa hangad ng ilang grupo na pairalin ang kanilang maling paniniwala sa ating bansa.

Ako ay nananawagan sa inyong lahat, mga barangay captain, kung nais nating wakasan ang kahirapan, kung nais nating wakasan ang kahirapan, magkaisa tayong lahat dahil ito ang kailangan natin kung nais nating iangat ang katayuan ng buhay ng ating mga kababayan.

Kaya, magtulungan tayo para sa tagumpay ng "Kalsada Ko, Alagaan Ko," para sa tagumpay ng ating mga programang mag-alok ng investments, at para sa tagumpay ng iba pa nating mga pambansang adhikain. Sa ganun, sana sa ating pagkakaisa at batayang reporma kagaya ng ginagawa natin para dumating ang investments at dumami ang trabaho sa mga kalsada natin. At sa pagkakaisa, makakamit natin na umunlad ang ating bansa at umunlad ang inyong mga pamayanan.

Maraming salamat at welcome sa lahat ng mga barangay captain. Thank you.

PROMOTING SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT IN AGRICULTURE

Itong araw na ito, dito natin ilulunsad ang mga pagbabagong ating kailangang gawin para maging mas maunlad ang ating bansa. Speech of President Arroyo during the Students' Forum at the Sacred Heart College in Lucena City

of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Students' Forum at the Sacred Heart College in Lucena City

[Delivered at the Sacred Heart College Cultural Center and Gymnasium Lucena City, Quezon, November 27, 2003]

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much, Sister President Custodio for your very kind welcome.

I would just like to introduce to the faculty and the students the other guests who came here with me today. We have from your district Congresswoman Lynnette Punzalan; from the district north of the province of Quezon, Congressman Raffy Nantes; from my Cabinet, Secretary Joey Lina of the DILG; Secretary Cito Lorenzo of Agriculture; Undersecretary of Housing, Undersecretary De Castro.

I would like to greet the members of the student executive council headed by President Mary Grace Inhente. Thank you for your kind welcome. I would also like to greet all the faculty members and students of the Sacred Heart College, and the community of the Daughters of Charity.

Sister Custodio said that this is the second time I visit your community, because the first time was when I was a vice president. I was also accompanied by Congressman Punzalan, the late husband of Congresswoman Punzalan, and it was in the Hermana Fausta Development Center. It was on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of Hermana Fausta. And the reason why I took the trouble of driving to Lucena to attend the silver anniversary of a school with a relatively small population is that the Hermana Fausta Development Center... Oops! I'm sorry, I thought he was a congressman from Quezon also, Secretary of Agrarian Reform, Secretary Obet Pagdanganan.

I would like to let you know also that Secretary Obet Pagdanganan is a son-in-law of Sariaya. His wife Susan is from Sariaya and when I used to attend the Tayabas Association balls in the five-star hotels in Manila, Secretary Pagdanganan being a son-in-law of Quezon, was always there as one of the main rigodon dancers looking so handsome in his black tie tuxedo.

Anyway, I was telling you about Hermana Fausta and why I went to that school even if it's not a very big school, even if not many people from Manila know about it because I have a very sentimental connection to that school. My mother, the late Evangelina Macaraeg-Macapagal studied in Hermana Fausta Development Center. This was during the time of still the American colonial period and my grandfather Juan Macaraeg was a U.S.-educated engineer. And he was assigned by the U.S. government to be an engineer here in the province of Tayabas that's why his daughter studied in Hermana Fausta. And Hermana Fausta is a person that we are all very proud of and I hope that one day she would be beatified and canonized as an honor for all of us, all of you who have benefited from the education that she pioneered.

My mother is no longer with us. She wasn't with us anymore when I went to visit the Hermana Fausta Development Center, she had passed away. But I am very happy to be with you this afternoon because as Sister Sustodio said you often find me where angels fear to tread. But this is a gathering where angels love to be with, the young minds, the young people of our country. Because I oftentimes have to be in places where angels fear to tread. It is not always that I have a chance to be in the company of young minds even when you are always on my mind, the young people.

I cannot help but always think of the young people because what we are doing today is not only for our benefit today, more than that, it is for your benefit when you are already living outside in our world. And I have come to think of the young people even more on a personal basis since I became a grandmother. I think of the young people as personified by my own granddaughter Mikaela. And also I think of the young people I realized that more than half of our population are made up of young people. That's why I'm here — I need to hear from you; I need to listen to what you have to say; I need to see your faces as you react to what I say. You the young are made up of energy. You pump energy into the national life.

It's a good thing that we are meeting on this special day. This day is special for two reasons: one, for all of us with a Catholic education, it is the feast of the Miraculous Medal. It is a day that we remember that Mama Mary, the mother of us all, is there to intercede for us when we ask for her help because her son Jesus Christ can hardly say no to her. That's why Mama Mary can make miracles. Mama Mary was the patron saint of the miracle of Edsa one. She was also the patron saint of the miracle of Edsa two.

Today is also the birth anniversary, 71 years old, of Ninoy Aquino, our latest national hero. Latest national hero because it was in my administration that we did the executive order and the law proclaiming him a national hero. That's why I'm wearing yellow today because I started my day hearing mass at his gravesite.

Ninoy Aquino when he first decided to enter national public life, when he first decided to run for senator, did a survey of what people thought of him. Not many knew him because his exposure was only in the province of Tarlac. He had gone of course to Korea as a war correspondent but coming back to the country just governor of Tarlac. So, when you're a governor of a province, two provinces away from Manila — like Quezon is two provinces away from Manila — you're not necessarily known in the capital especially in those days there was no big television like what we have today. But the few who knew him knew him for his youth. Because at the age of seventeen he was a war correspondent in Korea, when many seventeen year olds are not still concerned about national life but only concerned about their own little world around them.

And I am glad that you have given me a chance, the president of the Philippines, to come here and talk to you because you know I will not talk about your little weekend parties. You know I will not talk about your latest popular shows on TV or the most popular shop here in Lucena. You know I will talk about national life. But you are such an important part of national life because you are what we are fixing our national life all about. Therefore because you are such an important part of national life — what's that? Tuko? 'Di ba that's Tuko? I used to have that very often also in my house in La Vista, because my house in La Vista has a hill behind me so the back part is quite rural. So the Tuko comes and makes that noise all the time.

Well, anyway, because you're an important part of national life, let me begin — although Sister Custodio told me about the many bad news you often hear about — let me begin by sharing with you some good news about our national life. Just today, the new figures for the growth of our national production were released, and I am very happy that production within our country in the third quarter of this year grew by 4.4 percent — that's called GDP. Production by Filipinos including the contributions of our overseas Filipinos grew by 5.9 percent.

That's good news for one thing because it's our highest growth since the Asian crisis of 1997. Now many of you were very young in 1997. If you're seventeen years old, first year, or sixteen years old, you were only ten years old in 1997. You were probably not aware of the great difficulty that your parents began to undergo that time. If you're twenty-one and about to graduate from college, you were fifteen years old in 1997. And you were probably more concerned the first party you would attend, the first date. If you're a fifteen year-old girl, would you be a wallflower in your next dance. But your parents began to experience great difficulty.

Nonetheless, though at that time the whole Asian economy collapsed, your parents still sacrificed to put you in a private catholic school so you have to thank them because they put you in a school where they have to pay private tuition fees even at a cost of great sacrifice.

Now, the region is beginning to recover, and that's one reason why our 5.9 percent growth rate is there. But there's a second reason to be happy about that figure, because even when people hear complaint, talk about bad news, we have to understand that the Asian crisis was not only in the Philippines, it was in the whole Asia. But as our countries around us are beginning to recover, I am happy to say that the figures I announced today, 5.9 percent GNP, are higher than we expected. And we outperformed Taiwan, Indonesia, Singapore and Korea.

We should be proud of this miracle announced on the day of the miraculous medal because, historically, our growth rate has been slow compared to these other economies. That's why I thank god that during the two and a half years of my administration, despite the difficulties in the world — terrorism, Asian crisis, SARS — despite those who keep criticizing me, despite the disturbances mentioned by Sister Custodio, our economy has been growing at a rate that is number six among the 21 economies of the Asia-Pacific region.

Why did our economy grow so much in the last quarter more than so many other economies around us? Where did this growth come from? They came from two sources: one is agriculture and the other is investment spending. What is the meaning of this for you young people? Well, as far as investments are concerned, the figures today are consistent with figures I announced yesterday coming from the Department of Trade and Industry. Yesterday, the DTI said that the firms registering with the Board of Investments and the economic zones grew by 22 percent over last year. Agriculture and investments, what does this mean for you? Quezon is an agricultural province. It's one of the largest agricultural provinces in the world. It's number two in coconut production. Used to be number one but now Davao oriental is number one. So, when we say that the growth in agriculture is the source of this very rapid growth we had in the third quarter, I can only hope that the farmers of Quezon are benefiting from the big increase in agricultural production.

I just met with the farmers of Quezon earlier, particularly the farmers of district one and district two. Exactly the farmers of Congressman Nantes and Congresswoman Punzalan that's why they're here with me this afternoon as well.

And I was so happy to hear about the farmers' report because it was a Farmers' Congress. I was happy that they themselves decided that they will set aside — how much? 40 pesos per month — each farmer will set aside 40 pesos a month so they can put together savings. And in the end, because they are so many, they'll be able to put up millions of pesos together to put up important processing plants and other facilities to make them more productive. That is the kind of farmer that has been contributing to our rapid growth rate and we shall be proud of the farmers of Quezon province.

The other source of growth is investment spending. When you say investment spending that means you'll put up a factory, you'll put up a call center. And investment spending today means more production in the future cause it takes about three years to put up a factory, maybe six months to put up a call center. And I hope that those who are investing today, I hope will be able to provide jobs for you, the young people, by the time you graduate. That's why it's so important to have investment spending today.

Why were there's a lot of farmers' production? Why was there a lot of investment spending? I have to talk to you about some of the things we did in our government policy to keep our growth on an upward path. One of the things that we did is what we call macroeconomic fundamentals and the other one is sustained agricultural modernization. Let me try to explain to you what we mean by macroeconomic fundamentals. They refer to the things that are needed for investment — how we manage our budget; how we manage prices; how we manage interest rates. You see governments usually spend more money than they tax, because we have the power to borrow. We can borrow the balance because we borrow to produce roads and things that will benefit people later on. And when the people benefit later on that's when we pay back what we borrowed in this generation.

So investments are supposed to provide the later production that can pay for borrowing. But you can only borrow so much. You had to control the deficit — that's called fiscal prudence. And we did fiscal prudence. We kept the budget deficit within reasonable ceilings. That's what we've been able to do. Because if government borrows too much, it will compete with the private sector. The interest rate will go up, investments will go down. But if the government keeps down its borrowings then the private sector can be the one to borrow because interest rate will go down, and they have gone down in my administration. That's why investments came to the Philippines. That what's happening now.

Now, what about prices? How do we manage prices? I hope that the poor families of Quezon — that not you but the poorer ones — are able to feel that the price of basic necessities bought by the poor has remained stable during my two and a half years of my administration. The ordinary rice not the fancy rice. Never mind if the fancy rice goes up but the ordinary rice must remain stable. The fish especially tilapia has remained stable. And the medicines commonly bought by the poor have also remained stable. Then also why can we keep the price of rice down? Why can keep the price of tilapia down? Because of agricultural modernization. Because if you have agricultural modernization you have greater productivity. We've been able to keep food for the poor stable in supply and price because of what my administration has done to modernize agriculture. We spend at least 20 billion pesos a year for agricultural modernization. Never has any administration spent this amount of money for agricultural modernization before.

Where did we spend this money? A large part of it went to the development and propagation of a new rice hybrid that doubles farmers' harvest. So when you have plenty of rice, it becomes cheaper. But to have rice like that you need irrigation, and we have also spent the biggest irrigation program in history. All these while keeping the budget deficit down.

Why? Because my main vision is this "pagkain sa bawat mesa." this has been the battle cry closest to my heart since I was a senator. It is the essence of our fight against poverty. Mga kabataan ng Quezon, ng Lucena, mga nag-aaral sa napakamagandang eskwelahan, Sacred Heart College, you have a very big responsibility to play. Naghihirap 'yung magulang ninyo nung pumasok kayo sa college, Asian crisis, but you are here, Catholic private schools are among the best schools anywhere in the country, they give you the best education.

I had told you some of the things that I do in a simple term as possible to let you know that even that the headlines are about Oakwood or whatever it is, or Magdalo, or Makati rally, Ayala avenue, I spend my time on these things — irrigation, hybrid rice, budget deficit — and the results come out, greater production for your future. But when you get out of school, many will be poor, many will be uneducated. But you will be educated, you will have the first crack at the good jobs, you will have the leadership in our society. I hope on this day when we remember the great man Ninoy Aquino and when we remember how Mama Mary makes miracles for our country, you the youth of today will use those miracles to make tomorrow a better place for the rest of Quezon and the Philippines to live in.

Thank you very much for listening to me this afternoon.

Speech of President Arroyo during the Farmers' Congress in Quezon

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During during the Farmers' Congress in Quezon

[Delivered at the Centro Pastoral Auditorium, Brgy. Isabang Lucena City, Quezon, November 27, 2003]

Maraming salamat Secretary Lina, Secretary ng DILG.

At 'yung mga tulay-tulay na binabanggit ninyong kailangan, sabi ko nga ay puwede n'yong i-apply sa DPWH o puwede ring i-apply sa DILG sa President's Bridge Program basta may local counterpart.

Batiin ko, una sa lahat 'yung Secretary of Agrarian Reform, dahil siya ang nag-imbata sa akin dito — ah, co-host nito — dito sa ating Farmers' Congress, Agrarian Reform beneficiaries, kumusta kayong lahat — si Obet Pagdanganan. Na si Obet po alam n'yo na anak ng Sariaya ang kanyang asawa. Naalala ko noong ako ay senador at iniimbata ako doon sa Tayabas Association, parating nagsasayaw ng rigodon si Obet Pagdanganan, naka-black tie, naka-tuxedo, 'di ba Obet? Guwapong-guwapo, kayang kaya ang rigodon.

Binabati ko rin 'yung co-host naman dahil doble itong affair na 'to — Farmers' Congress at saka Congress ng beneficiaries ng Urban Land Reform sa A-T-O. Salamat Mayor Mon talaga sa iyung pag-imbata sa akin dito, kaya meron tayong farmers, meron tayong urban poor, meron tayong Agrarian Land Reform, meron tayong urban land reform kasi 'yon ang dalawang programang importante ng ating pamahalaan — land reform maging lunsod o kanayunan.

Kasama ko rin ngayon ang Secretary ng Agriculture, dahil nga ang Quezon ay nakararaming bahagi pa rin ay agrikultura at pinakikinggan niya 'yung resulta ng inyong Congress para matignan niya kung saan makakatulong yung Department of Agriculture, si Secretary Lorenzo.

Salamat naman sa mga officials ng Quezon na napakainit parati ang pagtatanggap parati sa inyong lingkod, nabanggit ko na nga si Mayor talaga na inimbata niya ako para ipagdiriwang natin ang 436 proclamation na aking pinirmahan nitong 2003 at para ipakita itong land development project na nandyaan sa karatula. Binabati ko rin ang congresswoman ng inyong distrito, second district, si Congresswoman Lynnette Punzalan. Dahil gaya nang sabi ni Mayor Mon talaga ang tagal, tagal na n'yong linakad itong A-T-O proclamation na ito. Panahon pa nagtulungan si Congressman Jun Punzalan at si Mayor Mon talaga, at sa wakas itong taong ito natupad na rin dahil tinutukan natin.

Gusto kong batiin ang congressman ng first district — saan ang mga magsasaka ng first district? Nandito ba? Saan? Ayun! — at salamat sa kanyang parati nagsusuporta sa akin hindi pa man siya congressman sumusuporta na sa akin, si Congressman Raffy Nantes ng first district.

At mula naman sa Bondoc peninsula, iyung mga mayors ng Bondoc peninsula at narito, nandito ba ang magsasaka ng Bondoc peninsula, wala? Anyway, gusto kong batiin ang ating congresswoman ng third district at magpasalamat sa kanyang kabiyak sa napakagandang proyektong "Kalsada Natin, Alagaan Natin" ni vice chairman ng Road Board, Danny Suarez, salamat sa pamamagitan ni Congresswoman Aleta Suarez. Binabati ko ang kinatawan ng buong probinsya, si vice governor Talabong, maraming salamat sa inyong mainit na pagtanggap. 'Yung ating nagbabantay ng ating kapayapaan, Commander ng Southern Luzon General Dagudag; Region IV director ng police, si General Caringal; nag-aalaga ng ating mga Land Reform beneficiaries, si Director Andres; 'yung ating nag-aalaga rin at pinakikinggan din n'yang mabuti kung ano ang mga kailangan ninyo doon sa mga kalsada at tulay, si Director Segit.

At salamat din sa barangay captains, nandito si ABC president Aurora Garcia at ang barangay captain natin dito sa Isabang, si Barangay Captain Emerito Robles. Salamat naman po Monsignor Melecia sa inyong dasal, at binabati ko po si Bishop Marquez sa kanyang paglipat dito sa Lucena.

Gusto ko ring bigyan ng pansin at magbati kay ginoong Philip Castillo, ang barangay Agrarian Reform Committee chairman ng Quezon province. At si Ginoong Gregorio Hernandez, ang Provincial Agrarian Reform Coordinating Committee chairman.

Ako ay talagang nagagalak na muling makasama kayo itong araw na ito, mga taga-Lucena, mga iba pang taga-Quezon lalung-lalo na 'yung ating hindi na squatter sa sariling bayan sa A-T-O, at iyung hindi na rinalipin sa sariling sakahan dito sa buong quezon lalo na first and second district dahil kayo ay tumatanggap ng benepisiyaryo ng reporma sa lupa.

Ang Quezon, gaya nang sabi ko, ay isang probinsyang malaking-malaki at maraming sakahan. Mula sa Infanta o General Nakar pa nga — dahil ang ating report kanina ay tungkol sa General Nakar — 'yon mula sa General Nakar at Infanta sa hilaga hanggang sa kahabaan ng Bondoc peninsula sa timog makikita natin ang malawak na bukirin, niyogan, karagatan na pinagkukuhanan nang kabuhayan ng mga dakilang taga-Quezon.

At alam naman natin sa napakalaking probinsiyang Quezon, maraming lugar, henerasyon-henerasyon mahihirap ang mga mamamayan — mga taga-General Nakar, mga taga-Bondoc, pati mga taga-Lamon bay — ang daming mahihirap. Yan ay isang larawan ng ating buong Pilipinas sa ating buong kasaysayan. Sa ating kasaysayan, ang malaking problema ng ating bansa ay ang kahirapan. Ngunit sa aking dalawang taon at kalahating pagkapangulo, sa aking karanasan na nakita ko — sa karanasan mismo hindi lamang sa libro o sa ideya — na kung ang gusto natin makamit ang kaunlaran at pagwawakas sa kahirapan, kailangan, una sa lahat, magpatupad tayo nang malalim na pagbabago sa ating pulitika at ekonomiya; at pangalawa, kailangan din natin ng pagkakaisa upang sama-sama nating maisulong ang kapakanan ng ating bansa.

Ano 'yung mga repormang pinag-uusapan nating batayang kailangan? Nakikita natin dito dalawang halimbawa, reporma sa lupa. Matagal nang ginawang batas ang reporma sa lupa ng aking ama, the late President Diosdado Macapagal. Ngayon ay talagang ginagawa nating masigasig ang implementasyon. At hindi lamang iyon, kasi mamahagi naman ng lupa kung wala namang kayong patubig, kung wala naman kayong pautang, kung wala naman kayong farm-to-market roads, eh 'di sisisihin pa n'yo ang gobyerno at gusto ninyong ibabalik ang inyong lupa sa hari ng lupa. Kaya kailangan modernisasyon ng agrikultura, 'yon ay bahagi ng reporma sa lupa.

Doon naman sa mga lunsod, kailangan din natin ang reporma sa lupa. Napakarami tayong mga lupa kung saan squatter ang nakatira. Kaya noong ako ay naging pangulo, sinabi ko, hahanapin natin iyung mga lupang arian ng Gobyerno na hindi naman natin ginagamit. Hahanapin natin ang lupa ng airport na hindi naman nilalagyan ng airport, at 'yon ay ibenta sa mga squatter. Iyan ay saligang reporma sa lupa rin.
